A DYNAMITE OUTRAGE

Midnight Bomb Explosion at Lancaster, Pa.

The Front of a Prominent Physician's Residence in the Fashionable Part of the City Wrecked—The Occupants Hurled from Their Beds, but Luckily Uninjured—The Miscreant Seen to Enter the Yard By a Passer-By, Who Was Slightly Injured By a Piece of the Bomb.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 1.—This city was thrown into a terrible state of excitement shortly before midnight by the explosion of a dynamite bomb in the heart of the city, wrecking a prominent residence and imperilling many lives.

About half past eleven, Luther Hassler, connected with the revenue office, was on his way home on North Lime street, and when approaching the corner of Grant street he saw a man standing at the gas light. Suddenly the light was extinguished and in a moment Hassler saw the man cross the street to the handsome residence of Dr. J. E. Baker, a prominent physician. The man lighted a match and then walked down Grant street. In a moment there was a deafening roar which rocked the houses of the vicinity and almost knocked Hassler off his feet.

Investigation showed that the unknown miscreant had placed a dynamite bomb on the porch of the Baker residence and set it off. The Baker house was terribly shattered by the explosion and the family, who were in bed, had a narrow escape from fatal injuries, the force of the explosion being sufficient to hurl them from their beds.

The front of the residence was badly damaged, the porch being shattered and all the windows of the house broken. In the parlor, which opened on the porch, the havoc was terrible, almost everything being destroyed.

The neighborhood, which is a fine residence section, Attorney General Hensel living near by, was aroused by the explosion. The belief at first was that it was an earthquake. A piece of bomb, however, was found a square away, having struck the house of Dr. Frank Muhlenburg on Orange street. It was made out of gas pipe and was similar in construction to the bomb, found here within the past two weeks.

Mr. Hassler, the only person who saw the bomb thrower, was struck by a piece of the missile, which inflicted a painful wound in his leg. The police are scouring the city, but there is little to work on and no clue to the miscreant.

This is the third attempt at bomb throwing within four weeks, all taking place in the heart of the city. The damage to the Baker residence will be heavy, but no estimate can be given.

MINERS RIOTING.

Bloody Conflicts in West Virginia—Troops Called Out.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 1.—Late yesterday afternoon about 400 armed strikers from New River, Montgomery and other points, met at Armstrong Branch, about 30 miles from here, and after a riotous meeting the drunken and excited men marched to Eagle, two miles away, to make the Wyant miners come out. As they tried to climb the hill to the mines, they were met by a volley from the Wyant men who had taken winchesters into the tipple with them. A bloody fight ensued. Reports differ as to the number killed, one despatch saying three and several wounded.

The sheriff with a posse went to the defence of the Wyant men, but fearing another attack telegraphed to the governor for troops.

At midnight another battle took place. Several companies of soldiers were ordered to the scene, and early this morning partial order was restored although more trouble is expected.

Striking Weavers Demonstrative.

PATERSON, N. J., March 1.—Fifteen hundred striking weavers formed in procession at the Pavilion Island park yesterday afternoon and marched to the silk mills of William Strange and remained in front of the building until the operatives finished their work. The strikers surrounded them as they left the factory and pleaded with them not to return to their looms until they were guaranteed New York prices. A squad of police was ordered to the mill to prevent trouble. An effort will also be made this afternoon to induce the weavers of Doherty and Wadsworth to join the strike.

Big Dry Goods House Embarrassed.

NEW YORK, March 1.—O. M. Clapp & Co., dry goods jobbers, one of the oldest houses in the trade, are in financial difficulties, and have submitted a proposition to their creditors for a compromise. The terms are said to be at 60 cents on the dollar, payable in their own notes, unsecured, at two, three and four months. The house has had such a good reputation that no trouble was experienced in obtaining the consent of the creditors to the proposition.

Corbett on Trial.

JACKSONVILLE, March 1.—James J. Corbett was placed on trial yesterday in the criminal court for engaging in a prize fight. He waived a hearing and the trial was at once begun. It is understood that Richard K. Fox, of New York, will be the only witness offered by the defense. He will be introduced as an expert to prove that glove contests cannot be brutal. The trial will be concluded to-day. If Corbett is convicted then Mitchell, who is also here, will be called to answer.

Two and a Half Ton Bell.

BALTIMORE, March 1.—A church bell weighing two and a half tons has just been cast at McShane's foundry. The casting was witnessed by a party of ladies and gentlemen from Philadelphia. The bell is for the St. John the Baptist Catholic church, in a suburb of Philadelphia. The church is a new one, built by a legacy of $250,000 left for that purpose by Bernard McCane, a rich member of the congregation.

BACK TO COMMITTEE

Democratic Caucus Rejects the Tariff Bill.

No Dictation as to the Changes Desired, It Being Left to the Committee to Judge from the Concensus of Opinion Expressed During the Caucus Discussion—An Effort to Be Made to Have it Repaired in Time to Lay Before the Full Committee on Monday Next at the Latest.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—After spending the better part of three days in a caucus on the tariff bill the democratic senators have sent the bill back to the finance committee with strongly implied instructions to amend it according to the concensus of opinion as expressed during the discussion. No dictation was made to the committee as to what articles should be put on the dutiable list nor were any rates suggested—the committee being left free to exercise its own judgment in the light of what has transpired during the past three days. The only effort made to secure an expression by vote on any special schedule was made yesterday afternoon by Mr. Pugh on iron ore and that resulted in an endorsement—although by an exceedingly small majority—of the committee's action. Mr. Pugh moved that iron be changed from the free to the dutiable list, and on a yea and nay vote this proposition was defeated by a vote of 19 to 17. The bill is again in the hands of the committee and an effort will be made to have it repaired in time to lay before the full committee on finance by Saturday or, at latest Monday morning. There will probably not be another caucus, but, in order to provide for emergencies, Mr. Gorman has been given authority to issue a call if he thinks best.

Although the conference of yesterday afternoon was not to meet until 2:30, in order to let Mr. Frye speak on Hawaiian affairs, a great deal of the caucus work was prosecuted without regard to the session of the senate. The democratic members of the finance committee went at once to Mr. Voorhees' room where they were followed by the conservatives, Messrs. Hill, Murphy, Smith, Brice, Gorman, Caffery and White of Louisiana. A further conference was held in this committee room for almost two hours, these gentlemen insisting that changes be made in the direction of increased duties on many of the schedules in which their constituents were interested. No compromises were suggested by the committee, but the promise was made that the matters presented should receive careful attention. Mr. Murphy was also heard by the finance committee in behalf of the collars and cuffs industry of his state and Mr. Murphy, as a result of this conference, has hopes that the committee will see its way clear to add largely to the duty fixed by the house bill on these articles.

Gorman Pleads for Harmony.

Mr. Gorman was among the first speakers at the afternoon session. His speech was very diplomatic in character and was a strong plea for democrats to harmonize and get together. He said it was the duty of the democracic party to pass a reform tariff measure, and he believed that by making concessions a good bill could be passed. To fail to pass it would be disastrous to the party and such a catastrophe, Mr. Gorman said must not be permitted. Mr. Gorman was questioned closely by a number of senators and in response said it was apparent that some concessions must be made. Referring to the income tax, Mr. Gorman expressed his bitter opposition to that tax. It was, he said, un-democratic and against democratic ideas. He hoped it would be stricken from the bill, but if it was not he said he would, as he expressed it, "swallow the dose," but assured his colleagues that it would be the "bitterest dose he had yet been compelled to take."

The subject of ad valorem and specific duties came in for a share of the discussion, the members of the committee supporting their course in adopting the former, while others criticized it, some severely. Mr. Mills said that specific duty was un-democratic.

This was challenged by Mr. Hill, and then followed a short but sharp bit of repartee between these two gentlemen.

"What," asked Mr. Hill in surprise, "do you mean to say that specific duties are against the democratic tea?"

"I do," retorted Mr. Mills.

"What about the Mills bill?" asked Mr. Hill. "That was full of specific duties," added the New York senator.

Goes Back on His Own Bill.

"But the Mills bill was not a democratic measure" was the answer of Mr. Mills.

"Not a democratic measure!" ejaculated Mr. Hill. "This is a decidedly late day to deny the orthodoxy of that bill. The democratic party in convention in 1888, by separate resolution, endorsed the bill, which had not then passed the house, and every tariff bill that the democrats have framed since the days of the Walker tariff abounded in specific duties. It is a little late in the day to deny that the Mills bill is a democratic measure."

Mr. Brice made no speech, but took an active part by asking questions and making suggestions, exhibiting a combination of statesmanship and politics that commended itself even to those who did not agree with him.

Mr. Pugh made a speech for a duty on iron ore, and foretold what would occur to the new industries in Alabama if this was left to the free list. Mr. Pugh went further than the other senators and insisted that some expression be had on this proposition. Accordingly he moved that the committee be directed to put iron ore on the dutiable list "the same as coal" which was accepted to mean fifty cents a ton. On a yea and nay vote this was defeated by a vote of 19 to 17, Mr. Hill not voting. Mr. Pugh then said that inasmuch as the vote was so close and some senators were absent, he did not feel bound by the vote and reserved the right to offer an amendment to the bill when it came into the senate.

Whiskey Lost Sight of.

Contrary to general report whiskey has been mentioned only in the most incidental manner and no action suggested in any way. The internal revenue features of the bill have been apparently lost sight of.

The action of Mr. Pugh in forcing a vote on iron ore and then declining to be bound by it, led to the conclusion that it would be impossible for the caucus to accomplish anything definite and the motion to recommit the bill to the full democratic membership of the financial committee, "to shape it in accordance with the views expressed and to harmonize the differences" was made by Mr. Voorhees. This motion was without opposition. There was no resolution nor any specific instructions.

The question of what shall or shall not be dutiable, or what the vote shall be, is still open.

PITCHER M'NABB'S DEED

Mortally Wounds Actress Louise Kellogg and Then Kills Himself.

NEW YORK, March 1.—A terrible tragedy was enacted at the Hotel Eiffel on Smith-field street at 8:30 o'clock last night, from which Pitcher McNabb of the Baltimore club is dead and Louise Kellogg, a member of the Alvin Joslyn theatrical company, will likely die from the result of the wounds she received at the hands of McNabb.

Louise Kellogg came here from New York yesterday. She met McNabb a short time before 8:30 on Fifth avenue, and they both went to the Hotel Eiffel, where a room was engaged. A young man named Gillen, a friend of both McNabb and the Kellogg woman, went up to their room at 8:30 to call on them. He heard the woman groaning and called for help. An officer was summoned and the door was burst open, when a bloody sight met their gaze. On the floor lay the woman with three bullet wounds in her head and neck. McNabb was lying beside her with two shots through his head that killed him almost instantly. The woman was taken to the hospital. She can hardly recover.

McNabb evidently meant murder when he went to the room, for he was there only a short time before he did the shooting. Louise Kellogg's right name is Mrs. W. E. Rockwell. She is the wife of the president of the California baseball league. Kellogg was the woman's stage name. Her parents live at Bradlock, near this city.

From what can be learned, Miss Kellogg was endeavoring to break off her relations with McNabb.

M'KANE'S FRIENDS GIVE IT UP

The Ex-Boss Will Probably Be Taken to Sing Sing This Afternoon.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 1.—It is expected that John Y. McKane will be taken to Sing Sing prison some time to-morrow, probably in the morning. It may be that the trip will be made this afternoon, as his presence as a witness at the trial of Justice Sutherland will not be required as the case went to the jury last night, and it was only after McKane's lawyers promised that no further efforts to secure a stay would be made, that the prosecution agreed to his remaining in the jail until noon to-day.

McKane is haggard in appearance and looks as if he was in great distress. He bid his wife good by last night and she will not see him again until after he reaches Sing Sing.

The telegram from Lawyer Roderick, at Little Falls, announcing that Judge Harding had, after listening to arguments on a motion for a stay, refused to grant it, was accepted by McKane's friends as sweeping away every possible chance of avoiding state prison for McKane. Roderick, it seem, mastered some strong political influence in his efforts at Little Falls, but it was of no avail.

Election Prosecution at Utica.

UTICA, N. Y., March 1.—The trial of George B. Rowe, an election inspector, is proceeding in the county court here. Rowe and several others were indicted by the last grand jury for making incorrect returns. Something of a sensation was produced when a witness for the prosecution admitted on cross-examination that he had been a tramp, but had been naturalized and voted in Utica. After election he had been furnished a job if he would stay here and testify. It has been expected that the result of these cases would be taken as a pretext by Mayor Wheeler to contest the seating Mayor-elect Gibson, who has the certificate of the board of canvassers, if the inspectors were convicted.

Knows Little About the Fortune.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., March 1.—Oliver Longtin, the French carpenter who, it is claimed, is the heir to many millions in New York city, says that he knows very little about the matter, beyond the fact that his brother has been working on the case for the past 30 years, and he does not even know in what part of New York city the property is located. He says the alleged will is written in Latin, and that up to the present time he has been unable to secure a translation of it.

Kicked Him to Death.

RIDGEWAY, Pa., March 1.—Daniel McCauley, aged about 50 years, was killed on the main street of this place yesterday afternoon by H. H. Taylor, a prominent lumber man of the town. McCauley came to the wages of Taylor and from words the men came to blows. Eye witnesses say McCauley was the aggressor and that Taylor kicked him until he was dead. Taylor was arrested.

You hear a great deal about oatmeals as good as H-O. Do you ever hear that H-O is as good as some others?

Poking Fun at Anti-Racetrackers.

TRENTON, N. J., March 1.—The following resolution introduced in the house by Mr. Harrigan and declared out of order, created considerable mirth:

Resolved, That for the benefit, edification and instruction of the members on elections who visit Gloucester next week in an official capacity, a horse race take place, of which Mr. Stoors shall be judge, Mr. Salinger, handicapper; Mr. Exton, timekeeper; Mr. Olvaney, starter; Mr. Beekman, bookmaker, the attendance to be limited and the entrance fee $500, the proceeds to be applied to the payment of the fees of the lawyers engaged in the case.

Big Cocking Main at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, March 1.—A cocking main of 11 battles, for a stake of $1,500, was fought early yesterday morning in Canton. The rival birds hailed from Washington, D. C., and Lancaster, Pa. The contest began at midnight and lasted until daylight. Lovers of the sport were present in large numbers from Pennsylvania, Virginia and Washington. The Lancaster men had all the confidence in the early stages of the battle, but the Washingtonians had all the money at the finish, the birds from the capital city winning nearly all the contests.

Downfall of a Bright Young Cuban.

BOSTON, March 1.—Matthew Travers, alias Myah S. Shorter, alias Rev. Felix Lomax, a full-blooded Cuban, formerly of New Bedford, was committed to the house of correction for six months for obtaining money by false representation last June from a well-to-do colored resident of Newton. He is a regularly ordained minister of the gospel, a master of five languages and at the time of his arrest was a physician of fair practice among the colored contingent of New Bedford.

Pennsylvania's Official Vote.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 1.—The following is the official vote of the state at the recent election for congressman-at-large: Grow, (republican) 485,804; Hancock, (democrat) 297,966; Markley, (Pennsylvania democrat) 2,823; Morrow, (prohibitionist) 11,180; Lotier, (populist) 5,827; protective tariff policy 456; scattering 59, exclusive of 759 cast in Clearfield county for William Denton Hancock.

Plimmer Wants to Meet Dixon.

NEW YORK, March 1.—Ted Wilson, adviser and backer of Billy Plimmer, the bantam champion, has deposited $500 with a New York paper to arrange a match with George Dixon, at Madison Square garden, on March 21, for four rounds at 118 pounds.

VOTING FOR PRESIDENT

Brazilians To-day Exercising That Privilege.

Their First National Election—Dr. Moraes the Leading Candidate—Everything it is Expected Will Pass Off Quietly—An Exceedingly Tame Campaign to Eyes of Americans.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 1.—To-day the people of Brazil are voting for a president. To American eyes the campaign has appeared peculiarly quiet and devoid of popular interest. The nominations have been made known mainly by advertisements in the newspapers. There has been little argument in favor of any candidate. Every man who has been named for the presidency or vice-presidency has been praised immoderately by friendly journals. No newspaper has disparaged any candidate. The questions of national policy have been hardly mentioned, and few persons know or care what lines of action the candidates are likely to pledge themselves to. There have been no processions, no stump speeches, no great public meetings, no fireworks.

Dr. Prudente de Moraes, president of the senate and ex-president of Sao Paulo province, is the leading candidate for the presidency of the republic. Even the Journal, whose insurgent editor was forced to flee from the city, supports him. Much surprise was caused when ex-Minister Ruy Barbosa's name appeared in the list of candidates. He has supported previously to be still loyal to the insurgents, but his candidacy is regarded as evidence that he has forsaken their cause. He was the financial agent of the insurgent government, and his defection, if accomplished, will be a heavy blow to Mello and Da Gama.

The candidates for the vice-presidency are Dr. Alfonsa Penna, president of the state of Minas Geraes and the ablest statesman in Brazil; Floriano Peixoto, the president of the republic, and two others of local fame. The government organ, O'Paiz, supports Moraes and Penna. It published yesterday a long leader urging the expediency of electing them.

Several influential insurgents told the United Press correspondent yesterday that Moraes and Penna would be satisfactory to them in case it should prove impossible to restore the monarchy. All expressed doubts as to the government's sincerity in supporting the two candidates in question, or, in fact, any other civilians. This is Brazil's first popular election for president. The people are children in politics, but there is every indication that the balloting will proceed peacefully. Nobody is talking of intimidation or fraud. Congress will count the votes and declare the result. That all this will be done in good faith is probable, but not certain. Whether Brazil shall enjoy order and progress or be torn by anarchy will be determined by the event of the election.

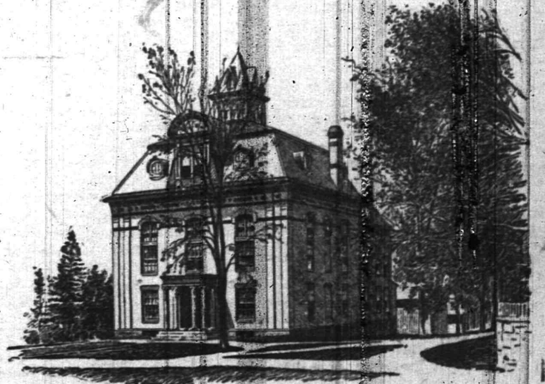
NORFOLK, Va., March 1.—The light house steamer Violet, with President Cleveland and party on board, is now in Albemarle sound.

VERMONT'S PRIDE.

The Remedy that Makes People Well —Paine's Celery Compound.

Among Burlington institutions none of the College buildings compare in interest with the Medical School. It is the first building shown to strangers.

The building where so many fruitful investigations have been carried on and so much hard work accomplished is a matter of pride with every true graduate of Vermont University.



MEDICAL DEPARTMENT, UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT.

To the credit of American scientists it is said that the first fruitful investigation of the influence of the nerves upon the proper nutrition of the body were made by Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., while active professor in the Dartmouth Medical School and lecturer in the Vermont University Medical Department.

From January until May there is a fearful demand made on one's stock of health—fevers, pulmonary troubles and the host of cold weather ills quickly bring down the vitality and expend the nervous forces.

Now and then a discovery like this one is so greatly in advance of its day that it startles the whole body of physicians. No great remedy ever caused as much talk and inquiry as Paine's celery compound. Scientific men in Europe have analyzed and discussed it, and the medical world has agreed in recommending it as a truly remarkable remedy for disorders originating in impure blood and impoverished nerve tissue.

Those with an insufficient reserve of vigor and nervous energy fall winter victims to contagious diseases and to special diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys.

Refreshing sleep comes from Paine's celery compound. Persistent headaches go. Chronic constipation no longer troubles one, and the terrible heart throbbing from which so many tired women suffer leave them in peace.

Because of this wonderful discovery of Paine's celery compound, thousands of homes have been made brighter and hosts of sick men and women lives from despond ency to health and activity.

Weakness is an element of all diseases. Faulty nutrition of some important part the United States and Canada, in every village and town where there is a good physician.

Little blood is sent to the tired organs, and nutrition and strength alike fail.

A grateful sense of activity comes after a few days' taking of this remarkable remedy, and one feels again fit for every duty, mentally and bodily.

"The danger of thus overtaxing the centres which manufacture the nervous energy is impossible to estimate," said a wise physician. One longs to hear some authoritative voice call out: Stop! Stop!"

Paine's celery compound is prepared to exactly meet the urgent needs of an overworked, feeble system. People with feeble circulation who habitually have cold hands and feet, people who are never well the aged and the young, feel at once that celery compound the effects of an increased power.

No medicine is so universally used in the homes founded for the aged the feeble, the weak and suffering. A list of the public institutions alone where this compound is daily used would extend to great length. A sound body and a sound mind are sure to follow the persistent taking of Paine's celery compound; try it and be convinced, as thousands of other are, that it is the greatest remedy in the world.

THE PEDDLER NUISANCE.

So Long as This Swindler Is Patronized, Just So Long Will He Flourish.

If there is one thing that makes the life of a housewife a burden more than another, it is the constant and unremitting visits of that peripatetic vender of "sheap" merchandise yclept the peddler. A knock at the door or a pull at the bell arouses her and disturbs her household duties, and with the expectation that it is some dear friend she tidies her hair, arranges her dress, and with her sweetest smile responds to the summons.

Her smile of pleasure gives way to an expression of disgust, however, when instead of meeting the expected friend she is confronted by an unkempt and disreputable son of faraway Italy or some other foreign clime who importunes her to examine the wonderful array of bargains to be found in his foul smelling pack. If she yields, and after allowing him to scatter his goods over her chairs and sofas she fails to buy, he frequently becomes insolent and is got rid of with difficulty.

That they are a worry and a nuisance is the universal verdict of all householders, but how to suppress them is another story. Kicking the interloper off the stoop and into the street may relieve an individual case, but those who come after him, and their name is legion, do not seem to be deterred by the inhospitable reception given their compatriot, but persist in their calls as long as the neighborhood gives them patronage. The class of customers who encouraged the peddler are often caught by a sly insinuation from the cunning dealer that the goods have been smuggled or secured by fraud or thieving in order to explain their cheapness. But if the woman who welcomes him to her house paws over his wares, buys his goods and encourages him to repeat his visit could view the surroundings of the foreign hawker when at home and before he starts on his pilgrimage to the rural districts, she would hesitate before allowing him to encumber her parlor with his goods or expose her family to the contaminated air engendered by his presence.

Imagine the headquarters of the peddlers, as described in one of the great daily newspapers some months since, where hundreds of them, male and female, with their packs of merchandise, baskets of decaying fruit, fish and vegetables, were packed together in a dark, unventilated cellar, like sardines in a box. When the reporter visited one of these places, the noisome odor was so great that he was almost overcome and was obliged to retreat to the fresh air outside. Vermin crawled all over the walls, over the packs, the baskets and over the bodies of the men, women and children.

Out from these fever breeding kennels their inmates go, entering cleanly village homes and farmhouses, bearing with them the seeds of disease and contagion, to be scattered among the innocent children of the bargain seeking housewife. The peddler is the citizen of no community. He seldom possesses the first elements of honesty, and he is ready and eager to make any guarantee or representation in order to palm off his goods upon the unsuspecting, fully aware of the fact that he will not pass that way again and will therefore not be called upon to make his word good when the fraudulent nature of his transactions are discovered. Only thoughtless people patronize the fly by night hawker, and they invariably receive their just deserts by being thoroughly swindled. The safest plan is to banish all the unsavory breed from your houses when they call and forbid them repeating their visits. Buy only from those whom you know, whose antecedents are good, habits decent and whose regard for their business reputations, if not their innate honesty, would deter them from misrepresenting their merchandise and obtaining your money under false pretenses.

Local Reciprocity.

The application of the principles of reciprocity should be made in every town that is ambitious of attaining prosperity. The mechanic or laborer who lives in a town, and who is dependent on the people of that town or community for employment, who spends his money in another city has no right to complain if his neighbor refuses to employ him, but instead imports a workman from some other locality to build his house, lay his wall or paint his barn, as the case may be.

The merchant or shopkeeper who ignores his townsman in a different line of business when he wishes to make a purchase and goes from home to trade is not entitled to the least consideration from the people of his town. It is the duty of every person residing in a community to as far as possible reciprocate the many benefits which the community has conferred upon him, and the individual who fails in this regard is not endowed with that public spirit which characterizes a good citizen.

Lay of the Croaker.

Goin to build an elevator, I hear the folks say.
I warn you now, stranger, 'twon't never pay.
And if you try it on I'll bet my skin
You'll sink every dollar that you put in.
Billville's superior, accordin to my tell,
And Waycross town will beat it all to—well.
'Thout any talkin, you can chalk it down,
An elevator'll never pay in this here town.

There's people livin about here who really say
A north and south railroad's comin this way,
And boast about the size the town's goin to git.
Some even claim 'twill make a city yit.
City nothin! I'll jest bet a speckled cow
'Twon't be this big twenty years from now.
Talk that to them, and they look mad and frown,
But there'll be no railroad in this here town.

The people that live here? All a sorry lot.
The preacher's a hypocrite, deacon's a sot,
The doctors all quacks, the lawyer a fool,
The teacher the biggest dolt that ever taught a school;
Boys are all vicious and full of deviltry;
Gals ain't jest what they rally ought to be.
Oh, for meanness we've got great renown,
And it's a bad one—this here town.

They say that factories are comin 'thout fail;
Darned sight better build a good jail,
A poorhouse, reform school and penitentiary,
And let our thievin merchants go in free.
So, stranger, you had better take my advice—
I give it to you 'thout money or 'thout price—
If you want to get done and get done brown,
Just invest your money in this here town.

—A horse owned by Milkman Thomas Hyland, of Dog Corner, ran away with a sleigh from the corner of Park avenue and Front street at 4:30 yesterday afternoon. —The local paper affords the best basis for an estimate of the present and future of the region. Written information from a friend is not apt to be as impartial, and cannot be as broad. Travelers' views are often entertaining, but oftener superficial. In the quietest places are mooted questions, diverse forces at work; on their solution and outcome depends the future of the locality. The papers show these in a living way. To the man who meditates settling, to the man who would plan a new business connection, to an investor in local securities in any region, the local paper is the best guide. The Press is Plainfield's local paper.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—Mine is a case of eleven years' standing, which baffled the skill of the best medical aid procurable. I obtained no good effect, until I began the use of the "Favorite Prescription," which lifted the burden which was seeking my life.

My gratitude I owe to the "Prescription." I hope that all suffering humanity (as in my case) may profit by the result of my experience.

SCRUB and WASH as you will, it is not easy to keep the hands smooth and white in winter time. In fact, the more you scrub and wash, the rougher seems the skin, and you find that the best of soap fails to whiten it. Now if, after washing, you will moisten your hands with LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE, the effect will be to soften and whiten the skin, even in the worst weather. Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

REAL ESTATE, RENTS AND TAXES.

Startling Statistics Unearthed from the Records of the City.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In answer to your request for my views as to rents on properties say from $20 to $30 a month, I have to reply that I am not sufficiently acquainted with this kind of property to give an intelligent answer. If as claimed it is giving too large a return of capital, competition in building will soon correct it.

One word in answer to Mr. Freeland's criticism in Saturday's issue. I am dealing with facts as they now exist, and not with speculative values. Real estate in Plainfield, whether improved or otherwise, has a fixed value and is worth just what it will bring in the market, as truly as a keg of nails, a pound of sugar or a yard of cloth.

The causes that have made real estate and rents so much higher in Plainfield than in South Plainfield, Dunellen, Fanwood, etc., all within a radius of 2½ miles, are very apparent, but you have neither time nor space to state them.

And now Mr. Editor I come to the real animus of all these communications: why is it that real estate of the value I have indicated does not pay in Plainfield, and the future growth of our city threatened? In my judgment largely owing to our excessive and rapidly growing rate of our taxation, together with the high prices for labor and annual repairs. The facts I am about to submit may well challenge the most serious attention, not alone of those who pay taxes on realty, but as well of every citizen who desires the future growth of our beloved city.

In 1870 our assessed valuation and rate of taxation was as follows in round numbers, to wit:

1870—Valuation $3,000,000, tax rate $1.86, yielding $57,700.

1872—Valuation $3,600,000, tax rate $1.87, yielding $68,300.

Even these rates and based on the low valuation of one-third of actual value were deemed excessive. About this time party lines were ignored, a People's ticket was formed, resulting in the election of Mr. Evans [Democrat] as Mayor, and a mixed Council of Republicans and Democrats but old-time citizens and taxpayers. The result of this change and subsequent election of Mr. Randolph [Independent] and his admirable administration may be shown in the following figures:

1873—Valuation $3,700,000, tax rate $1.65, yielding $62,000.

This result continued practically down to 1876.

1877—Valuation $4,700,000, tax rate only $1.47, yielding $69,000.

1878—Valuation reduced to $4,100,000, tax rate $1.52, yielding $62,000.

1879—Valuation $4,000,800, tax rate $1.49, yielding $61,000.

1880—Valuation $4,300,000, tax rate only $1.43, yielding $61,000.

And even as late as 1885 the figures standing at valuation of $4,700,000, tax rate $1.74, yielding $183,000.

The valuation still restricted, bear in mind, to one-third actual value.

From this date, 1885, the assessed valuation not only was rapidly increased, but the ratio increased from ⅓ to ½ of actual value, giving an aggregate in 1893 of almost $7,000,000 and the rate of tax at the same time increased to $2.20 and yielding $151,000 against $17,000 in 1870.

These are startling figures, and we may well ask where is it going to end. In view of these facts is it surprising that realty does not make a fair return or that capital is driven away from our city? Even our Common Council have at last taken the alarm and called a halt in street improvements, for which we should be thankful. It is safe to assume that all our citizens are anxious for sewage. Why do not our property-holders at once sign the petition? Is it not because they absolutely refuse to increase their burdens already too grievous to be borne? M.

ANOTHER PASTOR RESIGNS.

Plainfield to Lose the Services of Rev. F. Koechli.

The resignation of Rev. F. Koechli as pastor of the German Reformed Church on Craig place, North Plainfield, which was tendered to the Consistory a month ago, was accepted yesterday, and will take effect July 1.

Mr. Koechli has been in poor health the past two years, and he feels that his strength is no longer adequate to the requirements of the position.

Crane's Last Week.

There will be another change of bill in the Star Theatre, New York, next Monday, March 5, when William H. Crane, the comedian, will revive the comic play "On Probation". The play was presented last season by Mr. Crane, when it was given fifty performances. It is an unpretentious work, lacking all seriousness and with a mission to create laughter. It was written by Brander Matthews, a well-known literary man, in collaboration with George H. Jessop, and is in three acts. That it is bright goes without saying. Some of the lines are very witty and several of the scenes ludicrous.

The story deals with a middle-aged American, who has a mania for flirting. The play will be given for one week and will bring Mr. Crane's engagement in Gotham to an end.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

JUDGE MAGIE RETIRES.

Somerset's Circuit Will Miss the Handsome and Upright Law-Giver.

The term of Justice Magie of the Supreme Court expired yesterday, and there will now be but eight judges to sit in the Supreme Court until a Senate is recognized by Governor Werts to which nominations may be sent. Judge Magie is a Republican, but the Republicans do not feel that this will have any effect upon their case before the court in the Senate matter. It is certain that the Supreme Court judges must give the only decision on this matter that can be given by any court of the State. The case cannot be carried to the Court of Errors and Appeals, because it is to come before the full bench of the Supreme Court, and that will preclude any member of that court from sitting with the Court of Errors and Appeals. The latter court is composed of the nine Supreme Court justices, the Chancellor, and six so-called "lay" judges. If the Supreme Court justices do not sit, their court will not have a quorum. The Republicans realized this before they consented to take any part in the court proceedings. It is understood that the Democrats thought this would be best also. The "lay" members of the bench are all Democrats except Judge William Walter Phelps.

It is said that in case the Supreme Court decides that it has jurisdiction over the Senate case, it will probably be tried, so far as the facts are concerned, before a jury, either before the whole court or before the Mercer County Court.

Babcock Boilermakers Strike.

The boiler shops of the Babcock & Wilcox Company, in Elizabeth, (estate of the late George H. Babcock of this city), are closed owing to a strike of the boilermakers. The shops are operated by the Singer Manufacturing Company at Elizabethport. The men struck because of a reduction of nearly 25 per cent. Heretofore they have received $2.75 a day. On Monday they were told their pay would be by the piece. After trying it for a day they threw down their tools and went out, saying they could make only $2.10 a day.

To Dance Every Friday.

The West End Athletic Club held a meeting last night in their club rooms, 311 Lee place, and elected the following officers:

President—Thos. Kane.
Vice-president—Fred Beckman.
Recording Secretary—Chas. Burns.
Financial Secretary and Treasurer—R. B. York.

A committee was appointed to arrange for dances to be held in the hall every Friday evening.

Commuters Scared by a Sign.

The people of Cranford have been made nervous for a few days past by a box car standing on a siding near the station labelled in large letters "Giant Powder". They eyed the car with suspicion while it remained at the station. Several commuters preferred to drive to Roselle rather than go to the Cranford station while the dangerous car was there. On investigation it was found that the most dangerous thing about the car was the label.

Two short poles are not as good as one long one when you're after persimmons. The biggest circulation in Plainfield is that of The Daily Press.

HORRIBLE BUTCHERY.

PAUL BAKER'S WIFE AND CHILD KILLED BY BURGLARS.

Baker Kills One of Them Outright, and Fatally Wounds the Other—They Were After the Farmer's Money Which He Had Foolishly Displayed.

(Special to The Press.)

SOMERVILLE, March 1—Two negro burglars butchered Mrs. Paul Baker, wife of a Franklin Park farmer, in her home, last night, and after the terrible deed one of them was killed by the husband and the other was fatally injured.

Paul Baker is a wealthy farmer. Yesterday he foolishly displayed several $100 bills, and the fact that he had a large sum of money in the house aroused the cupidity of his farm hands.

About 2 this morning Baker was awakened by a noise, and went down stairs to investigate. The noise, however, was made by two negroes, Henry Baker and Willard Thompson, who had entered the house and were on the second floor.

While Baker was downstairs the robbers entered the bedroom where Baker's wife, Lucretia, was attending her 16-months-old baby, Gertrude.

Mrs. Baker screamed for her husband, and the negroes sprang upon her and with knife and axe butchered both her and the child.

Baker seized his gun, rushed upstairs, and shot one of the negroes. The other struck at him with an axe, and the blow cut off his nose.

The farmer floored the negro with the butt of the gun, grabbed the axe, and chopped open the negro's head so that he will die.

The community is in horror over the terrible affair.

SWORN OFF DANCING.

Evangelist Wright Secures Remarkable Concessions from Fashion's Devotees.

Rev. Mr. Wright, the Indian evangelist, whose labors in the First Presbyterian Church of this city were productive of so much good, has been preaching in Passaic for nearly a fortnight, and with great success. Not only does his excellent singing delight his hearers, but his earnest Gospel sermons lead them to see their need of a change of life and of heart, and many have been turned from the ways of sin to the paths of righteousness and truth.

A singular proof of this is found in the fact that no less than thirteen young people from the very best families in that community have signed a paper declaring that henceforth they will give up cardplaying, dancing and theatre-going and devote themselves to the service of their Divine Master, believing, as they do, that they cannot successfully serve God and Mammon at the same time. Mr. Wright's denunciation of worldliness led them to see that it was futile to attempt to grasp heaven with one hand and earth with the other, and hence they were willing to turn their backs on custom, folly and the demands of fashionable society, and live consistent Christian lives. There may have been signatures of the same character in Plainfield, but we have not been notified of them as yet.

The Body Brought to Plainfield.

The body of Mrs. Avis Mosher Laing, who died of pneumonia yesterday morning while visiting her son A. M. Laing, 60 I street, N. E., Washington, D. C., arrived in Plainfield this afternoon on the 1:06 Washington train, and was met at the North Avenue station by Undertaker Runyon and taken to her former home, Watchung avenue and Fourth street, where the children and relatives had congregated.

The remains were in an excellent state of preservation, and deceased looked as if she were only sleeping. Her son John P. Mosher of Alfred Centre, N. Y., and her daughter Mrs. E. R. Vail of Amboy, N. J., accompanied the remains from Washington. Funeral services have been arranged for Friday afternoon at 2:30, from the Friends Meeting-house on Watchung avenue. The cause of death was meningitis, developed from pneumonia.

That Alleged Wagon Theft.

Aaron Brower, of South Plainfield, and a colored man named Jackson, who lives in Scotch Plains, were arrested today by Constable W. R. Mattox for alleged stealing of a wagon from Sheriff Kyte. Brower's mother furnished bail of $100 each for their appearance in Justice Nash's court next Tuesday. "Count" J. K. Van Ness has been engaged by the defendants.

THREE PARTS TO PENANCE.

Sinners Must First Repent, Then Confess, and Be Satisfied.

Rev. Father N. H. Freeman, of Junction, formerly pastor of St. Joseph's Church, lectured in that church last evening on the sacrament of penance. The church was crowded and much interest was shown in the earnest words of the priest.

The speaker told of the beautiful thought expressed in the Eucharist, but said that without the sacrament of penance to take the sin from our hearts it would be useless. A man who was ill would consult a doctor; a man in trouble, a lawyer; and for the sake of our souls' salvation we should consult a priest. There are persons who consider it folly to relate our sins to a man who has the same faults as others, but the lecturer said that the priest acted as the representative of God, and not as an individual.

There were three parts to penance: contrition, confession and satisfaction. Sorrow for our sins should not be of the same nature as sorrow at the loss of prosperity or bereavement. It should be a heartfelt sorrow on realizing that we had displeased God by our wrong-doing. After contrition we should confess our sins, and correct our ways. Then would come the satisfaction of knowing that our God would forgive us—the same sort of satisfaction as that we would feel after having been cured by a physician.

He said the salvation of one soul brought about by doing penance caused more joy in Heaven than the penance of ninety-nine righteous people. Their rejoicing was like that at the return of the prodigal son.

It was not right to go to church feeling as the Pharisee did, and tell of our goodness in carrying out the law; but should follow the example of the publican, who worshiped from the rear with a truly penitent heart. The spirit of penitence did not arise from a satisfaction over duties performed, but from sorrow for sins committed. The Father referred to Lent as a time for approaching God with confession.

Rev. Father Miller pronounced the benediction at the close of the lecture.

DUNELLEN'S GREAT BOWLERS.

They Win the Series from the Pioneers, and Treat the Losers to Supper.

The Dunellen team settled the question of the superiority of their bowling over that of the Pioneers of Elizabethport last night on the alleys in Dunellen. The concluding game of a series of three was easily won by the home team, who had won one already. The winners served a supper after the game, thus proving themselves once more jolly good fellows.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.
Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Lines to a Cynic.

He daily trod the ways of busy men,
Silent, serene, and in the city's mart
They often marked his placid features when
They could not read the anguish in his heart.
Inscrutable and grave of mien to all
Save me, he seemed a man of marble wrought.
But I—I knew his calm was but a pall
Wherewith to shroud the skeleton of thought.
Was not his secret writ upon his brow
In one sharp symbol, pitifully plain?
That furrow was not turned by Time's dull plow,
Rather a sword cut dealt by deathless pain.
He daily paced the city's populous ways,
But through his heart a sad and hopeless song
Went ever singing, and his patient gaze
Was fixed on something far beyond the throng.
—University Courier.

A Song of Cheer.

There are many will tell you: "The best has been done;
There is nothing worth striving for under the sun;
There's no hope for achievement when all of the past
Is pitted against you—an army so vast,
Overwhelming in numbers and deeds of renown.
It were foolish to struggle and wise to lie down."
But turn a deaf ear when these croakers come near;
Keep steadily at it and be of good cheer.

"The height you can climb to is nothing at all,
So why make the effort and risk the rude fall?"
Oh, take but one breath of that sweet mountain air,
And having inhaled it you'll never despair!
But striving still upward and onward each day,
"The labor, I love it!" at last you will say.
Then turn a deaf ear when the croakers come near;
With face toward the summit, oh, be of good cheer!

Think not for a moment all songs have been sung!
There are sorrows and joys that have never found tongue!
There are hearts today waiting the message you bring;
They listen for songs that you only can sing!
So think not of Shakespeare or Milton or Burns,
But sing as they sung, make your sweetest returns,
And turn a deaf ear when the croakers appear.
Sing life as you live it and be of good cheer.
—William S. Lord.

My Pillow.

Sweet Pillow, take me to your breast.
None other hath my soul confessed
So oft, nor ever kept so true
The confidence reposed as you—
My Pillow!

What dreams of fame, that never came;
What dawns of love, no day fulfilled;
What boundless dower of wealth and power
Have stirred you as my bosom thrilled—
My Pillow!

When storm and stress my soul have rent;
When courage, love and life seemed spent;
To you alone, tried friend and leal,
Could I in doubt and darkness steal—
My Pillow!

But storm and woe no more I know,
Nor rosy dawns seem mockery,
When far I hail one snowy sail,
That bears new life, new love to me—
My Pillow!

Since now within your inmost fold
A whispered secret soft you hold,
So holy that I scarce may dare
Remember how I breathed it there—
My Pillow!

Without a name the rapture came;
Dear heaven bent low and touched my life;
What heart reveals the awe it feels
When motherhood first crowns a wife—
My Pillow!
—Cora Stuart Wheeler.

Don't Blame the World.

Don't blame the world because the thorns are found among the roses;
The day that breaks in storm may be all sunshine when it closes.
We cannot hope to always meet with fortune's fond caressing,
And that which seems most hard to bear will bring with all its blessing.

The buried seed must rot in earth ere it produce the flower,
And the weak plant to fructify must have both sun and shower.
So man, to gain development, must struggle with life's crosses
And view with calm philosophy his trials and his losses.

A deadly, pois'nous weed may yield a salve of purest healing;
The sweetest bloom may pois'nous be, although its bane concealing.
Things are not always what they seem, but still 'twas heaven designed them,
And we should class them all as good and take them as we find them.

Little we know of this brief life and nothing of its sequel;
Then let us take in humble trust all that may seem unequal.
God's ways are not our ways, and he certainly should be trusted.
All that is wrong in his good time will surely be adjusted.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Song of the Spirit of Ink.

I am the spirit of ink! I am lord of the world of men!
The mightiest monarch who walks the earth
Acknowledges me of superior worth—
Me and my slave, the Pen!

When I wield my magic spell, I sing in a mystic strain,
And I make men's brains grow mad with hate—
Or their hearts lift up with a joy elate—
As they list my weird refrain.

I sing of life and death, and I sing of hopes and fears,
And the burden of griefs and dark despairs
Each human heart in its sorrow bears
Through the length of the weary years.

I sing of woman's scorn, and I sing of lover's sighs,
And my music rare and my endless themes
Fill the souls of men with wondrous dreams
That reach beyond the skies.

I stay the hand of Time as he whirls in his ceaseless flight,
And the thoughts of men long turn'd to clay
I keep as the centuries roll away
To the realms of endless night!

For I am the spirit of ink—the lord of the world of men!
The mightiest monarch who walks the earth
Acknowledges me of superior worth—
Me and my slave, the Pen!
—Albert E. Hunt.

Fate's Day.

There is in nearly every life a day
Which stands apart,
Marked by the hand of Fate,
Which seems to say:
"Read slow, for on thy heart
Is pictured all the sunshine of this day,
Or all the sorrow.
And the reflection from this picture may Be light or shade for all the long tomorrow."
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

To persist
In doing wrong extenuates not wrong,
But makes it much more heavy.
—Shakespeare.

The world was sad, the garden was a wild,
And man, the hermit, sigh'd—till woman smil'd.
—Campbell.

Woman.

She's hot, she's cold, she's pleasing, vexing,
An open book and a thing perplexing.
She will give you joy, she will cause you sorrow
With a smile today and a frown tomorrow;
She'll bring despair, then hope restore you;
She'll be your slave, and she'll lord it o'er you;
Responsive, shy, forgiving, spiteful,
An inconsistency delightful;
Repelling now, anon caressing;
Man's greatest plague, his chiefest blessing;
And, though beneath himself he's class'd her
And calls himself her lord and master,
She casts him off or closer winds him
And round her little finger winds him.

Far better never to have heard the name
Of zeal and just ambition than to live
Baffled and plagued by a mind that every hour
Turns recreant to her task, takes heart again,
Then feels immediately some hollow thought
Hang like an interdict upon her hopes.

Patrick Henry's Genius.

During this year of seeming idleness young Henry conceived the idea of becoming a lawyer. Digging in the soil would not yield him a livelihood. Drawing molasses and measuring tape had produced the same barren result. But words never failed him. He could move or melt any audience before whom he might stand. Therefore he determined to earn his living by his tongue.

The wonderful mental capacity of this broken down farmer and merchant may be understood when we learn that after a very few weeks of reading and study he presented himself at Williamsburg before the examiners and was admitted to the bar—not, however, without much urging and entreaty, for the examiners soon discovered the paucity of his knowledge of the statutes. In spite of his ignorance of the forms and technicalities, young Henry pleaded his own case so well that he received his license, not at all because of his legal proficiency, but solely because of his ingenuity and the promise he gave of future usefulness. One of the examiners, Mr. John Randolph, was so much shocked by the uncouth appearance of the man that he at first refused to examine him, but shortly discovered that the candidate was a diamond in the rough, and after subjecting him to a most severe series of subtle and intricate queries he was forced to remark, "Mr. Henry, if your industry be only half your genius, I augur that you will do well and become an ornament and an honor to your profession." Prophetic words!—Blue and Gray.

A Cruel Compliment.

Some 35 years ago a deceased friend of mine—a well known sculptor named John Jones, familiarly termed Johnnie Jones by his many associates—took me to dine with the Sublime Society of Steaks, which then held their weekly banquets in that which is now the armory of the Lyceum theater.

The late Sir Charles Locock was in the chair, wearing, by the way, Garrick's Macbeth robe. Ex-Chancellor Lord Campbell was also present, and Lord Brougham was expected, but like Johnson and Burke in Goldsmith's "Haunch of Venison," the famous Harry Brougham did not come. The task was imposed on me of returning thanks for the visitors. I was not at the time a practiced public speaker and was extremely nervous. However, I plucked up courage and began a speech, but I had not got to the end of the first sentence before my voice was drowned in a tumult of applause and rappings of knives and spoons on plates. I went on, but the more I tried to speak the louder grew the hubbub, and at last I sat down utterly abashed and disconcerted. Then one of the members of the club rose and moved that the eloquent speech to which the company had just listened with so much pleasure and with such earnest attention should be printed at the cost and charges of the Sublime society for private circulation only. I had been the victim of a harmless beefsteak "sell."—George A. Sala in London Times.

Hats In the House of Commons.

The first thing that strikes the visitor to the house of commons is that—here also it is exceptional among the legislatures of the world—the house of commons permits its members to retain their hats during the sitting. Indeed it is the rule to wear and the exception not to wear the hat. Mr. Gladstone never wears his hat—there have been exceptions, to one of which I will allude presently—nor did Mr. Smith, the late respected leader in the house of commons on the Conservative side, nor did Disraeli, nor does Mr. Balfour, nor Sir Charles Russell.

A member, however, can keep his hat on only when he is in his seat. If he rises to speak, he of course takes off his hat. If he rises to leave his seat and go out of the house, he has to take off his hat. So long as he remains standing in any part of the house he has to keep off his hat. There are some of the older members who, even when they lean over their seats to converse with a member on the bench in front of them, take off their hats. And it is usual, too, when a member interjects an observation across the floor to take it off. It was the invariable custom when a member was referred to that he should raise his hat, but this rule is falling into desuetude.—Harper's Magazine.

Wanted Them All Alike.

"I was once in a big store in Salt Lake City," remarked a woman who has crossed the continent not less than 12 times, "when a man came in and asked the proprietor for seven sealskin sacks. 'What style of sack?' inquired the proprietor very properly.

"'I don't care what style,' retorted the purchaser, with some savageness, 'just so as they're all exactly alike. There mustn't be one inch more sealskin on one than another and mustn't be a hair's breadth difference in their length, width or quality, or my seven wives will make it hot for me at home. Understand, I don't care about the fit or anything else. You send up seven sealskin sacks that are exactly alike—that's the main point.' From which," concluded the woman, "it would seem that polygamy was not altogether the bed of roses that the Mormons would have us believe."—New York Recorder.

Sugar Cane.

The sugar cane was introduced into the Madeira islands in 1425, and in 1498 the annual product exceeded 4,000,000 pounds. The introduction of sugar cane into the West Indies, however, destroyed the industry, and grape culture took the place of the sugar cane until 1852, when the phylloxera nearly swept all the vines out of existence. The sugar cane is again being cultivated, and last year 500,000 pounds were made. The supply will always be limited, because the cane cannot be profitably cultivated at a higher elevation than 1,000 feet.—Exchange.

Tardy Lord Palmerston.

A political friend, who knew Lord Palmerston intimately, relates that he was not always to be depended on in keeping appointments. He once fixed 7 o'clock to dine with the officials of a provincial town, but failed to turn up. When 10 o'clock struck and he still was absent, the company in sheer desperation sat down and had reached only the second course when the great man appeared. All expected an apology for the delay that had spoiled their dinner, but Palmerston, with the blandest of smiles and an assumption of the most cordial and forgiving aspect, quietly said, "I am so glad you did not wait."

MEN KNOW THIS IS TRUE

It is a Sure and Never Failing Omen.

AND IT MEANS SOMETHING OF THE UTMOST IMPORTANCE.

Does It Hit You? Then Be Warned in Season and Save Yourself.

Every man desires to be strong, healthy and vigorous, he wants to be a man in every sense of the word; there are thousands of men who get up in the morning with dull feeling head, weak, tired and languid and feel so all day. They have no life, energy, ambition for physical or mental work, and their nerve power is all gone.

They were once ready for anything, but now cannot arouse themselves from that terrible state of lethargy and dull feeling, their mind wanders, and they have no confidence in themselves. Mr. John H. Sluus, of 49 Amity st., Flushing, N. Y., has just had a most remarkable recovery. He speaks as follows regarding his case.

"I suffered terribly with sick headaches, liver complaint and nervousness ever since I was a boy. I was in such misery from headaches and nervousness that I was almost good for nothing at times. I took many remedies, but in spite of everything I could not get better.

MR. JOHN H. SLUUS.

"I had for some time been weak, tired and run down. My usual good health was leaving me. I continued to grow worse and was finally taken with typhoid fever. Not recovering from this as rapidly as I should, and feeling that my general helth needed building up, I made up my mind to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

What greater prize could the world contain than a medicine which can cure such suffering as that? Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is constantly performing the most wonderful cures all over the land

If you are suffering from any form of nervous or chronic disease, are weak and debilitated, if you have kidney or liver complaint, take this wonderful medicine and you will be restored to health. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Dr. Greene, the discoverer of this great remedy, who is the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter, at his office, 35 West 14th st., New York City.

Occupied and Busy.

"There isn't much of any difference between occupied and busy, is there, pa?" inquired Jake Potter, who was studying his definitions for the next lesson.

"I should say," answered his father, "there was about as much diff'rence betwixt 'em as there is between walkin up hill an slidin daown. I calklate you won't get an extry high mark tomorrer ef you can't hit off no better'n that, Jake."

"Well, what is the difference, I'd like to know?" said the crestfallen Jake.

"Ain't Abe Hawkin's okkypation plumbin?" inquired Mr. Potter.

Jake admitted that it was.

"Hev you ever seen him busy?" asked the father.

"Never, pa," responded Jake promptly.

"An I've heerd that Jeems Spears was so okkypied he couldn't find time to fetch in wood fer his wife when he sets by the haour daown t' the store. I reckon you couldn't hardly call him a busy man. An ycu, Jake," continued Mr. Potter, turning to his son for the last illustration, "I've known you naow an again t' be so okkypied turnin somersets in them hoop pole shavins back o' th' woodhouse you couldn't hear me call ye no more'n ef you was deef, though I'd holler till I was all hoarsed up, an yet it never appeared t' me as ef you was precisely busy them times."—Home Queen.

AN AWFUL TRAGEDY

Details of the Butchery at the Baker Home.

Mother and Child Chopped to Death With an Axe—One of the Negro Burglars Brained By the Husband, the Other Shot—Citizens Demand the Negroes Bodies to Burn Them.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., March 2.—The horrible tragedy at the home of Moore Baker, the young farmer near Franklin Park, has thrown the community into a state of bewildered excitement, for never before in the history of this county nor, in fact, of the state of New Jersey, has such a terrible affair been recorded.

When a correspondent of the United Press visited the scene with the coroner, H. C. Adair, and county physician, Lewis T. Reed, there were fully 200 people in and around the house. The room where the tragedy occurred was filled with a curious throng. The dead woman, who, in another month would a second time have become a mother, was lying on her side in a pool of blood which nearly covered the whole bed. The murderous blow with the axe had cut off a portion of her hair and had sunk deep into her skull. The baby lay on its face with its little hands outstretched. Two fearful wounds had nearly divided the child's head. On the floor lay the body of the negro, Thompson, from whose head the brains protruded. The man's face was so cut up as to be scarcely recognizable. In the small back hallway lay the body of the other negro, with the side of the head crushed by the charge of heavy buckshot. The walls and ceilings were spattered with blood, and the gory axe lay on the floor.

Some dozen women, led by curiosity, had crowded themselves into the bedroom near the bed, where two of them fainted and were removed from the terrible scene.

After an examination, Coroner Adair impanelled a jury of farmers, who inspected the bodies. When the coroner ordered the bodies of the two negroes removed several of the men wanted to pitch them out of the windows, but this the coroner would not allow, and they were carried outside and laid in the snow.

The testimony of Moora Baker and Dr. Garret Hoagland was taken, and, after 10 minutes' deliberation, they rendered a verdict of murder in the case of the mother and child, and of justifiable homicide as to the killing of the two negroes, thus exonerating Mr. Baker.

Wanted to Burn Their Bodies.

At noon two of the villagers came to Coroner Adair, as he was standing on the hotel stoop, and demanded that he turn the bodies of the negroes over to them that they might burn them with oil and tar and then feed their bones to the dogs. The coroner refused their demand, and at length succeeded in calming them down. The negroes will be buried at the county's expense, as their friends refuse to have anything to do with the bodies. The negroes will be buried in ordinary pine boxes, in the same grave.

Story of the Tragedy.

Moore Baker is a highly respected farmer, of powerful build, about 30 years old and quite well off. He married Louisa Evans three years ago and a baby girl was the result of the union. Henry Baker, a young negro, worked for Moore Baker's father for years, and often worked for the son also. Wednesday afternoon when he quit work for the day he asked Mr. Baker for a loan of $2. Mr. Baker asked him if he could change a $100 bill, and, upon the negro saying "no," he produced the bill and showed it to him. This money was what the negroes were after.

At about one o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Baker awakened her husband and told him she heard a noise in the house. Baker calmed his wife's fears, but, upon her earnest request, and because Baby Gertrude, who was lying in a crib beside her father and mother, was crying, he got up and lighted a lamp. He then returned to bed, and had almost fallen asleep, when he heard a slight noise, and quickly turning, he saw two negroes standing at the foot of the bed.

Killed Mother and Child.

He recognized them as Henry Baker and Willard Thompson. Thompson was armed with an axe which he had taken from the woodpile in the rear of the house, and both negroes were in their stocking feet, their shoes being found on the back stoop in the morning. The moment Mrs. Baker saw the negroes she sat up in bed and screamed. Thompson, who is almost white and has a bad strain of blood in him, leaned over the footboard and struck Mrs. Baker on the head with the axe, cutting a fearful gash and killing her instantly. He then went around to the crib and struck the baby twice with the axe, each time making a deep wound. The little one made a convulsive spring toward its mother and expired.

Grappled With the Fiends.

In the mean time Mr. Baker had jumped out of bed and grappled with the negro, Baker, and had so terrified him that he ran into a rear bedroom. Moore Baker then turned to Thompson, who still held the bloody axe, and a frightful struggle ensued for its possession. Back and forward they fought, Baker says, for five minutes, but it could scarcely have been that long before he wrested the axe from Thompson and struck him on the head.

Felled the Negro With an Axe.

He followed up this blow with others and seven times he sank the axe in the negro's head before the latter fell to the floor dead. Baker then dropped the axe and ran for his double-barrelled gun, which, loaded with No. 3 buck shot, stood in a corner of the room. Seizing the weapon, he walked to a door leading out into a small back hall, shouting "Henry, you black fiend, come out of that." With a bound, the negro then sprang into the hall and darted toward the back stairs, only to receive the full charge of one barrel in the right side of his face near the eye. He fell with a groan, and lay where he fell until he died at 6 o'clock this morning, without once recovering consciousness. Then Mr. Baker, perceiving that his wife and child were indeed dead, called in Dr. Hagland and several neighbors, who remained in the house with him until the neighborhood was aroused.

SOUTH NEEDS WHITE HELP.

Congressman Turpin Would Like to See All Negroes Go to Africa.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Representative Turpin of Alabama says he has no knowledge of the reported convention to be held at Birmingham next month to arrange for the deportation of the colored people of America to Africa.

"This is the first I have heard of it," said he, "but I hope it is true. It would be the best thing for the south if the negroes would leave it."

"In what way?" Mr. Turpin was asked.

"It would stimulate immigration, for one thing, and that is what we most need in the south. Some of the finest land in the world, well watered and as fertile as any that the sun ever shone on, can be bought in my district for $15 an acre. It couldn't be bought before the war for less than $75 and $100 an acre. In fact, it could hardly be bought at any price. If the negroes would leave the south their places would be filled by white men from the north, who would take up these rich farming lands and locate there in great numbers. It might work some hardship at first to the planters and others employing negro labor, but we would be the better for the change as soon as we could secure the services of white men to take their places."

"Do you think that any considerable number of negroes would leave the south and go to Africa?"

"Yes, I think some would avail themselves of the opportunity. But where is the money to come from? The negroes themselves have not the money to carry them there, and unless some millionaire crank were to charter a ship for that purpose I don't think that many would get there. I doubt," Mr. Turpin went on, "if very many negroes will leave their homes in the south either for Africa or any part of the United States. Those who went to Kansas a few years ago became unsettled and soon returned. The negroes do not get on well with the northern men. The people of the north do not understand the negro as we of the south do. In our courts we treat the negro more considerately than he would be treated in a northern court. We have grown up with him and understand him better. In cases of petty larceny down south, a white man is punished more severely than a negro. We still look upon the negroes as children and treat them as such. But we would be better off without them. They are as much a disadvantage to the south as the Chinese are to California. They can live on less than a white man and will work for smaller wages. What we need is white help to take their places."

Two Families Broken Up.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 2.—It is now generally believed here that Mrs. Harry B. Stagg and E. W. Griffiths, have eloped. About a week ago Griffiths was caught in the company of Mrs. Stagg by her husband, who returned home from work unexpectedly. Stagg at once commenced proceedings for divorce, but his lawyer, Johnson, cannot serve papers upon Mrs. Stagg or Mr. Griffiths, who is named as co-respondent, because their whereabouts are unknown. Griffiths was formerly with Brown Brothers, bankers, of No. 61 Wall street, New York. Griffiths family reside on Park street and the families of both parties are well to do.

Corbett Acquitted.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 2.—After being out 16 minutes in the case against James J. Corbett, on trial for engaging in a prize fight, the jury found the defendant not guilty. This decision, it is claimed, settles the question of the legality of glove contests in this state, and until the law is changed, makes Florida an open place for these contests.

Lighthouse Gardiner All Right.

TOMPKINSVILLE, N. Y., March 2.—Lieutenant Commander W. S. Schley, inspector of the light house board, has received word that the lighthouse at Gardiner's Island, which was reported to have been destroyed by the recent storm, is all right, and that the keeper and his family are safe and well.

M'KANE IN STRIPES.

The Ex-Boss Spends His First Night in a Felon's Cell.

SING SING, March 2.—John Y. McKane spent his first night in a felon's cell last night, and to-day will be further acquainted with the rules and regulations which a convict must obey. The work at which he will be assigned has not yet been decided upon, and will not be until the doctor has made his report as to his physical ability and he is questioned as to what he is the best fitted.

McKane's journey from New York last evening was devoid of incident. One train at the Grand Central depot was missed by a few minutes, necessitating a wait in the depot of nearly an hour for the next one. This, it is surmised by many, was done purposely by the sheriff, in the hope that McKane's lawyers, who were at that moment before a Brooklyn justice praying for a stay, might be successful.

On arrival at the prison, McKane was, of course, put through the same ordeal as are all new convicts. With face to the wall and hands uplifted, he gave his age as 51; occupation, builder; married; religion, methodist; born in Ireland; does not use tobacco or liquor. He was then searched and $25.87 were found in his pockets. His diamond pin, sleeve buttons and ring, and his gold watch and chain were taken, to be sent to his wife. Next he was taken to the barber shop where his hair was clipped and face shaved clean by a convict barber; a bath followed, the stripes were donned and the ex-political leader of Gravesend was locked in a felon's cell to begin his sentence of six years, which means four years and two months' imprisonment, if the rules are not infringed, or unless his stay is shortened by a pardon.

FIRST SENTENCED TO 79 YEARS.

After 12 Years in Court the Sentence is Reduced to Two Months.

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 2.—The state supreme court met at the state house yesterday and rendered a decision in the case of the state vs. John O'Neil, of Rutland. The court denied O'Neil's petition for an arrest of judgment and sentenced him to a fine of $6.160 and two months in the house of correction.

This is the most unique case ever before the Vermont courts and has been on trial for 12 years in one form or another. O'Neil, a liquor dealer in Whitehall, N. Y., sent liquor to Rutland in jugs. He was arrested in 1882, convicted before Justice Wayne Bailey in Rutland for 457 offenses and sentenced by Bailey to 28,836 days, or over 79 years, in the house of correction. Defendant appealed to the county court, when he pleaded guilty of 307 offenses, reducing the penalty to about 60 years. He appealed to the supreme court on the grounds of excessive and unusual punishment, but the decision of the lower court was affirmed. The case was then taken to the United States supreme court on the plea that the Vermont prohibitory law was unconstitutional. That court decided that it had no jurisdiction.

As a last resort it was taken back to the state supreme court on a motion to arrest judgment.

Norman L. Munroe's Will.

NEW YORK, March 2.—The will of Norman L. Munroe, the publisher who died last Saturday, has been filed for probate. The estimated personality is $500,000, and the realty is like amount, although it is believed that the actual value is much greater than this. Mr. Munroe gives $10,000 to each of his five sisters, and $10,000 to each of the wives of his two brothers; and $10,000 to Hugh Fraser who managed his publishing business for him. One third of the balance of the estate goes to the widow to be taken and accepted by her in lieu of dower, and the remaining two thirds are to be divided equally between his two children, Norman, aged 13, and Henry aged 10. The executors are authorized to continue the publishing business with the present managers.

Longtin's Latest Story.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., March 2.—The latest story told by Oliver Longtin, who claims to be heir to many millions, or, rather, by his friends, who are really doing the talking for him, is that the famous will was executed, not by Longtin, but by one Bisaillon, who was a maternal grandfather of Longtin. It is said that Mr. Bisaillon died at St. Constant, Canada, but the date of his death appears to be shrouded in mystery. This change in the name of the testator may, it is thought by some, account for the fact that the surrogate of New York county was unable to find any record of the alleged will.

Excursion of Unemployed.

GUTHERIE, O. T., March 2.—Leo Vincent, an organizer of the populist party here, is getting up a large excursion to join the army of unemployed, who are expected to march 100,000 strong to Washington May 1 and demand legislation for the relief of the people.

CENTERING ON DINGENS

Ithaca Authorities Will Try to Indict Him.

Anyway Indications Point That Way Now—All the Students Who Refused to Answer Before the Coroner to Appear Before the Grand Jury Except the Young Buffalo Student.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 2.—It looks very much now as if the authorities will try to fasten the guilt of the recent Cornell banquet tragedy on Student Dingens. This belief was strengthened when subpœnas to appear before the grand jury were served upon all the students who appeared before the coroner yesterday and refused to answer questions, except Dingen. It is believed that the others are not implicated but that they know of the circumstances surrounding the unpleasant affair and wish th shield Dingens.

The announcement that the coroner's jury had adjourned without action was a great surprise. It was explained by the statement that the only evidence against anyone so far was the fact that certain students had refused to answer questions by advice of counsel. There was no way of compelling them except to commit them for contempt, and even this right was disputed by some of the county officials. It was thought to be a good plan to adjourn until after the meeting of the grand jury, before which body the excuse "by advice of counsel" would be of no service. If the evidence adduced there by the investigation was sufficient to hold anyone then the coroner's jury would be able to procure evidence to assist them in their finding. In short it is a shifting of responsibility by the coroner's jury.

The students put under arrest by the coroner yesterday for refusing to answer and afterwards released were F. L. Taylor, of Plainfield, N. J., Dingen's roommate; C. H. Mitchell, New York; Charles G. Gorby, Pittsburg, Pa.; Earl Stinson, Cincinnati, O; C. L. Dingens, Buffalo, N. Y.

SUING THE BROTHERHOOD.

Non-Union Lehigh Men Demand Pay Promised for Leaving Their Jobs.

EASTON, Pa., March 2.—Twenty-four railroad brakemen residing about Easton, who took the places of strikers on the Lehigh Valley railroad and afterwards relinquished their places upon solicitations of the strikers with the understanding that the brotherhood would pay them $35 per month until the strike terminated, have been informed by the brotherhood officials engaged here in paying brotherhood men who are still out, that the non-union men would not be paid anything in addition to the $3.50 given them one month ago. The twenty-four men have consequently brought suit against the order of Brotherhood of Trainmen to recover the wages due and promised to them. The strike lasted eighteen days and the men answered roll call with the union men three times each day during the strike.

No Hope for the Buried Men.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., March 2.—A cave-in occurred in Owen T. William & Sons quarry at Williamstown, twenty miles north of Allentown, yesterday. The roof of a tunnel fell on seven workmen, three Hungarians and Joseph Remaley, Samuel Kreitz, Griffith C. Pritchard and William R. Jones. Jones was rescued so badly injured he may die. Joseph Remaley was dug out of the debris more dead than alive. Samuel Kreitz was found crushed to death. All the men buried are married, and have families. A large relief party is hard at work to reach them, but their is no hope of finding them alive as they are under hundreds of tons of earth and rock. It will take a week to reach them.

Law to Protect the Old Boys.

BOSTON, March 2.—A bill was heard by the house committee on the judiciary at the state house which provides that no person shall recover for breach of promise of marriage from any person, who at the time is over 60 years of age, a greater sum than $5,000. S. W. Hathaway, of Boston, who appeared in behalf of the bill, told the committee that it was proposed in the interests of morality. "Men over the age of sixty are easily imposed upon," he said, "or at least more easily than younger men." It was further intended to protect the public by curtailing and discouraging sensational newspaper reports.

Morrill Committed Suicide.

BOSTON, March 2.—Evidence of the fate of Charles O. Morrill, the Mexican war veteran, who since the 17 ult. has been missing from home, has been procured, his coat having been found under the bridge over the Merrimac river, between this town and Newburyport. In a pocket was a letter to his folks bidding them good by and stating that he had nothing to live for; also telling where to find his pension papers, etc. Morrill was 78 years old.

NERVES WERE UNSTRUNG.

MRS. SHORT WAS LEADING A LIFE OF MISERY.

Until She Used the Great Remedy Paine's Celery Compound—The Burden of Housekeeping Falls Heavily on Mothers.

Housekeeping is growing less simple and more and more complex each year. A home that professes to be well regulated today is far more difficult to manage than was the same kind of a home 50 or 60 years ago.

Upon the woman falls the burden.

Many work themselves into nervous exhaustion. Many mothers grow so irritable that they feel at all times half guilty, fearing that their disease—for it a disease and a most dreadful one—may result in affecting the otherwise sunny disposition of their children.

MRS. E. E. SHORT.

What paine is to the broken limb, such is nervous irritability to the exhausted brain.

No medicine is so universally used in the homes founded for the aged the feeble, the weak and suffering. A list of the public institutions alone where this compound is daily used would extend to great length. A sound body and a sound mind are sure to follow the persistent taking of Paine's celery compound; try it and be convinced, as thousands of other are, that it is the greatest remedy in the world.

Let every woman read the following voluntary testimonial from Mrs. E. E. Short, a highly respected of Haverhill, and learn of one of the thousands of wonderful cures that are wrought by Paine's celery compound:

"Though never very strong, I was always well until I was married; I was 19 years old then and am 28 now and mother of four children; I got frightened just before my little girl was born, and I have never wholly recovered from it. I have taken medicine enough to swim in. I have been so nervous that I did not dare to go out in the back room after dark unless some one went with me for fear I should scream.

"My husband has spent enough money for me for doctors, nurses and medicine to pay for a home, and he is very thankful that I took Paine's celery compound.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 2.—[illegible] yesterday while cleaning a gun [illegible] not know that the swap it was loaded. By some means it was discharged and Yoger received the full charge of shot in his breast. He died a few minutes later in the arms of his wife.

Matrimonial Boom.

PITTSBURG, March 2. — Owing to the great demand for public work in the parks at $1 per day, the city employment committee issued an order some time ago to employ only married men. This had the effect of causing a big boom in business at the marriage license clerk's office. Every unmarried Italian and Pole in Pittsburg seems to be hunting a wife. One of them said the boom in matrimony was caused by the refusal of the committee to hire men who had nobody else depending on them. All the marriageable young women who are willing to begin the married state on $1 per day, he said, had been taken, and unless the order is rescinded trouble will happen in the Italian and Polish colonies.

It Cost Carnegie $125,170.72

NORTH PLAINFIELD REPUBLICAN PRIMARIES TONIGHT.

The North Plainfield Republican primaries for the nomination of township and borough officers, will be held in the basement of the school building, Somerset street, Friday evening, March 2, at 7:45. As this is an important election, every Republican is urged to be present.

Keep your eye on Page 4.

North Plainfield Republicans, don't miss your primaries tonight.

Why should n't the assessor be a real-estate man, familiar with property-values? Then C. H. Lyman, certainly.

What's the use of having horses if they're not at hand when you want them? Those fire horses are still working on the streets, and they've no business anywhere but on the jump for emergency.

Perhaps your mind is n't made up on the sewerage question. Then you're the man the Mayor wants to see. Hunt him up for a quiet little talk. He 'll convince you, even if the countless cesspools do not.

The North Plainfield Democrats believe in putting in office men who are equipped by their business training to look out for the needs of the borough. That's why they made such excellent selections for Councilmen.

You remember what The Press said of S. St. J. McCutchen when it first nominated him for Borough Mayor? Well, that's the kind of a man he is, and being that kind of a man makes his election as sure as Sunday.

Down in Ocean Grove, that good and righteous place where naught is said or done of guile, the voice of prophecy has arisen and proclaimed that the next Governor of New Jersey will be either James A. Bradley of Asbury Park or Alexander Gilbert of Plainfield. The prophecy is made in the columns of that virtuous journal, the Ocean Grove Times, and is worthy of thought. But The Press ventures the steadfast opinion that if the choice really lies between Senator Bradley and Mayor Gilbert the next Governor of New Jersey will be Alexander Gilbert, without any "either" about it.

Brazil's Election Passes Off Quietly.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 2.—The polls opened at 9 o'clock a. m., and closed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The voting was very light. There were no soldiers at any of the voting places and not the slightest attempt at coercion or intimidation. Perfect order prevailed. The voting was by secret ballot. Moraes and Pereira were practically the only candidates for president and vice-president respectively and there is no doubt of their having been legally elected.

CHILLINESS, when other people feel warm enough, is a sign of biliousness, or of malarial poisons—so is a furred or coated tongue, loss of appetite, headaches or giddiness, and a dull, drowsy, debilitated feeling. It's your liver that's at fault. You want to stimulate it and invigorate it with Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. With every trouble of the kind, these tiny little things act like a miracle.

You can break up sudden attacks of Colds, Fevers, and Inflammations, with them. They'll give you a permanent cure for Indigestion, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, and Dizziness. They're the smallest, the pleasantest to take, and the most thoroughly natural remedy.

You ought to be warned against the maltreatment of Catarrh in the Head, with poisonous, irritating nostrums. They can't cure it. They simply remove it—drive it to the throat and lungs. For a thorough and complete cure of Catarrh, take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. 11 6y

The American Catarrh Cure

Is the result of twenty-six years' study and treatment of the disease. One bottle convinces the most skeptical. It is always ready for use, needing neither douche nor atomizer. It restores the hearing, cures the hawking cough and expectorating, removes the headache and nose bleeding, increases the appetite, produces sound sleep, invigorates the whole system and increases the vitality. Prepared only by W. B. Jones, M. D., No. 1338 South Eighth street, Philadelphia. For sale by I. W. Randolph, 21 West Front street. Price $1.

SCRUB and WASH as you will, it is not easy to keep the hands smooth and white in winter time. In fact, the more you scrub and wash, the rougher seems the skin, and you find that the best of soap fails to whiten it. Now if, after washing, you will moisten your hands with LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE, the effect will be to soften and whiten the skin, even in the worst weather. Used by hundreds of the "best people" in Plainfield. Originated and sold only by H. P. REYNOLDS, Pharmacist, Park and North avenues.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

CHEMICAL WORKS BLOWN UP.

One Man Killed by an Explosion in Gibbstown, N. J.

(Special to The Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, March 2—A terrible explosion occurred in the waste separating building of the Repauno Chemical Company in Gibbstown, N. J., this morning. The force of the shock was so great that it was felt in towns fifteen miles away. Fortunately there was only one man in the building at the time the explosion occurred. Levi Ivins, one of the workmen, was blown to atoms. The separating building was destroyed and the surrounding structures were damaged.

THAT TRACK TO BE A DAISY.

Expert Engineer F. A. Dunham Will Make It the Best in These Parts.

The Board of Governors of the Crescent Wheelmen intend to make the new bicycle track the fastest in this part of the country. The land, a plot of eleven acres on the Randolph road, near Park avenue, is an ideal site for the purpose.

The foundation will be of clay and gravel mixed and will be covered with gravel brought from Flemington. A steam roller will be used to put the track in condition. The track, a third of a mile in length, will be of the kite shape with the small loop omitted.

The excellence of the mechanical construction of the track is assured by the fact that F. A. Dunham's vast experience in civil engineering in this State, Pennsylvania and New York, has been called into service. He will commence surveying next Monday morning, to fix the size and levels. Samuel Smalley has already begun the erection of a fence.

It is expected that the work will be finished in time for a field day opening, May 30. A large number of famous wheelmen, including Champion Zimmerman, will participate, and Memorial Day will doubtless mark the beginning of a new period in the Crescents' existence. Although bicycling will be the feature of the season's sport, base ball will not be neglected, and an amateur team will probably be managed by Will McLoughlin, who made Westfield's team so strong a rival of Plainfield in the Central New Jersey Tournament.

A MODEL RESTAURANT.

J. H. McVey Keeps Improving His Popular Dining-Room.

Having spent over $1,400 in improvements, John H. McVey is confident that his North Avenue restaurant is one of the best appointed in the State. The location and reputation of the place could not be improved upon, but the enterprising proprietor has wrought a change in the interior appearance, by enlarging and renovating.

The seating capacity has been increased to seventy-six by the removal of counters and cellarway and by the placing of the range in an addition in the rear. The kitchen is now entirely separated and can be entirely cut off from the dining-room. Many ingenious contrivances to lessen work in the kitchen have been arranged by Mr. McVey. Economy of space and time have been sought. A coil of pipe one hundred feet long is being connected in an ice box with the city system to supply ice-water, while a large new galvanized boiler furnishes an ample allowance of hot water.

The restaurant proper has been decorated in the most costly manner, with paint, wall paper and mouldings by W. S. Chase, Jr., of East Second street. A part of the paper is of elegant embossed design, hand painted. Eight fans and connection with a skylight will ventilate the room in summer and incandescent lamps will soon be used exclusively. A handsome oak sideboard will be followed by hat racks to match. New silver and china services have been purchased.

It is Mr. McVey's intention to make his establishment a restaurant especially for the use of families, and provide competent chef and a quick, faultless service to make Plainfield proud of McVey's restaurant.

WORKING AMONG YOUNG MEN.

Progress Made in the Various Departments of the Y. M. C. A.

The following were present at the monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association held in the Association rooms last evening: President Murray, F. W. Yates, Recording Secretary; H. O. Newman, Treasurer; E. L. Bonny, Stephen Cahoone, George R. Cornwell, J. W. Gavett, T. E. Hazell, A. C. LaBoyteaux, William Thompson, John Valiant and General Secretary Manning. After reading of Scriptures and prayer, the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Devotional Committee in their report said that the average weekly attendance at the young men's meeting had been 80 and that there had been very special interest at Mount Pleasant.

The Music Committee reported the good service rendered by the male chorus at the young men's meetings. Special mention was made of the solos of L. G. March, who has been working with Evangelist Crane in Plainfield. Pledges have been received for the purchase of new Hymn Books Nos. 5 and 6 combined.

The Committee on Extension Work reported, as did also the Treasurer and General Secretary.

Reports of the parlor conference for Directors at the State Convention were received from Messrs. LaBoyteaux and Cornwell.

—A meeting of Engine Company No. 2 was held last evening in headquarters. Nothing of special importance came up for consideration.

—A rehearsal of the Amphion Orchestra was held in the piano parlors of Vanderbeek & Sattels on Park avenue last evening. The music they discoursed was simply and truly great.

A DUER STREET SURPRISE.

Miss Ada Woolston an Involuntary But Happy Hostess.

Miss Ada Woolston, daughter of L. B. Woolston, of the enterprising firm of decorators, was most agreeably surprised by a party of young people at her home, 109 Duer street, last evening. The visitors, under arrangements made by the Misses Nellie Martin, Florence Duck and May Linbarger, assembled at Miss Martin's home on Jackson avenue and thence invaded Mr. Woolston's residence. Nathan J. Guttman and Miss Schorb furnished music on the violin and piano for dancing.

The party included: The Misses Mamie Buckle, Beatrice Emmons, Edith Hummer, Lena Smalley, Nellie Valiant, Emma Buckle, May McLoughlin, Nettie Chandler, Matie VanHorn, Grace Crane, Stella Swain, Dollie Schoonmaker, Emma Vetterlein, Nellie Scott, Grace Cottrell, Nellie Martin, May Linbarger, Sadie Holmes, Libbie Joseph, and Bertha Wilcox; James Arnold, Lewis Hummer, Herbert Scott, Joseph Feytel, John VanWinkle, Howard Woolston, William Buell, Howard Martin, Maxwell Honeyman, Charles Woolston, William VanDeventer, Bert Moore, Henry Brower, William Morrison, Harry Vetterlein and Robert Douglas; Mr. and Mrs. John P. Emmons and Mr. and Mrs. John Vetterlein.

A PORTRAIT OF THEIR DEAD.

It Will Hang in the Alert Parlors, and the Banquet Is Given up.

The meeting of Alert Hose Company was largely attended last evening, at their house on Madison avenue, and the session was a busy one.

A resolution was presented and adopted recommending that no one be elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles P. Leggett until the annual election which occurs in May.

The plan to celebrate the 25th anniversary of the company was given up and by a vote it was decided to use the money subscribed, for the purpose of securing a crayon portrait of Mr. Leggett, which will be hung in their parlors.

The brakes on the hose carriage have been out of order, and it was decided to attend to the matter at once, and the difficulty is now being remedied.

It is the desire of the city that economy should be used in the fire department and in consequence the Alerts will occupy one-half of the old engine-house on West Second street. They will move in April.

The company accepted the resolutions printed in the city papers on the death of their late brother, Charles P. Leggett, and the meeting adjourned.

THE CANDIDATES.

Samuel St. J. McCutchen, the candidate for Mayor, is a lawyer in New York city. He has resided in this city and North Plainfield for years. Mr. McCutchen is school trustee and President of the Park Club, and will make a fit successor to the present incumbent, who has been the most progressive executive the borough ever has had. Of Mr. McCutchen's election there is no possible doubt, and as a former member of the Borough Council he knows by experience the borough's needs.

A. A. Faber, Jr., of Mercer avenue, nominee for Councilman for three years, is engaged in the manufacture of clothing in New York city, and is a property owner and a citizen who has the best interests of the borough at heart. He has resided in North Plainfield for a number of years.

S. B. Wheeler, who received nomination for Councilman for 3 years, has been a resident of North Plainfield for several years, and is Superintendent of the late John Taylor Johnston's stock farm in the northern end of the borough. Mr. Wheeler is well and favorably known, and there is no doubt of his election.

Jules B. Bovey, Sr., who was nominated for Councilman for the unexpired term of one year, resides on the property owned by him on Somerset street next to Greenbrook road, where he has lived for some time. Mr. Bovey retired from active business a few years ago, and no doubt he will make an excellent Councilman, having so much time at his disposal.

Flourishing Megantic.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Megantic Fish and Game Corporation was held in Poland yesterday. The club is in a very prosperous condition, the assets being $13,513.54, and the liabilities but $1,891.25. The directors elected included Counselor W. K. McClure of Plainfield. The other members from Plainfield are Wm. H. Brower, A. V. Nolen, Wm. B. Wadsworth, E. N. Erickson, Jacob Kirkner, Dr. Frank C. Wells and Randolph Stelle.

To Go to Cape May, All Together.

The meeting of Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., last evening was largely attended. The question of attending the Grand Army Day in Cape May next summer was discussed. The citizens of Cape May and the liberal Pennsylvania Railroad Company have contributed $8,000 toward the entertainment of the veterans. It was decided that the Post should attend in a body.

The Plainfield Sophs Keeps Silent.

Frederick L. Taylor, of East Fifth street, Plainfield, a member of the Sophomore Class in Cornell, was called to the witness-stand in the investigation of the recent outrage, yesterday, but refused to answer any questions, saying he did so under the advice of counsel.

M'CUTCHEN FOR MAYOR

STRONG TICKET NOMINATED BY NORTH PLAINFIELD DEMOCRATS.

For Councilmen, A. E. Faber, Jr., Samuel B. Wheeler and Julius B. Bovey, Sr.—Charles H. Lyman for Borough Assessor—Candidates Unpledged to Partisan Distribution of Patronage—Unanimous Enthusiasm for Mr. McCutchen—Praise for Mayor Saunders.

The borough Democratic primary held in the basement of the school-house last night was attended by fifty voters. Samuel St. J. McCutchen was nominated for Mayor. The township primary was postponed till next Thursday evening.

Elston French, of the Executive Committee, called the meeting to order. George H. Neal was chosen chairman, and Clarence Murphy secretary.

For Mayor Mr. French renominated W. L. Saunders. The Mayor said that although he knew that he had been named from the most kindly feeling, he could not accept. He was under great obligations to the Democrats of the borough, who had nominated him twice and stood nobly by him. At any rate he should be satisfied with two terms and not try for a third.

Continuing Mr. Saunders spoke of a man who had spent his life in the borough, having been a famous ball player in his early days, and who had since risen high in public life as a member of the bar. He was one who had served a term in the Council and who had taken a high position in the Board of School Trustees. His reputation, ability and his earnest work in the borough made Samuel St. John McCutchen the proper candidate for Mayor.

The nomination was seconded by David D. Smalley and Mr. McCutchen was named for Mayor unanimously.

A. E. Faber, Jr., and Samuel B. Wheeler were unanimously chosen candidates for full terms as Councilmen. For that office for one year J. B. Bovey, Sr., was nominated.

It was moved that the appropriation for borough expenses the coming year should remain at $1,500 and for Board of Health expenses at $350, as in the past year.

The question of road improvements having been referred to, Chairman Neal said that as a member of the Street Committee he thought that $3,500 was insufficient to enable them to improve the streets rapidly. Economy in care could result only from more macadamizing. The Republican members of the Committee had agreed to recommend appropriating $4,500 to the Republican primary. He himself favored the expenditure of $4,000 on the streets next year. On Mr. Neal's recommendation it was decided not to act on the matter, but to authorize a committee on vacancies to fix the amount the same as that voted by the Republicans.

Charles H. Lyman was nominated for Borough Assessor. No one was named for Borough Collector. The Chairman, Elston French, and David J. Carney were made a Committee on Vacancies.

Edward C. Morse moved that in case the Democratic candidates were elected they should appoint none but Democrats to office.

Mr. Neal said he considered himself as true a Democrat as any one present. He had been in the Council with Mayor Saunders and had done all he could for the party, but the candidates should not be needlessly tied down but allowed to use their judgment in case of election. He felt that the motion had been made in a spirit of criticism of the actions of three members of the Council.

Mr. Morse claimed an active membership in the Democratic party for thirty years. When appointments of any kind were made the real workers should not be neglected.

The motion was lost.

Chairman Neal thought that every man present had the highest regard for Mayor Saunders for his management of the borough's affairs. He proposed a vote of thanks to the sterling Democrat for his devotions to the interests of the borough. A vote of appreciation was enthusiastically given on motion of Mr. Lyman.

As a committee to notify the nominees of their selection, Mayor Saunders, Elston M. French and J. A. Blatz were appointed.

The primary was adjourned.

The township primary was officered by those who had served in the borough caucus. Adjournment was immediately taken till next Thursday evening.

NOTES FROM THE PASTOR'S PAPER.

What the Methodists Are Doing and Planning of Interest.

From the current issue of The Visitor, the valuable M. E. church paper issued under the joint editorship of Rev. Dr. C. B. Barnes and James R. Joy, the following items of general interest are republished:

Conference will meet in the St. Luke's Church, Newark, April 4.

Brother Davis is making special arrangements for Easter Sunday music.

A plan is afoot for a "pay entertainment" in March or April under the auspices of the League.

Our Fourth Quarterly Conference will be held Wednesday evening, March 14, after the prayer meeting.

The ladies of the Woman's Home Missionary Society are expecting to have Mrs. Jennie Willing address them the evening of April 4.

Next Sunday will be held the last Communion service of the conference year. An opportunity will be given to any who may wish to unite with the church, either by letter or on probation.

Next Sunday morning, March 4, Rev. J. L. Hurlbut, D. D., of New York, will preach the sermon and officiate at the Communion service in Monroe Avenue Chapel. Several probationers will be received into full membership at that time.

We are glad to inform our readers that Brothers Luckey and Bingaman are not going to move farther than on the other side of the railroad. Brother Luckey will go to Ninth street, while Brother Bingaman will set up his Penates in Richmond street near Putnam avenue.

Easter Sunday, March 25, will be observed as anniversary day in Monroe Avenue Chapel. In the morning the report of the Chapel Committee will be rendered and in the afternoon there will be special exercises by the Sunday-school. All friends are cordially invited.

Thursday evening, March 15, our Presiding Elder, Dr. C. S. Ryman, will deliver his popular lecture on "From New York to Venice" with stereopticon illustrations. He will also give about twenty views of the World's Fair. This lecture will be free, and a cordial invitation is extended to all.

P. Minturn Smith retires from the Sunday-school in which he has been for several years a popular teacher. Samuel Bingaman succeeds Brother Smith as teacher of the first-year senior class of young ladies. He has been helping along at Grace Church for more than a year, and we hear the best reports of his usefulness there. The class is to be congratulated.

Sunday, March 11, the last missionary collection of the Conference year will be taken. Envelopes have been given out to each member of the Sunday-school, which are to be returned on that date. It is hoped and expected that their contents will aggregate $80. If so the amount of our missionary collections for 1893-4 will foot up $300, as against $450 in previous years. This makes no account, however, of the offering of the Monroe Avenue Chapel, which will be nearly $50. We believe that Grace Sunday-school makes no missionary offering this year. Last year they helped swell our total.

WHITE MARRIED GREEN.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., L. L. D., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivalled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

Extending the Electric System.

The Dunellen Call announces that the North Plainfield Electric Light Company will soon open a plant at Greenbrook. They intend this plant to supply Bound Brook and also to be able to supply this place in cases when the wires are out of order between here and North Plainfield. Mr. Sebring, president of the company, thinks with the addition of this new plant the company will be able to furnish better lights and be more certain of furnishing lights every night even under unfavorable circumstances, as both plants will be wired to cover the same ground.

He Was Cute.

'twas at the Grand Central station in New York to meet a friend when I noticed a typical hayseeder who was wandering about as if looking for some one. He was carrying a battered leather bag gripped tightly in his right hand, and "Reub" was written all over him so plainly that no one could make a mistake as to the section of the country from which he had come. Catching my eye, he beckoned me aside mysteriously, at the same time looking craftily around to see if he was observed by others.

"My name's Eben Flanders," he volunteered in a confidential tone, "an I'm from Vermont. Naow, would you cal'late I was from the country jest to look at me?"

I assured him I would not dream such was the case.

"I knowed it," he grinned delightedly. "My old woman said folks'd spot me as soon as I showed my nose in New York, but I tole her she didn't know what she was talkin about. I'm mighty cute when I'm mind ter be, an I jest got myself up in this air rig an kem daown. Do you know a feller in New York by the name of Frank Small?"

I did not know Mr. Small.

"Wull, I didn't know but ye might. I know ev'rybody raound aour town."

"New York city is pretty large. Is Mr. Small a friend of yours?"

He hesitated, caressing the fringe of corn colored whiskers under his chin, and then he answered: "Not edzacly. Ye see him an me is havin a little business deal —that is, we're goin to have." As he said this, he glanced hastily toward his bag, to which he clung with a convulsive grip. All at once I fancied I understood the situation.

"I trust you are not contemplating doing business with a green goods man, Mr. Flanders?" I said.

In a moment he drew himself up stiffly.

"I know whut I'm doin, by gorry! They can't no green goods man or bunkum steerer git ahead of Eben Flanders. I'm cute. I read the papers." Then he lowered his voice to add, "I kerry a pistol."

I could not refrain from smiling, at which he seemed offended and left me. Five minutes later, just as the train for which I was waiting was announced, I saw Mr. Flanders walking away in the company of a black mustached young man, who wore a polished silk hat and a red necktie.

About three hours later, I came upon the man from Vermont at the corner of the Bowery and Grand street. He had a new leather grip in his hand and was hurrying along when he saw me and stopped short, grinning triumphantly.

"Told ye I was cute!" he exclaimed, flourishing the bag. "Oh, they've gotter git up before sunrise when they git ahead of yer Uncle Eben! Naow, whut you s'pose I've got in this air bag?"

I told him I had not the least idea.

"Jest come inter this ere saloon, an I'll show ye. They ain't all fools that's raised in the country."

He pulled me into the saloon, and we sat down at a round table in the corner. The man from Vermont ordered beer, and when it was before us he said:

"I knowed they meant to beat me all the time, but I cal'lated I was cute enough for 'em. Ye see, I've bin gittin green goods letters for a year naow, an I never dared tackle them fellers till I read in the papers haow a feller from aout west kem on here an beat them stout of their eye teeth. Then I scrabbled up $300, loaded my pistol and kem daown to try my luck. Hed all my money in that old bag, an I met this air Frank Small by app'intment. He tuck me daown here somewhere to a place, an then another feller brung aout this bag. They opened it an showed me it was full of good money. I was right onter their game, by smoke! an I kept my eye on this bag so they couldn't change it. They said I might have all there was in the bag fer my $300, and I jest traded on the spot. Then when they tried to git me to look raound so they could swap I up an grabbed the bag, p'inted my pistol at 'em an backed aout of the room. It was a square trade, an I left my bag with the $300. I'll bet them sharpers is the two maddest men in New York!"

"Are you sure you got away with their good money?" I asked, deeply interested, for I sincerely hoped he had succeeded.

"Sartin," he chuckled as he unfastened the clasps of the bag. "Oh, I'm a coon! Look here!"

But when the bag was opened he found it contained some packages of brown paper. Wildly he clawed them out upon the table and tore them open, but he found only one package with the two sides of a "split" $5 bill pasted on the top and bottom. For about two minutes he sat there stunned, his face pale and his hands trembling. Then he cleared his throat and huskily observed:

"Mister, I'm swindled fair and square! I dunno haow they done it, but I do know I hain't anywhere nigh as cute as I took myself to be. It's a good thing I bought a return ticket! I'm goin back home an stick to tradin hosses. This air taown is too quick for me!" GILBERT PATTON.

One of Dr. Everett's Stories.

Staid and dignified and scholarly Dr. Everett, the congressman from Massachusetts, knows how to tell a story in an effective way. One day during the silver debate he said he was amazed at the determination of some gentlemen of all three parties—Democrats, Republicans and Populists—to find politics somewhere in some part of the silver discussion. They had a wonderful nose for the political cat in every bag of meal presented to them. It reminded him of what happened in a certain poor religious congregation in England. The congregation wanted to procure new hymnbooks, but they were very poor and could not afford to pay for them at the ordinary prices. They understood, however, that a certain great advertising house, a business house that made patent medicines, was willing to furnish them hymnbooks at a penny each if they would allow some advertisements to be inserted in the books. They thought that would be no special harm, that they might have a few pages of advertisements bound up with Watts and Doddridge. They agreed to the proposition. The books came, duly printed, and they got down to the church on Dec. 24.

On Christmas morning the model Christians, who had no thought of anything but religion, got up to sing. Their pastor gave out by the first line a very familiar hymn. Immediately the congregation arose to their feet and in a few seconds were aghast to find themselves singing:

Hark! the herald angels sing:
Cure 'em's pills are just the thing.
Peace on earth and mercy mild;
Two for man and one for child.

The Old Clock on the Stairs.

Ernest Longfellow, a son of the great poet, has a token of remembrance of his father at his home in Magnolia which money cannot buy. It is nothing more or less than "The Old Clock on the Stairs" made famous by his father.

The clock was formerly owned by Thomas Gold Appleton, and at his death the heirs, of which one was Captain Nathan Appleton, thinking the clock was of particular value to Ernest Longfellow on account of his father's connection with the ancient timepiece, donated it to the son of the poet, so that it now adorns a nook in the stairs of his house at Magnolia.—Boston Herald.

What They Ate.

"South American niggers'll eat anything," declared the old ship steward, with an expression of unfeigned disgust on his leathery face. "I found that out on my first voyage to Brazil, and I've been right careful about what I put inside of me whenever we've laid to in any South American port. Tell ye what cured me:

"We was anchored off Para, and them Brazilian niggers used to come rowing out round the ship in search of work of any kind, while the respectable white folks left us alone. There was one old fellow that could speak English, and one day he asked me did I want some eels. He said he could get me some good ones, and I made a trade with him to bring me a big mess, for I knew there was not a man aboard who would not be glad to get a change from salt grub.

"The next day he brought the eels. They were all dressed, and fine looking fellows they were. I cooked them, and I tell you we had a feast on the Sarah Gordon. I never tasted eels that were better in all my life, and everybody aboard enjoyed them.

"The following day the same old fellow turned up and asked me if we wanted some more eels. I was leaning over the port rail, with the skipper close at hand. I asked him if he could bring me some as good ones as the first lot, and he said he could.

"'What kind will you have, suh, land eels or water eels?' he questioned.

"I looked at the cap'n, and the cap'n looked at me.

"'What kind was the others we had?' I asked.

"'Them was land eels, sur,' he answered.

"In about three seconds the cap'n was leanin over the rail, a-runnin his finger down his throat, and I was doin the same. We didn't stop to think the eels was pretty well digested by that time, and we both felt sick enough to die.

"'Land eels! Holy smoke! We'd been eating snakes!'" GILBERT PATTEN.

A Story of Walter Scott.

New stories of Sir Walter Scott are continually cropping up, just as they are of Abraham Lincoln, and I am strongly of the belief that many of them have been invented since the death of those great men.

Recently I heard the following story of Sir Walter in Edinburgh, and my informant vouched for its truth:

Sir Walter was sitting in his library one day when a tall highlander who had been building an inn near by came in and said:

"May it please you, Sir Walter, I am going to call my place 'The Flodden Inn,' and as ye've writ a poem on Flodden Field it struck me and the guid wife that you might gie us a line for a motto."

"Have you read the poem!" asked Sir Walter.

"No, sir. I'm na a reader."

"Then you know nothing about it?"

"Nothin, but I've heert them say as knows that it's a vera fine thing."

"Well, I would advise you to take a verse from the poem itself."

"And whatt'll that be!"

"Drink, weary traveler—drink and pray."

"But my inn wull na be a kirk," said the man, "and the more prayin there is the less drinkin there'll be, and I na want that."

"Oh," laughed Sir Walter, "I think I can fix the verse by leaving out one letter, an r."

"How will it be then?"

"Drink, weary traveler—drink and pay."

"Be Ailsie craig, that's just the thing!" shouted the man, and he went away delighted.—Exchange.

Wampum Lore.

A graduate of Swarthmore college, proficient in the languages and noted for his devotion to cipher reading, or, as he prefers to call it, the cryptogrammic art, has recently had his attention directed to the deciphering of Indian wampums.

"It is a common mistake," he says, "to refer to wampum belts as Indian money. The Indians prized them highly, not only as ornaments, but for their historical value, because, in reality, they were records of tribal traditions. Each shell, quill, stone or piece of carved wood attached to the belt had a meaning, just as printed words have to us, and the elders of a tribe knew how to read and compose them. There is a famous wampum belt owned by a remnant of the Iroquois, near Syracuse, composed of nearly 7,000 pieces of shell, quill and bone, which relate the story of Champlain's invasion. I claim it is not necessary to have any knowledge of the Iroquois tongue in order to decipher that belt, and after some preliminary practice with specimens in the Delaware County institute and elsewhere I purpose seriously to undertake the deciphering of the great Iroquois cryptogram."—Philadelphia Record.

The Prairie Wolf.

Colonel Jim Struthers of Montana was in the lobby of the Shoreham, and talking of wolves and antelope he said: "No, sir; the wolf isn't such a desperate creature as fiction and the imagination of sometime sports have made him. The prairie wolf will sneak around camp at night and steal scraps, but as to attacking anybody he isn't as hydrophobiacal as the civilized cur. The timber wolf hasn't the most courteous disposition in the west, but he is cowardly, and a good gun can stand off a whole menagerie of them. They come out of the hill timber at night and go for a calf or a heifer, but they don't like man and will only touch him as a last resort. Out in the west we roll ourselves up in a blanket right out on the prairie and sleep the sleep of the righteous, and no Little Red Riding Hood business breaks our rest."—Washington Star.

Knuckle Bones.

There seems reason to suppose that the game of knuckle bones is a Roman survival, having been spread throughout the empire by Roman colonists and soldiers. The Roman tali were originally without marks, but in time the tali, or tesserae, had numbers inscribed on their sides and became the dice of the aleator. The Russians, the Scandinavians, the Germans of the northeast of the empire, the highlanders and the Irish do not, so far as I can ascertain, play at knuckle bones. The game is well known in France, Belgium and south Germany.—Notes and Queries.

His Comparison.

"Johnny," said the boy's father, "you should not interrupt me at the dinner table when I tell that story of when I was in the war. Even if it is a long story and you have heard it before, filial respect requires that you be patient."

"Father," said the boy after a minute of silence.

"What is it, my boy?"

"Is 'filial respect' something like 'senatorial courtesy?'"—New York Tribune.

Carnegie Armor Plates Not Up to Specifications.

Secretary Herbert Makes Public Interesting Facts, Heretofore Close Secrets—The Government Swindled, Not, it is Said With the Company's Knowledge — Employes Accused.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The secretary of the navy has made public some interesting facts heretofore a carefully kept secret, in regard to the armor plate contracts of the Carnegie company for the new navy vessels. The publication was called out by Washington despatches to a New York paper, asserting that defective or inferior armor plates to the value of some millions of dollars had been imposed upon the government at the Carnegie works, notwithstanding the presence in the works of an officer of the ordnance bureau, who inspected the plates, and that the matter being discovered, Mr. Carnegie and his managing man, Mr. Frick, were sent for to come to Washington last December, and had an interview with the president, which resulted in the imposition of a heavy fine upon them. It was not charged that Mr. Carnegie or Mr. Frick or any one in high authority at the works was cognizant of the substitution of plates inferior to the test plates, but it was suggested that the substitution was made by some foreman or other person having an interest in showing a greater percentage of excellence in his work than the facts warranted. The penalty imposed on the Carnegies was 10 per cent. on the amount of the contract price of the plates delivered.

Secretary Herbert's official statement is as follows:

"Early in September last the department ascertained that illegal practices were being resorted to by some of the employes of the Carnegie Steel company, limited, at Pittsburg, Pa., in the manufacture of armor for the government, and that these irregularities had been continued for some time. A thorough investigation was set on foot at once. It was ascertained that while all the armor manufactured for the government was good—all excelling the lowest limit of tolerance in the specifications—yet that portions of it were not up to the highest possible mark of excellence, which, by their contract, the company was bound to attain. After some time spent in negotiations the Carnegie Steel company appealed from the secretary of the navy to the president, who, on Jan. 10, assessed the damages against the company at $140,484.94, and the company Jan. 17, 1894, settled with the department. There was no evidence showing, or even tending to show, that any of the officers above those immediately superintending the tempering and heating were at all cognizant of these irregularities, but as the company was responsible for the acts of its employes, damages to that extent were assessed against the company, and the contracts continued. The department has taken such precautions at this and all other points where contract work is being done for the government, that it is believed to be impossible for any irregularities to occur in the future without immediate detection."

LOCK OF WASHINGTON'S HAIR.

And a Letter of the First President Found in an Old Masonic Lodge.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., March 3.—The old Niagara Frontier Lodge F. and A. M. of this city, which organized early in the present century at Lewiston, moved to the Masonic temple here this week. In cleaning out an ancient desk for removal, a packet of papers, yellow with age, which contained a portrait of General George Washington and a lock of hair which according to the lines written by E. Watson, was presented by Major Billings of the Continental army to the writer. A letter of Washington to some Masons thanking them for a presentation, was in the packet and was dated August 10, 1782. Of the present members of the lodge none can remember when the packet came into their possession.

Woman Physician Appointed.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Judge Pryor of the court of common pleas has appointed a woman physician to examine Mary Cooney in behalf of the New York rowing company, whom she is suing to recover damages for injuries resulting from boiling tar being spattered in her face while walking along Bleecker street. The examination, which was asked for by the defendant under the new law, is for the purpose of ascertaining by a physician appointed by the court what her injuries are. The examination is to be made before the referee at his office by Mrs. Dr. E. S. Sterling.

GLADSTONE RETIRES TO-DAY

Informed the Queen Last Night of His Intention of Resigning.

LONDON, March 3.—Mr. Gladstone informally resigned last evening. The premier had an audience before dinner with the queen, at Windsor castle, and told her of his intention to retire from office. The formal procedure will follow after the meeting of the council which the queen will hold today. The queen offered him a peerage, which he declined. Lord Rosebery has received a formal summons to Windsor. He will have the loyal and enthusiastic support of the overwhelming majority of the liberal party. The attitude of the Irish leaders has been strictly proper and scrupulous.

TRENTON PRISON TRAGEDY.

Convict Wallwitz Sullen—All Privileges Now Denied Him.

TRENTON, March 3.—The inquest on the the body of Prison Keeper Lippincott, who was shot and killed by Convict Wallwitz, will be held this afternoon. Prosecutor Stockton went to the prison to investigate the affair and he will lay the matter before the grand jury.

Wallwitz is sullen and ugly. The few privileges formerly allowed him are now all denied the wretch.

No more desperate attempt on the part of a prisoner to get out of Jersey's grest penal institution is chronicled in its history and the same may be said of the ingenious character of the effort. Wallwitz is a Jersey City man. In the spring of 1891 he robbed a house in Union county and it was then that he received a 20 year sentence.

It was just half past one in the morning when he emerged from his cell in the west wing of the prison and stood in the corridor. With watch and clock springs he had manufactured saws of sufficiently good temper to file through four bars of his cell doors. The bars are 2 12 inches thick. Standing in front of the cell he awaited the presence of any one of the three turnkeys whose duty it is to pace the corridor hourly. In a moment Keeper James Waters came along. Like a flash Wallwitz sprang upon him and bound him firmly with a rope. Taking Waters' revolver he started down the corridor. Waters managed to crawl and sound the electric alarm bell. Keeper Lippincott without a moment's delay ordered Keeper Francis Leonard, who was somewhere in the west wing at the time, to investigate, but getting no response from Leonard by signal, Lippincott himself hastened toward the wing. In a recess or ante-room he took an iron bar out of the door and with this in one hand and a revolver in the other he hastened on. He had gone, however, only a few yards further when he came face to face with Wallwitz.

The two men at once exchanged shots, and Waters fell dead. Wallwitz was slightly wounded. Both weapons were still smoking when half a dozen turnkeys arrived, armed with revolvers, guns and iron bars. Wallwitz recognized the futility of any further attempt to escape but he was not cowed. Raising his revolver he fired twice into the bunch of turnkeys, but both balls lodged harmlessly in the prison wall. One of the keepers at the same instant fired at the prisoner's heart and he fell. Then he was pounced upon and his revolver and sling shot taken away.

It was found when he was got back into his cell that he had padded his clothes heavily with books and papers, and that the bullet aimed at his heart rested in a roll of newspapers which were wound fully three inches thick about his body. Lippincott leaves a wife and seven children.

The Franklin Park Tragedy.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 3.—The house of Moore Baker in Franklin Park, N. J., is closed, and everything remains just as it was after the bodies of Mrs. Baker and her child and the two negro burglars were removed. The place is an object of much interest to a gaping crowd of visitors from all the country round, whose morbid curiosity drives them to visit the scene of the tragedy. Much suspicion has been aroused against the negroes who live near by, and the negroes themselves feel strong resentment against the perpetrators of the crime. The funerals will take place on Sunday. Baker was literally broken down under the shock, and is under a physician's care.

Earned Burial Expenses After Death.

CARLISLE, Pa., March 3.—After the execution of Salyard, his body was removed to an undertakers, where people were admitted to view the remains upon payment of an admission fee of five cents. Hundreds gratified their morbid curiosity and gazed upon the features of the dead man as he lay in his coffin. Salyards had a horror of a pauper's grave and he suggested the exhibition of his body as a means of defraying his funeral expenses.

TO REFORM THE WORLD

Great Crusade Against Intemperance and Crime.

A Monster Polyglot Petition to Be Presented to All the Governments of the World By Lady Somerset and Miss Willard—A Special Steamer to Be Chartered to Convey the Party.

NEW YORK, March 3.—For the last seven years the World's Women's Christian Temperance union has been preparing a monster polyglot petition against the traffic in alcohol, opium and against legalized vice, to be presented to all the governments of the world. Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard have been appointed as the deputation to convey this petition to the different goverunments. The petition itself has now reached the unprecedented length of over two million signatures, and with the attestation of certain great societies not less than three millions.

According to the forthcoming number of the Review of the Churches, Dr. Lunn, the editor, has been requested by these ladies to organize a demonstration round the world. With this purpose in view a first class steamer is to be immediately chartered and a party of one hundred will be organized to accompany Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard in this remarkable crusade. Dr. Lunn has arranged with Mr. William Pipe, the chairman's secretary of the world's parliament of religions, to act as managing secretary to this expedition, and to accompany the party around the world.

The crusade will commence at the annual convention of the World's Women's Christian Temperance union to be held in the United States next October. The American delegation will then proceed to Washington, where the polyglot petition will be presented to the government. Leaving New York on October 24, the American contingent will join the British contingent in the great demonstration at Exeter hall on November 1 and 2. The crusaders' steamer will leave London on Saturday, Nov. 3, arriving at Naples on Monday, Nov. 12. A visit will then be paid to Rome, where it is hoped that His Holiness, the pope, and the king of Italy, will receive the delegation. The next capital to be visited will be Athens, where the king Greece will be presented with the petition. Jerusalem will be the next point on the programme, and the petition is to be presented to the patriarch of Jerusalem, after which the Khedive will be visited at Cairo. It is intended to reach India in time for the national congress, and a six weeks' tour will be made through India in a special train, visiting all the principal towns of India, and holding great mass meetings in each of them. From Calcutta the steamer will proceed to Ceylon, and thence to Siam, with the object of presenting the petition to the King of Siam. Each Australian colony will then welcome the delegation, after which the course of the pilgrimage will be directed northward to China, where it is hoped that the viceroy will receive the delegation. Japan will also be visited, and the petition will be presented to the mikado. After this the eastern circuit of the world will be completed by a journey across the Pacific. It is intended at a later date to present the petition to the northern and central governments of Europe. Any who are desirous of joining in this unprecedented pilgrimage should at once communicate with Dr. Lunn, No. 5 Endaleigh Gardens, London, N. W.

Her Identity Made Known.

SARATOGA, N. Y., March 3.—Rev. Dr. Joseph Carey, the rector of Bethesda church, now states that the victim of Martin Foy's murderous bullet confided to him on her deathbed that her true name was Kate L. Miller, and her residence at Myerstwon, Pa. She requested that this information be not made public, in order not to expose her parents and sisters to the knowledge of her shame, and the deception she had practiced on them. As she was known here as Henrietta Wilson and Kittie Emerson he did not violate her confidence, and but for the fact that her brother wrote to Chief Blodget making known her identity the the reverend gentleman would still have respected her wish.

The Entombed Quarrymen.

SLATINGTON, Pa., March 3.—There are no developments in the brave but forlorn attempt to rescue the entombed quarrymen in the tunnel of the Williams & Sons quarry at Williamstown, near this place. After the rock that had buried Joseph Remaly had been quarried through a solid wall of stone about twenty-five feet high and extending the entire width of the tunnel barred their further progress. To add to the difficulty there is great uncertainty as to the exact location of the men.

State House Before Statehood.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 3.—Governor West sent to the legislature a special message drawing attention to the widely prevalent distress among the working classes, and urging the issuance of bonds for the erection of a state capitol. He states that it will only be a short time before Utah will be admitted as a state, when the building will be a necessity and he urges its immediate erection now as a means of furnishing employment to the needy, many of whom are in desperate circumstances.

Talmage Will Stick.

NEW YORK, March 3.—Reports are verified that Dr. Talmage will withdraw his resignation as pastor of the Brooklyn tabernacle in case the debt of the church is arranged in a satisfactory manner.

LACKED ONLY A LEADER

Liquor Riots Narrowly Averted at Concord.

Prominent Hotel Bars and Saloons Raided By the Sheriff—A Howling Mob Threaten Trouble Late Into the Night—Two Men Ask for Police Protection for Body and Property.

CONCORD, N. H., March 3.—Deputy Sheriffs Towne and Drake yesterday afternoon seized large quantities of malt and spirituous liquors at various places. As the officers visited the saloons and made seizures, they left keepers in charge of the goods. Several of the keepers were forcibly ejected and then attachments on the stock was immediately made by the sheriff, in a civil suit.

A large crowd gathered while the liquors were being removed, and at one place two men who expressed sympathy with the officers were struck and injured.

Last night Dennis Green, one of the citizens' committee of one hundred was on Main street, when he was recognized as one who assisted the sheriffs during the afternoon. A number of small boys gathered and began making demonstrations against him. Mr. Green walked down town, endeavoring to escape from the crowd, but as he proceeded the crowd increased and he was obliged to take refuge in a store. While he was in the store over 1,000 men and boys lined the sidewalk and blocked the street outside hurling epithets at him. Finally the police were summoned and Mr. Green was escorted to the station house. As he passed through the crowd he received several kicks. He expressed a desire to remain at the station all night, fearing further personal injury, but at a late hour officers took him to the house of a friend.

Many of the seized liquors were stored in Blanchard's new block near the passenger station, and thither the crowd went from police headquarters. Howls and jeers, loud and frequent, were hurled towards the stores where the goods were, and occasional reports of big fire-crackers and the sound of horns added to the din. It was the most remarkable demonstration and the nearest approach to a riot seen in Concord in many years. The absence of a leader alone prevented serious injury to persons and property.

Early last evening Mr. Blanchard notified the sheriff to remove the liquors from his building, and they were taken to some unknown place after midnight. Mr. Blanchard also asked for police protection for his building, and officers were detailed to guard it all night.

The places searched included three hotels and all the prominent saloons, and the proprietors will appear in the police court to-day.

It is stated that the committee of one hundred intend to immediately institute proceedings under the famous "Nuisance" act and obtain injunctions to restrain landlords from letting property for the illegal sale of liquors. These raids, followed so closely after the visit of three liquor spotters, created much excitement.

DEATH OF GEN. EARLY.

Passed Away Peacefully, His Hard Resting by Senator Daniel's.

LYNCHBURG, Va., March 3.—Gen. Jubal A. Early died last night at 10:30. He passed away quietly in the presence of his family and physician, his kindred and several intimate friends. The old general seemed aware of his approaching end early in the day. Before noon he called for the morning paper, as was his invariable custom, and attempted to read, but found that his sight was failing. Soon after, he extended his hand to Senator Daniel and calmly said:

"I want to tell you good bye, major." He then told his nephew Cabell Early, farewell, after which he dropped into a quiet slumber. Later in the day the dying veteran asked Senator Daniel not to leave the room, as he wanted to talk with him about certain arrangements, but from that time he suffered such intense pain that he did not revive the subject. He met death unflinchingly with his hand resting quietly in Senator Daniel's.

Sketch of His Career.

General Early was born in Franklin county, Va., Nov. 3, 1816. He was a West Point graduate and served in the Florida war. He resigned from the army in 1838 and practiced law in Virginia, was major of a regiment of Virginia volunteers during the Mexican war. He entered the Confederate service at the beginning of the civil war as a colonel and was promoted a brigadier general, and in May, 1863, commanded a division at Fredericksburgh, and later at Gettysburg. In 1864 he began operations in the Shenandoah valley and threatened Washington, but was forced to retreat. Under his orders his troops burned Chambersburg, Pa. On Oct. 19, General Early surprised the national forces at Cedar creek, during the absence of Sheridan, and had the troops panic-stricken when Sheridan made his famous twenty mile ride from Winchester and saved the day. After the close of the war General Early resumed the practice of law in Richmond, Va. He subsequently took up his residence at New Orleans, alternating with Lynchburg, where, with General Beauregard, he became manager of the Louisiana State lottery.

GEN. GREENLEAF.

He Knows No Equal of Paine's Celery Compound.

A Soldier Who Has the Courage of His Convictions---Commander of the National Guard of His State.

"I feel like a new man," says Brigadier General M. L. Greenleaf, of the National Guard of Vermont.

"I do not know the equal of Paine's celery compound."

Brig.-Gen. Greenleaf of Burlington, Vt., is a man of national reputation.

As a soldier he has the courage of his convictions, and manfully makes a statement of what he knows will benefit others. He writes as follows:

"Permit me to add my testimony to the valuable qualities of Paine's celery compound, which I consider the best preparation of its class on the market. I do not hesitate to recommend it, especially as I never heard of a case where it did not give perfect satisfaction.

"I have used it myself on several occasions, and always with benefit. Last spring, being very much run down and debilitated, I procured some of Paine's celery compound and commenced taking it. The first bottle produced very marked results, and the use of two bottles made me feel like a new man. As a general tonic I do not know its equal."

To the credit of American scientists it is said that the first fruitful investigation of the influence of the nerves upon the proper nutrition of the body were made by Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., while active professor in the Dartmouth Medical School and lecturer in the Vermont University Medical Department.

From January until May there is a fearful demand made on one's stock of health—fevers, pulmonary troubles and the host of cold weather ills quickly bring down the vitality and expend the nervous force.

Paine's celery compound cures nervous debility.

Now and then a discovery like this one is so greatly in advance of its day that it startles the whole body of physicians. No great remedy ever caused as much talk and inquiry as Paine's celery compound. Scientific men in Europe have analyzed and discussed it, and the medical world has agreed in recommending it as a truly remarkable remedy for disorders originating in impure blood and impoverished nerve tissue.

Those with an insufficient reserve of vigor and nerve energy fall winter victims to contagious diseases and to special diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys.

Refreshing sleep comes from Paine's celery compound. Persistent headaches go. Chronic constipation no longer troubles one, and the terrible heart throbbing from which so many tired women suffer leave them in peace.

Because of the wonderful discovery of Paine's celery compound, thousands of homes have been made brighter and hosts of sick men and women led from despond ency to health and activity.

People of the highest standing in every class of society, in every city and town in the Union, have been benefitted by the use of this, the greatest of all remedies for the cure of the numerous ills that result from impaired nervous system an impoverished blood.

It makes people well.

North Plainfield Borough Council Concludes Its Business for the Fiscal Year, and Mayor Saunders and the Retiring Councilmen Are Complimented.

When the time arrived for the Borough Council to convene last evening, Councilmen Needham and Neal and Clerk Vetterlein were the only officials present. It was found that the absentees were attending the Republican primaries. The Clerk called the meeting to order, and on motion of Mr. Neal it was adjourned till 9.

About 9 the Councilmen came back and after Mr. Needham had received the congratulations of his associates on his nomination for the mayoralty, Mayor Saunders called the meeting to order. Messrs. Needham, Hummer, Neal and Edwards responded to the roll-call of Clerk Vetterlein.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, after which the monthly batch of claims was presented, to be ordered paid later.

Communications were received from Warren Engine Company stating that J. R. Newman and Thomas Melcher had been elected members, and asking the Council to confirm the same; also that Patrick Gallagher had been a member of the company for several years and asking that he be placed on the exempt list. The company also asked that H. H. Brokaw, Thomas Melcher and J. R. Newman be given certificates of membership. These requests were all referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee.

A communication was received from H. S. McCully, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, stating that the Company was willing to comply with the ordinance in regard to the operation of their system and was also willing to put in two or three instruments for the use of the officials. This was referred to the Corporation Counsel, to be considered at the next meeting.

The residents of Fairview avenue petitioned Council for a sufficient number of lights on their street, and thought eight would answer. Dr. Cooley stated that those interested had been inquiring of him about the matter and recommended that it be given consideration. It was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee, and later the request was granted.

The report of Borough Magistrate Crosley was received, showing that $10 had been collected as fines for January and February. It was ordered filed.

Mr. Neal, in the absence of Mr. Fountain, spoke of the ordinance governing the street railway, and said that during the recent snowstorm several complaints had been made about the company using salt on the tracks. Marshal Pangborn had interviewed Superintendent Adleman and was assured that the matter would be attended to and that the offense would not be committed again.

In regard to the matter of having the report of the Council printed, Mr. Edwards said that of the three papers but one had made a bid, which was $40. The Press had refused to bid on the specifications proposed. An outside bid was received of $55. The report was received.

Mr. Needham offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the Committee on Streets and Public Health be authorized to lay a walk in front of Mr. Merritt's property on Westervelt avenue, and charge the same to the estate.

A resolution offered by Mr. Neal provided that the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee be authorized to locate two lamps on Giraud avenue and two on Myrtle avenue. It was adopted.

Mr. Needham expressed the feelings of appreciation of the members of the Council for the efficient way in which Mayor Saunders had presided over the body during his terms, and offered a resolution thanking him for his uniform courtesy and fairness. The Mayor asked Mr. Hummer to take the chair, and the expression was made unanimous, all voting aye most heartily.

Mr. Saunders responded happily in a few words and said he thanked all for the honor bestowed, and that his mayoralty terms had been the most pleasant experience of his life.

Mr. Neal said that Messrs. Needham and Hummer would retire this year, and he wished to testify to the excellent service rendered by them. The Mayor said that the Borough as well as the Council owed them many thanks for their faithfulness.

He Has Special Facilities, and the Public Profits Thereby.

Edward Love, corner of North and Watchung avenues, has decided that in these hard times it is well to advertise. Desiring to bring his immense and elegant stock of goods before the public, he is doing so by making a special sale of wall-paper of new 1894 spring patterns. There is now on sale, and will be for 30 days, at 4 cents a piece, some of the nicest bed-room paper and kitchen paper. He will also offer gold paper at 5 cents a piece, and some very fine heavy embossed gold paper at 10 cents a piece. Householders intending papering will do well to call early to obtain a choice. Mr. Love is doing this as an advertisement to bring his store prominently before the people, believing that a bargain is the best way to please and attract. It is perhaps not known to all that Mr. Love is a designer of wall-paper and engraves the patterns of some of the largest factories in the country, which gives him special facilities for the selection and purchase of wall-paper.

SCRUB and WASH as you will, it is not easy to keep the hands smooth and white in winter time. In fact, the more you scrub and wash, the rougher seems the skin, and you find that the best of soap fails to whiten it. Now if, after washing, you will moisten your hands with LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE, the effect will be to soften and whiten the skin, even in the worst weather. Used by hundreds of the "best people" in Plainfield. Originated and sold only by H. P. REYNOLDS, Pharmacist, Park and North avenues.

THEY PLAYED HEARTS.

Charming Card Party at a Westervelt Avenue Home.

Miss Jeane Derby, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Derby of 60 Westervelt avenue, arranged a delightful entertainment in honor of her charming cousins, Miss Brown and Miss Bach, of Brooklyn, at her home last night.

The hours were pleasantly spent playing hearts, singing college songs, and dancing. Each vied with the other in making the event one long to be remembered. The game of hearts was very entertaining, and all endeavored to win first prize. Miss Bertha Needham won feminine first prize, which was a very handsome Japanese pin tray; Miss Augustine Lisignola secured the booby, which was a Japanese doll. For the masculine sex Harry Williams captured first, and received a stamp box, while Charles Hazeltine succeeded as booby in securing a Japanese doll. The awarding of the prizes caused no end of merriment for the young people.

The score cards which were beauties, were the work of the talented young hostess, and represented the Brownies and Greenies of fairyland. After the game all joined in singing favorite songs, followed by dancing.

Refreshments were served later, and it was rather early in the morning when the happy company departed for home. Those present were: the Misses Augustine Lisignolo, Madge Vermeule, Helen Boice, Bertha Needham, Alice Needham, Nora Williams; John McLaughlin, Harry Williams, Warren Church, Frank Richards, Charles H. Zeltine, William Cortell.

TRIBUTES TO A NOBLE LIFE.

Affecting Services at the Grave of the Late Mrs. Avis Mosher Laing.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Avis Mosher Laing, held in the Friends Meeting-house on Watchung avenue yesterday afternoon at 2:30, were attended by a gathering of friends and relatives that filled the building. The remains were brought from the house, corner Watchung avenue and Fourth street, in a hearse. The pall-bearers were Edgar Vail, Joseph Morrison, John P. Mosher, Victor Lorton, Henry Palmer of Alfred Centre, and Arthur Stryker. Robert Haviland of Chappaqua, a minister of the Society of Friends, offered prayer and made a short address. He spoke of the victory through Christ over sin and death, of the true purposes of life, and of God's promises for our share in eternity. John Shotwell, a Friends minister of Asbury Park, told of his knowledge of Mrs. Laing's religious feeling and of his experience in Christ's service. Aaron M. Powell said that parting at death was the one moment when we realized fully our relations with each other. The affection between mother and child was but little less than sacred, and in the trial of parting the extending of sympathy was all we could do to the bereaved. He gave the Christian's idea of what life is.

Once more the face of the noble Christian woman was viewed, and then the remains were laid at rest in the old burying ground, between the graves of her two husbands, James H. Mosher and Edward Laing.

The physicians prescribed Cod liver oil, but to no benefit. I procured two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and she grew better. ANOTHER WOMAN HURT.

This Wretched Sidewalk Nuisance Ought to Be Abolished.

Another ugly fall was occasioned by the inequality of the sidewalk at the joint on the line of T. O. Doane and Salmon C. Baker, West Fifth street last night. The victim this time was Mrs. Rogers, an elderly woman of East Front street, whose foot caught at the sudden rise of the flagging, throwing her heavily upon her face. A large lump was raised on her forehead, and her cheek was cut. She was assisted home. Suit for damages, brought by another victim against Mr. Baker, is now pending. The Street Commissioner should see that the stumbling-block is removed forthwith.

When people advertise bargains don't you ever stop to think that the bargains they speak of may be for the seller and not for the buyer? Many of the great offerings are but a delusive mixture of moonshine, and it may do for once, but folks are not hankering after it for a steady diet.

Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

PROMOTING NEEDHAM.

THE REPUBLICAN COUNCILMAN NOMINATED FOR MAYOR.

A Full Ticket Named by the G. O. P. Voters of Borough and Township—Mr. Hegeman Couldn't Be Induced to Run Against Mr. McCutchen.

Henry E. Needham was nominated for Mayor at the primary of the North Plainfield Republicans held in the basement of the school last night. Candidates were placed in the field for all of the town and borough offices to be voted for in the coming election. About 200 voters were present.

Benjamin A. Hegeman called the meeting to order shortly before 8. As Chairman ex-Mayor Charles Place was elected, and as Secretary Horace J. Martin. It was agreed to transact the township business first. George D. Hallock, Dr. Justus H. Cooley, Andrew Overton and J. W. A. Bauersachs acted as tellers during the evening.

For Member of the Township Committee the nominating vote was:

R. M. Fountain	95
A. P. Voorhees	52
H. N. Spencer	6
Andrew Lutkins	1

Dr. J. H. Cooley was made the nominee for Assessor by acclamation. The 199 votes for candidate for Collector were divided as follows:

H. N. Spencer	170
J. K. Arnold	29

For Overseer of the Poor 154 votes were cast, for

D. P. Weaver	104
Andrew H. Huff	49

A candidate for Freeholder was chosen by the following vote:

Andrew Lutkins	102
George W. Bullman	43
Charles Sebring	34

Justice Philip H. Acker was renominated for four years and Thomas Young for three years, Edward R. Murphy declining to be a candidate.

S. J. Taynor for three years and George Stewart for two years were the nominees for Constable by acclamation. Surveyors of Highways Michael Powers and Charles Humble were renominated in the same way. Jonathan Clawson, Harrison Coddington and Israel Stout were named for Commissioners of Appeal. James S. Lunger, Jacob Long and J. K. Arnold refusing to run. The names of John Stein, Patrick Ageny, S. G. Taynor and George Lewis were placed on the ticket for positions as Pound Keepers.

The appropriation for the improvement of roads outside of the borough was placed at $1,000; $400 of this to be placed in the hands of the Township Committee. After a statement by Overseer of the Poor Allen, the appropriation for the support of the poor was made $1,500. The Township Committeemen were thought worthy of a salary of $50 each per year.

The township convention having been adjourned, the borough primary was continued with the same officers and tellers.

Peter Emmons nominated Benjamin A. Hegeman for Mayor. Mr. Hegeman said he appreciated the honor, but would have to decline to run. Dr. Cooley nominated Henry E. Needham and he was unanimously chosen the candidate by acclamation.

For three years as Councilmen John Valiant and James C. Peck were named; and for one year, Henry B. Lounsbury.

On the subject of the yearly appropriation for borough road improvements, Mr. Needham, of the Street Committee, said that a larger amount should be expended, as there was need of more macadamizing and proper care of that already done. The decrease in the lighting bill would offset the increase in the street appropriation. The Democrats would fix upon the same amount as the Republicans, so there should be no objection to making the sum $4,000, instead of $3,500. This was voted by acclamation.

On motion of N. B. Smalley the meeting approved of a reduction of the fund for borough purposes from $1 500 to $1,000. The Board of Health was thought to be in need of $500 for next year's expenses.

As a Committee on Vacancies, Peter Emmons, H. K Carroll and T. W. Morrison were appointed by the chair.

After a vote of thanks had been given to Chairman Place the meeting was adjourned.

NEW LINE TO CAPE MAY.

Combined Enterprise of the Progressive Reading and South Jersey Companies.

By the beginning of the summer season of 1894 Cape May will enjoy the benefits of railroad competition, as the South Jersey Railroad Company will by that time have completed its line to that delightful seaside resort. The new road will be the short line and will very materially lessen the time between Philadelphia and Cape May. It will connect with the Atlantic City Branch of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, that line being used between Philadelphia and Winslow Junction.

Logan M. Bullitt, Vice-President of the South Jersey Railroad Company, announces that final arrangements have been consummated for the completion of the extension of the line from Sea Isle City to Cape May. The work of grading and the making of the road-bed has been done for some time, and the Bethlehem Iron Company will deliver from now on to the completion of the road the 70 pound standard steel rails which have been contracted for with that concern. The delivery will be made in sufficient quantities daily to insure the avoidance of any delay in the work of construction. The rails will be laid on oak ties, which are already delivered, the road-bed heavily surfaced with gravel, only the very best material of every description will be used and when completed the road will be the most substantially constructed seashore line in the country. The equipment used last summer will be replaced with new, comfortable and elegant coaches of the most modern style and the motive power will be supplied by speedy and powerful new Baldwin locomotives of the latest and most approved pattern so that patrons of the line to either Sea Isle City or Cape May will be conveyed between the Quaker City and the ocean in a manner that will make the journey a pleasure.

It is authoritatively stated that Pullman palace drawing room and buffet cars will be operated during the season and all that the most approved safety appliances will be adopted in the operation of the road, while every effort will be made by the management to cater to the needs and comfort of the traveling public.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

A Hard-Time Relief.

There seems to be no visible let-up to the hard times, although in some particulars relief is apparent. For instance, some people have a hard time in learning just how to eat an orange. This difficulty is disposed of by securing one of Collier's orange-spoons, the designs of which are as various and beautiful as their price is surprisingly reasonable. 103 Park avenue.

HENRY OWEN'S STORY.

A FULL ACCOUNT OF THE SUFFERINGS AND RESTORATION OF MR. AND MRS. HENRY C. OWEN RELATED TO A BLADE REPRESENTATIVE.

Most Excruciating Pain Endured—Physicians Helpless—A Remarkable and Interesting Narrative.

[From the Toledo, Ohio, Blade.]

During the past few months there have appeared in the newspapers of the country accounts of marvelous cures from the use of a medicine discovered by Dr. David Kennedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and known as Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

These cases, many of them held by the medical profession as incurable, have been so frequently discussed in the newspapers that it has led to many people using this preparation, and they invairably have had a similar statement to make. Many of these people have been told by their attending physician that "there was no hope; recovery was impossible," and a little later was announced their restoration to health and strength by the use of Favorite Remedy. Recently the following letter from a well-known citizen of East Toledo attracted the attention of the Blade:

"No. 428 Euclid ave., East Toledo, O., Dr. David Kennedy, Dear Sir—I feel it my duty to write you of the benefit your medicine, Favorite Remedy, has been to my wife and myself. I suffered for years with kidney trouble, complicated with gravel in the bladder; at times I enoured the most excruciating pain, so bad that I would have to be carried home from my business. My physician did not help me in the least; I kept growing worse. Finally Dr. Daaid Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was brought to my notice. I used it regularly, and in a short time after that I was a well man; have never felt a return of the old troubles since.

My wife, who had been a sufferer from sickness peculiar to her sex, found no relief from any medicine she had ever used, until she began the use of Favorite Remedy, and that cured her. I have n't language to express the high esteem in which we hold Favorite Remedy; I have recommended it to dozens of people about here, and in no instance has it failed to benefit and cure.

Yours truly, HENRY C. OWEN.

The above letter was so remarkable as to be worthy of the fullest investigation, and the Blade determined to place the facts before the public for the benefit of other sufferers; and, if unfounded, to let their readers know it. With these instructions, a reporter was sent to the residence of Mr. Owen. In response to a ring of the doorbell, Mrs. Owen appeared. When your reporter made his mission known, she said she would gladly tell him about the good Favorite Remedy has been to their family. "For years Mr. Owen had been the victim of gall stones, complicated with kidney trouble and gravel in the bladder. In spite of the efforts of physicians, he did not improve. I, too, had suffered with sickness peculiar to women, and one day I clipped from a newspaper an article referring to Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I told my husband that I thought it would help my trouble, and we immediately bought a bottle. I did not take many doses before I noticed improvement, and then I suggested to my husband to try the remedy for his sickness.

He did so and felt the effects almost like magic. Mr. Owen continued to use Favorite Remedy until he has become permanently cured." Before going into further detail, it might be well to give in Mr. Owen's own words a statement as to what it did for him. Mr. Owen, who is a man of about 42 years of age, wiih hair tinged with gray, was found at work as foreman for the Chesbrough Bros. Lumber Company, and in response to an inquiry as to the merits of Favorite Remedy and the genuineness of the letter published, Mr. Owen said: "I have not language to express the high esteem in which I hold Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. I suffered for years with kidney trouble and gall stones; at times I endured pains which seemed almost unbearable. I used various prescriptions, and like everyone who is sick, took everything that my friends suggested. At last my wife told me of the good Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had done her, and I concluded to try it. I used it and it cured me, and there is no mistake about that. I can refer you to many of our neighbors who have used it with the same results. One young man, a friend of mine, had been sick for months, and was doctoring with one of those $5 a week physicians. They did him no good, and I told him about Favorite Remedy. He had paid for a week's treatment, but left them, and followed my directions, I saw him afterwards and he was feeling better and thanked me for my advice."

"Mrs. Owen has a similar story to relate. No human tongue can tell how she suffered, until she commenced to use Favorite Remedy. She had doctored with several physicians, and was about to give up in despair when this came to her relief. I am confident that if she had not taken Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, she would have been in her grave today."

Mr. Owen has lived in Toledo, and has been the head man at Chesbrough Bros. for years, and is prominently connected with the East Side M. E. Church. In communicating to the reporter in reference to his trouble, Mr. Owen said further that the pain he had was of a boring, burning, lacerating character, and radiated through the abdomen and chest. He complained, when ill, of intense nausea, accompanying the pain after repeated retching, only some mucus acid and watery matter were expelled from his stomach. The action of the heart was feeble, and the circulation was correspondingly depressed. "I am now," said Mr. Owen, "a perfectly well man; if it had not been for Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy I do n't know what the present condition of Mrs. Owen and myself would have been."

Mr. and Mrs. Owen's friends and neighbors confirm the accounts of their sickness and their remarkable recovery, and it was also found that there were many other people in their vicinity who had been cured of various ailments by using Favorite Remedy. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, is an unfailing specific for Bright's disease, kidney, liver and urinary complaints, rheumatism, gravel, stone in the bladder and sick headache. It will cure the most obstinate case of constipation. In cases of neuralgia, liver complaint, dyspepsia, skin diseases, jaundice, gastritis, lost appetite, sleeplessness, nervousness or blood diseases, and female irregularities, it has cured where all else failed.

The chief characteristics of Favorite Remedy is its agreeable quality and mild operation on the liver and bowels, absolute freedom from irritating and cathartic action. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy can be purchased of any dealer in medicine at $1 a bottle, or six bottles for $5. A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and it never fails to cure when the directions are faithfully carried out.

Dress Reform in Plainfield.

Policeman Cooney was notified by messenger boy at 10 last night that two men dressed in women's clothes had insulted two young women on Central avenue. Their costumes were fanciful in the extreme.

Chief Grant and Officer Kiely were notified by telephone and went at once to Central avenue. The men had disappeared. The full enforcement of the law will doubtless follow an arrest of the masqueraders if they repeat their performance.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few bona fide cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

GEMS IN VERSE.

A Literary Order.

The thought most optimistic that
Doth come to me these days
Is this—and how I laugh thereat—
That pessimism pays.
Why, only yesterday I wrote
A poem full of light;
I sent it out and got a note
Returning it erg night.

"These lines are nice," the writer said;
"They show a dainty touch,
But you our paper can't have read,
We think, so very much.
This happy stuff is out of date—
Depression is the thing,
And verses now must growl at fate
To have the proper ring.

"Declare that life is wholly grief,
That all on earth is wrong,
Make 'Every man's a fool or thief'
The burden of your song.
Drop gladsomeness, drop all your mirth,
Drop sunshine and fresh air,
And send us in ten dollars' worth
Of gloom and dark despair."—Century.

Her Baby.

I have a friend of schoolgirl days—
Those days of joy—
Who owns a most entrancing craze—
Her baby boy.

She plans his future fortune's prize
Despite his youth,
And shows me, with exultant eyes,
His latest tooth.

She cares no more for novels new,
With manner bland,
She calls my kind attention to
His dimpled hand.

She asks me what I really think
About his nose,
And should they be so very pink—
The baby's toes?

I tell her of the latest play;
Her eyes grow dim;
She interrupts me for to say
It looks like "him."

She pats the fluff upon its head
And gets a scare;
It surely can't be growing red—
The baby's hair?

Of art I speak; she looks away
With hurt surprise,
For are they blue or are they gray
The baby's eyes?

And if I venture to suggest
That he's all right
She'll clasp him fondly to her breast
So close and tight.

And then, in that superior way
That tires one so,
She'll frown and smile at me and say,
"That's all you know."

Great Truths.

Great truths are dearly bought. The common truth,
Such as men give and take from day to day,
Comes in the common walk of easy life,
Blown by the careless wind across our way.

Bought in the market, at the current price,
Bred of the smile, the jest, perchance the bowl,
It tells no tales of daring or of worth
Nor pierces even the surface of a soul.

Great truths are greatly won, nor found by chance,
Nor wafted on the breath of summer dream,
But grasped in the great struggle of the soul,
Hard buffeting with adverse wind and stream.

Not in the general mart, mid corn and wine,
Not in the merchandise of gold and gems,
Not in the world's gay hall of midnight mirth,
Not 'mid the blaze of regal diadems,

But in the day of conflict, fear and grief,
When the strong hand of God, put forth in might,
Plows up the subsoil of the stagnant heart
And brings the imprisoned truth-seed to the light.

Wrung from the troubled spirit in hard hours
Of weakness, solitude, perchance of pain,
Truth springs like harvest from the well plowed field,
And the soul feels it has not wept in vain.

When I was courtin Mary Jane, some twenty years ago,
I couldn't uster sleep o' nights, a-thinkin of her so.
It seemed as if her purty face was floatin round the bed,
An little midgets in my ears buzzed all the things she sed.

I lost a pile o' sheep, you bet, till Hymen's knot wuz tied,
An hedn't hardly made it up afore the baby cried,
While after that, f'r fifteen year, I couldn't start a dream
'Thout some kid 'r other'd wake an kick an howl an scream.

At last I got 'em all growed up. "An now, b'gosh," thinks I,
"This wornout frame'll get some sleep 'r know the reason why."
I went an bought a feather bed an pillers soft ez snow,
"Now, Mary Jane," ses I, "hurrah f'r God's best gift below."

But dern the everlastin luck that plagged me from a lad,
That makes my head weigh forty ton an a'most drives me mad,
That wife o' mine hes jined a club, with heaven an earth to tote,
An lectures me till peep o' day cuz she ain't 'lowed to vote.

Lovable Girls.

Girls that are fair on the hearthstone
And pleasant when nobody sees,
Kind and sweet to their own folk,
Ready and anxious to please.

The girls that are wanted are wise girls,
That know what to do and to say;
That drive with a smile or a soft word
The wrath of the household away.

The girls that are wanted are girls of sense,
Whom fashion can never deceive;
Who can follow whatever is pretty
And dare what is silly to leave.

The girls that are wanted age careful girls,
Who count what a thing will cost;
Who use with prudent, generous hand,
But see that nothing is lost.

The girls that are wanted are girls with hearts—
They are wanted for mothers and wives—
Wanted to cradle in loving arms
The strongest and frailest of lives.

The clever, the witty, the brilliant girl—
There are very few, understand—
But, oh, for the wise, loving, home girls
There's a constant and steady demand!

Has No Limit.

They talk about a woman's sphere
As though it had a limit.
There's not a place in earth or heaven,
There's not a task to mankind given,
There's not a blessing or a woe,
There's not a whisper, yes or no,
There's not a life, a death, a birth,
That has a feather's weight of worth
Without a woman in it!
—Kate Field.

In the Temple of Wisdom.

"Give me thy dreams," she said. And I,
With empty hands and very poor,
Watched my fair, flowery visions die
Upon the temple's marble floor.

"Give joy," she cried. I let joy go.
I saw with cold, unclouded eyes
The crimson of the sunset glow
Across the disenchanted skies.

"Give me thy youth," she said. I gave.
And, sudden clouded, died the sun,
And on the green mound of a grave
Fell the slow raindrops, one by one.

"Give love," she cried. I gave that too.
"Give beauty." Beauty sighed and fled,
For what on earth should beauty do
When love, who was her life, was dead?

She took the balm of innocent tears
To hiss upon her altar coal;
She took the hopes of all my years,
And at the last she took my soul.

With heart made empty of delight,
And hands that held no more fair things,
I questioned her, "What shall requite
The savor of my offerings?"

"The gods," she said, "with generous hand,
Give guerdon for thy gifts of cost.
Wisdom is thine—to understand
The worth of all that thou hast lost."

EVERY DAY MARVELS.

They Are Happening All Around Us.

THEY INCREASE IN NUMBER AND GROW MORE WONDERFUL.

Where Will It All End and what Will Be the Final Result!

Strange and wonderful things are happening constantly; we are becoming accustomed to them. But there is one subject which rises far above the rest and which never fails to intensely interest everybody. It concerns you, reader, for it means for you health and strength.

Scarcely anyone in these busy, hard working times is in perfect health; there is a weak spot somewhere, a pain, a numbness, failure of some organ to do its work properly, some vague symptom which is a sign of danger and is telling you in the plainest language to look to your health. Read the following letter and see what Mrs. J. M. Earl, of North Calais, Vt., has to say about the matter.

"I had a sore on my breast," she says, "which the doctors called scrofula. I was very short of breath and was terribly nervous. Some doctors said one thing ailed me and some another. I was under their care a long time but received no benefit from their treatment. Finally some one advised me to use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

MRS. J. M. EARL.

"I had for some time been weak, tired and run down. My usual good health was leaving me. I continued to grow worse and was finally taken with typhoid fever. Not recovering from this as rapidly as I should, and feeling that my general helth needed building up, I made up my mind to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

What greater prize could the world contain than a medicine which can cure such suffering as that? Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is constantly performing the most wonderful cures all over the land.

If you are suffering from any form of nervous or chronic disease, are weak and debilitated, if you have kidney or liver complaint, take this wonderful medicine and you will be restored to health. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

The spring is the best and easiest time to cure disease. It is purely vegetable and harmless. Its discoverer is Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, the well-known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all free of charge, personally or by letter.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.
Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits, Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment, There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

ENGLAND'S PREMIER

Comments of the British Press on the Selection.

Mr. Gladstone Congratulates Lord Rosebery By Letter, and Will Give His Aid Whenever Needed to the Ministers—The Queen Severely Criticised By the "Chronicle."

LONDON, March 5.—Several journals state that Mr. Gladstone has congratulated Lord Rosebery by letter. He is said to have promised that, although he will retire from active politics, he will give his aid to the ministers whenever they need and desire it.

The Daily Chronicle says editorially: "The radical 'cave' no longer exists as a hostile organization. Its most prominent members have declared that if radical measures be introduced they cannot do otherwise than support them. Even Mr. Labouchere has shown final reluctance to play into Tory hands. The situation is in every way full of promise."

The Chronicle comments bitterly upon the court circular, which announces boldly that the queen has graciously accepted Mr. Gladstone's resignation. "It does not express any regret," says the Chronicle, "for the departure from her councils of the mightiest living Englishman after sixty years of service—one who, moreover, alone of all others, has been the safeguard of the monarchy against unwise friends and open foes. When Lord Salisbury retired, after vainly trying to coerce Ireland, the queen notified him that she accepted his resignation with much regret."

The Times says editorially: "The general outcome of the manifold discussion in the liberal party undoubtedly is that nobody can assume the leadership with anything like Lord Rosebery's prospects of success. Outside his party this conviction is even stronger. It must be assumed that the new ministry will, as long as it lasts, follow very much the lead of the old one. The duration of its term of office cannot be a matter of serious solicitude to Lord Rosebery. He was thrown suddenly and, doubtless, reluctantly into a position where he finds a chaotic party fettered in all sorts of informal ways by all sorts of incompatible engagements, and destitute of any coherent body of convictions and os any intelligible principle of action. He must address himself to rescuing it and placing it in the possession of a straightforward, patriotic policy. The task cannot be prosecuted with any hope of success without a period of salutary discipline and reflection in the parliamentary opposition."

The Daily News said this morning: "The difficulties of cabinet making, which were so threatening last week, are melting away. Affairs are now virtually settled. Sir William Harcourt's co-operation may be confidently reckoned upon. It was settled last night that the Earl of Kimberley shall take the foreign office. It is probable that Mr. Labouchere's objections to Lord Rosebery may be overcome ere long by a bill permitting the peers to choose between sitting as lords or submitting for election to the commons.

"Mr. Gladstone's colleagues, who met him at the Earl of Kimberley's dinner on Saturday were much struck with his cheerfulness and general grace of demeanor. He was perfectly happy, even vivacious. There is no necessity of immediate treatment of his eyes. He can see sufficiently for private reading. The News says that at the last cabinet meeting Mr. Gladstone received touching proofs of the loyalty and devotion of his colleagues. "The statement that his last speech in the house of commons surprised his colleagues," adds the News, "is a ludicrous fiction."

LIKED BY AMERICANS.

Lord Rosebery Was Extensively Acquainted in This Country.

NEW YORK, March 5.—Lord Rosebery is very popular among Americans. He has a wide acquaintance in this country, has traveled extensively in the United States, and has frequently expressed his sincere admiration for American institutions. He looks like Senator Gorman, of Maryland. He wears no beard of any kind and seems to be a younger man than he really is. He is medium sized and stout, dresses plainly, wears no jewelry and has light straw-colored hair, which he parts nearly in the middle and brushes back over his ears. His head is squarely shaped and set upon a short neck.

He was in New York some years ago studying American institutions. He was democratic in his associations, and among the newspaper men was a general favorite. It is related of him that one night, in company with James Gordon Bennett and William Henry Hurlburt, they visited Sandy Spencer's saloon, in the basement of Knox's hat store, on the corner of Broadway and Fulton street. That was a favorite midnight resort of the newspaper men of those days. As they stepped up to the bar Sandy Spencer reached down for one of his choicest bottles, but William Henry Hurlburt expressed the sentiment of the trio when he said, "Three beers." The three beers were put out and then put in. His lordship was studying American institutions. More than one brilliant article which appeared in New York at that time was ascribed to his pen.

Lord Rosebery has long been considered in England as in the direct line of promotion to the premiership, but it had not been believed that the position would be within his grasp for some years yet to come. He is not yet 50 years of age. The prime minister in England, like the president of the United States, has almost invariably been a man older than that, and the general average upon their first taking office has been past 60. The popular opinion in regard to Lord Rosebery is that he is the most ambitious man in British politics. His critics say that he has successfully studied the arts of popularity and that, joined to a superior but not unusual judgment, he has industry, caution and thrift.

Lord Rosebery is accused of being a nobleman. He has already explained that that is one of the accidents of birth for which he cannot properly be held accountable, but it is a high crime and misdemeanor in the eyes of the many who go to make up the liberal party. They demand that he purge himself. Lord Rosebery has been successfully purging himself for many years, until he has got to the point where he advocates the abolition of the house of lords, of which he is a member, in order to prove his sincerity.

It seems fitting that the leadership of the liberal party should descend from one Scotchman to another. Mr. Gladstone has not a drop of English blood in his veins and Lord Rosebery has hardly more, while the great strength of the party which has placed them in power lies north of the Tweed. Lord Rosebery is Lord Lieutenant of Edinburgh and of Lithgow. Mr. Gladstone sits for the Midlothian district of Edinburg. The relations of the two men have ever been intimate since Lord Rosebery's introduction to political life. He is the protege of Mr. Gladstone.

Lord Rosebery was born in 1847. He received the conventional education—Eton and Oxford—and succeeded to the title upon attaining his majority, beginning life with every advantage on his side. In 1874 he was president of the social science congress which met at Glascow, and four years later he was elected lord rector of the University of Aberdeen in succession to Mr. W. E. Forster. In August, 1781, Mr. Gladstone appointed him under-secretary of state for the home department under Sir William Vernon Harcourt.

In February, 1885, Lord Rosebery was taken into the cabinet as lord privy seal and first commissioner of works, and in February of the following year, when Mr. Gladstone resumed office, he was made secretary of state for foreign affairs. He evinced conspicuous fitness for this office and is acknowledged as the best foreign secretary in the party.

BRAZIL'S NEW PRESIDENT.

Dr. Moraes Elected By a Large Majority—Quiet Election.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Senor Mendonca, the Brazilian minister to the United States, has received a cablegram from the minister of foreign affairs reading:

"The election was tranquil throughout, resulting in the election by a large majority of Dr. Prudente de Moraes as president, and of Dr. Manoel Victorino Pereira as vice-president." These were the candidates of the republican party. Speaking of the successful candidates, Minister Mendonca said the newly elected president was of an energetic disposition, but mild, almost gentle, in temperment. He is about 50 years of age native of the state of San Paulo, which he represented in the imperial parliament, after having served as its governor, being elected as an avowed republican. The minister was a fellow-student of Moraes at a law school in their younger days. Dr. Periera, the vice-president-elect, was born in Bahia, and was a member of the faculty of a medical college there until the establishment of the republic in 1890, when he entered politics and was elected to the senate.

Senor Mendonca said that the term of the new officers would not begin until Nov. 15 next, but if the best interests of the country seem to demand it, President Peixoto may resign in favor de Moraes when congress meets.

New York Legislature.

ALBANY, March 5.—This will be a busy week in the legislature, although there are comparatively few important matters scheduled for consideration in either house. The calendars in both houses are well filled. Among the bills to come up in the assembly this week are the Mullin bill broadening the scope of investments for savings banks; the Lounsbery bill for a reformatory at Wawarsing, Ulster county; and the Sulzer bill providing for uniform examinations throughout the state for candidates for admission to the bar.

McKane's First Sunday in Prison.

SING SING, N. Y., March 5.—John Y. McKane passed his first Sunday in prison in a quiet way. He arose at the usual hour, marched with his company to the mess-room for breakfast, then to the Protestant chapel where for nearly an hour he listened to some vocal and instrumental music by the prison choir and orchestra. The sermon was preached by the Rev. J. C. S. Wellis. McKane listened attentively to the sermon.

Women Want to Be Heard.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—Mrs. J. Ellen Foster, president of the Woman's republican association of the United States, is in Washington. She is here to arrange for a hearing before the finance committee of the senate of a delegation of wage-earning women. Mrs. Foster brought such a delegation to Washington in the fall of 1888 when the McKinley bill was under consideration.

United States Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The supreme court of the United States will reassemble to-morrow after the February recess. Its session is looked forward to with more than usual interest and curiosity, for it is expected that the newly appointed associate justice, Senator Edward D. White, of Louisiana, will be present and take his seat.

DOUBTS THEIR LOYALTY

Social Democrats in the Prussian Army.

War Minister von Schellendorf Says the Government Will Not Allow Them to Hold Positions of Command—Gen. von Kirchof Defended for Shooting Editor Harich.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

BERLIN, March 5.—Gen. Bronsart von Schellendorff, Prussian war minister, made a noteworthy speech on Friday against the social democrats. The cause was given by August Bebel, leader of the social democratic party. Bebel, after denying that socialists were always bad soldiers said that in the next war many men without commissions would necessarily be called to fill the places of officers. Among the men who would be thus summoned to responsible posts were many socialists. The government might well be glad therefore, to be able to reckon on the support of a party like the social democracy, which was powerful not only in the reichstag but in the army.

Amid conservative cheers and laughter the war minister responded sardonically that he rejoiced in the assurance that the country might depend upon its social democratic citizens in the army. Considerable anxiety had been felt by misinformed men concerning the loyalty of socialist soldiers, but it must now be allayed as a conspicuous social democratic leader had given the assurance that the prevalent mistrust was groundless. Toward the close of his speech, however, the war minister became exceedingly earnest and declared with spirit that the government could not allow men whose loyalty had been tainted with social doctrines to hold any position of command in the army.

During the debate on the army credits yesterday a social democratic deputy commented adversely on the emperor's decorating Gen. von Kirchof as that officer had been condemned to imprisonment by a court of justice. Kirchhof's offense was the shooting of Editor Harich of the Tagebiatt, who published a paragraph to the effect that Fraulein von Kirchhof had eloped with a man-servant. Shortly after his conviction for this crime, Kirchhof was gazetted for the order of the Red Eagle. Gen. Bronsart von Schellendorf made an elaborate defense of Kirchhof and indirectly of the emperor. "What man of honor," he asked, "would not act as did Gen. von Kirchhof, when the law would not help him avenge the slanders on his daughter's reputation?"

The conservatives answered the question with applause; the radicals with interruptions and protests; the social democrats with hisses. The war minister's speech has angered the liberal editors and their journals attack him fiercely. All deplore that a man in his high official position should justify and even glorify Kirchhof for the shooting of Harich. As Kirchhof failed to obtain redress from the law courts of the country which are the fittest judges in such matters, the liberal dailies declare the war minister's defense to be subversive of respect for the laws and judiciary of Prussia. The also ridicule the war minister's assertion that Gen. von Kirchhof acted in self-defense when he shot Harich. The discussion of the war minister's declaration has only begun. To-day undoubtedly the whole radical, liberal and social democratic press will unite in the attack.

TAMMANY'S CHIEF INDIGNANT

Threatens to Make Dunphy Suffer for His Charges.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 5.—Richard Croker, the Tammany chief, was very wrathy when a reporter to-day showed him published dispatches stating that Congressman Dunphy, in his letter of resignation, arraigned him as an instigator, promoter, rewarder and upholder of fraudulent votes and election crimes in New York. Mr. Croker, when asked for a statement in answer to Mr. Dunphy's charges, said: "If Dunphy made those charges against me I will have him arrested. I never encouraged fraudulent voting, and if anyone in New York violates the election laws Tammany Hall will prosecute him. I do not care to make any answer to Mr. Dunphy's charges until I have seen his letter. He had better be attending to his affairs in the second district. If Mr. Dunphy thinks Tammany is going to pieces and losing strength he will be taught differently this fall. I shall meet all his charges and do not care to further discuss the matter until I have seen Dunphy's letter."

Hon. Bourke Cockran, of New York, will arrive here this week.

Freight Handlers Win a Strike.

NEW LONDON, Conn., March 5.—The freight handlers employed at Long Dock by the Central Vermont line struck yesterday morning against the reduction of wages from 25 cents to 15 cents per hour for Sunday work. Seventy-five men were involved. When notified of the company's proposition the men quit, but remained idle only two hours, when the company yielded.

Desecrated the Church.

ELLSWORTH, Me., March 5.—Some miscreant defaced the Catholic church here by placing at the door a rude cross covered with a piece of bagging, the latter decorated with tar and feathers. Near by on a card were these words: "Butler's doctrine, heathenism, atheism, fiddlism." This refers presumably to Rev. Father Butler, pastor of the church. No reason is assigned for the deed. The affair caused considerable excitement.

REMAINS IN BROOKLYN

Dr. Talmage Will Stand By the Tabernacle.

The Financial Affairs of the Church Having Been Adjusted He Changes His Mind in Regard to Resigning—He Will Go to Australia and India Until Autumn.

BROOKLYN, March 5.—The Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage has again changed his mind in regard to resigning the pastorate of the Brooklyn tabernacle. A few minutes before Dr. Talmage began his sermon at the morning service yesterday he told the congregation that he had a few words to say to them. He then read the following letter in reply to the one sent him Saturday by the board of trustees of the tabernacle:

"Dear brethren of the board of trustees of the Brooklyn tabernacle:

"Your urgent letter is at hand. I had fully resolved to resign my position, not only because twenty-five years of my Brooklyn pastorate will soon have passed, but because of the financial entanglements resulting from a series of disasters which would have crushed any bank or insurance company or any worldly institution. Now, by the blessing of God upon your management, our church is put out of all embarrassment, and, I believe, has seen its last crisis. Persuaded by what you say in your letter of yesterday, and by what I hear from all sides, and, after seeking divine direction, I now and here declare my intention to remain in your pastor. What I have suffered at the anticipation of parting from this noble and devoted flock and from expected removal from this beloved city in whose affairs I have always been deeply interested, no one can estimate. And now with more faith and high expectation than I ever had any previous point in my ministry, I join you in a new campaign for God and the world's betterment. Yours etc.

"T. DE WITT TALMAGE."

After Mr. Talmage had finished reading the letter he was loudly applauded for several minutes. After the applause had died away and quiet was restored, Dr. Talmage continued: "In June I will leave for an absence until Autumn in Australia and India, but my place will be occupied by distinguished ministers of the gospel of America and Europe, so that the church will be as much thronged during my absence as during my presence. "I shall be in Mobile next Sunday, and Dr. Oakes, the assistant pastor, will preach here in the morning and Mrs. Baxter, a well known English evangelist, in the evening. I shall be away only one Sunday, and will be back for palm Sunday."

TWO KINDS OF LAW.

What Arthur Says of the Interstate Commerce Act.

CLEVELAND, O., March 5.—Grand Master P. M. Arthur of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, does not hesitate to give his opinion of Judge Jenkins and his famous injunction against the Northern Pacific employes. In the decision the judge decided that the men could not quit work. Arthur says that Judge Jenkins acted under the requirements of the receivers in rendering this decision. He says: "There was never any necessity for the injunction and in my opinion the receivers were aware of the fact. I have no patience with the receivers in cancelling the contract of the Northern Pacific with the men, then ordering a reduction and at the same time asking for $18,000 salaries. No good can come from his interference. It will only stir up the men and cause strikes where they would easily have been averted."

Speaking of Judge Ricks' decision at Toledo a year ago, which was the forerunner of Judge Jenkins' injunction, Arthur said: "I see that the United States court at Chicago has decided that President Newell of the Lake Shore road cannot be forced to produce his books under the interstate commerce law. There seem to be two kinds of law under the interstate commerce act as between corporations and labor organizations. At Toledo I was forced by Judge Ricks to produce the records of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and was compelled to divulge all my orders in the Ann Arbor strike."

Mormon Lawsuit.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 5.—Temple lot the sacred piece of Mormon soil in Independence for which the re-organized church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Independence faction of the Mormon church have been fighting in the courts for several years, was decided by Judge Phillips to be the property of the re-organized church. The Independence faction of the Mormons is by the opinion enjoined from asserting title to the property, the cloud is removed and full possession allotted to the plaintiff. The successful organization has its headquarters at Lamoni, Iowa. Its following numbers 25,000 souls and its president is Joseph Smith, jr., a son of prophet Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism.

West Virginia Troubles.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 5.—All is quiet up the river. As a result of the coroner's inquest over the body of Adkins, forty-three warrants were issued for the arrest of strikers. The sheriff cannot get citizens for posse and Gov. McCorkle has ordered the military to assist him. The feeling against the troops is very bitter and trouble is feared should they aid in making arrests.

Wilson Continues to Improve.

CITY OF MEXICO, March 5.—A despatch received from Guadalajara says that Congressman William L. Wilson continues to improve. He still coughs a little. Mr. Wilson has been removed from the railway car in which he had lain since he reached Guadalajara and taken to a private hotel.

Connecticut Baseball League.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 5.—A meeting of interested parties will be held here soon to formally organize the state baseball league.

Coal Mines Resume.

CUMBERLAND, Md., March 5.—Every coal mine in George's Creek region will resume operations within the next ten days.

TO SELL MUSIC HALL.

WM. M. STILLMAN LIKELY TO BE THE PURCHASER.

He Offers $13,000 for Property Which Cost $40,000—This Is Likely to Be Accepted, as the Theatre Is Not Self-Supporting.

Several propositions have been made to the Board of Directors of Stillman Music Hall Association for a transfer of the Music Hall property, and that which is likely to be accepted is the offer of Wm. M. Stillman to pay $13,000 for the property.

In this connection Mayor Gilbert has issued the following call to the stockholders:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 1, 1894.

DEAR SIR:—An offer has recently been made by a responsible party to purchase Stillman Music Hall and appurtenances and pay therefor $13,000 cash. After paying mortgage on the property and other items of indebtedness, there would remain for distribution among the stockholders about $4,000, equal to a dividend of ten per cent. The directors have put forth every effort in the past to make the property self-supporting, but without success. The total income received since the opening of the hall has hardly been sufficient to meet fixed charges, which has made it necessary to borrow from time to time to keep the building in proper repair. The indebtedness consists of mortgage on building of $7,500, note in bank $1,200, sundry other debts (say) $300—total, $9,000.

It seems necessary under the circumstances that the stockholders should meet to consider the situation and to decide upon the question of a transfer of the property to other hands.

For this purpose, and in order that the stockholders may, if they see fit, authorize the Directors and Officers to make sale of the property and execute the necessary deeds of conveyance, a meeting of stockholders is called to be held in the parlors of Music Hall on Thursday, March 15th, instant, at 8 o'clock p. m. As this will be a meeting of importance you are urged to attend in person. If, however, you cannot conveniently do this you are requested to sign the enclosed proxy and return the same to the Secretery or other officer of the Association before Thursday next.

By order of the Board,
A. GILBERT, President.

The blank enclosed with each notice is to authorize A. Gilbert or O. T. Waring to act as proxy for any stockholder unable to attend. Mr. Stillman seeks control of the house because he wishes no shows to be given except such as will do credit to the memory of his father, who donated the land and whose name the house bears.

The Quiet Charity of a Genial Christian.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Almighty Creator and Preserver of the Universe, in his all-wise and over-ruling providence, to transfer from mortality to immortality our beloved brother Charles P. Leggett;

Resolved, That we brethren of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., bow in submission to the Divine Will, while we cherish the memory of a most worthy brother, one whose benevolence, unostentatious charity and genial Christian character had endeared him to us all.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathy to his bereaved family and the assurance of our heartfelt interest in their welfare, trusting that in this great trial they will receive the consolation that cometh from on high, which alone can enable us to say: Thy will, not mine, be done.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes, published in the daily papers and a copy presented to the family of our departed brother.

Grist of the City Court.

Frank Storr was in the City Court this morning, accused of being too intoxicated to be automatous Saturday night. He was found guilty and his sentence was suspended.

The details of a lovers quarrel in which two young colored women and the single object of their affections participated were rehearsed. Miss Hattie Miner was once the one and only sweetheart of David Hooper. Suddenly his love shifted and was extended toward another of his race. Miss Miner's rage culminated Thursday night in a quarrel with Hooper on West Front street. Blows were struck by both parties and the woman obtained a barrel stave and Hooper fled. Policeman Frederickson arrested both, but the man escaped on the way to the lockup. Miss Miner was fined $3; but will probably go to jail for ten days instead.

Might Have Crushed His Skull.

Frank B. Fine, of Washington street, employed by Boice, Runyon & Co., drove an unloaded lumber wagon along Front street this morning. In front of R. J. Shaw's pharmacy he became dizzy and fell over against a rear wheel. His head rattled against the spokes until the team was stopped and he was seated again. A few yards further on he repeated the performance. Pinset Yeltman then took charge of the man and the rig and drove to the owners' yard.

The Constable went to the home, on Plainfield avenue, of Mrs. Allen (nee Lillie Wright), Saturday, and found that her husband had gone to his new place in New Market, accompanied by the furniture, Agnes Fosberg, a young man named Koechli, and two women from Newark. Mattox visited the house and was told by Agnes Fosberg that she had bought the goods from Allen. The property will be brought here for sale.

—Use the best paper first and take enough space to make the ad effective; use all you profitably can in that paper before you consider any other. One good ad beats two poor ones. Two short poles are not as good as one long one when you're after persimmons. The biggest circulation in Plainfield is that of The Daily Press.

—The local paper affords the best basis for an estimate of the present and future of the region. Written information from a friend is not apt to be as impartial, and cannot be as broad. Travelers' views are often entertaining, but oftener superficial. In the quietest places are mooted questions, diverse forces at work; on their solution and outcome depends the future of the locality. The papers show these in a living way. To the man who meditates settling, to the man who would plan a new business connection, to an investor in local securities in any region, the local paper is the best guide. The Press is Plainfield's local paper.

A WRECK

of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance or from excesses. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a thousand and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps to pay postage.

In fact, the more you scrub and wash, the rougher seems the skin, and you find that the best of soap fails to whiten it. Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

SCIENCE DEFEATS LETTERS.

HIGH SCHOOL PHILOSOPHERS SETTLE A VEXED QUESTION.

Plainfield Elders Enjoy the Work of the Younger Generation—Music Enlivens Debate and the Benefits of Schooling are Exemplified.

A public exhibition of the work of the High School Lyceum was given Saturday night at the third annual meeting of the society. Assembly Hall was filled with members, friends and others interested in education. An excellent programme was presented.

After an opening selection by the Lyceum Quartette, President Albert Woltmann made the following address:

At this, the third annual meeting of the High School Lyceum, we feel that no formal introduction should be necessary, since, after three years of successful work, we hope that we are not wholly "to fortune and to fame unknown".

As, however, there may be some present who are not fully acquainted with the motives and aims of our society, let me briefly touch on the object for which it exists. These are: Facility in debate; knowledge or parliamentary practice; confidence before an audience; and the awakening of an interest in literary matters and in the progress of the world.

In pursuance of these ends, weekly meetings have been held for the purpose of debating questions of interest; of declaiming selections of literary merit; and especially of rigidly enforcing the minutest details of parliamentary law.

From time to time, also, public meetings have been held at which the friends the Lyceum have been more than welcome; and for which have been prepared programmes, including such attractions as mock trials, public debates, and, recently, a celebration of St. Valentine's Day.

At our annual meetings we have endeavored to give some idea of our progress along the various lines of our work. Tonight, an efficient committee has prepared to celebrate the third year of existence as a society, and has arranged a programme which, it is hoped, will prove of sufficient interest to afford an hour or two of pleasant entertainment to our audience.

Champlain L. Riley read an interesting and well written essay on the life of Bernard Palissy. The adventures of the potter, religious reformer and philosopher of the sixteenth century were graphically related.

A feature of the evening was a discussion on "The Influence of Literature and Science upon Civilization". John C. Whiting was the champion of literature and said in part:

For thousands of years there has been growing, in this beautiful, busy, wonderful world of ours, a mighty structure—Civilization. To the student of history there appears in the ever-varying advance of enlightenment, a three-fold development of men and of nations: in social relations, intellect and morals. The progress of men and that of society in general are so inter-dependent that the man has his influence on the nation and the nation on the individual.

The development of the social and the political relations of men is generally regarded as almost the most important part of civilization. This phase depends largely upon the intellectual and moral condition of the people, because men make relationships according to individual enlightenment.

Literature contributes largely to the national and private prosperity which marks social improvement in its highest forms. If it is true, as Emerson says, that "the truest test of civilization is not the census, nor the size of cities, nor the crops; no, but the kind of man the country turns out", then that which moulds the men who are the exponents of national progress must have a most powerful influence on our civilization. It is literature that promotes mental culture, in men and in nations.

Literature lies at the foundation of all the general education with which our school systems accomplish so much national good. It forms the basis of the speeches and sermons which add to the world's mental and spiritual life, and of patriotic eloquence which in times of peril arouses every spark of loyalty.

In every age the songs of poets and the words of fearless reformers have brought into action the bravery and patriotism which have won freedom and secured lasting peace. Courage thus inspired counts for more, when war is necessary, than all the military appliances which science can construct. But war is sometimes no more disastrous than poor policy on the part of nations in dealing with important questions, a matter which is primarily affected by the intelligence of the people.

Rome fell in the midst of luxurious prosperity. Her military excellence was still undimmed, but the people lacked true intellectual culture, and the invincible spirit of honor and patriotism which huge mental progress confers. Greece fell for similar reasons but she had previously advanced further in literature, so left her stamp more firmly fixed on the world. Modern governments owe much to the preservative qualities of literature for legal precedent, and for a knowledge of mistakes to be avoided.

A study of the world's history shows that the truest civilization, the most prosperous governments, the most perfectly arranged social conditions, are attended by superior intellectual attainments, not in science but in literature.

Well-read, educated men and women are of greater use in every sphere of life and make up a higher type of humanity than ignorant people. Education has its uses in all human work. The thoughts that brighten dull days of toil come from literature, not from art nor science.

In art the power of individual genius is great, but does not mould the character of nations. In science the investigations of the mysteries of nature by a gifted scholar do not inspire men to lives of purity and usefulness. In literature works of merit accomplish good in the times they are written, and then continue to improve man's conditions for generations afterward.

Literature is open to all; science, art and even music require something in their adherents which is wanting in the mass, even if there were in these studies half the attractiveness which books possess.

Upon the moral life of men books have an effect that cannot be estimated, and the importance of moral progress in civilization it is hardly possible to exaggerate. Literature tends to form our characters, arouse our inspirations for good and beauty, to soothe our pain, to assuage our grief, to sustain our hopes and to soften our natures. Education brings out the qualities in strong-minded men which make them reformers.

To the influence of Christianity the world owes her most important development, that of morality. Christianity has been spread by the greatest of books—the Bible.

Art, through all the ages, has appealed to and ennobled the lives of some; science has contributed much to the material progress of the world; but literature, with its millions of adherents, touches the spring of human development and forth into life bounds a higher form of civilization. Whatever may be said of other influences on civilization, we cannot deny the fact that "the influence of books is irresistible, and whether we will or no, the cast of human thought takes its impression from the world of books."

C. Minturn Smith spoke in favor of the importance of science, in which his arguments were: Civilization is a condition directly opposite to barbarism. The progress of man from barbarism to enlightenment implies the equal development of the physical, the mental and the moral sides of man's nature. The most effective agency in working out this change is science.

Science has been the great factor in improving man's condition; science today exerts the most potent influence on our civilization; and, in ages yet to come, science will continue its beneficent work, revealing to man, by further investigation of the laws of the universe, the wisdom, power and love of his maker.

Science, to put it briefly, is knowledge and application. Steam and electricity have existed in all time, but it was not until science learned their uses that they wrought so great a change in man's condition. The blessings of commercial activity and the advantages of travel owe their existence to the application of scientific knowledge. The problem of intercommunication has been solved by the invention of the telegraph. The discovery of the compass has changed the face of the world by multiplying cities on the old and discovering a new continent, bringing mankind into a closer fraternal union.

In the single department of medicine science has demonstrated its value to man. That which tends to increase man's physical comfort makes it possible for him to accomplish more in reform and improvement. The helpful influence of science is surpassed only by that of religion.

Man's first steps in climbing up to civilization were made in a scientific line. The merging of the stone era into the age of bronze by the discovery of metal working marked the beginning of man's supremacy over animals and the consequent elevation of his condition.

As science betters man's physical condition so its study strengthens his mental faculties. While science was bringing man from darkness to light, she taught him how to reason aright and dissipated the superstitions which held the world in bonds of ignorance.

Scientific study invigorates the mind and perfects the powers of the intellect—memory, abstraction, generalization, reason and observation. Its importance is so generally recognized that scholars are graded by their knowledge of mathematical science.

Religion and science are sometimes regarded as antagonistic. This idea arises from a misconception of their true relations, for each owes the other a debt of gratitude for co-operation. Science has deepened man's reverence by revealing the immensity of God's creative genius and promoted the spread of religion by removing its heaviest incubus—superstition. It was the work of science to dispel the pernicious error that various phenomena were the actions of evil spirits by proving that all natural events occurred according to fixed laws.

In aiding the church science has aided civilization, for the progress of a nation without religion does not result in true enlightenment. Science is noble because it deals with the manifestations of God. Nature at once reveals and conceals an Infinite Presence whose unchanging laws govern everything. The study which endeavors to grasp these mighty laws which lie back of all the marvelous manifestations of the natural world, cannot but have an uplifting influence on man's moral being.

All literature is human, therefore it contains the errors of human beings. Its readers can go no higher than its source. Science breathes the grandest thoughts man is capable of appreciating, and the eager searcher after truth is led "Through nature up to nature's God".

A committee, composed of Mayor Gilbert, Principal Maxson and Dr. Goodrich, retired for consideration. Their decision was expressed by Mayor Gilbert. He said that he felt much embarrassed to stand up after hearing such excellent addresses and decide against either of the speakers. The committee were to act as judges, considering nothing but the evidence presented. The side of literature had been handicapped because, as had been said, science was knowledge in general and literature but a vehicle for diffusing it. While the committee were compelled to decide in favor of science, it was not because of the weakness of the arguments of the debater on the other side, but because the odds were against him.

A declamation, "The Secret of the Murderer", given by Fred W. Goddard, showed his natural talent and careful study in elocution.

Selections by the Lyceum Quartette—S. N. Marsh, Edward Clark, T. D. Blair and H. B. Drake—were much enjoyed, and the singers were applauded and encored.

Prof. P. L. Conde's Symphony Orchestra rendered a selection from the opera "Martha", the "Genial Gavotte", overture "Harvest Home", and "Tarantelle Siciliene", arranged by Tobain. The work of the young musicians was remarkably excellent and was well appreciated.

THE ROOSTER SOLILOQUIZES.

From Grace Church Tower He Reflects on the Beauties of Episcopalian Worship.

Now I am satisfied I was not dreaming a week ago last Sunday evening when, looking down and listening, I saw and heard the most beautiful and impressive service since I took my position up here. I could not believe it was real, for after service when all was quiet I dozed off and dreamed it over again, and when morning dawned I began to think it was all a dream, as it was too good to be real. But the same thing occurred again last night, when I made up my mind to keep awake and make sure that it was no dream but a beautiful reality.

And why should it not ever be thus, for who could gaze upon the beautiful cross, that glorious symbol of Christianity, borne at the head of the procession of choristers clad in white apparel, singing the hymn "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" without feeling deeply impressed within as he gazes on the cross of Jesus going on before? And this is not all, for as the service went on it became more and more impressive with the beautiful hymns and anthems, and the intoning of the service; and then the chanting of the Psalms was worth my staying awake for alone, and why should they not be sung at every service, for I believe Psalms are set to be sung and not said. But passing on what is this I hear: "Tow, tow, tow, tow; I thirst"; yes: I can hear it now, and I have seemed to hear it ever since—those remarkable words of the crucified Lord, "I thirst tow—tow". Yes: it seems to be going ever since, striking you with the awful solitude of that last hour upon the cross. Reader, I hope you were there, and am sorry if you were not; but let me ask you to come next Sunday evening and hear that well-known rector of St. Bartholomew's Church, Rev. David H. Greer, D. D., and you will be made welcome by the Men's Association of Grace Church.

WEST END PARK.

Another Land Improvement Scheme, the Result of Property Division.

The division of property between the Misses Rocap and Mrs. George Randolph has been settled.

Mrs. Randolph receives the store property on Park avenue, corner of Second street while the Misses Rocap get the 22-acre farm on West Front street near Grant avenue. William H. Moore has purchased their interest in the farm, and Surveyor Dunham is preparing a map for him. The property will be graded and cut up into building lots. There is a frontage of 1,285 feet, giving ample room for improvements. In the rear, near the brook, a park will be laid out containing 12 acres of land, and it will be a most attractive spot.

The front sidewalk will be flagged and curbed. The street and steam cars being easy of access, it will be a desirable place to live. It will be known as West End Park.

More Than a Million.

The appraisers have estimated the value of the late George H. Babcock estate, including all the real and personal property to be $1,000,096. Mr. Babcock's weekly income was in the neighborhood of $2,600. The shrinkage on the assets from the value a year ago has been $75,000, being chiefly caused by the decline of the stock of the Babcock & Wilcox Company, which paid 28 per cent at that time. The household effects included so many choice works of art that the appraisers spent two days in estimating their value.

A Narrow Escape.

As Walter L. Hetfield and family were out carriage riding yesterday afternoon, the horse's collar broke, the horse started to kick and run. But for the good judgment and prompt action of Mr. Hetfield, serious accident might have happened.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

For bilious headache and all other conditions resulting from constipation, go by the book on Beecham's pills.

CHEERS FOR COUNSELOR HETFIELD.

He Defends the Poor Man, and Wins the Plaudits of the People.

About seventy-five citizens assembled in Justice Huff's court room at Dunellen on Saturday last at 2 p. m. to hear the trial of John and Michael Gallagher, father and son, charged by detective Corss of the Central Railroad Company with being disorderly persons, by picking coal from the company's property.

Walter L. Hetfield represented the defendants, and Mr. Barkalow, from the company's law department, represented the complainant. Mr. Hetfield moved for a dismissal of the complaint on the ground that it was not specific enough so as to enable the defendants to make a defence, which motion was denied. When the counsel told the Court that it had no jurisdiction in the matter as the case was a civil one, and Saturday afternoon was a half holiday, instructed the defendants that they might go, of course the Court took the same view. Then the excited crowd immediately gave three cheers for Mr. Hetfield. The case has excited considerable attention in Dunellen as there are fifteen or twenty other cases depending on this one, mostly against good honest people who are now out of employment and sick, picked the coal from the railroad tracks to keep their families warm. Many of Dunellen's best citizens think it oppression on the part of the railroad detective.

MRS. NEWELL AND THE GIRLS CLUB.

Statements Sent from Paris Denied in Plainfield.

The New York World yesterday published a story from Paris that Mrs. Newell, of 445 West Fifth street, Plainfield, was responsible for the expected downfall of the American Girls Club in Paris. The club was founded by Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, to safeguard American girls in the art schools. Mrs. Newell was monitor of the establishment. The World said that Mrs. Newell demoralized the servants and prejudiced the creditors, leaving the matron powerless. Some weeks ago,—it added—when affairs were threatening to collapse, Mrs. Newell withdrew to Plainfield, sending her son, a youth of twenty, to represent her in Paris. He made a claim upon a share of the club furniture belonging, he alleged, to his mother. Creditors also began to press for money due, and servants for their wages.

When a Press representative called at 445 West Fifth street last night, Mrs. Newell was not to be seen, but her son, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope Chapel, represented her. Mr. Newell said that the World story was a misrepresentation. His mother had left Paris not because of any trouble but because of the death of her husband, Rev. Wm. Whiting Newell of St. Luke's, which occurred Jan. 23. The Girls Club was not in debt, and there was money in the treasury. Mrs. Newell had not antagonized the club in any way.

Death of John Allen.

John Allen died at his home in the borough at 8:30 last night, aged seventy-six. He had been ill with pneumonia for five days. Mr. Allen was one of North Plainfield's known citizens, and was until a short time ago the owner of the Watchung Park property which is now being improved by A. D. Thompson. He leaves a widow, a daughter, Mrs. J. W. Mundy, of Somerset street, and a son, Ireneus Allen, who is employed in the wholesale meat business in Somerville. Two nephews, A. D. Thompson, of Plainfield, and Rev. Ernest Thompson, of South Plainfield, survive him. Mr. Allen was a member of the First Baptist Church, and Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes will conduct the funeral services at the house, 154 Somerset street, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. The burial will be made in Evergreen Cemetery.

To Give a Swedish Ball.

A regular monthly meeting of the Skandinaviska Foreigngen Thule, the new Swedish society of sixty members, was held in the rooms of the Sons of Temperance Saturday night. Emil Stramberg acted as chairman, President Gustav Brandt being absent.

The question of holding a Swedish ball was discussed and it was decided to have one the latter part of this month. The details of the affair were left to the judgment of a committee of eight who will meet next Saturday evening. A double quartette composed of members of the society will sing at the ball.

Those appointed on the committee were: Claes Wallander, Charles Dahlin, Charles Rydell, Emil Stramberg, Gustav Brandt, Mrs. S. Rommel, Miss H. Pierson and M. Gustavson.

To Improve Terrill Road.

The Brisbane estate over the hill on Terrill road has been sold and will probably be improved. The property runs west such a distance that if Watchung avenue were extended, making a shorter road to Rahway, the land would front on it. The extension of the avenue will probably be attempted.

ANOTHER GAMBLING RAID.

Magistrate Crosley Dealing More Severely with Offenders.

Chief Marshal Pangborn and Assistant Wilson raided another gambling den in the borough at 2:30 yesterday morning. It was operated in the same house on Race street in which William Jackson and his customers were found playing poker December 10 last, but was in a different part of the building.

Jacob Bergen, colored, threw his wife into the street Wednesday night and she informed her friends that she could not return as her husband ran a gambling place. The police heard of it and decided on a raid.

Chief Pangborn went to the place at 2 yesterday morning with a dark lantern and mounted a shed roof from which he could see four men, half of them colored, playing euchre for money. After watching the game half an hour he captured the men and took them to the lockup.

Proprietor Bergen was held in $200 bail for his appearance before the Grand Jury by Borough Magistrate Crosley this morning.

Henry Vandeveer, colored, and William Herlich and John Stevens, card players, were fined $5 each. The punishments inflicted are more severe than the decisions of Justice Crosley in the former case which aroused the criticism of The Press because of their leniency.

Large Accessions of Membership.

The morning services in the First Presbyterian Church yesterday were occupied by communion and the reception of members. Thirty-six persons united with the church by profession of faith and fourteen others were received by letters from other churches. To the revival service held by Rev. F. H. Wright the church owes a large increase in faith and membership, and the influence he left behind will continue to produce great results.

Tracks of a Chicken Thief.

The chicken coop of John Bolsterli on the corner of Warren and Chatham streets, was robbed of eight chickens and four pigeons Saturday nights. The door was too narrow to permit of the entrance of a man, and tracks in the mud gave evidence of the operations of a boy who passed the birds over the fence.

We often hear people say there is only one good cough medicine and that is Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the specific for cold.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rose, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

More Want Advertisements

Are printed in the PLAINFIELD DAILY PRESS than any other paper in Plainfield. Every PRESS want ad is genuine and is paid for by the advertiser. None of these is padded, fictitious, inserted free of charge or copied from other papers the day following its first publication. As these advertisements in every case represent a genuine Want, their value is greatly increased both to the advertiser and the reader.

Watchung Park Property.

Handsomely Situated

BUILDING LOTS

NOW OFFERED FOR SALE.

THIS PROPERTY is in the heart of the recently opened residence section of the city, being within a few minutes walk of the Central railroad station.

THE NEW WATCHUNG PARK, with its new streets and avenues, will be among the handsomest residence sections in this pretty suburban place.

ONLY HIGH GRADE RESIDENCES will be erected. The neighborhood will be restricted, making it as desirable as any in Plainfield.

ALL MODERN IMPROVEMENTS will be in force by early spring. The work of macadamizing the streets is now being pushed rapidly.

ELECTRIC CARS PASS the property. Electric lights, gas and city water will be introduced as soon in the spring as they are needed.

SCORES OF BEAUTIFUL HOUSES now fronting on Sandford and Westervelt avenues have been located on the old crescent ball field.

JUST AS PROPERTY VALUES jumped in Sandford and Westervelt avenues, so will they also increase rapidly in Watchung Park. Those who buy now will reap the benefit of an early investment.

THE LOTS are about 50x150 feet in size and the map of the property printed in these columns on Wednesdays and Saturdays will give the public necessary information as to their location.

For further information regarding prices and terms, large copies of the map, etc., address or call upon

Profanity Won't Prevent It.

All the "cuss-words" you can think of won't improve your laundry work if you take it to a second-grade place. "Language" won't keep the linen white when the washer uses alkaline soap and harmful bleaches.

Satisfaction and economy await you in our Laundry Department. We know the faults of others and avoid them. Work called for and delivered.

Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. Its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, and more cheerful than either. The choicest bric-a-brac in the palace of a Vanderbilt reveals nothing finer. We have 2,700 artistic varieties, in brass, bronze, silver and black iron.

Ladies often like to go down among the large wholesale houses and buy of first hands. They will find at our salesrooms (the largest in the world) a rare collection of art in lamps. A catalogue to send you if you cannot come.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Mrs. Wasp and Mrs. Bee.

Said Mrs. Wasp to Mrs. Bee:
"Will you a favor do me?
There's something I can't understand:
Please, ma'am, explain it to me.

"Why do men build for you a house,
And coax you to go in it,
While me, your cousin, they'll not let
Stay near them for a minute?

"I have a sting, I do confess,
And should not like to lose it,
But so have you, and when you're vexed
I'm very sure you use it."

"Well," said the bee, "to you no doubt
It does seem rather funny;
But people soon forget the stings
Of those who give them honey."
—American Bee Journal.

Music.

Music soft, divinely sweet,
All with harmony replete!
Music low and sweetly thrilling,
All the soul with rapture filling!
Soothing fall thy strains below
On the sad hearts crushed with woe.

How the spirit sinks to rest
'Neath thy tones divinely blest,
Feeling dull despair no longer,
With each heart-throb growing stronger,
Gains new powers for life's hard fight,
Striving still for truth and right.

Stirring music, rich and strong,
How it bears the soul along!
Leading upward, reaching higher,
With a rapturous desire
Grander heights in life to gain,
Triumphs over grief and pain.

Music slow, with sadness fraught,
How it stirs each tender thought!
Mournful music, sadly stealing
O'er the soul, brings chastened feeling,
Wakens love and pity kind,
Chides and melts with grace refined.

Blessed music! Everywhere,
It is rich with hope and prayer!
Soft or sad or grandly swelling
Or of joyous impulse telling;
Sweet its strains to mortal ear,
Ever welcome, always dear.
—N. L. Hickok.

Judge Not.

Judge not! Thou canst not tell
Why he, thy brother, fell.
Wilt, too, thy flowers might,
Exposed unto the blight;
Thy singing birds quite dumb,
'Neath darkened skies, become.

Judge not! Thou dost not know
Why he has acted so!
Be not so sure thy grain
Could long resist such rain;
Thy bark, thus tempest tossed,
Might not the bar have crossed.

Judge not! Thou canst not say
Just where the blame to lay.
From strings long snapped in twain
Comes out the sweet refrain;
From streamlets frozen deep
Not soon the waters leap.

Bid not from that poor heart
The one last hope depart;
But, judging, questioning not,
The past all, all forgot,
Let silence be the gem
Of mercy's diadem.
—New Orleans Picayune.

Retribution.

An editor sat in his easy chair,
With an uncut beard and frizzly hair;
There was nothing to do, nothing to write;
The copy had all gone in for the night;
His thoughts far away from subjects deep,
His head fell back, and he went to sleep.

He dreamed that he dropped far down in a well
Till he came to the gates that opened in hell,
And he knew from the noise and the terrible din
That thousands were suffering tortures therein.
As louder and louder their voices ascended,
He recognized many whom oft he'd befriended.

He knocked at the door of the devil's own home,
But the devil was out, his imps were alone.
"The rules are explicit," they went on to explain;

"No editor can ever pass in here again."
Then they bolted the door and took out the key,
While the editor peered through the bars to see.
The frightful sight which greeted his eyes
Was, of all that he saw, the greatest surprise.
The devil came home with a terrible shout:
"I don't want you here; come, now, get out!"
Then he opened the gate with secret springs,
While a thousand poor souls clung to his wings.

The editor stole into that dismal room
And heard each soul consigned to its doom;
Some were compelled forever to sit
In the fiery depths of the bottomless pit,
While others were doomed forever to gaze
Through redhot glass in the fiery blaze.

Then the devil said, with a terrible curse:
"I am sorry, my friends, I have nothing worse
For you who have come to the realms of shade
And left your subscription bills unpaid.
But I'll send you down to the sulphur sea,
Where through all the ages of eternity
The only thoughts which can enter your mind
Are of newspaper bills you left behind."
—Phil Dean.

Optimism.

The times are not degenerate! Man's faith
Mounts higher than of old. No crumbling creed
Can take from the immortal soul its need
Of something greater than itself. The wraith
Of dead beliefs we cherished in our youth
Fades but to let us welcome newborn truth.

Man may not worship at the ancient shrine,
Prone on his face in self accusing storm.
That night is passed; he hails a finer morn,
And knows himself a something half divine;
No humble worm whose heritage is sin,
But part of God, he feels the Christ within.

No fierce Jehovah with a frowning mien
He worships. Nay, through love and not through fear
He seeks the truth and finds its source is near,
And fears and owns the power of things unseen
Where once he scoffed. God's great primeval plan
Is fast unfolding in the soul of man.
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Who Would Not Go?

Could we but know
The land that ends our dark, uncertain travel,
Where lie those happier hills and meadows low—
Ah, if beyond the spirit's inmost cavil,
Aught of that country could we surely know,
Who would not go?

Might we but hear
The hovering angels' high imagined chorus,
Or catch betimes, with wakeful eyes and clear,
One radiant vista of the realm before us,
With one rapt moment given to see and hear—
Ah, who would fear?

Were we quite sure
To find the peerless friend who left us lonely,
Or there, by some celestial stream as pure,
To gaze in eyes that here were lovelit only—
This weary mortal coil, were we quite sure,
Who would endure?
—E. C. Stedman.

Content.

All lands are fair to him who knows content,
All skies are sunny and all fields are green;
In dreamy mists with softest azure blent
Lie distant cloudlands tipped with silver sheen.

The wayside violet sheds her fragrance sweet,
For him the wild rose blushes all are spent;
Life's fullest gifts are poured about the feet
Of him within whose heart is found content.

HITCH FOLLOWS HITCH

No Final Agreement on the Tariff Yet.

Nor Does Mr. Voorhees Know When the Bill Will Be Ready for Republican Members of the Committee—Not Before Two or Three Days at the Least—Changes Made So Far.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—One hitch in the tariff bill in the senate committee appears to tread upon another's heels, so fast do they follow. When the democratic members of the committee separated Saturday they believed a formal consideration of the work Monday would result in final action. When evening came, though, these senators found themselves more at sea than when they came together. No one ventured to say when the bill would be laid before the republican members. Although the sitting lasted until 10 o'clock last night no notice was issued for a meeting of the finance committee, and inasmuch as today is the regular meeting day, Mr. Voorhees took the precaution to personally inform his republican colleagues that there would be no meeting. When there would be he could not say, but contented himself by assuring members of the committee that as soon as the bill was ready he would call a meeting.

When asked what progress was made members of the committee shook their heads dubiously and other democratic senators, notably the "conservatives," declared they could not see how the bill could be got ready short of two or three days yet.

During the day Secretary Carlisle, Assistant Secretary Hamlin and Commissioner of Internal Revenue Miller were all before the committee. Mr. Miller was there, as he had been before, to give the information needed on revenue matters. It is understood that a discussion, developing some warmth, was had, when an attempt was made to reconsider the tax fixed on manufactured tobacco. It is said that the committee raised this tax from six cents a pound under the present law to ten cents. Mr. McPherson endeavored to have it changed to 12 cents and pointed out that the manufacturers favored this.

The administrative feature of the bill received a great deal of attention during the day and the alleged failure of the house committee to permit a thorough supervision of this part of the bill came in for some criticism. Mr. Carlise and Mr. Hamlin have gone carefully over this part of the senate bill and many changes have been made at their suggestion.

The changes made by the sub-committee are very numerous and begin with the date when the law is to go into effect, which is made June 30, 1894, instead of June 1, and follow on through all the schedules, commencing with the first item on the first schedule, "Schedule A"—chemicals, oils and paints, and running clear through to the free list. Supplementing the modifications as to cotton and woolen goods, gloves, silks, sugar, etc., which were previously stated in press dispatches, a list of the other important changes is herewith given:

Acetic, boracic and tartaric acid, reduced from 20 to 10 per cent. Glycerine, crude and purified, changed form 1 and 3 cents per pound respectively, to 20 per cent ad valorem. Iodoform changed from $1 per pound to 25 per cent. ad valorem. Licorice changed from 5 cents per pound to 25 per cent. ad valorem. Flaxseed and poppy seed oil, taxed in the Wilson bill 15 cents a gallon, are put on the free list. Seal and other fish oil reduced from 25 to 50 per cent. ad valorem and cod oil from 15 to 10 per cent. ad valorem.

Under the heading of paints and varnishes baryta which in the Wilson bill is taxed $3 per ton, is changed to 25 per cent. ad valorem. All lead products included in paragraphs 49, 50, 51 and 52 which include acetic of lead, white lead, nitrate of lead and orange mineral, which in the Wilson bill are taxed 1½ to 1¾ cents a pound are placed on the free list.

In the metal schedules, iron in slabs, blooms, etc., is made dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem instead of 22½ as in the Wilson bill. Common or black sheets of iron or steel, which in the Wilson bill are dutiable at 9-10 of one cent per pound are made dutiable at 35 per cent ad valorem. The same duty is imposed on tin-coated plates, which in the Wilson bill were taxed 1 1-5 cents per pound.

In the sugar schedule all sugar not above 80 degrees polariscope, 80-100 cents per pound; and for each additional degree above 80 polariscope 1-100 cents per pound. Molasses not above 56 degrees, 2 cents per gallon; above 56 degrees, 4 cents per gallon.

Distilled spirits entering into the composition of any preparation are to be taxed at the rate of $1.50 per proof gallon. The tax on brandy is changed from $1.80 to $1.50 per proof gallon. All cordials and liquors are also changed from $1.80 to $1.50 per proof gallon.

Cotton manufactures are taxed at a uniform rate of 30 per cent. ad valorem, except printed cloths, 20 per cent. and bleached 25 per cent. ad valorem.

These are the important changes in the bill as laid before the full democratic membership of the committee yesterday. After mature deliberation, the democratic majority, it is understood, agreed to make further changes by imposing a duty on iron ore of 32 cents per ton; 35 cents per ton on bituminous coal, 20 per cent. on slack coal and 15 per cent. on coke. Collars, cuffs and shirts are increased 10 per cent., making the duty 45 per cent. instead of 35 per cent. as in the Wilson bill.

The income tax provision was left untouched by the sub-committee, who are in favor of it, and was not acted upon by the full democratic committee. Neither was any final decision reached as to the whiskey tax.

EFFECT UNDER WATER

Test of Concussion on Animal Life.

Six Successful Experiments at the Newport Torpedo Station—One of Five Animals, a Rooster, Showed Slight Injury When the Explosion Occurred 80 Feet From the Shell.

NEWPORT, R. I., March 6.—The end has been reached of the tests at the torpedo station to determine the effects of explosions in submarine boats upon the line of action adopted for the first six trials of which the one yesterday afternoon was last. Starting at 400 feet, mines containing 100 pounds of gun cotton have been fired at various intervals up to 80 feet (the last test) away from the submerged lay torpedo shell containing animal life. Not in a single instance, except this last test, have the animals shown that they were in the least injured by the effects of the severe concussions which the boat received under water. But yesterday, of the five animals confined a rooster showed the effects, and he hurt his comb, probably by being thrown forcibly against the inside of the shell.

The pressure exerted against the boat, in accordance with Gen. Abbott's formula, was 528 pounds. Whether it was greater or less, of course, is not known, but it took this condition to cause a boat of 80 pounds computed resistance to flatten. That it did not collapse entirely is particularly encouraging, since the theory still holds good that life within is safe until the boat ruptures or collapses.

The afternoon's explosion was a grand success, for it threw up water over an area of 100 feet and sent a couple of jets in the air while under-concussion appeared to be a most solid one.

MORLEY DECLINES.

Refuses the India Secretaryship—Liberals and Unionists May Reunite.

LONDON, March 6.—The United Press correspondent has obtained official confirmation of the report that John Morley had refused the India secretaryship because he did not wish any office which was isolated from the cause of Ireland. Sir Algernon West, Mr. Gladstone's intimate friend and companion at Biarritz, has been appointed to the privy council. John Cowan, chairman of Mr. Gladstone's election committee in the Midlothian district, has received a baronetcy. G. W. Spencer Lyttleton and G. H. Murray, private secretaries to Mr. Gladstone as first lord of the treasury, have been made companions of the Order of the Bath.

The St. Jame's Gazette is authority for the statement that a reunion of the liberals and the liberal unionists is probable, Lord Rosebery having already entered into communication with the unionist leaders, Joseph Chamberlin and the Duke of Devonshire, on the subject.

COLONNA CHARGES LIBEL.

New York Newspapers Seized in Paris and Mr. Pulitzer Sued.

PARIS, March 6.—Upon information given by Prince Colonna, John W. Mackay's son-in-law, Paris officials have seized all copies of the New York World, of Feb. 5, which were offered here for sale. Prince Colonna declared that an article published in the World of that date was libelous. The paragraph to which he objected most strenuously, said that he had been expelled from the Jockey club in Rome for cheating at cards. His lawyers have served a writ upon Joseph Pulitzer, of the World, claiming 100,000 francs damages. Maitre Desjardins, the prince's chief counsel, says that his client will divide the amount of damages which he expects will be awarded him, among the public charities of Naples and Paris.

CHARTS ALL WRONG.

Surprising Testimony Brought Out at the Kearsarge Inquiry.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 6.—Lieut.-Commander Pillsbury gave the most surprising testimony of any brought out at the Kearsarge inquiry. He has been in the service about 34 years, and for at least five years has been engaged in the observation of currents. Commander Pillsbury said he had found variable currents even in what was known as the gulf stream. He had found currents flowing in a direction opposite to that of the gulf stream, and had found the stream in places to be only 40 miles wide instead of 240. To Admiral Ghierardi, the witness said he did not consider that he was actually in the gulf stream when he encountered the reverse currents of which he had spoken.

The witness then made an interesting statement. He said that since December last the hydrographic office had issued a new chart of the Caribbean sea which corresponded with the new pilot chart of that body of water, and which showed that the charts of the stream up to December had been all wrong.

"Do you mean," asked Admiral Ghierardi, "that where the currents were northwest they are now southwest?"

"I mean that the old pilot charts up to December last gave erroneous information."

The undercurrents in the Caribbean sea, Mr. Pillsbury continued, sometimes played great mischief with the surface currents. If the currents changed about Roncador it could not be detected by those on board ship until within a mile of the reef.

Antidote for Morphine.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The efficacy of permanganate of potash as an antidote for morphine poisoning was demonstrated in the case of George H. Ackerman of Passaic, N. J. Ackerman took seven grains of morphine in mistake for quinine, and when he found what he had done he called Dr. Edwin De Baun, who administered sixty grains of sulphate of zinc as an emetic. It failed to work, and Ackerman was almost in a state of coma when Dr. De Baun thought of the new antidote. He told Ackerman to walk briskly around a table while he dissolved ten grains of permanganate of potash. By the time Dr. De Baun got back Ackerman was on his hands and knees on the floor. The pupils of his eyes had contracted to the size of pinholes and his heart had almost ceased to beat. Dr. De Baun made him swallow ten grains of the solution, and then injected six grains hypodermically. Then Ackerman was walked around for 18 hours to keep him awake, and was treated frequently with electricity. He is now recuperating.

Field Still in Jail.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The application made for the discharge of Edward M. Field from Ludlow street jail was denied by Justice Patterson of the supreme court. He is now in jail under civil process in an action brought by Charles Nette in which judgment was entered in December, 1892, and no further action taken. It was urged that Field was insane and in charge of a committee at the time the order of arrest was granted, and that by reason of the gross neglect in delaying the enforcement of process he is now entitled to his discharge. Judge Patterson holds that the order cannot be reviewed by him and that the code of civil procedure contemplates that lunatics may be arrested in civil actions and makes it discretionary with the court to discharge them from arrest as privileged persons. Field's sanity is now established and he is mentally and physically capable of preparing to stand trial.

God in the Constitution.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The judiciary committee of the house of representatives are listening to arguments on the resolution of Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, proposing an amendment to the preamble of the constitution of the United States, "acknowledging the supreme authority and the just government of Almighty God in all the affairs of men and nations." This question has been before congress at intervals ever since the constitution was adopted. Of late the pressure from those who believe that such an amendment should be made to the constitution has been so great that it could not be ignored. The proposition is antagonized by representatives of various societies, of free thinkers, atheists and agnostics, and it will be supported ten times more strongly by representatives of the various religious denominations. The hearings will occupy several weeks.

Thirty Died Together.

CAPE TOWN, March .—A trader from Shangani River district, who has arrived at Buluwayo, states that he found within a radius of fifty feet at a point where the party under command of Captain Wilson is supposed to have made their last stand before being massacred by the Matabeles, the bones of thirty-three men. The trader and his party gathered the bones together and buried them. Late advices state that King Lo Bengula died January 23. His followers, it is said, are trooping to Buluwayo with the intention of laying down their arms. Great anxiety is expressed by them to know where they are to live and who is to assume the burden of the support of the late king's wives and children.

Election Investigation.

TRENTON, N. J., March 6.—The investigation by the election committee of the house of the methods by which William J. Thompson was returned as a member from the Third Camden district will begin to-day, presumably with the counting of the ballots.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

Trouble For the Bland Bill in the Senate.

Indications that it May Not Have All Smooth Sailing—A Petition from Prohibition Iowa Against an Increase Tax on Alcohol—House Discusses Pension Appropriation Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The senate spent two hours yesterday in open session and one hour in executive session. The famous McGarrahan claim came up in the shape of a bill, (the first on the calendar), to refer it to the committee on private land claims, but it went over till today without action. Petitions, emanating from the Iowa Pharmaceutical society, against an increased tax on alcohol as one of the necessaries of life, were presented by Senator Cockrell of Missouri, who exclaimed: "Imagine that, alcohol an absolute necessity in prohibition Iowa." The seigniorage bill was received from the house and was presented by the vice-president, who was about to repeat the usual formula: "Read the first and second time, and referred to the committee on finance," when objection was interposed by Senators Stewart (Nev.), Hale (Me.), and Allison (Ia.) As a bill cannot receive its first and second reading on the same day, if objection be made, the seigniorage bill must remain on the vice-president's table till to-day, when its second presentation will be made, which may lead to objection and debate.

House of Representatives.

The house spent an eventless day in committee of the whole considering the pension appropriation bill. Toward the end of the session the monotony was broken somewhat by a tilt between Mr. Cannon and Mr. Black, of Illinois, caused by the former making an unsuccessful attempt to have Gen. Black tell whether he was or was not in favor of Mr. Cleveland's pension policy while he was commissioner of pensions. No progress had been made on the bill when the committee rose and the house adjourned.

MILLER IS A DEMOCRAT.

The New Jersey Senator Says He Would Not Down His Party.

TRENTON, N. J., March 6.—Notwithstanding Senator Miller, of Cape May, a few nights since in an impassioned speech severed his connection with the democratic senate, denouncing it as an organization in interest of the race tracks, he appeared in that body again last night and seemed as much at home, if not more so, than the senators who have been constantly loyal during the struggle for control still in progress. He wrote letters at his desk, answered the roll call, helped himself to water out of the silver pitcher on President Adrian's desk and chatted pleasantly with several colleagues after adjournment. To a United Press reporter he flatly denied that he had said that he severed his connection with the democratic senate. "I am a democrat," he said last night, "and would not throw my party down. I will vote with the republicans, before they go home, to repeal the race track laws, but that is as far as I will go."

Senator Miller's course is the subject of much and various comment at the state house.

New York Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, March 6.—The dry goods market opens under more auspicious conditions than it did a week ago, the weather presenting a decidedly favorable contrast to that of the first of last week. Here and there buyers are evidently going ahead of immediate requirements to some extent, but as a rule they prefer taking care of well ascertained needs only. In one respect this latter feature is satisfactory, as it points to a maintenance at least of the improvement in business recently noted in a regular way.

Confirmations By the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations:

John M. Savage, of New Jersey, United States consul at Dundee, Scotland.

Edgar Tennent, to be surveyor of the United States customs at Philadelphia.

Postmasters—Pennsylvania, Thomas Pomeroy, Pittsburg; Jacob Hoffman, Reading; Levi G. Holmes, Coatesville; A. T. Horton, City Island; H. E. Wilson, Marathon; Peter Paulding, White Plains.

Off on Her Trial Trip.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—The battleship Indiana left Cramps' shipyard this morning for her preliminary trial trip, which will cover the course leading from the Five Fathom lightship. It will occupy four or five days, and a thorough test will be made to determine the power and other conditions of the ship's machinery.

Winter Disappearing in Michigan.

CHEBOYGAN, Mich., March 6.—The prospects are that the ice will soon be out of the straits of Mackinaw, a week more of the present warm weather being all that is needed to open the passage. All the lumber camps have broken up and the snow has almost completely disappeared.

Cleveland Homeward Bound.

NORFOLK, Va., March 6.—The steamer Violet, with the presidential party aboard, arrived here last night. Mr. Cleveland stated to a reporter that his trip had been a very enjoyable one and sport was fine. The Violet coaled at the navy yard and resumed her trip to Washington. She will arrive there this afternoon.

Municipal Elections in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 6.—Municipal elections were held throughout Iowa yesterday in all except a few of the larger cities. The returns received so far do not indicate any material advantage for either party. Local issues were uppermost at many points.

General Superintendent of the Lehigh.

AN AWFUL CONSPIRACY

West Virginia Miners' Plot to Use Dynamite.

Intended Wholesale Murder of Militiamen and Destruction of Property—Greatly Excited Over the Discovery of Their Plot—One of the Bombs in the Governor's Possession.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 6.—The conspiracy unearthed yesterday afternoon in the mining region was more dastardly than at first supposed. The strikers took to Acme twenty-seven large dynamite cartridges to blow up the store the other night. At their meetings on Saturday and Sunday the arrangement was made to arrest Wyant, bring him to Montgomery and turn him over to a mob of strikers. Then it was that the cartridges already distributed among the strikers were to be thrown among the troops who came with the sheriff's posse. Gov. MacCorkle has one of the bombs in his possession. The plan was next to kill Wyant and then go down the river to all the works, burning, killing and destroying. The plan was frustrated by Wyant being taken to Fayetteville, thus saving Wyant's life and the lives of the soldiers. It is understood that the entire plot was disclosed by a striker, who could not bear the weight of it on his mind. It is known how Adkins was killed, who fired the shot, and every thing. A man whose name is not known now and of whom no mention has yet been made in the press, lies buried on the ridge above the tipple, shot to death by the sheriff's posse in the tipple. A tremendous excitement is raging among the strikers to know who "peached" on them and an attempt will be made to catch him. If found his life won't be worth a penny.

COATED WITH TONS OF ICE.

Narrow Escape of a Fishing Schooner —Two of the Crew Lost.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 6.—The fishing schooner Carrie W. Babson, just arrived from Newfoundland by way of St. Pierre, Miq., reports an exceedingly hard passage, with extreme cold and gales, and the loss of two of her crew—Hugh McLoud, 24 years old, unmarried, native of Gloucester, and Hugh McInnis, 22 years old, unmarried, a native of Gloucester and a resident of Newfoundland. The Babson left St. Pierre Feb. 23 and soon afterward the thermometer began to fall rapidly. About noon Saturday, while a wholesale breeze was blowing from the northeast, the vessel began to make ice rapidly. The thermometer reached 25 degrees below zero, and there it remained. The crew were kept busy breaking off the ice, but by Sunday morning the coating over the craft had become so heavy that in the high sea running, it threatened actually to roll her over. The decks were full, and a solid mass a number of feet thick had formed from the water line up to the top of the rail. The weight of the ice on everything where it could form was so great that the wire stays running from the bowsprit were started and the end of the jibboom was broken off by the strain, and the tons of weight added to the vessel above her centre of buoyancy made her roll in a manner that threatened to founder her. It was decided to run for the south.

About 2 o'clock Sunday, while some of her crew were engaged in breaking ice from the leeward bulwarks, McLoud and McInnis slipped at a sudden lurch of the vessel and went overboard. All efforts to save the men were vain.

On Monday morning the Babson got into the northern edge of the gulf stream and was saved.

Refuse to Accept a Reduction.

LEBANON, Pa., March 6.—The puddlers and helpers at the Lebanon Bolt and Nut works, Light's Rolling mill, West End Rolling mill and the East Lebanon Rolling mill refused to accept the proposed reduction in their wages and in consequence nearly every department of these plants are idle. The refusal to accept the reduction seems to be general and extends to all the mills in the city. The Lebanon Boiler Foundry and Machine works closed down at noon, the proprietors claiming that they were unable to continue because of the trouble in the local mills. Further developments are soon expected.

An Employers Strange Absence.

PATERSON, N. J., March 6.—George Moriot, owner of an extensive silk dyeing works in this city, disappeared from his home on Saturday, and has not been seen or heard from since. He left here at 12 o'clock on an Erie train for New York. An investigation reveals that Mr. Moriot collected nearly $4,000 Saturday forenoon. He did not inform his wife that he was going to New York, a circumstance which has caused her alarm. His employes have not received their salaries for last week.

Another Blue Law Measure.

ALBANY, March 6.—In the assembly Mr. Brownwell has introduced a bill amending the penal code regarding public traffic by prohibiting all manner of public selling of any property upon Sunday, except that articles of food may be supplied before 10 a. m., and except also that meals may be sold to be eaten on the premises, and sold or served elsewhere by caterers; and medicines and surgical appliances may be sold in a quiet manner at any time of day.

Connecticut Baseball League.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 6.—The managers of the proposed new Connecticut state baseball league have decided to call a meeting of interested parties at Meriden on March 14. Plans are being made to have a league formed consisting of eight clubs located in New Haven, Bridgeport, Meriden, New Britain, Waterbury, Winsted, Hartford and New London.

Jersey's Republican Senate.

TRENTON, N. J., March 6.—The republican senate was in session only a few minutes last night. It passed several bills, the only one of importance being the act appropriating $5,000 for the current expenses of the bureau of local statistics.

Dr. Buchanan's Case.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Arguments will be presented before the court of appeals on the first Monday in April in the case of Dr. Buchanan, now under sentence of death for the murder of his wife.

That balky black horse has no business on the force of fire-fighters.

It 's too bad Mr. McCutchen won't make that magnificent run which the people had mapped out for him, but there 's nothing the matter with H. O. Hance.

The office of tax assessor in the Borough ought to be filled by a man familiar with real estate values. Such a man is Charles H. Lyman, the Democratic candidate.

Who says the Republican party is a friend of the old soldiers? The only councilman to argue and vote last night in favor of the G. A. R. Memorial Day appropriation was the Lone Star Democrat.

The Elizabeth Herald is quite right when it says that the opinion that James E. Martine does not want and would not accept the lay judgeship appears to pretty well express the idea of the party in this county. He is reserved for greater things, and greater things are reserved for him.

Hiram O. Hance, Democratic candidate for Mayor of North Plainfield, is an old resident of Somerset County and for the past four years has had an office in The Daily Press Building. Mr. Hance studied law in the office of James J. Bergen, ex-Speaker of the House of Assembly, Somerville, and has resided at the corner of Grand street and Grandview avenue for some time. Mr. Hance represents the conservative element in the party, and his qualifications are of the best. With Mr. Hance, a competent lawyer, as Mayor of the Borough, there would be no necessity of the employment of a corporation counsel. Courteous and dignified, he would be a good representative to succeed the present incumbent, William L Saunders.

A NEW HIGH SCHOOL.

IT IS TO BE A BEAUTY, ON THE WADSWORTH SITE.

Probably of Stone, and May Cost $75,000—Architects from Abroad to Compete with Local Designers in Perfecting Plainfield Plans.

The chief work of the Board of Education last night was the consideration of the project to erect a new High School building. The Board decided that the need for a new school was urgent, and the President appointed a committee, consisting of Messrs. Lovell, Finch and Lounsbury, to confer with architects and secure plans.

The site of the new school will be on the Wadsworth property. The building is to be equal to college buildings in style and facilities, and not in any way a detriment to the neighborhood. It will doubtless cost double the price of any other school building in Plainfield, and is likely to reach $75,000. The exterior may be of stone. While the structure will not be as elaborate as the high schools of other towns of the size of Plainfield, it will still be an ornament and source of pride.

The Committee on Resolutions reported to the Board that the memorial to George H. Babcock has been handsomely embossed, bound in black seal, and presented to the widow. The committee was thanked and discharged.

Report being made that insects infested the stuffed birds in the High School Museum, Superintendent Maxson was instructed to have the birds disinfected.

In response to the inquiry of the Board concerning the responsibility of the corporation for damages because of the recent theft of a coat from the cloak room, Counselor Craig A. Marsh gave opinion based on decisions that the loser by such theft could not recover from the Board. It was reported that the Plainfield schools were particularly careful to guard the cloak rooms.

A request was prepared to be sent to the Mayor asking him to appoint some of the policemen as truant officers to look after the young ones who play hookey.

Because of the crowded condition of primary classes in the Washington and Franklin schools, Superintendent Maxson was authorized to have the classes divided—one-half to have only morning session, the other half only afternoon.

BY THE WAY.

—A savage dog fight occurred on East Fourth street Saturday afternoon.

—And now the dust-choked and dust-blinded people clamor for the watering-cart.

—Frank P. Storrs of Oxford place is not the Frank Storrs who was arrested a few days ago.

—A great and beautiful curiosity is the double calla lily on one of L. W. Randolph's counters.

—The death in Canada March 1 of the celebrated railroad dog "Oney" recalls the fact that he was expected to reach Plainfield this week.

—After the central chandelier in Music Hall was lighted last night it was found that gas escaped so that the chandelier had to be cut off altogether.

—The sociable announced to be held in the Friends Meeting-House to-morrow evening, has been postponed to a date which will be announced later.

—The pleasure of the large crowd which gathered at the Madison avenue fire yesterday afternoon was materially increased by a dog fight and frequent shower baths.

—The three big stores in one, soon to be occupied in the Babcock Building by Seely Edsall, are now receiving a white coat on the walls. The report that his new stores will be dark in the centre is untrue. There are windows in the rear and on both sides, and a large skylight overhead.

Many are waiting expectantly to hear Miss Nahar and her concert company Thursday evening at 8:15 in Bethel Chapel. The Grand Rapids Democrat says: "The company is an excellent one, and deserves a liberal patronage." "No better company has been heard in this city for a long time"—adds the Xenia Gazette.

—Levi Hetfield while on a tour of inspection of the new Babcock Building on West Front street, this morning, came near being injured by a brick falling from a wheelbarrow of rubbish which a workman was wheeling in an upper story. The brick struck his hat and glanced off. He wishes to warn all who may visit the building to be careful lest they meet with a more serious accident than he.

—A new enterprise for Plainfield, and one eminently deserving of full patronage, is that of John J. Shotwell, 221 Park avenue, Daily Press Building, where he supplies wood mantels, tiles and fireplaces furnishings at prices lower than New York trade. He has several fine design on hand already set up with tiling. A distinctive feature of his methods is that he charges a purchaser only for the amount of tiling actually used.

—A large audience laughed at the fun and applauded the melody in "Monte Carlo", in Music Hall, last night. The Gorman Bros. were good; George Wilson, America's best minstrel, maintained his reputation and made many new Plainfield friends; Délaur and Debrimonte gave some excellent grand opera; and Miss Marie Louise Clayton shone out from among the other feminine roles as one of the most pretty, graceful and modest young women who have ever gladdened the hearts of local theatregoers.

The American Catarrh Cure

Is the result of twenty-six years' study and treatment of the disease. One bottle convinces the most skeptical. It is always ready for use, needing neither douche nor atomizer. It restores the hearing, cures the hawking cough and expectorating, removes the headache and nose bleeding, increases the appetite, produces sound sleep, invigorates the whole system and increases the vitality. Prepared only by W. B. Jones, M. D., No. 1336 South Eighth street, Philadelphia. For sale by I. W. Randolph 21 West Front street Price $1

MR. M'CUTCHEN WON'T RUN.

He Sends a Letter of Positive Declination to the Democratic Committee.

The following letter of declination has been received from S. St. J. McCutchen by the North Plainfield Democratic Committee:

NORTH PLAINFIELD, March 3, 1894.

Mr. William L. Saunders and others, Committee:

GENTLEMEN:—You have been kind enough to inform me that I have received the nomination for Mayor of North Plainfield by the caucus of Democratic voters of the borough.

It is idle for me to attempt to conceal the gratification I feel at being so honored.

I have given the matter the careful consideration it demands and concluded that it is my duty to decline the nomination.

I am already engaged in responsible public service in a department of municipal life as important as any other; in it my two years experience has, I think, better equipped me for the duties of the position; I have two years of an unexpired term before me, and I should be doing less than my duty, if I retired, now, from an office to which I have been appointed.

I am, very gratefully,
S. ST. J. MCCUTCHEN.

McCall Officers.

Today's annual meeting of the McCall Auxiliary was well attended and much interest was shown in the work. Reports were read by the Secretary and the Treasurer. Touching allusion was made to the death and beautiful life of Dr. McCall and a report was given of Rev. Mr. Greig's address in the Crescent Avenue Chapel in February. Letters from the field were read and reference made to Mrs. LeGay of Paris, who was instrumental in founding the Plainfield auxiliary.

The following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Lawrence Myers.
Secretary—Miss Sadie Hunter.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. Foster.

Vice-presidents were chosen representing the different denominations in Plainfield.

—A seal captured off Long Island is on exhibition in D. W. Rogers's fish market on West Second street.

—Moore Baker sold to the Eden Musee yesterday the bed room furniture to be used in the reproduction of the Franklin Park murder scene.

—Use the best paper first and take enough space to make the ad effective; use all you profitably can in that paper before you consider any other. One good ad beats two poor ones. Two short poles are not as good as one long one when you're after persimmons. The biggest circulation in Plainfield is that of The Daily Press.

UNAPPROACHABLE in every way—Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. In everything that makes one medicine better than another, these little Pellets stand first. They don't seem like medicine, to tell the truth. They're so small and so pleasant to take, and their action and effects are so natural.

Dullness, drowsiness, weariness, loss of appetite, furred tongue, frequent headaches with or without dizziness, chilly sensations, and occasional nausea show you that you need Dr. Pierce's Pellets. That is Biliousness. And in Biliousness, as well as every disorder of the stomach and bowels, they'll give you a lasting cure.

SCRUB and WASH as you will, it is not easy to keep the hands smooth and white in winter time. In fact, the more you scrub and wash, the rougher seems the skin, and you find that the best of soap fails to whiten it. Now if, after washing, you will moisten your hands with LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE, the effect will be to soften and whiten the skin, even in the worst weather. Used by hundreds of the "best people" in Plainfield. Originated and sold only by H. P. REYNOLDS, Pharmacist, Park and North avenues.

A Matter of Moonshine.

When people advertise bargains don't you ever stop to think that the bargains they speak of may be for the seller and not for the buyer? Many of the great offerings are but a delusive mixture of moonshine, and it may do for once, but folks are not hankering after it for a steady diet.

Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleansing and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

ROUTINE PROCEEDINGS OF THE MARCH SESSION.

Bids Considered for Fire Hose, Crushed Stone and Flagging—G. A. R. Appropriation Refused, in Spite of Democratic Protest—An Amendment Adopted to Liquor License Regulations.

At the meeting of the Common Council last evening all the councilmen were present. Petitions and bills were received as usual and bids for hose, stones and flagging were offered. City Clerk MacMurray read the minutes and approval was given.

E. C. Mulford and others petitioned for the placing of a crosswalk at the northeast corner of Second and Richmond streets. David Martin and other residents of East Third street asked for a walk across that street at the corner of Washington street, as there was none between Watchung avenue and Richmond street. Caleb Dickinson of Fifth street and others made a request for a walk on Sycamore street north of Fifth. The petitions were referred to the Street Committee.

A petition was received from the Plainfield Beef Company asking permission to build an extension to their building at 254 East Third street, to be built of brick and stone and to be roofed with slate. The matter was given to the Fire and Buildings Committee for consideration.

Similar action was taken in regard to the application of Loomis & Rice, who wished to move a two-story frame building from its present position on East Second street to the corner of Church and Second streets.

The same committee was instructed to report on the petition of Charles Giese, who asked for the right to erect two two-story frame dwellings on the southwest side of Elm place.

George W. Moore, as Secretary and Treasurer of the Memorial Detail appointed by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., petitioned the Council for an appropriation of $100 with which to observe Memorial Day. The request was referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Frazee presented a bid from Carney Brothers for the 2,000 feet of fire hose to be purchased. Mr. Erickson objected to its reception and asked for a reading o the call. It provided that bids should be in the hands of the City Clerk by yesterday noon. In response to Councilman Frazee's question, Clerk MacMurray said that the advertisement had not been published in the local papers, but in The Fireman's Herald and in Fire and Water.

Frank A. Barnaby applied for a hydrant at the corner of Plainfield and Sherman avenues, near his new place. He wrote that there was no hydrant nor box within three-quarters of a mile from the house. He expected to take up his residence there in the spring and had spent considerable money in improvements. He had paid the fire tax for several years without securing adequate protection. The petition was referred to the Fire and Buildings Committee.

The Mayor's appointments of three special policemen—Henry B. Pugh, Dennis Carney and Wm. M. Robinson—were confirmed.

The Collector's report showed that $2,136.52 in city taxes had been collected, and in school taxes with interest, $690.88. Assessments collected amounted to $93.97. The Treasurer reported a balance on hand of $14,338.49.

Mr. Dumont, of the Finance Committee, presented a number of bills which the Auditing Committee were instructed to examine. He said there had been paid $99 in notes during months. In view of the financial condition of the city the Committee did not feel justified in favoring an appropriation of $100 for Memorial Day. Mr. Frazee appealed for $50 for the purpose if the city could not afford $100. Mr. Dumont said there was not a dollar of city money available. Mr. Frazee's amendment that $50 be appropriated was not seconded, and he alone voted against the refusal to give the money to the veterans.

A resolution authorizing Delinquent Tax Collector Nash to begin his work on the list of 1892 was passed. On Mr. Dumont's request the chairmen of the different committees were instructed to prepare before March 15 estimates of the amount they would need during the coming year in their departments.

Mr. Fisk said he had been authorized at the last meeting of the Council to obtain bids for the construction of crosswalks up to Feb. 27. He had bids from John H. Thickstun, Joseph T. Vail and P. T. B. Nevius. Mr. Thickstun's estimates, 35 cents per lineal foot for walks two feet in width, and 99 cents for double width, was the lowest, and the Mayor and City Clerk were authorized to sign a contract with him.

Bids on crushed stone were received from John G. Cook, A. I. & N. B. Smalley and Ball & Hetfield. The bid of Messrs. Smalley, 80 cents per ton for 2½ inch stone, was accepted.

On the grading of Grant avenue from Front to Fourth streets, 1,400 feet, but one bid, of $728, had been made, and as that was above the limit authorized to be expended, the matter was laid on the table, pending an examination by the Street Commissioner.

Estimates on the 2,000 feet of 2½ inch fire hose to be purchased were received from the Revere Rubber Co., New York Belting & Packing Co., New Jersey Car Spring & Rubber Co., Cornelius Callahan Co., Boston Woven Hose and Rubber Co., Eureka Fire Hose Co., Empire Rubber Co., and the Mineralized Rubber Co. The bids varied from 50 cents to $1 per foot and were accompanied with long descriptions, guarantees of strength and freedom from mildew, special discounts and premiums with certain lengths. After being read they were referred to the Fire and Buildings Committee.

Mr. Fisk offered a resolution amending the liquor license ordinance to make it necessary for every freeholder signing an application to make affidavit to his residence, and to particulars of land owned and whence obtained. It was adopted unanimously on the second reading.

The bond of V. W. Nash, Delinquent Tax Collector, was approved by the Finance Committee and accepted. The justice's bond of William A. Newcorn was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

The hack licenses were granted.

On motion of Mr. Frazee the bills reported were ordered paid.

The Council was adjourned for two weeks.

NOTHING DONE TOWARDS EXTENSION.

An Eclipse of Virtue.

"An Eclipse of Virtue", by Champion Bissell, is the striking title of a novel contained in the March number of "Tales From Town Topics." A rather startling exposition of the mysterious power of love is made in this story. We find a beautiful young widow of great fortune rejecting to some extent the devotion of an ardent young lover. She philosophizes over the unwisdom of marrying him, although she loves him devotedly, and then of a sudden she literally kidnaps him, by drugging him and carrying him away alone with her on a yacht. Their life together is ideal but fatal, and it only requires the appearance of a wild little native of SanDomingo to rob the widow of her cavalier. The little Cuban girl is the means of bringing the story to a tragic climax, and the reader is made to see the possible despair that results from woman's depravity and man's deceit. The story is written in a brisk and daring style, and is accompanied by an unusually bright collection of narratives, poems and witticisms culled from the pages of Town Topics, Town Topics Publishing Co., 21 West Twenty-third street, New York City.

H. C. Hance for Mayor.

When the Committee on Vacancies appointed at the Democratic borough primary last week found that Mr. McCutchen would not accept, they offered the nomination to Col. John F. Wilson, one of the borough's largest taxpayers, who declined for the reason that he was a colonel in the Confederate Army. The committee then had a choice of several influential citizens and decided on Hiram O. Hance.

BLACK HORSE BALKED.

AND LADDER TRUCK SANK HUB-DEEP INTO MUD.

Consequent Vexatious Delay Gave a Madison Avenue Fire Headway, and What Should Have Been Easily Handled Had to Be Drowned Out.

A fire difficult to fight made it necessary to flood a Madison avenue residence yesterday afternoon.

About 5:30 the family of Fred. C. Adams, living at 311 Madison avenue, found flames issuing from the floor in an upper room on the north side of their two-story and attic frame cottage. The occupants attempted to put the flames out themselves, but without success; and at 5:40 an alarm was sent in from Box 41 by Frank Schuck.

The hose wagons made quick runs, but the truck did not reach the fire until 6:05. In leaving the fire department headquarters the front wheels sank hubdeep in the soft earth above a main of the Water Company and the truck was nearly overturned. Councilman Bird secured George Eickert's team and after much difficulty the apparatus was hauled out and started for the fire. The balky black horse also caused trouble.

Meanwhile the firemen had been hampered by the absence of the ladders and tools carried on the truck. The second-story and the garret were filled with smoke, the flames having a flue with a good draft made by an angle in the partitions meeting at the top of the stairs. Extinguishers were used, but it was found that water was needed. Two lines of hose were run from the hydrant at the corner of Third street and the upper floors drenched. The garret could not be reached until the arrival of the truck, as the two ladders secured from Spicer & Hubbard's mill were not available.

The fire started from an unknown cause. Mr. Adams said that the rats, which overrun the place, were responsible for it. A cat had been housed in the cellar and the rats driven upstairs. A similar fire occurred in the house several years ago, when it was occupied by E. P. Williams.

The damage to the furniture, which was insured, was principally wrought by water. The house was damaged to the extent of $250, floor beams and studding being burned away. It is the property of C. C. Dawson of Toledo, O., and was insured.

Salvationists Surprised.

After the soldiers meeting in Salvation Army Hall, last evening, a number of the workers gave Capt. Mimms and Lieut. Banker a surprise party to which the soldiers were invited. A very pleasant time was spent. At 11 refreshments were served. At 1 the party broke up all having thoroughly enjoyed the good things as well as an intellectual feast. Among those present who are engaged in Salvation Army work in the hall were Bro. Thos. C. Price, B. Mair and sister, Bro. and Mrs. Mair, Bro. and Mrs. Van Horn, Bro. and Mrs. G. H. VanNest, Bro. J. Flack, Sister Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. George Belcher, and others.

They Want Less Mud.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—If the members of the City Council would take a walk on West Second street from New to Liberty street, perhaps they would reconsider their vote to have no more street macadamized. Last summer the street was graded, and the dressing of crushed stone was carted away, leaving only the mud. In a street where there is so much travel the authorities ought to give us at least as good a road as we had last year. A RESIDENT.

ANNAPOLIS CELEBRATES.

Yesterday Was Her Bi-Centennial as a Capital.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 6.—The "Athens of America," as this city was called while the colonial government flourished, yesterday celebrated its bi-centennial as the seat of state government. Two hundred years ago the capital of the state was removed from St. Marys to Annapolis. The city of St. Marys was the oldest town in the colony of Maryland—founded in 1634. In 60 years there were 60 houses erected. In Annapolis the first play-house in America was built. It passed certain other claims to distinction, but its growth has been in keeping with St. Marys record. In 1845 Annapolis had, after nearly 200 years of growth, increased to 3,000 inhabitants. It now has about 7,000 inhabitants exclusive of the naval academy contingent. These thousands, along with other thousands from all parts of Maryland, Washington and other sections, participated in the celebration. The city was in holiday attire and the stars and stripes were waving everywhere. In the afternoon a parade formed in three divisions, comprising city officers, clergy, legislative committees, public school children, college cadets, United States marines, secret societies, firemen and historical and patriotic societies and marched through the streets. At 4 o'clock, exercises under direction of St. John's college were given at the Masonic opera house. Historical addresses were interspersed with national music. Last night Thomas S. Baer presided over the meeting on the part of the city and state in the hall of the house of delegates. The day of pleasure concluded with a masquerade parade, in which Lord Baltimore and other colonial characters appeared, and with a charity ball at the assembly rooms.

During the masquerade parade in the evening two horses collided head to head with such force that both were instantly killed. The riders were seriously injured.

MAINE'S MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

Returns From a Number of Cities and Towns.

PORTLAND, Me., March 6.—Municipal elections were held in many cities in Maine yesterday.

In this city the democrats made no fight in any ward, conceding a republican victory in advance. Mayor Baxter was re-elected by 1,946 plurality and 1,251 majority over all, the largest that has been thrown in late years. The republicans have elected five out of seven aldermen and fifteen out of twenty-one common councilmen.

In Deering, Mayor Sawyer, democrat, was re-elected by 35 plurality. The republicans have elected members of the city council in all seven wards, giving them a solid city government, except mayor.

In Bath, James W. Wakefield, republican, was elected mayor against John O. Shaw, citizens, and the republicans will control both boards.

In Westbrook, the republicans had a victory, re-electing their mayor, the city clerk and eleven out of thirteen aldermen.

At Waterville the republicans elect C. Knauff mayor by 298 majority over C. H. Redington. The republicans carried five of seven wards.

At Ellsworth returns give Nehemah H. Higgins (dem.) a majority of two for mayor over Aiken (rep.). The republicans elected four of five aldermen, retaining control of the board. Aiken will demand a recount.

At Lewiston the republicans elected their mayor and carried five of the seven wards.

At Auburn, Smith (rep.) is elected mayor by a large majority and the aldermen are unanimously republicans.

At Eastport, Charles W. Hume (rep.) was elected mayor, the democrats making no nomination.

At Gardiner, Hon. O. B. Clason (rep.) was elected mayor, with no opposition.

Opposing the Nun Teachers.

PITTSBURG, March 6.—A storm is brewing in the central board of education over the granting of teachers' certificates to the nuns elected to teach in the 34 h ward (Riverside) public school. Those of the board opposed to the innovation have sought legal advice and propose to combat the issue when the committee appointed to pass on the examination of the sisters of charity files its report on the 13th inst. State Councilor W. T. Kerr, of the Junior Order United American Mechanics, authorized the statement this morning that he has definitely decided to make a legal test case of the right of nuns to wear their religious habit while acting as public school teachers.

Northwestern Wheat Supply.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 6.—The Northwestern Miller reports the stock of wheat in private elevators of Minneapolis at 932,000 bushels, a decline from last week of 153,000 bushels. The Market Record estimates the stock in country elevators of Minnesota and the two Dakotas at 5,453,000 bushels, a decrease of 242,000. The northwestern stock is thus reduced 498,496 bushels for the week, it now aggregating 29,505,062.

Three Young Sisters Religious Crazed.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., March 6.—Ellen, Maria and Mary, the handsome, well educated and refined young daughters of Joseph Schenk, a wealthy resident of Sanborn, Niagara county, N. Y., were taken violently insane last Saturday and are still in that condition. They were put into strait jackets and will have to be sent to an asylum. Religious enthusiasm is the supposed cause of their troubles.

On Eight-Hours Time.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., March 6.—The extensive locomotive shops of the New York, Lake Erie & Western railroad at this point have been placed on eight-hours time, and the gangs have been divided, each gang working every alternate day.

Sued for Breach of Promise.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 6.—Edgar Vosburgh, a young farmer of Red Hook, has been sued by Mamie Lown for $25,000 for breach of promise and betrayal. The plaintiff is a domestic.

Alarmed Over a Series of Fires.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., March 6.—The residents of Toms River are becoming alarmed over a series of fires, three of which have occurred within a few weeks, and two within three days.

Another Investigation Begun.

ALBANY, March 6.—A sub-committee of the finance and ways and means committee met yesterday afternoon and began the investigation of the state commission.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.
Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medicel College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

Stole a Two-Story House.

NEW YORK, March 6.—A Chicago special says that one of the most startling cases in that city recently was the act of a Chicago man, who stole another man's two-story house, carried it 14 blocks, across railroad tracks and fashionable avenues, and then sold it to another individual.

Big Mining Scheme.

BOZEMAN, Mont., March 6.—Several gold, silver, copper, and iron mines have just been purchased by George W. Ballou, who represents a syndicate of New York capitalists. The price paid was $1,000,000. The mines will be extensively developed and large concentrating works erected.

Clara Freund Cannot Recover.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 6.—Clara Freund, the 15-year-old girl who was shot at her parents' home yesterday afternoon by Fritze Nolte, a Swede sailor, 42 years old, who was an occasional boarder at the home of the Freund home, was still unconscious this morning and it is said cannot recover. It now appears that Nolte's apparent affection for the girl was not of a moral nature and it was because he believed she had informed her parents of his conduct that he shot her and then killed himself.

The Alleged Carnegie Conspiracy.

PITTSBURG, March 6.—The officials of the Carnegie Steel company positively refuse to make any statement concerning the charges that workmen were implicated in a conspiracy against the corporation. There can be little doubt, however, that the officials will in a few days make a public statement. It is believed that the officials of the Carnegie Steel company are waiting to hear from Mr. Carnegie. When his advice has been received it is believed that further sensational developments will be forthcoming.

Will Remain Away to Avoid Harm.

BOSTON, March 6.—It has been decided by the friends and counsel of Ferdinand de Filippo, the Italian banker, who is now in Italy, that his affairs would better be settled in the insolvency court, and a petition to that effect will be filed. Mr. de Filippo will not return to this country until after a complete settlement has been made, for it is believed that should he return before the claims of the Italian customers of his bank are satisfied he would be done personal harm, perhaps murdered.

GEMS IN VERSE.

Among the Martyrs.

Enroll him among the martyrs whose patient feet have trod,
Over stormy paths and weary, the road that leads to God!

Strength in his soul was not wanting, though strength of frame was small;
With not a fear or murmur he answered the upward call.

The thirst for worldly honors made no leg-gards of his feet,
Through clouds that in the future hung the call had sounded sweet.

So weary was he that he lay his burden gladly down,
And went to gain his promised rest, his mansion and his crown.

A warrior in life's struggle and a hero in the field,
Whose heart was full of mercy, and whose voice could comfort yield.

His feet will never tread again the weary path they trod;
Enroll him among the martyrs now gone to be with God!

He writes familiarly about
The fairy fete, the radiant rout,
And ladies' luncheons, blue or pink,
Color his ever flowing ink.
You'd think no function of the swim
Could be successful without him,
Although perhaps his glowing lines
Were writ in the cellar where he dines.

The houses of the millionaires
He knows from roof to cellar stairs.
To read his shreads 'twould seem that he Dropped often in familiarly
To lunch or dine; yet, sooth to say,
He's only crossed the area way
To interview the butler or
A kitchen maid behind the door.

The clubs to him are open books.
He knows their most familiar nooks
And all the great celebrities
Who haunt these palaces of ease.
On etiquette and what to wear
He can advise a millionaire,
The while he clothes himself complete
In secondhands from a back street.

As necromancers of the east
Can conjure (so I've heard at least)
Within a drop of ink strange sights
And wondrous visions of delights,
So in his pot of ink he sees
The golden world of luxuries,
And for the time may e'en forget
His hall room rent's not paid for yet.

If You Love Me.

If you love me, tell me not.
Let me read it in your thought;
Let me feel it in the way
That you say me yea and nay.

Let me see it in your eye
When you greet or pass me by;
Let me hear it in the tone
Meant for me, and me alone.

If you love me, there will be Something only I shall see.
Meet or miss me, stay or go,
If you love me, I shall know.

Something in your tone will tell,
"Dear, I love you; love you well;"
Something in your eyes will shine
Fairer when they look in mine.

In your mien some touch of grace,
Some swift smile upon your face
While you speak not, will betray
What your lips could scarcely say.

In your speech some silver word,
Tuning into sweet accord
All your bluntness, will reveal,
Unaware, the love you feel.

If you love me, then, I pray,
Tell me not, but day by day
Let love silent on me rise,
Like the sun in summer skies.

—Luella Clark.

What Was His Creed?

His charity was like the snow—
Soft, white and silent in its fall—
Not like the noisy winds that blow
From shivering trees the leaves—a pall
For flower and weed
Drooping below.
"What was his creed?"
The poor may know.

He had faith in loaves of bread
For hungry people, young and old;
Hope he inspired; kind words he said
To those he sheltered from the cold.
For we should feed
As well as pray.
"What was his creed?"
I cannot say.

In words he did not put his trust;
His faith in words he never writ;
He loved to share his cup and crust
With all mankind who needed it.
In time of need
A friend was he.
"What was his creed?"
He told not me.

He put his trust in heaven, and he Worked well with hand and head,
And work he gave to charity
Sweetened his sleep and daily bread.
Let us take heed,
For life is brief.
"What was his creed?
What his relief?"

On the Other Side.

We go our ways in life too much alone;
We hold ourselves too far from all our kind;
Too often we are dead to sigh and moan;
Too often to the weak and helpless blind;
Too often where distress and want abide
We turn and pass upon the other side.

The other side is trodden smooth, and worn
By footsteps passing idly all the day.
Where lie the bruised ones that faint and mourn
Is seldom more than an untrodden way.
Our selfish hearts are for our feet the guide—
They lead us by upon the other side.

It should be ours the oil and wine to pour
Into the bleeding wounds of stricken ones;
To take the smitten and the sick and sore,
And bear them where a stream of blessing runs.
Instead we look about—the way is wide,
And so we pass upon the other side.

Oh, friends, and brothers, gliding down the years,
Humanity is calling each and all
In tender accents, born of grief and tears!
I pray you, listen to the thrilling call.
You cannot, in your cold and selfish pride,
Pass guiltlessly by on the other side.

The Chord of Love.

It sings in all. The magic strain,
Unbidden, comes to me again.
As if an artist's subtle skill
Had touched the lute, my pulse thrill
With heartfelt joy—I do not feign.
It calls through all the hill and plain;
It murmurs in the falling rain;
Its music e'en the flowers distill—
It breathes in all.

Its harmonies through nature reign
In symphonies that will not wane;
It lisps in ripples of the rill;
It sings when all things else are still,
This rapturous chord of love's refrain—
It lives in all. —Buffalo News.

When we are gone,
The generation that comes after us
Will have far other thoughts than ours: Our ruins
Will serve to build their palaces or tombs.
They will possess the world that we think ours
And fashion it far otherwise. —Longfellow.

EVERYBODY'S FRIEND.

And Universally Beloved By All.

THE TRUEST FRIENDS ARE THOSE WHO NEVER FORSAKE US.

This May Lead You to Find One You Need and Have Never Known.

We all value a true friend, and there comes a time to all when assistance of some kind is necessary. If our health fails and we are overtaken by sickness and disease, then is the time when the needed friend comes forward to aid us.

Mrs. Alice Dyson, of 28 Hamlet st., Eall River, Mass., knows the value of such a friend, for one came to her when she was sick and almost dying and made her a strong, well woman. She writes the following letter about it:

"I suffered for five years with nervous prostration in its severest form. I had loss of memory, weak heart, causing extreme palpitation, was constantly tired and obliged to lie down much of the time. I had to be helped up and down stairs for two years. I had loss of appetite and was terribly distressed by what little food I could eat.

"I was troubled with sleeplessness, not being able to get but about two hours rest at night. I felt too tired to breathe, was white as a sheet and was given up twice for dying.

MRS. ALICE DYSON.

"I got down to 120 pounds in weight when I should have weighed 180 pounds. I was unconscious at one time for 5 days. I finally commenced the use of Dr. Greens Nervura blood and nerve remedy and immediately began to improve.

"I had for some time been weak, tired and run down. My usual good health was leaving me. I continued to grow worse and was finally taken with typhoid fever. Not recovering from this as rapidly as I should, and feeling that my general helth needed building up, I made up my mind to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

What greater prize could the world contain than a medicine which can cure such suffering as that? Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is constantly performing the most wonderful cures all over the land.

If you are suffering from any form of nervous or chronic disease, are weak and debilitated, if you have kidney or liver complaint, take this wonderful medicine and you will be restored to health. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

The spring is the best and easiest time to cure disease. It is purely vegetable and harmless. Its discoverer is Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, the well-known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all free of charge, personally or by letter.

TROY'S BLOODY DAY

Excitement Intense Over the Election Murder and Disorders.

BIG RECORD OF CRIME

Rumor of a Mass Meeting This Evening—"Bat" Shea Said to Have Shot Ross While the Latter Was on the Ground, Having Been Knocked Down With a Club—Shea to Be Given a Hearing To-day—His Wound Not Serious—The Murdered Man's Brother's Condition Critical—Molloy, Democrat, Elected Mayor By a Plurality of 528—Contest on the Grounds of Fraud Probable

TROY, March 7.—"Bat" Shea, the man accused of murdering Robert Ross at the third district voting booth of the 13th ward and who was arrested last night, will be given a hearing to-day. It is claimed that an eye-witness will testify that Shea walked up to Ross and, holding a revolver within a few inches of Ross' head, fired, while the victim's face was on the ground after being knocked down with a club.

It is rumored this morning that a mass meeting will be called, probably for to-night, that public sentiment may be expressed concerning the horrible affair.

Never has Troy witnessed a more exciting municipal election. There were scenes of disorder at many of the polling places, but the outrageous disregard of the law reached its height at noon, when one young republican was murdered and another was seriously wounded with a bullet in his head. Until late into the night the streets were crowded with excited throngs and the excitement is still at fever heat to-day.

Two of the Victims.

Robert and William Ross, the victims, were among the citizens who gathered at the polls in the third district of the 13th ward in the interest of certain candidates. The voting had been spirited at this district, but not until the appearance of a gang of alleged repeaters was there a ripple of excitement. A man, who it is claimed had no right to cast a vote, presented himself at the polls and demanded ballots. The republicans who challenged him were ejected and the applicant was afterward pushed into the street by other republicans.

Bullets Whizzed Through the Air.

Then bullets flew through the air and four men were struck. The alleged aggressors, at the head of whom were "Bat" Shea, John McGough and "Jerry" Cleary, drew pistols, and so did others in the crowd. Bystanders say that Robert Ross was knocked down with a club and while he was lying with his face down the assassin sent a bullet into his brain, causing almost instant death. Another who fell was William Ross, the murdered man's brother. He was shot in the neck and his condition is critical. "Bat" Shea was slightly wounded, a bullet having caused a scalp wound. A fourth man, John McGough, was also shot. Shea was taken to a saloon where his injuries were dressed.

Locked Up a Respected Citizen.

John H. Boland, a prominent and respected citizen was arrested late in the afternoon on a charge of being implicated. Justice Fursman refused to take bail and Boland was remanded to jail. It is claimed that Boland's arrest is an effort to shift the responsibility from those on whom it rightly belongs. Before surrendering himself to the police, Boland made the following statement to the United Press reporter:

"Impressed with the duty of every citizen to do his all toward securing an honest vote and a fair count, and wishing to see the law upheld, I was at the polling place in my district all morning. During the morning, word came that the most flagrant outrages were being enacted in the first and second districts of the ward.

Repeaters Had Their Own Way.

"Repeaters were said to be operating in these districts almost without molestation, and when the democratic heelers began to arrive the respectable element was on the alert to prevent fraud.

"At noon, Shea, John McGough, Jerry Cleary and one or two others whom I do not know went into the polling place with a repeater, and a repeater watcher followed them into the polling place and made a protest against the fellow voting. McGough, Shea and the other followers of their crowd forced the watcher and crowd back.

Ross Murdered.

McGough drew a revolver and ordered the crowd to stand back. Shea and Cleary did the same and all three at once began firing. Robert Ross was struck under the ear. He never uttered a word after he was shot, apparently being paralyzed by the ball. He was picked up and carried into a residence near by, but expired before medical aid could be procured.

"William Ross, seeing that his brother had been prostrated by a bullet, rushed to his rescue. Before he could reach his brother's side, he, too, was shot in the head from behind and fell to the ground.

Dying in His Brother's Arms

"John Ross, another brother, rushed to the rescue, and it was as heartrending a sight as I ever saw to see the three brothers there in the scene. John Ross was holding his dying brother's head and moaned: 'Look at my dying brother's life blood,' as the vital strength of Robert Ross oozed from the wound in his head, dyeing his brother's hands and the ground a bright crimson.

McGough Started the Trouble.

"The trouble originated and the fight was precipitated by John McGough, who is a democratic heeler, drawing his revolver and ordering the crowd to stand back, and the firing by Shea and Cleary, who joined McGough. The firing was fast and furious for a few moments, and it is a wonder that others were not injured. After the shooting, McGough went over toward North Fourth street and disappeared through a gangway leading to that street from the vacant lot where the shooting took place. After McGough disappeared through the gangway all track of him was lost. I saw McGough empty his revolver into the crowd, and believing that he had killed my friend, Ross, I followed him with others and endeavored to effect his capture. I cannot say what became of McGough, the excite was so great."

Says It Was Deliberate Murder.

John Ross said to a reporter this morning: "There is really no statement to make. There were men there who saw the whole affair. It was murder—deliberate murder—and it was premeditated. Only a short time before the shooting this man Shea struck my brother full in the face. I dragged my brother away, but I did not think then that there would be shooting."

There were five candidates for mayor, but interest centered in the contest between Mayor Whelan (ind. dem.), whom the republicans had endorsed, and Francis J. Molloy, the choice of the regular democracy and the adherents of United States Senator Murphy. Returns from all districts show Molloy's plurality to be 528. It is likely that a contest will be made on the grounds of fraud.

Fights were general and numerous throughout the day and besides the larger and more serious disturbances above recorded, it is said one or two persons were severely stabbed.

RECOVERED HER NURSING BABE

The Father Forced By the Courts to Temporarily Surrender It.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 7.—There was a pathetic scene in the common pleas court before Judge Hotchkiss yesterday. John E. Buckley, an Ansonia letter carrier, was compelled to bring in his 11-months-old baby on a writ of habeas corpus to show why the child, which is still nursing, should not be given to its mother. Mrs. Buckley, who is a handsome refined young woman, was in court also. She had been compelled to leave her husband because of his alleged brutal treatment. He took the baby and refused to allow the mother to see it until compelled to by the court. Buckley is said to be of intemperate habits. As soon as the child saw its mother it stretched out its arms and began wailing. This brought tears to the eyes of several of the court attaches and Judge Hotchkiss immediately ordered Buckley to deliver the baby to its mother pending the hearing. The judge continued the hearing until Monday, the mother being given the custody of the child till that time.

Another Bank Also Victimized.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 7.—The check raiser who secured $1,800 on a check raised from $18 from the Merchants' National bank, Feb. 10, it is now learned visited the Second National bank on the same day and there got cashed for $1,800 a check raised from $18, by precisely the same methods employed in the case first mentioned. The second check was drawn by the First National bank of Hopkinton, R. I., S. R. Richmond cashier, upon the Second National bank of this city, and like the first, was dated Feb. 1. It was drawn in the same style as the other.

Senate Executive Session.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The executive session of the senate yesterday was confined to routine business entirely. Among the nominations confirmed, but from which the injunction of secrecy was not removed, was that of Winslow, to be collector of the port at Boston, and S. A. Mulholland, to be pension agent at Philadelphia. The following Philadelphia nominations, it is understood, have been favorably reported: John R. Read, collector of customs; P. Gray Meek, surveyor of port; J. Marshall Wright, naval officer.

Coke Ovens to Be Fired.

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 7.—Information from a prominent official of the H. C. Frick Coke company is to the effect that within two weeks nearly every coke oven in the Connellsville region will be fired up. The move will cover at least 90 per cent. of all the ovens, more than have been in operation at any time for three years past. At the lowest estimate 6,000 idle men will be given employment.

Death of Hamilton Littlefield.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., March 7.—Hamilton Littlefield, of Oswego, N. Y., is dead at the residence of his son, Captain H. B. Littlefield, at Silverton, aged 88 years. He was a prominent figure in New York state business and politics many years ago, and was one of the founders of the republican party in that state.

Train Wrecker Sentenced.

MEDIA, Pa., March 7.—Michael Burns, the discharged railroad employe who on Jan. 20 last attempted to wreck an express train on the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore railroad, near Crum Lynne, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the Eastern penitentiary.

HAD HIS MOTHER BEHEADED.

King Behanzin's Method of Sending a Message to His Dead Father.

PARIS, March 7.—A despatch from Dahomey says that King Behanzin, on the eve of his surrender, summoned his widowed mother and, after telling her of his intention to submit to the French, said he must first inform his father, and would therefore have her take him a message. Behanzin thereupon ordered that his mother be beheaded, and, smoking a pipe, calmly looked on while the attendants decapitated her.

Stamped Envelopes.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Any person who can give the necessary bond and satisfy the postmaster-general that he has the facilities for the work is entitled to bid for the contract for furnishing stamped envelopes and newspaper wrappers to the government for the four years, beginning on October 1, next. The specifications which have just been completed are slightly modified from those under which the present contract is in force. Under the last proposals the bidding on the contract was confined to those persons or firms who manufactured paper, but great pressure was brought to bear upon the postmaster-general, who has decided to throw open the doors and permit all persons to enter the contest, whether engaged in the manufacture of paper or not.

Wiman's Counsel.

MONTREAL, March 7.—Mr. Greenshields, the eminent advocate, was not as stated retained directly by Mr. Wiman to assist in his defense by General Tracy and Mr. Boardman. Mr. Greenshields was suggested to the latter by a group of wealthy friends of Mr. Wiman here, who volunteered to bear all the expenses of additional counsel because of the interest in him, and in recognition of his public services to his native country and his countrymen in the United States. Mr. Greenshields was suggested not only because of his uniform success in criminal cases, but also because he is a specialist in partnership law, having closely studied the long line of English precedents on that subject.

Great Christian Exposition.

NEW YORK, March 7.—William Morris Hayes has a plan for the celebration of the beginning of the twentieth century of the Christian era by an exposition to be held in this city during the year 1900. Mr. Hayes has in course of preparation a detailed plan embodying all the important features of the proposed celebration, which he will soon lay before the representative men of this city with a view to the organization of a committee to arrange the preliminary details. Mr. Hayes has had considerable experience in exposition work and believes if the right support is given, New York will have an exposition in 1900, which will far surpass anything of the kind that has yet been conceived.

Washington Baseball Club.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The players under contract to the Washington Baseball club will report here on Monday for in-door training and will not go south. There are twenty-six men on the team, which is about the largest number to open the season with any club in recent years. Ted Larkin, the first baseman, who was reserved from last year, will be released unconditionally, and he will accept an engagement in one of the minor leagues. Joe Mulvey of Philadelphia, has asked to come here, and he will probably be given a chance. At a meeting of the stockholders of the Washington club, Manager Schmelzs signed a contract for two years.

Only the American Flag.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 7.—A delegation representing the Irish societies waited upon Mayor Schieren and requested that the Irish flag float from the city hall on St. Patrick's day. Mr. Schieren replied that he was the mayor of all nationalities and would grant special privileges to none. He refused to consent to the flag being hoisted on the 17th.

Paris Anarchists.

PARIS, March 7.—Examining Magistrate Meyer and Judge Espinas have completed the examination of one hundred and six anarchists, comprising nearly all of the anarchists who have been arrested recently. Of the whole number examined thirty-four were held for further examination or trial and the others were released for want of evidence sufficient to justify their detention.

Fined for Refusing Vaccination.

BOSTON, March 7.—Joseph Holmes of South Boston was convicted of refusing to be vaccinated and was sentenced to pay a fine of $5. This is the first case to be prosecuted by the board of health.

New York Police Investigation.

NEW YORK, March 7. — Ex-Senator Thomas C Platt is authority for the statement that the police investigating committee will begin work next Friday.

Gov. Flower Dines Secretary Morton.

ALBANY, March 7.—Gov. Flower gave a dinner at the executive mansion last night in honor of Secretary Morton, of the United States department of agriculture. There were present besides the governor and secretary, Chief Judge Andrews of the court of appeals, Justice Herrick, Lieut.-Gov. Sheehan, Speaker Malby and Col. Williams, the governor's private secretary.

Croker's Sojourn in Texas.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 7.—A dispatch from Kerrville, on the line of the San Antonio & Arkansas Pass railroad, 75 miles north of here, states that Richard Croker and family arrived there late last night and remained till early this morning when they were driven to the ranch of John A. Morris. Hon. Bourke Cockran, of New York, has not arrived yet.

HAZING CAUSED PNEUMONIA.

Brutal Treatment Kills Another College Student.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., March 7.—Vernon Van Dusen, son of Almon A. Van Dusen, county judge of Chautauqua county, is the latest victim of a college hazing. He had decided to become a lawyer, and on completing his majority last September he entered Williams college for a preliminary course of study. He was a bright young man of pleasing address, and as he attended strictly to his own business he escaped the attention of the hazers until about the holidays. Then it leaked out that he did not propose to be hazed, and that settled his fate. One cold night, just before Christmas, a party of the young ruffians went to his room, broke open the door, stripped him, soused him in a bath-tub filled with cold water, and, giving him a couple of tooth-picks, forced him to paddle about in it singing "Pull for the shore." When he became so chilled that he was unable to sing longer, he was wrapped in a wet sheet and put to bed. His constitution, never very robust, was unable to stand the shock, and he fell ill with pneumonia. Recently symptoms of consumption were noticed. The disease developed so rapidly that it was determined to take him to Florida, and he was removed there last week. His friends are very indignant over the treatment he received, and it is possible that the authors of the outrage will be called to an accounting.

Striking Silk Weavers.

NEW YORK, March 7.—At the headquarters of the striking silk weavers it was announced that the employes of a mill in Providence had joined the strikers, and a small shop at Norwich, N. Y., was also closed. It was expected that the 500 employes of the Simons mill at Union Hill, N. J., would go out. The 600 employes of six mills at Allentown, Pa., and the 70 employes of a mill at Bethlehem, it was also stated, have sent in their ultimatum, and unless their demands are granted they will go out. At present 3,500 ribbon weavers and some broad-silk weavers are reported out. The employes of Hartlein & Schlatter's shop in East 68th street went to work, the proprietors having signed the scale. Givernaud Brothers, of West Hoboken, made an offer of 25 per cent. advance, but it was rejected by the strikers.

Providence Baseball Club.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 6. — The stockholders of the Providence Baseball club held their annual meeting and completed plans for the ensuing year. Officers were elected, the capital stock was increased and Manager Murray's plans for procuring players were endorsed. Treasurer W. W. Kirby, treasurer of the Providence Polo club, was engaged to assist Manager Murray in conducting the business affairs of the club.

Fire at Toms River.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., March 7.—The latest [illegible] occurred Monday [illegible] when the farm house and stables, with [illegible] buildings and granary upon the farm of William Mahoney were destroyed, has but added to the already great alarm in this vicinity. Mahoney and his household were all absent when the fire originated and returned to find their home in flames. This makes the third dwelling burned in four days and the fourth in a few weeks, and for none of them can a satisfactory explanation be given. Property owners are becoming alarmed and the night patrol will be resorted to. These have been the first fires in about eight years here. During the winter of 1885-86 a similar state of affairs prevailed and when the offenders were brought to trial it was found that they first robbed the houses and then burned them to hide the evidence of their burglaries. The principal offender was sentenced to seven years in the penitentiary and his time expired a short time ago.

She Was Boston's Richest Woman.

BOSTON, March 7.—Mrs. Mary Hemenway, who died yesterday, was the widow of Augustus Hemenway, one of Boston's greatest business men, who died more than 10 years ago. Endowed with a property estimated at $15,000,000, which made Mrs. Hemenway the richest woman in Boston, she was able to engage and did engage in many charitable and beneficient enterprises.

Election Result at Burlington, Vt.

BURLINGTON, Vt., March 7.—The city election has resulted in a republican victory. W. J. Vanpatten was elected mayor by a majority of 369. The last year the democratic majority for Vanpatten's opponent was 182. Republican aldermen were elected in four out of five wards, which places the city government in republican hands again.

A Case of Hiccoughs at Coxsackie.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 7.—Miss Annie Whalters, a young girl residing at Coxsackie, has been afflicted with hiccoughs for the past eight weeks. She has been constantly under the care of physicians, but so far she has experienced no relief. The physicians are baffled. Miss Whalter's condition is now considered very serious.

Rufus S. Frost Dead.

CHICAGO, March 7.—Rufus S. Frost, of Boston, who for the past half century was a prominent representative citizen of Massachusetts, died suddenly yesterday afternoon in his private car at the Union Railway station here. He was returning from Mexico to his home in charge of a physician. The body was embalmed and left for Boston to-day.

Paines Celery Compound the Greatest of Remedies.

Influence of the Nerves on Various Diseases---The Way Frank Bair of Chicago Regained His Health---Prof. Phelps' Wonderful Prescription.

FRANK BAIR.

Increased cares and duties, increase in mental strain, lessened physical labor and increased mental work have been gradually giving us bodies in which the nervous element predominates.

Those with an insufficient reserve of vigor and nervous energy fall winter victims to contagious diseases and to special diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys.

Refreshing sleep comes from Paine's celery compound. Persistent headaches go. Chronic constipation no longer troubles one, and the terrible heart throbbing from which so many tired women suffer leave them in peace.

Because of this wonderful discovery of Paine's celery compound, thousands of homes have been made brighter and hosts of sick men and women led from despondency to health and activity.

People of the highest standing in every class of society, in every city and town in the Union, have been benefited by the use of this, the greatest of all remedies for the cure of the numerous ills that result from impaired nervous system and impoverished blood.

Here is the cure—the greatest medical discovery of modern times—the remedy first prescribed by the greatest physician of this age, Prof. Edward Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college—the remedy that has made more people well than any other ever known—the truest food for the nerves—the best known strengthener of impoverished blood—the remedy that from one end of the country to the other, and blessed by thousands.

Now and then a discovery like this one is so greatly in advance of its day that it startles the whole body of physicians. No great remedy ever caused as much talk and inquiry as Paine's celery compound. Scientific men in Europe have analyzed and discussed it, and the medical world has agreed in recommending it as a truly remarkable remedy for disorders originating in impure blood and impoverished nerve tissue.

Try it. Any druggist has it or will get it for you.

Read the following unsolicited letter from Mr. Frank Bair, whose portrait is given above, one of Chicago's best known and most highly esteemed young business men, the western agent of the great firm of Nash, Eaton & Co., salt dealers, of New York:

"I have used Paine's celery compound for the past six months, and must say that it has helped me wonderfully. I had pain in my back and chest, and faint, tired feelings at the stomach, and when I would eat the taste would make me deathly sick I became very weak and lost about twenty pounds. After having used a few bottles of Paine's celery compound I am feeling better than I have in all my life." Try it!

A YEAR'S BUSY RECORD.

Work of the McAll Auxiliary Faithfully Recorded by Mrs. Stillman, Secretary.

In addition to the other officers elected yesterday by the McAll Auxiliary, stated in The Press last night, the following acting vice-presidents were chosen:

Crescent Avenue Church—Mrs. Miner Mead, Mrs. A. C. Baldwin.
Congregational—Mrs. Wm. Wadsworth.
Trinity Reformed—Mrs. Cornelius Schenck.
First Presbyterian—Mrs. James Petrie.
First Baptist—Mrs. Alex. Gilbert.
Seventh-Day Baptist—Mrs. J. N. VanSickel.
Park Avenue Baptist—Mrs. Jas. Middleditch.
Friends—Miss Minnie Wood.
Church of Our Saviour—Mrs. Constantine P. Ralli.
German—Mrs. Thomas Honnegar.
Grace P. E.—Mrs. F. O. Herring.

Mrs. Wm. M. Stillman, the retiring secretary, submitted her annual report as follows:

Our McAll year, the eighth of its existence, has drawn to a close, a year of renewed zeal and love for the great work. At an annual held the 7th of last month, we enjoyed listening to a letter, the only one written to us, as an auxiliary by the late Dr. McAll. We greatly appreciated the kindness then in sending us a personal greeting when his time was so fully occupied and he in such feeble health; now we value the letter more than we can say. It was among the last words of Dr. McAll.

We can always feel that each one of us, individually, received a benediction, from the heart that beat with love for his Saviour's brethren and now is still. Let us not forget his request to pray for the work. Our Society mourns the death of one of its faithful managers, Mrs. James Perly Page, who was called home last April. Appropriate resolutions were adopted and sent to Mr. Page, also entered upon the minutes of the May meeting.

Our meetings during the year have been regularly held and well attended. After devotional exercises and the reports of the treasurer and secretary, interesting letters written by the earnest consecrated workers in the white fields of France have been read which we have found not only interesting, inspiring and helpful but also strong incentives to do what we could to aid the men and women who have given their lives to the evangelization of France.

We have 207 annual subscribers, 21 life members, 1 being added during the year, $539 51 has been raised for the work, $35 additional has been contributed to the memorial fund by several of the ladies.

One of our managers, Miss Tweedy, visited Paris in the spring. She brought us a delightful report of her visits to two of the mission hall and her impressions of the work and the people. A pleasing memory is hers of meeting and speaking with Dr. McAll. Several of our members were able to attend the Convention of the National Association held in Albany last April, and brought home to the less fortunate ones glowing accounts of the meetings, which were inspiring. We were all delighted to learn that our Mrs. Lawrence Myers had been elected Vice-President of the National Association.

We held a public meeting at Mrs. Herring's on the afternoon, of May 23, when we had the great pleasure of meeting Mrs. LeGay of Paris again. She spoke to us earnestly of her work in the Mission, that of the mothers meeting; it was very satisfying to hear a detailed description of those gatherings, where old women and young meet informally and hear of the Master and His love for them, bringing peace and rest to many in their lives of poverty and want. Miss Lent, of the New York Auxiliary, spoke pleasingly of her part in the great work, and of her acquaintance with Dr. McAll.

A number of our members held a meeting in Bound Brook in December with the earnest hope of being able to found an auxiliary there. The attempt as far as we can see was not successful, but the seed sown in His name may sometime bear the desired fruit. Two churches, the Crescent Avenue and the Trinity Reformed, have aided us with a collection, for which we are deeply grateful. Our new work at Limoges is well established under the guidance of the earnest Christian Mr. Boyer; the work is divided into three parts, among the adults, the children and the soldiers.

The work among the adults is progressing well. The meetings show a large increase in attendance. Many times the hall has been full. The people are eager for the good tidings. They find there the Sunday-school opened with an attendance of five, now has twenty-five. The Thursday-school has forty. The children are attentive and willing to learn. Mr. Boyer is encouraged with his work among the children. He is endeavoring to bring the Protestant soldiers together, and has placed a room at their disposal to be used for reading and writing. Those of us who heard Mr. Greig's remarks on the subject learned how necessary it is that they have a place of this kind in which to spend their idle hours. The call is for more money, for more halls, books, maps, papers, etc,

On the 21st of last month (February) we held a public meeting in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, which was of unusual interest to us all, as we were most fortunate in having with us Rev. Charles E. Greig of Paris, who is now the successor of the late Dr. McAll as director of the mission, a most zealous, devoted Christian gentleman. The meeting was opened by a duet sung by Mrs. J. K. Myers and Miss Smillie, "The Lord is My Shepherd". Mr. Schenck read a selection of Scripture and Dean Rodman offered prayer. Dr. Richards with a few appropriate remarks, introduced Mr. Greig. We all enjoyed and were benefited by every word of his address. He told us fully of our Limoges work and of Mr. Hoyer, and answered numerous questions. At the mention of Mrs. LeGay's name Mr. Greig's spontaneous tribute to her character and ability in the work was most cordial and to us most gratifying, as it was through her efforts that our Auxiliary was formed. The meeting was too short. We all wished him God-speed on his home journey.

Through the year's work and interest there has been the ever-present minor tone of sorrow. I feel that I am unable to touch upon the great and inexpressable loss that the McAll Mission has sustained through the death of Robert W. McAll, who passed away so quietly on the 11th of last May. It is not necessary to dwell upon the life or the days of the venerable man of God, as it is familiar to us all. There is so much in the consecrated life, well lived, for each and every one of us. In one of the many Tributes paid at that time occurred these words: "We feel not only a great gratitude to you and to God who gave you to us, but we feel also that your work is not finished; that it follows you and will survive you and that there is but one way to do you honor: that of devoting ourselves to its continuance".

May we prayerfully lay this to our hearts and have a share in the jewels that make up his crown.

In closing the report of our year we would again thank the trustees of the Library for their continued courtesy in allowing us the use of this cheery room; and also the daily papers for their kindness in printing all notices free of charge.

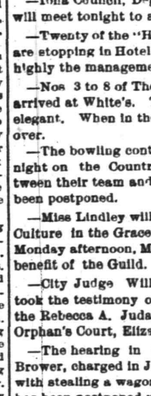
THE POSTMASTER'S LETTER.



T. H. EDMUNDSON.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—I had been an invalid for nineteen years and had all the doctors in our country prescribe for me, but they could not say just what ailed me. When I wrote you giving the history and symptoms, you diagnosed my case as disease of the blood and kidneys, and advised me to try your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Pellets," and I feel confident your medicines saved my life, and I hope all sufferers from kidney and blood disease will try your valuable medicine.

T. H. EDMUNDSON, Postmaster,
Home, Marshall Co., Kans.

The muscular system, the Heart, Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, all do their work with constant difficulty for every weary, thin or thin-blooded person. Fatigue comes early, is extreme, and lasts long. The demand for nutritive aid is ahead of the supply, and poisonous materials accumulate. This is the reason pale people are always tired. Certain it is that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures and builds up just such sufferers. To the weak and the nervous, Pierce guarantees A CURE. 11 7

SCRUB and WASH as you will, it is not easy to keep the hands smooth and white in winter time. In fact, the more you scrub and wash, the rougher seems the skin, and you find that the best of soap fails to whiten it. Now if, after washing, you will moisten your hands with LEMON JUICE AND GLYCERINE, the effect will be to soften and whiten the skin, even in the worst weather. Used by hundreds of the "best people" in Plainfield. Originated and sold only by H. P. REYNOLDS, Pharmacist, Park and North avenues

ITS WONDERFUL EFFICACY.

Newspapers Admit Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is All It is Claimed.

The intense interest taken in the cures made by Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, at Athens, N. Y., and other places, resulted in the Albany, N. Y. Journal sending a special representative to Athens to investigate the cases and it was found that many of them were wonderful.

In the case of Mr. Lewis Clow, who had chronic kidney disease; Mrs Casper Brooks, suffering from kidney disease and Wm. Tiffany, who suffered from general prostration; all were abandoned by their attending physicians. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was then used by them, and in every case an absolute cure was effected.

—Mrs. Dr. Edwards, clairvoyant, remains at the City Hotel just one week longer.

—Aaron Woodruff, of Elizabeth, will shoot a $100 match with Charles Smith in Marion the afternoon of March 22

—The Metropolitan Life Insurance agents had a great dinner at the home of Assistant Superintendent Norbury last night. The feast of other good things was topped off with a flaming plum-pudding.

—Say, would n't that be glorious for Plainfield consumers!—the passage of the bill fixing the price of gas in cities at $1.25 per 1,000 cubic feet. It went through the Assembly with a bang. Oh for a Senate to enact it a law!

—The firm of Carney Bros. claims to be able to supply hose to the city for less money than any of the agents who have submitted bids, and they complain of being crowded out of competition. They say that hose they sold the city five years ago is still in use, showing its superiority.

Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

A MILLION OF MONEY.

HOW GEORGE H. BABCOCK'S FORTUNE WAS INVESTED.

Here Plainfield Young Men Have a Valuable Example of Judicious Financiering—Uninvolved Distribution in Independent Stocks, Bonds and Real Estate, Make Secure the Wealth Accumulated by Patient Industry.

Showing as it does the way in which a careful and successful business man of Plainfield invested his money, the following inventory and appraisement of the estate of George H. Babcock, now first published, will be of widespread interest. The same business ability which enabled him to amass a fortune by honest, persevering effort marked the distribution of his money where, securely invested, it would bring the best returns.

The statement was prepared by the executors, William M. Stillman and Joseph A. Hubbard, with the assistance of Elias R. Pope and J. Frank Hubbard. It is as follows:

Social Evening on Farragut Avenue.

A number of the friends of Miss May Thompson spent a most pleasant social evening at her home on Farragut avenue last night. Miss Helen Hasbrouck presided at the piano. Refreshments were served shortly before midnight, and the party broke up soon afterward.

The guests included the Misses Lissa Livezey, Nora Williams, Carrie Kellog, Lilla Livezey, Clara Williams, Bertha Wheeler, Lida Stelle of Bound Brook, Stella Shotwell, Allie Loomis, Florence Smith, Mardie and Essie Thompson; Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Denning of Bound Brook, Messrs. Galbraith and Jelleme of New York, Sidney Titsworth, Rowland Tomlinson, Hugh V. Bache of Bound Brook, Berry Eagan, Charles J. McNabb, George W. DeMeza, Frank Richards, M.M. Hodge of Finderne, Frank and Arthur Vail and Carl Pfender.

To Be Wedded After Easter.

Henry Windham and Miss Josie Herold are to be married March 27. Miss Herold is a niece of J. A. Blatz, and her affianced husband is the proprietor of the Arlington Hotel. A happier bridal couple is seldom found, and it is a general wish in the Borough that both may spend a life as free from care and want as they have experienced in single blessedness. All join in hoping that their pathway through life may be strewn with roses.

Went in Stages, and Danced.

About thirty from Jersey City, Somerville, Dunellen and Plainfield attended the dance in Friendship Hall, New Market, last evening. Stages carried the guests from the Dunellen station. It was one of the most enjoyable dances of the season, and, reflected great credit on the three young men of Dunellen, Oscar Runyon, John Fisher and Charles English, who arranged and managed the affair, even to the serving of refreshments.

Death of Michael Schlereth.

Michael Schlereth died at his home, 24 Chatham street, yesterday, after five months of illness. He was sixty-four years of age, and leaves a wife and three children. Mr. Schlereth was a cutter and was employed by C. Schepflin & Co., but of recent years has not been engaged in active work. The funeral will be held from the German Reformed Church, Craig place, Friday afternoon at 2.

The Coupon Business.

J. W. Murphy, publisher of the Burlington (Ia.) Saturday Evening Post, had an experience in the coupon business which extended over five weeks, and in that time used up $700 worth of advertising space at his regular rates and sold $21 worth of the books, which cost him $8 at the express office.

MRS. ENGLISH NOT FORGOTTEN.

Reform Club Preparing Resolutions to Accompany the Money.

Complaints have been made to The Press that the widow of Joseph English, the temperance worker, is in destitute circumstances while money subscribed for her relief was retained by officers of the Reform Club. Members of the club say that such is not the case, as Mrs. English is living in Poughkeepsie on an income derived from real-estate left by her husband. The club decided to subscribe a complimentary fund to be forwarded to the widow as a recognition of Plainfield's gratitude for Mrs. English's services. No formal subscription was made nor was any money placed in the Treasurer's hands, the matter being postponed until a set of resolutions could be prepared. The resolutions have been unavoidably delayed, but on their completion the testimonial will be subscribed and both sent on together.

Last fall the Women's Aid Society contributed about $20 for the same purpose. The money was given to H. N. Spencer of the Reform Club to be sent to Mrs. English. Of course this amount has awaited the subscription of the regular fund. Mr. Spencer has offered to return it to the women for them to forward it direct, but they have declined to take it.

Decorations, But No Parade.

Having been refused the appropriation of $100 asked from the city towards defraying expenses on Memorial Day, the veterans of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., are preparing to do the best they can alone.

According to the present plans there will be no public observance of the time-honored day. The members of the Post will privately and unostentatiously decorate the graves of their fallen comrades in the morning, and will hold appropriate exercises in Music Hall in the afternoon. There will be no public parade as in past years.

Grist of the City Court.

Mary Jones, arrested by Officer Kiely for fighting and otherwise disturbing the proverbial quiet of Pruden's Alley, was found guilty by City Judge Coddington this morning. She paid a fine of $3.

Harry Hymes, charged with bad behaviour on West Front street yesterday afternoon, was released on his recognizance, sentence being reserved.

Charles McCann and Thomas Cullen were arrested by Policeman Giese this morning for fighting on West Third street. McCann pleaded guilty and his friends paid his fine of $10. Cullen's sentence was suspended.

The Man Who Was Shot.

The water motor which runs the organ in the new Seventh-Day Baptist Church was put in by Robert Roes, who was shot and killed in the election riot in Troy yesterday, as told on Page 1. He had made a number of acquaintances while in Plainfield on business, having met members of the Crescent Avenue Church in regard to their proposed improvements.

Gave Books He Wrote Himself.

F. W. Grant of Grove street has presented to the Plainfield Free Public Library the following books of which he is the author: "Atonement", "Facts and Theories as to a Future State", "Genesis in the Light of the New Testament", "Numerical Structure of Scripture", and "The Revelation of Christ".

Park Club's Great Whisters.

Members of the Elizabeth Athletic Club visited the Park Club last night and after a pleasant evening spent in playing whist found themselves defeated by thirty-seven points by the home club. There were six tables. Refreshments were served at the close of games.

HIS WORTH AS AN EDUCATOR.

What the School Board Has Prepared as a Tribute to George H. Babcock.

The memorial album arranged by Artist W. Montgomery Smith for the Board of Education as a tribute to the memory and worth of the late George H. Babcock, is a beautiful conception. The first of the heavy gray cardboard pages bears in handsome inscription the name of the lamented President of the Board. The next page is introductory to the resolutions adopted by the Board, making prominent the time of their adoption. The date stands boldly out, and in the background are flitting shadows of wings, scythe and hourglass. The resolutions are fittingly distributed over the following pages, and back of the central lettering, "George H. Babcock", illuminating as with rays of wisdom the name of him who was wisdom personified, is the lamp of knowledge, whose oil flames on forever. On the back of the last page is a pathetic remarque. "the last leaf", a bit of stray wood-verdure fluttering in the breeze. The page of signatures of the Board is balanced by a twig of oak, with acorns, emblematic of the strength which the names give to the memorial which they endorse. The pages are protected by gray pasteboard mats framing each design, and the volume is elegantly and durably bound in black seal, the pages being hinged on white kid. Mr. Smith has in this album given renewed proof of his wonderful originality and extraordinary skill, and it is a most worthy tribute to the man whose interest in the Plainfield public schools it perpetuates.

FOR THE CHARITY FUND.

Madame Iza Lezem Generously Offers Her Services in a Worthy Cause.

An excellent entertainment is being arranged to be given in Music Hall, Thursday evening, March 29, by Madame Iza Lezem, of the Plainfield School for Dancing, for the benefit of the charity fund. Madame Lezem generously contributes her own labors and the talent of well-known artists. She will be assisted by her classes, in giving beautiful new dances, and will present a programme of rare merit.

Two famous pupils of Madame Lezem's will appear—Miss Minnie Benwood, the queen of serpentine dancers who has succeeded to Lole Fuller's place, and Miss Lola Yberri the graceful Spanish dancer who daily draws crowds to the Eden Musee. John Dillon, the dialect humorist, story teller and comic vocalist, will be another of the attractions, and altogether the entertainment should attract a full house, given as it will be in such excellence and for so noble a purpose. Madame Lezem has at heart the welfare of those out of work, and deserves fullest encouragement in her efforts to help them.

Wants the Salary List Abolished.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—What are the taxpayers of North Plainfield thinking of when they vote to pay the members of the Town Committee $50 apiece each year and one of their number an additional $100 for services as township treasurer. The Mayor and the six councilmen and the borough treasurer receive no salary, yet each devotes five times more to the public service than do the town committeemen.

ANTI-GRABBER.

The Ten Foot Drive.

Those who have missed the serial feature from Page 4 of The Press will be pleased to learn that within a few days publication will be begun of an excellent novelette entitled "The Ten Foot Drive". The scene is laid in the mining regions, and the love story is diversified with contests between capital and labor, plots and counterplots. It is full of dramatic situations and has a striking denouement. Keep your eye on Page 4.

All the "cuss-words" you can think of won't improve your laundry work if you take it to a second grade place. "Language" won't keep the linen whole, when the washer uses alkaline soap and harmful bleaches.

Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. GEMS IN VERSE.

On the Grave of an Unbeliever.

Some men believe in God, and that great faith
Gives them the strength for all their earthly needs.
Some know a life beyond, and faith in that Makes burdens light, gives strength for noble deeds.

This man believed in man; in doing good;
In simple, silent pluck; in goodness; honesty;
And, so believing, lived his short life through
And gave that life a noble majesty.

Simple his faith, yet strong enough to make
Him bear life's burdens as they should be borne;
To share with others only their great griefs;
To help the weak; to comfort the forlorn.

We saw him lose what seemed his all in life;
We saw him made to feel acutest pain;
We never saw him turn from duty's path
Or yield at all beneath life's greatest strain.

O Father, somewhere in thy heavenly home
Must be a place for such true sons of thine.
Who, midst all doubts and troublous unbelief,
Cast all their living on the plan divine.

Let him who scoffs at all who own thee not
Refrain from thinking such men are unblest.
They serve their God who serve their fellow mine,
By simply doing what they feel is best.
—Sherman Hoar.

Lyric of Action.

'Tis the part of a coward to brood
O'er the past that is withered and dead.
What though the heart's roses are ashes and dust?
What though the heart's music be fled?
Still shine the grand heavens o'erhead,
Whence the voice of an angel thrills clear on the soul,
"Gird about thee thine armor; press on to the goal!"

If the faults or the crimes of thy youth
Are a burden too heavy to bear,
What hope can reboom on the desolate waste
Of a jealous and craven despair?
Down, down with the fetters of fear!
In the strength of thy valor and manhood arise,
With the faith that illumes it and the will that defies.

"Too late!" through God's infinite world,
From his throne to life's nethermost fires—
"Too late!" is a phantom that flies at the dawn
Of the soul that repents and aspires.
If pure thou hast made thy desires,
There's no height the strong wings of immortals may gain
Which in striving to reach thou shalt strive for in vain.

Then up to the contest with fate,
Unbound by the past, which is dead!
What though the heart's roses are ashes and dust?
What though the heart's music be fled?
Still shine the fair heavens o'erhead,
And, sublime as the angels who rule in the sun,
Beams the promise of peace when the conflict is won.
—Paul H. Hayne.

The Seven Stages of a Railroad.

At first the Incorporators,
Striving and pushing for a chartered right,
To enforce the doctrine "Right means might."

Then the Wealthy Syndicates,
With their glowing bits of facts and fancy
Sounding like tales of necromancy.

And then the Bankers,
Seeking to sell the bonds, solid as rock,
Keeping themselves the freely watered stock.

This for the lambs—investment good as gold—
A brand new lamp, better than those of old!

Then the Car Trusts,
Mortgages on wheels,
Foreclosed so readily, without appeals!

And then the Receivers—
No coupons now to pay,
All debts deferred until some other day.
A Voting Trust, protecting all the stock
That growsome Bears are sure to try to knock.

The sixth stage shifts
Into the Reorganization Plan,
Where all the Wreckers join in one great band,
Where innocent experience, dearly bought,
Is daily learned by some—by others taught.

The last scene of all in this eventful mystery,
Two streaks of rust—a mortgage and—a history.
—Mount Holly Herald.

Astronomic mystery,
Algebra, histology,

Botany, geometry,
Greek and trigonometry;
Ram it in, cram it in,
Children's heads are hollow.

Rap it in, tap it in;
What are teachers paid for?
Bang it in, slam it in;
What are children made for?
Ancient archæology,
Aryan philology,
Prosody, zoology,
Physics, climatology,
Calculus and mathematics,
Rhetoric and hydrostatics;
Hoax it in, coax it in,
Children's heads are hollow.

Scold it in, mold it in,
All that they can swallow;
Fold it in, hold it in,
Still there's more to follow.
Faces pinched, sad and pale,
Tell the same unvarying tale,
Tell of moments robbed from sleep,
Meals untasted, studies deep;
Those who've passed the furnace through
With aching brow will tell to you

How the teacher crammed it in,
Rammed it in, jammed it it,
Crunched it in, punched it in,
Rubbed it in and clubbed it in,
Pressed it in and caressed it in,
Rapped it in and slapped it in,
When their heads were hollow.

The Perfect Man.

Stroking his patriarchal beard, the Khan of Teheran
Asked of his courtiers one high noon, "Who is the perfect man?"
"Thou art the man, O glorious khan!" they cried as, kneeling low,
They kissed his feet. But scorafully the old chief shouted, "No!
"The praise of slaves and parasites is bootless," quoth the khan.
"I need it not. Now, tell me each, who is the perfect man?"
"He who," said one, "loves all his wives and has their loyal love."
"A priest of Allah," sighed the next, "whose soul soars far above
This world of ours." "Nay," lisped the third, "'tis gold alone that can Make sheik or caliph, serf or lord, the truly perfect man."
"My query's still unanswered," cried the khan maliciously.
"The man who hath more than one wife can never perfect be.
Priests have their faults, and rich men, too, despite their precious pelf—
The only perfect man I know is he who knows himself.
And though I've been for fifty years the Khan of Teheran
I never yet, alas, have met that estimable man!"

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.
Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment, There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medicel College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

TARIFF BILL FINISHED

To Be Laid Before the Full Committee To-Day.

Said to Contain Some Very Great Surprises for the Public—The Net Amount of Revenue Less Than That Provided for in the Bill When Received From the House—"Conservatives" Not Presented With the Completed Measure and Many of the Changes Demanded Not Made—Compromise On Sugar.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—At last the tariff bill is ready for the full membership of the finance committee of the senate and it will be laid before that body to-day. The democratic members of the committee started in immediately after the adjournment of the senate yesterday afternoon with the determination of completeing the measure before adjourning if it took all night, but a few minutes before 8 o'clock the bill was finished and sent to the printer.

Mr. Voorhees' statement on the floor of the senate yesterday afternoon that he assumed that the tariff bill would be laid before the full committee before many hours was borne out by the subsequent action of the senator, when, about 5 o'clock he issued notices for a meeting of the full committee for to-day at 11 a. m. and sent them to the residences of the republican senators by a riding page.

The democratic members of the committee repaired to the committee room as soon as the skirmish over the Bland bill was ended and applied themselves to the consideration of the bill with redoubled energy. Mr. Voorhees left at 8 o'clock, but Messrs. Vest, Jones, McPherson and Harris remained and ordered their dinner sent to the committee room, it being their intention to remain in session so long as might become necessary to complete the bill and send it to the printing office. At the same time orders were sent to the government printing office to have a force of men on hand ready to take copy as soon as it was sent, and have the bill printed in time to lay before committee this afternoon. Having laid all the plans for the final stages of the bill the committee renewed its attack upon the disputed schedules. One of the members, who was seen for a moment, intimated that the bill would, he thought, when it reached the public, be found to contain some very great surprises. Heavy cuts have been made in many of the schedules of the Wilson bill and, if the policy of the committee is carried out as indicated, the net amount of revenue yielded by the senate bill will be less, based upon present importations, and omitting the duty on sugar, than that figured upon by the committee on ways and means in the house. It is understood that some attention was given to the metal schedule in the belief that, iron ore having been given a duty, this schedule would have to be modified, but it is said that is was abandoned, the committee finding that had they given a duty of even so much as 50 cents a ton, a revision of the metal schedule would be necessary.

After the committee had taken dinner the only open question before them was the sugar schedule and this was promptly disposed of, so that the committee adjourned at 7:45 at which time the bill was sent to the printer. The duty given to sugar was only agreed upon after an animated discussion and the rate appears to bear the evidence of being a compromise. The sugar men do not get all they wanted, but they get more than it was believed they would get. It is a duty, said a member of the committee, at which the producer and consumer will have less cause to complain than the refiner.

Whiskey, it was also said, in response to the recommendations of Secretary Carlisle, will not have the tax raised beyond the figure fixed by the house, but the fight for the extension of the bonded period, it is claimed, has been won, and that period will be fixed at five instead of three years. On the other hand it was stated that the tax had been increased to $1 10 and the bonded period left untouched.

Lumber, for which Messrs. Morgan and Pugh, of Alabama, made a fight and in which they were assited by Mr. Vilas, of Michigan, appears to have been unfortunate, for, it is said, it still remains on the free list.

Coal is put at 40 cents a ton, although, as the committee was almost completing its work, the proposition was made to give coal fifty cents, and the final print of the bill may show that this was done. Iron ore loses its equal footing with coal and must be content with thirty-five cents a ton.

The completed bill was not submitted to the so-called "conservatives" and a member of the committee said this morning that the committee did not know whether those senators would support the bill or not. At the same time, he continued, concessions had been made, with the hope that by yielding within reason a united party could be had. This senator looked forward with some trepidation at the possible reception the bill may receive, for the reason that the committee had been unable to see its way clear to do what was evidently expected by some of the "conservatives."

It was a common rumor about the capitol to-day that democratic senators would make the attempt to defeat the bill unless the committee came to their terms and the fact that the committee failed not only in submitting the bill to them, but in not granting the maximum of concessions, is taken as a declaration to these gentlemen that if they want more they must go to the senate for it.

No Lack of Charges Against Him.

BABYLON, L. I., March 8.—Principal George Zolliner, of the Lindenhurst public school, was arraigned before School Commissioner Fordham on charges of "atheism, socialism, anarchy, drunkenness, immorality" and other irregularities. The board of education sustains the principal. The scene at the hearing was a lively one. Certain witnesses nearly came to blows. A formal investigation and a regular trial will follow shortly.

Received a Call From Boston.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 8.—Rev. H. H. French, D. D., pastor of the Wesley M. E. church of this city, has been extended an invitation from Boston to take charge of Trinity church of that city. It is very probable that he will accept and go east about May 1.

WILL INVESTIGATE THE JURY.

Bribery Charged in Connection With Justice Sutherland's Trial.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 9.—Deputy Attorneys General A. E. Lamb and Jere Wernberg, who conducted the unsuccessful prosecution of Kenneth L. Sutherland, the justice of the peace of Gravesend, claim to have positive proof that the jury was bought. The jury was discharged because it could not agree. It stood nine for conviction and three for acquittal. The deputy attorneys general say they will take steps at once to have the guilty parties indicted. They will not tell what they are able to prove, but admit that Prof. Timothy H. Roberts, of Flatbush, will be one of their witnesses.

Prof. Roberts says he was sitting in the court room on the Thursday that the jury came in for instructions and took their seats in the box. At a table, which could be plainly seen by the jurors, sat a young man named Kelly, a stenographer and clerk in the office of George W. Roderick, McKane's lawyer. He was apparently writing heedlessly on a paper before him. Prof. Roberts says, however, that Kelly wrote $500 on a piece of paper which he placed so that several jurors could see it. This piece of paper is now in the possession of P. Cousins, a clerk in the office of Mr. Backus, who defended Sutherland. Mr. Cousins admitted the above facts.

The New Bonds.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Two hundred thousand dollars of the fifty million loan have not yet been taken up, the subscribers defaulting and failing to make the necessary deposit within the time named. The treasury department has received on account of the bond issue $58,265,312, all but about $250,000 of the total principal and premium for which the bonds were sold. Of the money paid for the new issue of bonds $38,235,000 was in gold, and $19,830,000 was in legal tenders. Up to the present date about $49,600,000 of the new bonds have been sent to purchasers and certificates to the extent of $50,000 are awaiting orders for given denominations of bonds before they can be sent out.

Mrs. Lease an Heiress.

WICHITA, Kan., March 8.—Mrs. Mary E. Lease received information from Ireland that one of her maiden aunts had died several years ago leaving a considerable fortune, of which she is one of the beneficiaries. The will was made many years ago in Dundalk county, south Ireland, and the money has been accumulating at interest. The money was left to Mary Elizabeth Cline and the connection between the daughter of Erin and the Kansas woman has only just been established in the minds of the trustees.

Brazilian War News

NEW YORK, March .—The Herald's special cable from Rio Janeiro says: It is reported here that the church party has been supplying Admiral Saldanha da Gama and the rebel fleet with funds, in return for which da Gama has promised that in case the rebellion is successful state aid will be restored to the church. Rumors have reached here that the government troops have sustained defeat on the Sao Paulo frontier, but they lack confirmation. Admiral Mello's eldest son is dead in Argentina.

Vatican News.

ROME, March 8.—The commission of cardinals appointed by the pope to consider the question of granting exequaturs to representatives of foreign governments to the vatican has decided that the vatican cannot accept the formula of exequatur used by the Italian government. The pope has received a large number of requests that the holy see instruct papal nuncios to foreign courts to influence as many Catholics as possible to attend the coming international congress of workingmen at Zurich.

It may be a day and it may be a week and the general sentiment is that the jury will disagree.

WHEN HE WAS MAYOR

Mr. Hewitt Says New York's Government Was Not of the People.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The New York Board of Trade and Transportation at a meeting adopted the Hewitt plan of rapid transit, which provided that the city of New York should advance the entire capital necessary to build the road.

Ex-Mayor Hewitt, in the course of remarks in favor of his plan, said that when he was mayor, in 1888, he advocated increased rapid transit facilities, but the Manhattan Railroad company had not taken advantage of the suggestions because they would be subject to increased taxation. Then he said that the city government for many years had not been a government in reality. "When I was mayor," said Mr. Hewitt, "it wasn't a government of the people. I was nominated by Tammany Hall, and that nomination was determined upon by one man, Richard Croker. I would not have accepted the nomination if the circumstances had not demanded the sacrifice."

HER CONDITION CRITICAL.

Mrs. McKane Still in Ignorance of Her Husband's Trouble.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 8.—George N. McKane, son of John Y. McKane, made the following statement to a reporter: "My mother is in a very critical condition. She is suffering under the most awful suspense. None of us have had the courage to tell her the real truth. She knows father is in great trouble, and continually asks why he dosen't come to her or why he has not written. Dr. Hill is afraid that if she should know that he is wearing the stripes of a convict in Sing Sing prison she would die before we had finished telling the awful story."

Jersey State Treasuryship Row.

TRENTON, N. J., March 8.—The republicans mean to prohibit the banks in which state moneys are deposited from honoring any of the checks or drafts of State Treasurer Gray, whose term expired yesterday, but who refuses to surrender his office because his successor has not qualified yet. This they will do through mandamus proceedings in the supreme court which they are to institute at once. The state constitution gives the state treasurer the right to continue in office until his successor shall have been qualified and qualification is impossible without a commission from the governor. Hence, Treasurer Gray will not vacate his berth.

Would Like to Thrash Mr. Meredith.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Representative Meredith, of Virginia, who had a heated colloquy with Representative Funk, of Illinois, on Friday last, growing out of the consideration of the pension appropriation bill has received a number of abusive letters from various parts of the east, although Mr. Funk is a western man, the writers of the letters are located mainly in Pennsylvania and New York. Some of the writers express a desire to come down to Washington and thrash Mr. Meredith, while all of the number write him in the most intemperate language.

Otto Fiterich, president of the Hartsville Foundry company, who lost much valuable personal property.

NEEDS MORE MONEY

Bell Telephone Company Outgrowing Itself.

Wishes to Increase Its Capital Stock to Keep Up With Its Business—A Total of About $75,000,000 Expended in Nine Years—Over 566,000 Telephones Now in Use.

BOSTON, March 8.—The presentation of the case of the American Bell Telephone company for an increase of capital to $50,000,000, to the committee on mercantile affairs, by ex-Gov. Long, brought out some instructing information regarding the magnitude of the business and the expenditures of the company.

Gov. Long, in opening, said it was simply a case of a concern whose business has so enlarged that it needs more money. It is like a boy who has grown and needs a new suit of clothes. Previous to 1885 the company had expended over $31,000,000 by itself and its licensees in constructing lines, in materials and labor. Since 1885 it has expended, in subways and cables, $14,500,000; in real estate, $6,000,000; in aerial equipment, $12,500 000, a total of about $43 0.0,000, which added to the expenditures prior to 1885 make a total of about $75,000,000. Not a dollar but has been expended in legitimate extension of business. The building and extension of the long distance lines has been a source of great expense and $10,000,000 is needed at once to complete the plans of the company in that direction.

Some idea of the growth of the company's business may be gathered from the fact that the number of telephones in use has grown from 5,000, when the company started, to 566,000 at the present time. In 1884 there were 215,000,000 talks over the telephone; in 1893 there were 600,000,000. In 1893 there were about 60,000,000 telegraph messages sent over the telegraph wires of the Western Union company. In the past ten years the number of persons employed by the company has increased from 1,100 to 10,000.

"This is a Massachusetts corporation in which the state should take great pride; the directors and prominent stockholders are men of the highest integrity and the commonwealth is not asked to put one dollar into the enterprise, but simply to allow the petitioners to place their own funds in it. The state should not by a refusal to allow the increase drive the company to New York where it can increase its capital at will. The company now pays the state nearly $150,000 in taxes and under an increase would pay a still larger sum."

In speaking of the fact that a "telephone" can be bought for $2, Gov. Long said it should be remembered that when a person now places the little instrument costing $2 to his ear, he has for the moment, not only the control of the $2 worth of property, but the use of millions of dollars of other people's property.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 8.—Mr. Waters introduced in the senate the general oyster law. Under its provisions tonging for oysters is permitted between Sept. 1 and April 25, and dredging from Oct. 15 to March 15. SCANDAL LOVERS' DAY

Opening of the Pollard-Breckinridge Suit.

Hundreds of Applications for Seats at the Trial—The Largest Court Room in the District, the One in Which Guiteau Was Convicted, Set Apart for the Proceedings To-day.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The trial of the suit brought against Congressman Wm. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, by Madeline V. Pollard, for breach of promise, and in which is involved the charge of betrayal, will begin this morning in this city.

Col. Enoch Totten, one of Col. Breckinridge's counsel, is ill in Florida, and, as he will not return to Washington for a week, it is likely that his associate, Col. Phil. Thompson, jr., of Kentucky, will ask for a postponement, but it is believed the court will not grant the request unless the counsel for the plaintiff consent, as a matter of courtesy, and this they are not disposed to do, in view of previous delays.

Miss Pollard is represented by Hon. Jere Wilson and Mr. Calderon Carlisle.

Mr. A. A. Wilson, the marshal of the District of Columbia, has received hundreds of applications for seats at the trial, but he has taken no action concerning them.

Lawyers are showing a great deal of interest in the legal battle that will be fought, and many of them, anticipating a crowd, applied for reserve seats in the space reserved for the bar.

In view of these applications, Marshal Wilson asked the judges of the district supreme court to allow the largest court room in their jurisdiction to be used and the request was granted. This chamber, known as criminal court room No. 1, was used for the trial of Guiteau.

TO BE BURIED AT PARIS.

No Doubt That Miss Van Etten Died of Extreme Privation.

PARIS, March 8.—The best sources of information agree that the death of Miss Ida Van Etten, the American writer, and the first secretary of the Working Women's society, was due to consumption, hastened by excessive privations. Miss Van Etten was indebted to the proprietors of the Hotel Continental, where she died, to the amount of $120 for room rent. She was several times requested to leave, but on every occasion she was permitted to remain because the managers had not the heart to put her out. Her sufferings, due to her impoverished condition, seemed at times to unbalance her mind. She repeatedly refused assistance offered by some American ladies and gentlemen permanently residing in the hotel, but occasionally accepted invitations to meals, being driven to acceptance by sheer hunger.

Ambassador Eustis received a cablegram from New York signed "C. Van Etten Mack," requesting him to have the body of Miss Van Etten buried in Paris, adding that the money necessary to defray the burial expenses would be remitted. The body was accordingly removed to the receiving vault in the American church, the pastor of which, the Rev. Dr. John B. Morgan, will officiate at the burial services. The date of interment has not yet been fixed.

"Dink" Wilson Pleased.

AUBURN, N. Y., March 8.—When Warden Stout told "Dink" Wilson he had been granted a respite of 60 days by the governor, he brightened up considerably and remarked: "That's nothing more than right," adding, "you'll never have to electrocute me, Mr. Stout." It is understood the stay was granted upon the ground of newly discovered evidence. The prisoner's new counsel, Judge Teller, of this city, claims to possess affidavits of witnesses not produced at the trial, who declare Wilson was not the man who fired the fatal shot that killed Detective Harvey.

JERSEY CITY, March 8.—Chancellor McGill has disposed of the Bentley scandal that recently excited society circles in this city, so far as his court is concerned. SPENDING MONEY AT HOME.

The member of a community who habitually ignores his home merchant, mechanic or tradesman and makes his purchases and spends his money in other towns does not deserve the name of a good citizen and should not be countenanced by those who have the best interests of their own locality at heart. That it pays to trade near home is a well established fact, and no town or city ever prospered whose citizens, enticed by the alluring baits held out by the merchant in the big cities, spend their money with them.

The local merchant and mechanic are interested in the progress and development of the town and country in which they live, and every dollar that they amass is reinvested and remains in the neighborhood. As they prosper their taxes increase, and just so much those of others are lightened. They assist in keeping up your schools, churches and other public institution and charities. But the person who spends his money in some distant city puts it beyond assisting in any local enterprise. The man in the city upon whom you bestow your custom has no further interest in you or your surroundings than the cash he receives from you. It is no concern of his whether you are as devoid of social, church or educational privileges as the inhabitants of Borrioboola-Gha, or whether your streets or highways are well made or an aboriginal Indian trail. The surplus money which he has to bestow will go to enrich the exchequer of institutions from which you will never receive any benefit and to add to the wealth of communities in which you have no financial interest.

And, further, there is no good reason for this impolitic and unbusinesslike diversion of trade. The business men in the smaller cities and towns can and do sell goods year in and year out as cheaply as do those of the larger places. The lower expenses, cheaper rent and immunity from the exorbitant municipal taxes which prevail in the great cities enable them to do so and still make a living profit. But the shrewd city merchants, by advertising certain goods at ridiculously low prices, manage to attract gullible patrons to their places of business, with the knowledge that they will succeed in selling them other goods at advanced prices to reimburse themselves for the loss on the "leader" and leave themselves a handsome profit.

The home merchant is established here and expects to pursue his business among us indefinitely. The continuance of his trade is dependent upon this fair and uniform treatment of his customers and the quality of his goods. His field is limited, and should he resort to shady methods or foist dishonest wares upon his patrons his reputation would be gone and his trade consequently lost. But the metropolitan merchant has a wide and an almost unlimited field. His patrons are from all parts of the country, and if he can be so fortunate as to get one "good deal" from each one he does not expect them to return. The ideal community is that in which there is a reciprocity of good feeling among merchants in all branches of trade, mechanics, professional men, workingmen and farmers, each availing himself as far as possible of the other's services, buying his goods or employing his labor, as the case may be. The community where this practice obtains is always found to be an exceptionally prosperous one, populated by cheerful, honest, neighborly and enterprising people, and a good place for the home seeker to locate in.

Revival of a Wallack Play.

What is likely to prove one of the most interesting theatrical events of the season will be the revival of "Rosedale; or, The Rifle Ball", in the Star Theatre, New York city, Monday, March 12, by the stock company of the Boston Grand Opera House. The play was first produced in Wallack's, now the Star Theatre, September 30, 1863, and proved to be such a success that it had an uninterrupted run of 125 performances. Since then, the public has not had an opportunity of seeing the play, so the revival should attract many thousands to this popular theatre.

The leading part of Elliot Gray, in which Lester Wallack, the creator of it, made such a hit, will on this occasion be played by Joseph Haworth, the well-known and popular actor. He will appear in the original costume worn by Lester Wallack. Isabelle Evesson will take the part of Rosa Leigh, originally played by Mary Gannon. William A. Mestmayer will be Bunberry Kobb, in which George Holland, the elder, was so amusing, and Frank J. Keenan, a young actor little known here, but who has made a reputation for himself outside of New York, will impersonate Miles McKenna, the villain of the piece, played by John Gilbert originally. The cast will also include Annie Clark, Helen Dayne, Kate Ryan, and others.

It may be interesting to know that the only members of the original cast living at the present moment are Mrs. John Hoey and W. H. Pope.

Manager Dexter of the Boston Grand Opera House intends sparing no expense in making this a most magnificent reproduction. The scenery has been specially painted; the costumes and accessories are new and superb. An auxiliary force of fifty men and women will appear in the Ballroom scene and that of the Gypsy's Camp. Altogether one hundred people will take part in the production.

3,000 bottles of Dr. Whitford's Bronchial Syrup have been sold in this section. A letter from C. W. RACE-TRACK GAMBLERS.

Report That the New Jersey Races Will Be Resumed—Effect on the Deadlock.

(Special to The Press.)

TRENTON, March 8.—It is reported here on good authority that the race-tracks at Guttenberg and Gloucester will open for business on March 19. Should this prove true, it may have a disastrous effect upon the rump Senate organization, if the Supreme Court does not reach a decision before that time. Several of the Democratic Senators have declared that if the tracks should resume business, they would at once go over to the Republican Senators and vote with them to repeal the race-track laws. The honesty of these avowals will be tested with the opening of the tracks.

The feeling prevalent here, however, is that the court will arrive at some conclusion before the end of next week. The justices have determined to lay aside all other matters and give their whole time and attention to the Senate trouble as of paramount importance.

GRAY HAIR has a beauty of its own, but a BALD PATE—that is different! Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

BUILDING LOANS.

H. O. Newman Gives Edifying Facts Concerning Safe Investments.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In a recent issue of your paper I noticed an article under the caption "Building and Loan Associations", which I perused with considerable interest for obvious reasons. Your informant evidently is identified with some local association here or elsewhere, and I commend him for his loyalty, but as an officer of the Plainfield branch of one of the so-called "National" associations to which reference is made in the article, I cannot tacitly consent to the innuendoes flung at these associations. I would not for a moment disparage our own home association, for I believe it to be a well-managed and prosperous institution, and worthy of confidence. While there have been failures of some of the "Nationals", as well as of local building loan associations, because of bad management or dishonesty, yet I claim it is unjust to class all such institutions in the one list.

The Geneva Association with its branches in all parts of New York State has proved a splendid financial investment for its shareholders. The New Jersey Building Loan and Investment Company, with its headquarters in Trenton, conducted on the same principles, has met with unqualified success, having issued during the two and one-half years of its existence about 25,000 shares of stock, and with its advantage of loaning the shareholders money in any part of the State has greater facilities for keeping the money in active use and thereby enabling it to earn good dividends for its members. Last year 13 per cent. was placed to the credit of each share, which rate, if continued, would redeem, in about eight years, the shares at par, that cost 65 cents. This is accomplished by the compounding of interest on the payments by the shareholders, which are made monthly.

For example, eight-years monthly payments on loans made would give the association four-years use of the money, without cost, but to the mutual benefit of the shareholders.

The president and treasurer of the New Jersey Building Loan and Investment Company are also president and cashier of the Trenton Trust and Safe Deposit Company, a large and strong institution. The president receives no salary from the investment company.

Dr. T. S. Davis, president of the Plainfield local branch, with myself, recently called at the Trust Company's office, and we were shown $169,000 of loans deposited by the Investment Company with them for safe keeping; and on investigation found the loans not to exceed 60 per cent. of the appraised value made by disinterested parties.

I make this detailed statement in justice to the company and to the worthy gentlemen who compose the local board of management and claim for this company that it is not a "money making scheme for its officers", any more than for its shareholders. H. O. NEWMAN,
Sec. and Treas. Local Branch N. J. B. L. and I. Co.

The Best Fiction Monthly.

The complete novel in the March number of Lippincott's is "A Desert Claim", by Mary E. Stickney. It is a charming tale of ranch life in Northern Colorado.

Gilbert Parker's serial, "The Trespasser", reaches its ninth chapter. "The Inmate of the Dungeon", by W. C. Morrow, is a story of uncommon power. Joel Chandler Harris, in "The Late Mr. Watkins of Georgia; His Relation to Oriental Folk-Lore", compares a curious legend of his own State with one of India.

In "A Prophet of the New Womanhood", Annie Nathan Meyer considers Henrik Ibsen from an unfamiliar point of view. Emma Henry Ferguson tells "More about Captain Reid", the Confederate blockade-runner.

John Gilmer Speed describes "The Training of the Saddle-Horse". Dr. Charles C. Abbott writes of "Bees and Buckwheat", and Charles McIlvaine of "The Evolution of Public Roads". In "Talks with the Trade", the subject of "Literary Mendicancy" is presented.

The poetry of the number is by Anna Robeson Brown and John James Meehan.

Saved by the Motorman.

About 7 last evening Michael Powers, of 129 Somerset street, was driving on Somerset street, when an electric car came along. There was another wagon coming from the opposite direction, and Mr. Powers thought he could pass between them without being caught, but he miscalculated. The next minute he found himself confronting the car, with the horse's head over the railing. The motorman stopped just in time to avert damage. Mr. Powers was scared.

Mr. Hetfield Has a Bad Fall.

Daniel G. Hetfield, a noted owner of game chickens of Union county, and well known in Plainfield, went Tuesday night to look at some choice game cocks owned by J. S. Shaw, a retired merchant living in 156th street, New York. As he was about to leave he turned the wrong way in the hall and pitched headlong down the cellar stairs. He was unconscious when picked up, and Mr. Shaw feared his skull was fractured. A doctor revived Hetfield and the patient will recover.

Farmer Roll Killed.

THE LYCEUM IS CHAMPION.

By a Margin of One Pin the Plainfield Bowlers Break the Tie and End the Tourney.

The Diocesan Union tournament ended last night in Newark when the C. Y. M. L. defeated the Catholic Institute team of that city by one pin, and so won the tournament.

The two clubs, tied for first place, had met before to bowl the deciding game, but a foul made by Curtin, of the Institutes, had made another game necessary. Victorious before, the Newark bowlers were confident of success and had over one hundred friends to witness the game. The thirty-five Plainfielders present were able to hold their own in rooting, however.

The Lyceums led by 4 pins in the first frame, were 3 behind in the second, and tied in the third. After the third the Institutes were in the lead until the last frame. There was much excitement when the last two men, Captains Lynch and Coughlan, rolled. Lynch was 10 pins ahead. Each made a spare and scored 18. The result was in doubt until the totals were calculated.

The score:

The umpires were John Traynor and John Delaney and the scorers George Delaney and William J. Kiely.

The clubs finished in the following order: C. Y. M. L. of Plainfield, first; Catholic Institutes, second; St. Josephs of Jersey City, third; and T. A. B's of Newark, fourth.

The presentation of the prize to the Lyceum will be made in the club-house early in April.

A LIBERAL PROPERTY-OWNER.

Mr. Barnaby Willing to Contribute Towards Water-Main Extention.

"Oak Wood", the well-known residence of the late ex-Mayor, John H. Evans, on Plainfield avenue, now owned by F. A. Barnaby, has been undergoing alterations since the beginning of September last. The house has been overhauled and remodeled, and instead of the original French roof it now has a pitched roof. The work on the exterior, except the painting, is about finished; and the work of putting up the hard-wood trimmings will be begun in a few days.

The driveways and the lawn have been plowed up by Gardener Edward Barry, and all is now ready for seeding down. Expensive archways have been erected at the entrances to the grounds, and cottages for the coachmen and the gardener are being built on the premises.

The barn is a model of its kind, containing stalls for eight horses, outside box-stalls, sufficient carriage and harness room, and a large stand for washing carriages.

On the whole the place is one of the most desirable in the city. The family, who are now living in Brooklyn, expect to move here about May 1. Mr. Barnaby, it is understood, is willing to contribute toward the expense of having the water main extended from West Seventh street along Plainfield avenue to his residence.

OBITUARY.

Voorhees Van Fleet.

The death occurred in North Plainfield today of Voorhees VanFleet, one of the oldest and best esteemed residents of the borough, whose home was at Duer and Emily streets.

Voorhees VanFleet was born on a farm between Greenbrook and Bound Brook in 1806, and was the son of John and Charity VanFleet, now deceased. His father was a hatter, and Voorhees learned and followed that trade until 1838. He went to railroading in 1840. At that time the Central Railroad ran only between Somerville and Elizabethport, and fares were collected on the train. Some time afterward Mr. Van Fleet was engaged to sell tickets from the platform of the waiting room, a small improvised structure with no ticket room. Between then and the time he left the road in 1868, he was engaged in various capacities in the construction of the extension of the Central Railroad from Somerville to Easton. When he was ticket seller he also acted in the capacity of freight and general agent, and even propelled the coal and other cars in drilling, by means of crowbar and shoulder, there being no drill engine.

Mr. Van Fleet's surviving family consists of his wife and three sons, George, of Prospect avenue; Clinton, of New York, and Jeptha, of Newark. His wife was Miss Sarah Holton, whose family lived on the site of Postmaster Pope's present home, Fifth and Cherry streets.

Death came to Mr. Van Fleet calmly and peacefully, the result of a paralytic stroke.

REPLY TO THE ROOSTER.

Old Communicants Protest Against the Innovations in Grace P. E. Church.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The rooster has been heard from, and I sincerely hope only "crowing". It will be great delight for the majority of Grace Church congregation if the crowing lasts only for a short time. The services rendered (no more elaborate than has been since we worshiped in our new church) is as ritualistic as is desirable (even more so than many prefer).

I thought church services were for the benefit of the people attending the services for worship. If all is to be sung, how can the congregation enter in heartily, enjoying the worship in God's house? He says if we call upon Him He will answer; certainly, that is plain to us all. If I were in distress and wanted to take my trouble to God in prayer I most certainly would not sing-song to Him, but talk. Can we pray in our family in that way to reach the hearts of those we love and desire to bring into the fold of the loving Saviour? And how can we pray in church consistently in any way but repeat slowly and reverently to God.

The cross leading the processionals is not objectionable, for we all know that Christ's suffering on the cross for us all is before us daily to help us live consistent Christian lives.

In ages past, Psalms were sung. If the psalter is chanted, possibly those of us (and there are many) who prefer the service rendered plainly, can abide it; but most certainly if this change continues permanently (with more likely added) many will not remain to be so martyred with services that are more outward form than inward grace. We cannot pray to God from our hearts reverently and feel we are in close communion with our Heavenly Father in the tone the services are now rendered. The old communicants are not in favor of innovations, and we protest against the new element coming in and making dissension and changing what we were satisfied with. It may be suggested we are behind the times, but how often the old is better than the new! Our service is called by many beautiful, but if we are not spiritual-minded and feel in our hearts what we pray for, what is the service worth?

CONSERVATIVE.

Junior Endeavorers Doing Great Good.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed Church had charge of the service in the lecture room of the church last night. The audience was so large that camp chairs had to be placed in the aisles to accommodate the crowd. Under the direction of Mrs. Robert A. Meeker, the President, a very interesting programme was rendered, as follows:

Table Talk.

It is a generally admitted characteristic of the Americans that they are always anxious to excel in every direction, hence it is not so surprising that "Table Talk", comes to us this month very full of new ideas and worthy of its reputation as the American authority upon all culinary and household topics. The menus for the month are practical and economical, and the Housekeepers Inquiry Department will be a delight to every woman interested in her home, as will also an article on "Healthful Dwellings". Those interested in "Irish Laces and Linens" will be glad to read the short sketch of Mrs. Ernest Hart's struggle to give to Donegal its present well-deserved fame. The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

MR. NEEDHAM ACCEPTS.

Deeply Sensible of the Honor, and Makes Economy His Platform.

The following letter of acceptance has been received from H. E. Needham:

North Plainfield, March 7, 1894.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and H. N. Spencer, Executive Committee:

Gentlemen—After six years service in the Borough Council there was a sense of relief in anticipating a release from further official duties and responsibilities.

But the offer of the nomination for the Mayoralty of the Borough, made by the Republican Convention, I do not feel at liberty to decline, and accept the nomination, feeling deeply sensible of the honor conferred on me in being selected as the candidate of the party for this position.

If elected it will be by aim to be efficient in the performance of the duties of the office, to favor as strict an economy in expenditures as is compatible with the public interests, and by no act of mine to deservedly lessen the confidence that has been so generously manifested.

Yours sincerely,
H. E. NEEDHAM.

MR. POWELL OF PLAINFIELD.

He Says New York Police Protect Violators of Law for Financial Considerations.

Aaron M. Powell of this city read a paper on "The Question of State Regulation of Vice" before the hygienic section of the Academy of Medicine, 17 West Forty-third street, New York, last night.

"In New York"—he said—"we see spasmodic attempts to suppress the social evil, but the police are really its protectors, and permit brothels to exist. The gambling saloon and the brothel are sources of revenue and strength in the politics of New York.

"State laws and regulations should apply to men as well as women. They should vigorously punish the incitement to vice of minors and the abduction of minors. Keepers of disorderly houses and owners of such property should be punished by imprisonment. A fine is a mere incident."

Progressive Crescent Wheelmen.

A meeting of the Crescent Wheelmen was held in their rooms in the Board of Trade Building last evening.

L. B. Woolston was elected a member of the Board of Governors to fill the vacancy caused by the death of President Charles P. Leggett. The Board was then reorganized by the election of Vice-President W. H. Rogers to the Presidency and of Mr. Woolston to Mr. Rogers's office. Resolutions on the death of Mr. Leggett were presented and passed, the Secretary being ordered to spread them on the minutes and send a copy to Mrs. Leggett.

The Construction Committee, composed of J. A. Haynes, L. B. Woolston and W. H. Rogers, reported favorable progress. They had leased the grounds selected for five years at an annual rent of $65, and made arrangements for fencing and grading.

DON'T BE DECEIVED by any crafty dealer who tells you he has something else that's "just as good" as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Is it probable? The only medicine which is guaranteed by its makers. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, they'll return the money.

THE HOSE QUESTION.

Carney Bros. Write to the Common Council Insisting that They Were Unfairly Barred Out of Competition Against Outsiders.

To the Honorable Common Council.

GENTLEMEN:—We notice in reading the proceedings of your meeting that our estimate for furnishing the city with 2,000 feet of hose should have been in the hands of the City Clerk at a stated hour. This we were not aware of, supposing that the bids would be opened at the meeting of the Council. We would willingly have complied with your rules had we known of them, and can assure you we regret to be barred out simply by being a few minutes late. We assure you, gentlemen, we did not learn the price of a single competitor during those few hours. We would also say we sold to the City of Plainfield some years ago rubber hose under a five-year guarantee, and were never asked to replace a foot of it. Again we submitted an estimate for cotton hose and were 5 cents per foot lower than the outside parties who received the order, yet the hose was of the same quality, made by the same people, rubber-lined, at the same factory; the only difference was in the name; ours was Duplex and the saving on that order alone would have been worth considering. We are not asking any favors. We always believed a councilman's duty to the taxpayers was to get the best at the lowest price. All we ask is fair competition, and inasmuch as you did not specify time of closing bids in the official papers of our city we claim that you have done an injustice. Should we have been the lowest in price we stood ready to furnish ample security that our contract would be fulfilled. CARNEY BROS.

A city official says that Carney Bros. never sold any hose to the City of Plainfield, and that the hose they did sell to the old Fire Commission at $1 a foot had to be sold for junk four years later at 1½ cents a foot. The authorities seem to think Carney Bros. present bid ridiculous, being 10 cents lower than the manufacturers' own figures. The City prefers to deal direct with the manufacturers and save agents' commissions.

Daffodils Already.

With its black-and-white frontispiece of Daffodils and the bunch of Lilacs which forms one of its color supplements, The Art Amateur for March is very suggestive of the Spring now so close upon us, while the companion color-piece, "Trial Trip of the Volunteer", carries us still further forward into the warmer weather of early Summer. To keep a proper balance, however, the "Woods in Winter" are shown in an engraving of a picture by Montbard, and the student is instructed how to paint "Snow and Ice". As usual, the number is crowded with working designs for all kinds of decoration, and is rich in its features of practical instruction in painting in oil, water-colors and pastel, and on china, as well as for wood-carving, pyrography and embroidery. 35 cents. Montague Marks, publisher, 23 Union Square, New York.

Plainfield's School Debt.

The annual report of the Board of Education for the year ending August 31, 1893, has just been issued in pamphlet form. The financial statement shows the land, buildings and furniture to be worth $203,250, and the total assets $219,874.82. The liabilities are as follows:

Washington Building, bonds 7 per cent.	$2,000.00
Franklin Building, bond and mortgage 5 per cent.	15,000.00
Bryant Building, bond and mortgage	28,000.00
Irving Building, bond and mortgage	30,000.00
	$73,000.00

$1,000 of the Washington bonds will be paid this month.

Here's to Her!

My theme is one that's been too long unsung—
I sing the woman who can hold her tongue
At evening circle, picnic or high tea;
In fact, wherever she may chance to be,
And listen to the gossip of the town—
How Mrs. A has turned her cashmere gown,
And Mr. B has cut young Dr. C
For telling tales of flirty Widow D,
And Lawyer E is smitten with Miss F,
And Deacon G is fast becoming deaf,
And, oh, much more—as if she never heard
Of all the ceaseless chat a single word—
And who, not only at such times as these—
I mean lawn parties, sewing bees and teas—
But at all seasons, when it's for the best,
Can keep her thoughts close prisoned in her breast,
And though a spark may glitter in her eye,
To speech unworthy it ne'er gives reply.
Alas! alas! let no one look at me,
For with regret I own I am not she.
Were I, I really shouldn't think it wrong,
For once, to celebrate myself in song.
But' she must be somewhere, so I had sung
The wondrous woman who can hold her tongue.

Born Dumb.

My little love! my speechless child!
Can I forget my woman's heart and be Forever mute to grief, forever mild?

Is it not hard to bear the falling rod
When such an ailment for these baby lips
Divinely suits the policy of God?

The lambs that play too long at hide and seek
Have tongues that ask for mothers; these, I know,
Learn lovely meanings when the children speak.

The mother comes from far across the field
And calls assurance to her anxious child,
As I had answered had my lamb appealed!

So with unfeathered blackcaps; so with things
Whose tones are pitched too low for mortal ears.
They plead, and nature sends them breast and wings.

But I shall never hear that storied speech,
That lovely language whose expression is
Defiance of all rules that man may teach;

Nor hear against my heart a son's content
When for his mouth the willing milk is kind,
And for his lips my fountain is well spent.

I have brought silence to my husband's knee
And he (Oh, baby, baby, try to speak!)
So greatly counted on the mimicry

Of words his wit prepared to plague thy lips,
Ready to kiss that rosebud impotence,
Thy mouth, and garner all thy precious slips.

"Mother," he used to say, "when I am worn
In days to come with writing, you shall bring
This bud of April on your shoulder borne,

"And he shall chatter to my chain, or tear
My latest lyric, or shall cry to touch
The raining splendors of your ravished hair,

"Until he dwindle and his eyes grow dim,
And we can worship him before the fire,
And kiss each other many thanks for him.

"We will undress him in your cradling lap,
And spy upon his beauty, praying God
To bless his life with fruit of tender hap;

"Then I will have him to my heart awhile"
(Oh, baby, baby, baby, try to speak!)
"And watch the fading of his sleepy smile

"Till dimples cannot follow kisses pressed
Upon the pouting slumber of his mouth,
And I restore his beauty to thy breast."

Oh, husband, husband, and the child is dumb!
The lamb outspeaks him, and the day-old thrush—
How shall I break this news when that you come?

My travail was for silence, and my dove
Can only watch his mother's moving lips,
And never give her back a word of love!

Father of his upon the ocean, come!
Thy wife desires thy head upon her breast—
The child of our enchantment is born dumb!

—Norman Gale.

"Mind" and "Heart."

Mind is a master that, ruthless, slays its noblest slaves;
Heart a loving savior, ador'd by ev'ry one it saves.
Mind is icy cold, calculating, harsh and severe;
Heart, tender and gentle, throbs but with hope and fear.
Mind, on Fancy's wings, flies high as fame can carry name;
Heart sighs for love, abash'd, blushing red with modest shame.
Mind, in rich mental finds, knows a strange, triumphant bliss;
Heart, ecstatic, trembles but beneath the lover's kiss.
Mind strives in brilliance to outshine brightness of a star;
Hearts are all contentment when they deeply loving are.
Mind seeks only knowledge wherever it may be sought;
Heart learns not a lesson save by little Cupid taught.
Mind boldly contemplates e'en the very throne of God;
Heart, submissive, bows subdued by woman's slightest nod.
Mind argues, that which is unknown, cannot be, forsooth;
Heart, though unable to expound, rightly feels the truth.
Mind is ever worried with the politics of states;
Hearts are never anxious save for happiness of mates.
Mind's lust is eternal as the palpitating air;
Heart oft is satisfied with a tress of silken hair.
Mind doubts and scorns the happiness of weak, joyous heart;
Heart laughs at and is bored by Mind's science, lore and art;
Mind, sullen, reasons woe, darkness, hate come from above;
Heart's sweet heart beats thankful that God gives light, joy and love.
Mind, safe, traverses fathomless distances of space;
Heart, fatally entangled, trips in gauzy bits of lace.
Mind goes castle building wherever it can roam;
Heart, in hut, cottage or mansion, simply craves a home.
Mind is brave and able, dashing, selfish and conceited;
Heart is noble, loyal, generous—my contrast is completed!

Jes' them words thataway!
As punctchul-like as mornin dast
To ever heave in sight
Gran'pap 'ud allus haf to ast—
"How did you rest last night?"

Us young uns used to grin,
At breakfast, on the sly,
And mock the wobble of his chin
And eyebrows halt so high
And kind. "How did you rest last night?"
We'd mumble and let on
Our voices trimbled, and our sight
Was dim and hearin gone.

Inspiration.

Not like a daring, bold, aggressive boy
Is Inspiration, eager to pursue;
But rather like a maiden, fond, yet coy,
Who gives herself to him who best doth woo.

Once she may smile, or thrice, thy soul to fire
In passing by; but when she turns her face,
Thou must persist and seek her with desire
If thou wouldst win the favor of her grace.

And if, like some winged bird, she cleaves the air,
And leaves thee spent and stricken on the earth,
Still must thou strive to follow even there,
That she may know thy valor and thy worth.

Then shall she come, unveiling all her charms,
Giving thee joy for pain, and smiles for tears,
And thou shalt clasp her in thy longing arms
The while she murmurs music in thine ears.

But ere her kiss has faded from thy cheek,
She shall flee from thee over hill and glade,
And thou must seek—aye, ever seek and seek—
For each new conquest of this phantom maid.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment, There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive direct by from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

AGAIN WITH HIS FAMILY

Coughlin's First Free Day in Over Four Years.

Wild and Affecting Scenes in the Chicago Court Room When the Verdict Was Announced—Men Went Frantic With Joy—Prisoner and Jury Shed Tears—The Wife Overcome.

CHICAGO, March 9.—Daniel Coughlin is a free man to-day. For the first time since the morning of May 25, 1889, when he was stripped of his detective's star and placed under arrest by order of Mayor Creigier, he enjoys the precious boon of personal liberty. Once convicted of murder and conspiracy and consigned by the verdict of the jury to the penitentiary for the term of his natural life, granted a new trial by the supreme court as the result of errors in the previous proceedings, brought back from Joliet after three years of incarceration, a jury of his peers last evening declared, as the outcome of his second trial, that has occupied four months and four days, that he had neither part nor parcel in the assassination of Dr. Patrick Henry Cronin. And with this verdict the curtain is rung down, so far as the courts of Cook county are concerned, upon one of the most celebrated crimes in the history of the republic.

When the jury retired to consider their verdict, Coughlin turned in his chair and watched the men upon whom his liberty, if not his life, depended. His wife, who had been sitting behind him, laid her head on his shoulder and sobbed hysterically, while his little son and daughter, the former having been born after his arrest, climbed upon his knee and told in prattling speech how much they loved him. Word came from the jury-room that an immediate verdict might not be expected, and accordingly the bailiffs decided that Coughlin should be returned to the jail.

During the ensuing hour all kinds of stories were circulated regarding the conditions that prevailed in the jury room. One had it that the jury stood nine to three for conviction with the death penalty, another that an informal ballot had resulted in a vote of ten to two for a fourteen years' sentence. From the window of a sky-scraping office structure on the other side of Washington street, the movements of the twelve men could be plainly distinguished. Two of the number divested themselves of their coats on entering the room, conveying the impression that they were in for a siege. Juror Clark Bruce opened a discussion that apparently waxed warm at times, various jurors gesticulating wildly and pounding the table. Shortly before 4 o'clock the jurors withdrew to a far corner of the room where they were screened from observation, and ten minutes later announced that they had agreed upon a verdict. In a few moments the court room was densely crowded.

Coughlin was brought in at 4:25 and given a seat in the centre of a ring composed of six stalwart bailiffs. Immediately in his rear, looking careworn and anxious, sat his gray-haired father. Five minutes elapsed, and then the jury entered. Coughlin rivited his eyes upon each juror in turn, but there was nothing in a single face to give an inkling of the contents of the paper that Foreman Holsman held in his hand. An impressive silence prevailed. Judge Tuthill broke it with the query:

"Have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied Holsman, as he passed the paper to the bench.

The judge glanced at the sheet of legal cap and passed it to Clerk Melvin. Every ear was strained. Coughlin half leaned forward and grasped the arm of his hair.

"We find the defendant, Daniel Coughlin, not guilty," read out the clerk in clear, emphatic tones.

For a moment not a soul stirred. Then from the rear of the room came a cheer. A hundred throats joined in and pandemonium prevailed. The cheers were taken up by the crowd outside and soon were re-echoing through the vaulted corridors of the big structure. Men slid down the banisters or went down the steps in jumps, shouting as they reached the open air: "Coughlin not guilty."

In the court room the enthusiasm continued, no effort being made by the court or attaches to maintain decorum. Coughlin himself seemed stunned as the words fell from the clerk's lips. Then by an effort he arose from his seat, pushed back the crowd and exclaimed in triumphant tones:

"Boys, justice has come at last."

The crowd gave an answering cheer. Pausing for a moment to wring the hand of his father, Coughlin jumped into the jury box and thanked every man in turn while the tears streamed down his face. Each man shook his hand and more than one of the twelve wiped away a suspicious moisture from his eyes. Judge Tuthill thanked the twelve collectively and dismissed them from duty.

In the meantime Coughlin's faithful little wife, who had sat by his side throughout both trials, had heard the news and hurried to the court room. Coughlin was about to pass out through the judge's chamber when the cry was raised by a hundred voices:

"Dan, Dan, come back; here's your wife."

The ex-detective turned just in time to catch his helpmate as, sobbing and half fainting, she fell into his arms. The couple, with Coughlin's father and a few friends remained in the judge's chamber for some time in the expectation that the throng in the corridor would disperse, but the crowd would not budge. Finally, recourse was had to a side exit, but this, too, had its sentinels and his appearance was the signal for a yell:

"Three cheers for Coughlin," which were given with a vim.

With hundreds at his heels, Coughlin endeavored to get to the carriage in waiting, but his enthusiastic friends pressed so closely about him that he was forced to take refuge in the sheriff's office, where his wife and father joined him.

The crowd remained outside, but by a flank movement the trio reached the open air and were driven to the home that the ex-detective had left four years ago.

NEW TARIFF BILL.

Important Changes Made By the Democratic Senators.

The tariff bill as laid before the full membership of the senate finance committee yesterday differed in many schedules from the bill as it was received from the house. The chief features upon which public interest centred were the provisions in regard to the tariff on sugar, iron ore, lead, wool and its manufactures, cotton manufactures, and the internal revenue taxes on whiskey and tobacco.

The sugar provision is as follows: All sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice or of beet juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above eighty degrees, shall pay a duty of one cent per pound, and for every additional degree or fraction of a degree above eighty and not above ninety degrees shown by the polariscope test, shall pay one one-hundredth of one cent per pound additional, and above ninety and not above ninety-six degrees, for every additional degree or fraction of a degree shown by the polariscope test, shall pay a duty of two one-hundredths of a cent per pound additional, and above ninety-six degrees by polariscope test, shall pay a duty of one and four-tenths cents per pound. Molasses testing not above fifty-six degrees by the polariscope shall pay a duty of two cents per gallon. Molasses testing above fifty-six degrees shall pay a duty of four cents per gallon.

Iron ore, including manganiferous iron ore, also the dross or residum of burnt pyrites, 40 cents a ton.

Coal is taken from the free list and made dutiable also at 40 cents a ton, and coke at 15 cents.

Lead ore, which in the Wilson bill was 15 per cent. ad valorem, and lead dross, three-fourths of one cent per pound; provided, that silver ore and all other ores containing lead shall pay a duty of three-fourths of one cent per pound on the lead contained therein, according to sample and assay at the port of entry.

Raw wool is left on the free list exactly as in the Wilson bill, the provision to go into effect Aug. 2, 1894. In manufactures of wool the valuations as given in the Wilson bill are stricken out, and the schedules now read as follows:

Wool of the sheep, hair of the camel, goat, alpaca, and other like animals in the form of slubbing waste, roving waste, ring waste, mungo, shoddies, garnetted or carded waste, carbonized noils or other waste product, any of which is composed wholly or in part of wool, the hair of the camel, goat, alpaca, and other like animals, which has been improved or advanced beyond its original condition as waste by the use of machinery or the application of labor, or both, and carbonized wool, shall be subject to a duty of fifteen per cent. ad valorem.

The whisky tax is raised to a dollar and ten cents. The bonded period on whisky is extended five years, that is from 3 to 8 years.

Cigars are taxed $5 a thousand. Cigarettes in paper $1 a thousand. Cigarettes in tobacco 50 cents a thousand.

The income tax provision of 2 per cent. remains in the bill, but the tax on non-residents is stricken out.

Barley, and barley pearled, patent or hulled, is raised from 25 to 30 per cent. ad valorem and barley malt from 30 to 40 per cent.

Lumber remains on the free list.

Collars and cuffs, composed wholly or in part of linen, are increased from 35 to 45 per cent. ad valorem.

Our treaty with Hawaii is to be terminated by the terms of this bill, section 105—the internal revenue section—reading as follows: "That the president of the United States shall immediately upon the passage of this act give notice to the government of the Hawaiian islands that the United States intends to terminate the treaty of June 3, 1875, made between the United States and his majesty the king of the Hawaiian islands, as provided in the fifth article of said treaty, and it is hereby further enacted that after the expiration of 12 months from the time of giving such notice the said treaty shall be terminated and its provisions cease to be obligatory upon the contracting parties thereto."

REBELS TURN THIEVES.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 9.—On the night of Tuesday, March 6, a barge loaded with bacon, flour and cylinder oil, belonging to the firm of Levering & Co., of Baltimore and Rio Janeiro, was stolen by the insurgents from the side of the Hamburg steamer Catania, to which she was moored. As there was no German warship in Rio harbor, the German vessels, with others, having withdrawn on account of the prevalence of yellow fever, the head of the house of Levering & Co., applied to Admiral Benham for redress. Admiral Benham declined to interfere because the stolen barge, as well as the steamer from whose side she was taken, was under the German flag.

The German government has notified the legation here that a German warship may be expected in Rio harbor very soon, when it is probable that some notice will be taken of the barge incident.

Thefts on the part of the insurgents have been very common since the beginning of the trouble here and in most instances the stealing has been very adroitly done. British officers laugh at British skippers when they complain of their losses.

As the tug Isabel, flying the British flag, was steaming in the outer harbor she was fired upon by the insurgent steamer Victoria, the shot passing through the Isabel's flag. The Isabel stopped immediately and the Victoria, by signal, compelled her to come along side, which she did. The Victoria took off one of the crew of the Isabel, pressing him into the insurgent service, and ordered the tug away. The matter was at once reported to the British authorities, but as yet they have taken no action whatever.

All of the naval commanders except Admiral Benham have left the port for places of safety from the yellow fever.

The deaths from yellow fever now average 123 a day.

ROME GREATLY EXCITED.

Several Arrests Made in Connection With the Dynamite Outrage.

ROME, March 9.—Excitement is very great throughout the city over the explosion of the dynamite bomb last night in front of the Camera di Deputati, wherein the sittings of the chamber of deputies are held. The police state this morning that they have found eight persons who were wounded seriously by the explosion and they believe that others were injured, but do not care to make public the fact.

Several persons are locked up on suspicion of being implicated in the plot. Two of the suspects are women.

Troops are to-day patrolling the vicinity of the scene of the explosion.

It is indeed fortunate that the chamber of deputies had adjourned an hour before the outrage took place, otherwise it is likely that several persons would have been killed, as the number in the vicinity of the chamber was at least four times as great an hour earlier than it was at the time the bomb was exploded.

The explosion was terrific, resembling the detonation of a large cannon. Everybody in the vicinity was startled. Persons were hurled to the ground, while others, able to keep their feet, ran in all directions in their endeavors to escape they knew not what.

The bomb must have been charged with material of very high explosive force, as every window for some distance around the scene of the explosion was shattered, railings were twisted, heavy stones moved from their places and many evidences of the tremendous power of its contents were apparent. Many of those injured were cut by fragments of broken glass, but others were hurt, some of them badly, by being thrown violently to the ground or against buildings, stonework etc.

One of the injured was this morning said to be dying.

That Armor Plate Matter.

PITTSBURG, March 9.—James E. Smith, esq., the senior counsel in the armor plate sensation, in an interview, said: "The fact of the matter is the whole story has not yet been told. It will be, however, and if the proper authorities do not lay the facts before the public, I shall be forced to make a clear and specific statement myself. The public ought to know the whole truth. This much I will say, that there is not one scintilla of truth in the statement that there was a conspiracy on the part of the men by whom I was employed. If defective armor plates were smuggled in among those approved by the government inspectors it was not done by my clients or with their consent."

Trouble in the A. P. A.

SPRINGFIELD, O., March 9.—C. O. Wildasin, president of the state A. P. A., caused a sensation by charging that the organization is being used for political purposes. He claims he has proof that a coterie of politicians and office holders in the A. P. A. at Cincinnati, Cleveland and Toledo, called the inner circle, has been formed to use the organization for the advancement of their own political fortunes. President Wildasin went to Cleveland last night to investigate the order there, and he says he will "fire" all the A. P. A.'s in the state who have gone into the inner circle.

Fatal Locomotive Boiler Explosion.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 9.—Lehigh Valley railroad engine No. 468, hauling a coal train, exploded at Tannery station just as Engineer Patrick Dugan, a new man, was about to enter the telegraph station near by. The fireman, John Lenox, also a new man, who came from Long Island, was at his post and he and Arthur Dotter and Edward Fox, two brakemen, who lived at White Haven, were killed. The engine is a complete wreck

SNAG FOR BLAND BILL

Cleveland Said to Be Ready With a Veto.

Efforts to Force it to a Vote Today—Believed That its Chances of Passing are Not as Favorable as They Were Yesterday—Senator Sherman's Opposition Likely to Count.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—After routine business the senate this morning again took up the seigniorage bill, Mr. Allison taking the floor to address the senate on his motion to reconsider the vote ordering the engrossment and third reading of the bill. While the silver men are as determined as ever to force the bill to a vote and will probably succeed in doing this to-day, it is the general belief that the measure is weaker before the senate to-day than it was yesterday. Mr. Sherman's speech, overflowing with facts, figures and reasons to prove that not only was there no gain or seigniorage to be taken advantage of, but that the transactions in the purchase of silver bullion had resulted in enormous loss, and that the passage of the present bill would inevitably result in a single silver standard, was listened to with much interest and may have some weight when the balloting is reached.

The statement is made this morning by one of the most prominent men in public life that the president will veto the seigniorage bill if it passes the senate. The gentleman talked with the president regarding the matter and the reason given is that the bill would be destructive of the repose which now surrounds the financial system of the country and, further, that it would tend to weaken our credit abroad. Secretary Carlisle is known to be unfavorable to the bill and he is understood to have represented to the president that the money that would result from the coinage of the seigniorage is not needed and that it is his intention to sell whatever bonds may be necessary to supply the deficiencies in the national treasury, and this without any regard to the contention raised that this money ought only to be used in compliance with the terms of the resumption act.

THE PRINTER'S BAD BLUNDER

Wilson's Speech Sent Out Under the Reed Speech Cover Leaf.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—An annoying error has been discovered in the distribution of the tariff speeches of ex-Speaker Reed and Chairman Wilson of the ways and means committee. They were printed at the same office, and the usual care was exercised in their preparation and circulation. Among the congressmen who sent out Mr. Reed's speech was Mr. Van Voorhis, of Ohio. He received yesterday from an excited and indignant constituent the copy of the speech sent to him, with a request for an explanation. An examination disclosed the fact that from a republican point of view the thing was a whited sepulcher. The cover was all right—"Tariff Speech Delivered by the Hon. Thomas B. Reed," while the body of the pamphlet was "the tariff speech of the Hon. W. L. Wilson." An investigation is in progress.

Says O'Brien is in Hayti.

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y., March 9.—An evening paper here claims to have received word that Tom O'Brien, the noted bunco steerer, who created a sensation by escaping from his keep, who brought him to Utica from Dannemora prison on habeas corpus proceedings, is doing soldier duty in Hayti, that he is behaving himself and stands high with the officials. The paper says that O'Brien after escaping went to New Orleans, thence to Paris and, after escaping from a French gendarme, fled to Buenos Ayres, where he and Doc Minchon engaged in the drug business. O'Brien later going to Hayti.

Riker Still After the Bonds.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Mr. C. L. Riker, of Chicago, who recently became very prominent because of an effort on his part to secure a writ of mandamus in the district courts to compel Secretary Carlisle to deliver to him a part of the $50,000,000 bonds just issued, and which he appealed to the court of appeals on his being refused an order from the lower courts, still persists in his cause. He has been given permission to withdraw his appeal to the court of appeals in order to amend it. He has deposited the necessary $50 to appeal the case and has retained as counsel Mr. G. A. King.

Robert Ross' Funeral.

TROY, N. Y., March 9.—The funeral of Robert Ross, the republican killed at the election Tuesday while endeavoring to prevent repeaters from voting in the 13th ward, will occur this afternoon from the Second Presbyterian church. The remains will lie in state from 12 to 2 o'clock, and it is expected that an immense throng will attend the obsequies. In the afternoon the republican clubs of the city will attend in a body. Flags are at half mast to-day and business places will be closed this afternoon.

Second Sentence for Bigamy.

J., March 9.—Leonard Jones, who was recently released from state's prison after serving two years for bigamy, has been sent back to perform another two years' sentence for marrying a third wife, Priscilla Pierce, the latest bride, who has two husbands living besides Jones, was given six months in jail. Jones is white, the woman is a mulatto.

Pinta's Crew Were Slandered.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The story from Alaska, recently published, that nearly every man on board the U. S. ship Pinta was under arrest for violating the law forbidding the union of white, with natives, is denied in a letter from the governor of Alaska. He declares that not a man of the ship's crew was ever arrested on a criminal charge.

PATERSON STRIKE RIOT

Newkirk's Injuries Prove to Be Quite Serious.

He Will Be Confined to His Home for Several Days as a Result of His Encounter With the Mob of Striking Ribbon Weavers—Several Arrests of Leaders Made So Far.

PATERSON, N. J., March 9.—The police are busy this morning endeavoring to discover the leaders of the mob that last night assaulted Newkirk, the ribbon weaver who refused to go on strike with the other operatives. Several arrests have been made and others are expected to be taken into custody. Newkirk is badly injured and may not be able to leave his home for several days. Only his pluck, it is believed, saved him from being killed.

It appears that Newkirk slipped out of the mill, without the mob that had assembled to greet him being aware of it, and was half a block away when they saw him. The multitude, angry men then started after him. When Newkirk reached the corner of Mill and Ward streets a large and powerful weaver, who headed the mob, struck him on the face, knocking him into the gutter. Newkirk, who is also large and powerful, regained his feet and, drawing a piece of iron about a foot long from his coat pocket, faced the crowd and retreated back to the mill fellowing all who came in his way to the ground. When he arrived at the mill he was unable to gain an entrance, and while grooping for the door, almost blind with blood, a striker struck him on the head with a stone, knocking him down on the steps of the factory. The crowd then pressed forward and began to trample the prostrate man, when two policemen, Call and Bush, appeared and were obliged to beat their way to the mill door. After much difficulty they reached Newkirk, who was again on his feet wielding his iron bar right and left, trying to keep the crowd at bay. When the officers reached Newkirk they drew their clubs and ordered the crowd back, but they refused to obey the order. The police then undertook to escort Newkirk to his home on Stony road, but when near the Passaic falls the foot of the hill in front of the latter's residence threatened to throw the badly beaten weaver over the precipice. Thinking that the strikers would carry out their threat the policemen hustled Newkirk to the police station. When Newkirk and the officers were near the postoffice stones and bricks were flying in all directions. It required the services of several officers to prevent the mob from entering the court yard.

Capt. Lyon's Resignation Accepted.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The president has accepted the resignation of Capt. Marcus W. Lyon, of the ordnance corps of the army, to take effect immediately. This disposes of a case that has given the war department much embarrassment for several weeks ago. Capt. Lyon was ordnance inspector at Providence, R. I. Irregularity was found in his accounts, resulting in charges being preferred against him. The aggregate more than $600 or $800, but they were numerous, and he had destroyed the records of his office presumably to prevent the evidences of guilt being known. When he was arrested and notified that he would be court martialed he tendered his resignation.

Public Meeting of Troy Citizens.

TROY, N. Y., March 9.—A public meeting of citizens to protest against the alleged irregularities practiced on election day and to denounce the murder of Robert Ross, was held here last night. The Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church was filled to the doors and an over-flow meeting was held in the Fifth Avenue Baptist church. Stirring addresses were given by the same speakers to the two audiences which numbered over 5,000 people. The outcome of the demonstration is to be the speedy appointment of a committee of safety to have charge of prosecutions, the trials to take the same method as in the case of the Graves and other offenders.

She is a Great Battleship.

PHILADELPHIA, March 9.—The trial trip of the new 10,200 ton battleship Indiana, the first of her class in the navy and built in this country, the largest ever constructed and very fast vessel. She was practically under five hours' continuous steaming at high speed, made half a dozen turns without reducing her speed, and during all this time her machinery worked smoothly as if it had been thoroughly "timbered." It is believed that on her final trip she will show a speed of 16 knots, winning for her builders about $50,000 premium.

In Touch With the Pope.

ROME, March 9.—A French translation of discourses of Archbishop Ireland appears as a preface to a work issued by Prof. Klein of the Paris university. Monsieur de Rome, commenting on this fact, says his discourses show that the roll is in common with the aim of the pope and Cardinal Gibbons.

Proceedings in the House.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—The house yesterday passed the bill reported by the Dockery committee, abolishing the offices of commissioner and deputy commissioner of customs, and transferring the duties to the auditors and comptrollers of the treasury. The bill effect a saving of $50,480 on account of salaries. Bills were also passed to protect the fisheries of the Potomac river for a period of ten years, and to amend the law governing the Smithsonian institution.

CO-OPERATION IN TOWN BUILDING.

There is no village, town or city but that has an ambition to develop into a manufacturing center. There are but few that realize their ambition. In this day of sharp competition that cheap commodity called "chin music" goes but a short distance in attracting capital and inducing the location of manufacturing industries. A location must possess extraordinary natural advantages in the way of power, fuel supply, transportation facilities or supply of raw material to induce a manufacturing concern to seek it without some effort on the part of its citizens. In most cases a cash bonus, subscription of stock or donation of site is required to secure this end, and generally the most liberal offer secures the enterprise.

The demands of the promoters of these enterprises are often so exorbitant that they cannot be profitably met. Thousands have been donated to corporations by towns throughout the west, and in a great many cases the benefit has been infinitesimal. The remedy for this is in co-operative manufacturing investment. Every community has sufficient idle capital among its people to equip and maintain manufactories which will be both profitable to the investor and advantageous to the community.

For instance, the people determine that a paper mill, cannery, starch factory or any of the hundreds of different branches of manufacture now carried on in the United States could be successfully maintained in their town. A meeting should be called, an incorporation formed, the cost of the plant ascertained and books for the subscription of stock opened. The price of shares should be placed sufficiently low to allow persons of moderate means to become stockholders, as often this class of persons are the most progressive citizens a community affords. Only those in whom the community has the fullest confidence should be put at the head of the movement. When all the stock is sold and the venture established, it will only require good business methods to make it a success—financially and otherwise. After one industry is established and made a success others will follow. The only matter to be decided is the nature of the industry that is adapted to the locality, and when this is done go to work and establish it.

A CITIZENS TICKET.

NORTH PLAINFIELD DEMOCRATS FUSE WITH DISSATISFIED REPUBLICANS.

Non-Partisan Nominees Chosen as a Result of Conferences Between the Leaders of Both Parties—Reasons Advanced Pro and Con.

The North Plainfield Township Democratic primary last night adjourned without any nominations having been made. A citizens primary held immediately afterward made up a ticket of mixed political feeling.

Forty voters were present when Councilman Neal took the chair and called the first meeting to order. A motion to adjourn at once was made by Augustus J. Winckler.

In explanation Mr. Neal said that a number of Democratic citizens had concluded that a combination with dissatisfied Republicans would result in the positive election of the Democratic candidates. It would be manifestly improper for a primary called to nominate Democratic candidates to do anything else. On motion adjournment was taken, the affirmative plurality being small.

Mr. Neal called the independent voters together and they chose D. D. Smalley chairman and Lambert Bodine secretary. Mr. Bodine read a citizens township ticket which had been arranged as follows:

Collector—H. N. Spencer.
Assessor—Charles H. Lyman.
Township Committeeman—William J. Conroy.
Freeholder—Charles P. Sebring.
Overseer of Poor—John Emmons.
Justices of Peace—Thomas J. Young, four years; Augustus Fiering, three years.
Constables—Samuel Taynor, three years; George Stewart, two years.
Surveyors of Highways—Michael Powers, Joseph P. Humble.
Poundkeepers—John Stein, Patrick Ageny, Samuel Taynor and George Lewis.
Commissioners of Appeal—Jonathan Clawson, Harrison Coddington, Israel J. Stout.
Appropriations for roads outside of borough—$1,000, $400 in hands of Town Committee.
No salaries to Township Committeemen or Township Treasurer.

Mr. Neal objected to voting on the adoption of the ticket without having had a chance to hear the views of Democrats present on the subject. Since the township primary of the Republicans, conferences between Democrats and dissatisfied Republicans had made the nomination of a non-partisan ticket advisable. It was against his Democratic principles to vote for any but a true Democrat, but he thought the peculiar circumstances now existing by which his party might secure some of the most important offices in the township should not be overlooked. Any voter present had the right to amend by substituting names.

As a Democrat for life, Edward C. Morse opposed the party's nomination of a mixed ticket. An unsuccessful Democratic campaign was better for the party than any alliance with defeated Republicans.

The ticket was placed in the field, two voting against it.

The meeting was then adjourned.

No Cross Presented Yet.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Allow me to correct the singular misstatement in your issue of last evening which informed the public that Mrs. Charles J. Taggart had "presented a handsome processional cross to Holy Cross Church". Neither Mrs. Taggart, or anyone else, has done anything of the sort, and the Rev. T. Logan Murphy long ago refused such a proffer.

Also permit me to add, in justice to myself, that the unfortunate doggerel verses in the same paper signed "Washington G. Park" were not of my contriving. Several near-sighted people, hitherto regarded as friends, have been so unkind as to suspect me of this awful crime, and I trust you will let me prove an alibi. As the old reporter said when accused of writing for a religious periodical: "I may be very, very bad, but not so bad as that." GEORGE TAGGART.

Plainfield, N. J., March 9.

[The Press had for the authority of the processional-cross statement the fact that such a cross was being shipped by Geisler & Co., 52-54 Lafayette place, New York, tagged to Holy Cross Church, Plainfield, N. J., and that in Geisler's store it was said that the cross was a gift as stated, and was to be put in service in Holy Cross Easter Sunday. Regarding the verses, The Press is happy to state that Mr. Taggart is not their author.—Ed.]

A KNIFE

in the hand of a Surgeon gives you a feeling of horror and dread. There is no longer necessity for its use in many diseases formerly regarded as incurable without cutting.

The Triumph of Conservative Surgery is well illustrated by the fact that

RUPTURE or Breach, is now radically cured without the knife and without pain. Clumsy, chafing trusses can be thrown away! They never cure but often induce inflammation, strangulation and death.

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are now removed without the perils of cutting operations.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

Economical Women
Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.
In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.
The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

PISCATAWAY ASSESSORSHIP THE BONE OF CONTENTION.

A. S. Coriell Has Fixed the Tax Figures for So Many Years that Even His Own Party Suggested a Change—But His New-Market Delegation Was Too Strong.

The attendance at the Piscataway Township Republican primary held in New Market yesterday afternoon was so large that adjournment was taken from Nelson's Hotel to Friendship Hall. The hall was crowded.

Dr. Brakeley presided and Clerk Charles Coriell read the call of the Executive Committee. The tellers appointed were Adam Dealaman, Charles Day and Alvin Drake.

The principal fight was over the nomination for the assessorship. The present incumbent, A. S. Coriell of New Market, has held office for a score of years. Dr. N. J. Whitford, of Dunellen, made a strong run against him, but as the New Market Republicans were out in full force he failed to secure the nomination.

Nominating votes were as follows:

DONE IN DUNELLEN.

Happenings of Interest, Among Plainfield's Thrifty Neighbors.

Flocks of robins tell Dunellenites of the approach of Spring.

Isaac Titsworth is again able to be about after a severe attack of the grip.

Stephen Doty is still under the care of Dr. Conover, of North Branch, although his health is improving.

Miss Mamie Orleman, formerly of Somerset street, Plainfield, and now of Montclair, is visiting friends here.

Candidate E. Burdick, of Front street, is preparing to become the victim in the Foresters initiatory performances to be held next Monday evening.

Dr. Brakeley, as President of the Board of Commissioners, is setting a good example to the public by flagging the walk in front of his Front street property.

The Republicans advocate the expenditure of $200 more for the support of the township poor than the amount named by the Democrats, who think $1,000 sufficient.

In spite of the fact that the dust blows on the main streets, the sidewalks leading to the Lincoln School are deeply coated with mud, much to the discomfort of the children.

A westbound coal and freight train of eighty-five cars broke apart at the tenth coupling as it was approaching the station yesterday afternoon at 5. The two sections went on divided for quite a distance before the engineer was notified and the engine slowed up.

The railroad's recent action against the coal pickers is still a subject of discussion. The arrest of coal thieves is not, of course, criticized, but much fault is found with the condition of affairs which results only in the prosecution of poor people who pick wasted coal from the tracks, while bold thieves continue their work. A popular practice with some farmers seems to be the sending out of hired help, idle in the winter, to steal coal and thus earn their wages.

—"A High Roller" will be presented in Music Hall next Monday night. This a high-grade farce comedy, interpreted by a first-class company. The clever artists will give dances, choruses and medleys, pretty and captivating.

SHE DENOUNCES CORSETS.

And Will Tell Plainfield Women Just Exactly How They Ought to Dress.

Plainfield women dress as attractively and daintily as any in the world, but Eve's daughter is eager to be talked to about the newest fashion, and therefore Miss E. Marguerite Lindley is sure to be greeted by a large gathering of fair femininity when she appears in the Guild room of Grace P. E. Church next Monday afternoon at 3, to talk on "Physical Culture". The lecture will be for the benefit of the Guild.

Miss Lindley is a charming young woman of advanced ideas. She believes that women should dress so that her pliability is preserved. And she did not hesitate to tell a reporter the plain unvarnished facts about corsets.

"For you know"—said Miss Lindley, who is a trim, fashionable little body herself, and a living protest in costume against all hideousness in reform—"no woman can bend naturally with a corset having steels. If she tries it they will break." What Miss Lindley went on to say about the displacement of her internal economy when she stoops and doesn't allow them to break, well, the less said the better. If it were all put down in black and white a lot of women might tear off their corsets straightway without even having a boneless waist to replace them, and then the results would be quite too horrible, and anything but what Miss Lindley proposes to compass.

"My idea in dress"—she said—"you can find presented most briefly in my own costume at the present moment. We begin at the shoes. I wear no flat-heeled broad-toed monster. Society women are sometimes scared out of any possible healthful reform in dress by the hideous revolutions offered them as the first and only change."

All that Miss Lindley claims for a shoe is that the sole be cut straight on the inside, any slope necessary being on the outside only. According to the natural arch, which differs widely in individuals, the height of heel should be adjusted so that some may wear most appropriately a heel which is high enough for a first cousinship at least with Louis Quinze. These shoes are of course made to order, with a sole which, no matter how thick, is flexible as felt.

Above the boot comes neither sight nor sign of a petticoat, no berufflement, no pinked edges or silky frou-frou, yet the getup, aside from its manifest health and comfort, has a piquant fascination. The first thing Miss Lindley wears is a combination suit, over that she draws her black stockings over and above all and the only thing left visible when she picks up her dress skirt is a pair of black equestrian tights.

"I wear no corset, because I don't need it, but I recommend others to wear whaleboned waists. You see, there is no lump of bands beneath them to make bulk and no fulness of folds round the hips. The dress waist is also firmly boned. I indorse sufficient to support the figure while not compressing it. The result from the freedom and ease is to induce women to make ample exercise, which of itself, with proper diet, will prevent stoutness.

"Ladies sometimes say to me, 'But I would miss the pretty look of my corset. That alone would deter me.' But just look at this Empire waist", producing a tiny affair well boned at sides and round, but not in front, and decked with lace and rosebuds of pink ribbon. "Could anything be prettier than that?" Miss Lindley's theories about dresses are:

"First, let the outer dress, wraps, hats and bonnets remain the fashion of the day. Discard petticoats, because they hamper the gait and further allow the passage of cold air in a way most injurious. Their belts also cause a clumsiness round the waist which tight lacing is resorted to reduce. Wear woollen union suits. Cotton pulls and sticks, especially in hot weather, and besides, instead of throwing off the perspiration, as does the wool, not being porous, it retains it. In summer light weight, with low neck and short sleeves, can be worn. In winter, high neck and long sleeves and heavy as desired. In summer, light silk and wool or all silk 'knee' outer tights. In winter, 'ankle' tights of necessary weight, and on extremely cold days a pair of knee tights can be worn over them. The stockings going between the union suit and the tights, no garters are required.

"I am not prepared—added Miss Lindley—to advocate the short skirt yet. Some day we may come to it, at least for winter weather. If I ever do come to advocate it it will be when there shall be no going back. I think it commendable now, but I do n't forget the fact of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Susan B. Anthony and others wearing bloomers for a time, then succumbing to ridicule and discarding them. When a few society ladies set the example I shall probably use my strenuous influence, but the move must originate with leaders of fashion if it be ever destined to come to anything. Then the middle classes and the poor, dragged-out shop girl will follow with courage."

Skeletons, lay figures clad in tights and a variety of other inanimate objects are used to illustrate Miss Lindley's arguments and show irrational woman just how pretty she could be made to look in expressive hygienic garments. The lay figures in tights really do look quite stunning, so that it would seem a real grievous sin to cover them up with a petticoat.

THE REASON WHY.

A reply to Washington G. Park, by the author of "They're Onto Me", etc.

Now, what was the matter with old Mrs. Park,
The mother of Washington G?
Did she shut herself up in a room that was dark,
To talk to her young family?

For how could a lady with vision quite clear
Make such a terrific mistake,
To advise her young child to embrace a career
St. Paul had forbade her to take?

For 'twas not because she neglected advice,
That young Park made no clerical search,
But because the apostle had said 'twas n't nice
For women to preach in the church.

BOY SINGERS SAY FAREWELL.

Glee Club Members Part Reluctantly from Instructor Miner.

Twenty-five members of the Plainfield Boys Glee Club, accompanied by friends, met their instructor, W. H. Miner, at the home of Emil Woltmann, West Seventh street, last evening. It was a farewell meeting, preceding Mr. Miner's departure for Naugatuck, Conn., this morning. The Glee Club will probably disband, as no successor to Mr. Miner in the excellent work he has accomplished among Plainfield boys has presented himself.

During the evening the Soldiers Chorus from Faust, a lullaby by Barnby and selections from the Holy City were rendered by the members of the club. Solos were sung by B. T. Barnes, Robert Clarke and Master Everett Peck. Master George Dupee and Miss Rosa Woltmann gave piano solos. The guests parted with many expressions of deep regret at Mr. Miner's departure and hopes for his future success. Mrs. B. T. Barnes was the efficient accompanist during the evening.

A Plainfielder's Florida Trip.

(A. V. D. Honeyman in Somerville Unionist-Gazette.)

The boom in this State, as to oranges, is over. They do n't pay. Pine-apples are being tried, and the results are experimental. When I say oranges do not pay, I mean that only a few have the variety and the land which yield good results: the majority of owners have indifferent success.

For climate in Winter, Jacksonville and St. Augustine will not do for invalids. I believe Lake Worth and Biscayne Bay the only spots where sudden changes, to any great extent, are unknown, and where persons with lung troubles are absolutely sure of the relief they seek.

Three-fourths of the State of Florida is not worth owning. As much of it, or more, is not worth visiting. But the rest is curious, interesting, different from anything else in America, and constitutes the best place to visit, for two weeks, of any spot in our country in the Winter season, within the same distance from New York. Nobody should miss seeing it once, and he is sure to come again, despite that lotteries and prize fights seem to be lawful within its borders.

As to the spot where we are now—Silver Springs—if there is anything in aqueous nature quite as crystal-like and beautiful it has never been heard of, except in fairy tales.

To Have One Every Three Weeks.

The first sociable of the Rose Social Club, the new organization of six young men and as many young women, held in the basement of Reform Hall last evening, was a most pleasant affair. Invitations had been sent out for one hundred guests, but the attendance was not quite as large as was expected.

Various games were played, and refreshments were served afterwards. In a donkey-tail-pinning contest Miss L. VanNess secured the first prize and Geo. Schaeffer the booby prize. Partners for the feast were chosen by the purchase of rosettes of colored ribbons. Guessing the number of beans in a bottle was another amusement of the occasion.

A meeting of the club will be held next Tuesday night to decide on the next social. It is expected that similar affairs will be held once in three weeks.

Five Games Won by the Lyceum.

Nine interesting games of euchre were played in the C. Y. M. L. club-house last night before the Lyceum team won five from the St. Columbias of Orange. M. Gill and John Flynn represented the home club.

The opposing team won the championship of the Diocesan Union last year and put up a strong game. In the seventh the score stood: C. Y. M. L., 0; St. Columbas, 9, at one time, but the Plainfielders made 10 straight points. The last and deciding game was exciting from the way in which the clubs worked up by single points.

The score:

C. Y. M. L.	4	3	2	10	10	10	10	5	10
St. Columbias	10	10	10	4	6	9	9	10	9

Won't Accept the Citizens Nomination.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Having been informed that my name was placed on the ticket for the position of Township Collector, at the primary held at the school building last evening, I, while returning thanks for the proffered honor, most respectfully decline to accept the nomination. Yours very truly,

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

EACH GAVE AWAY HIS AGE.

Cute Way of Getting the Young Women to Confess.

The entertainment given last evening by the Young Ladies Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church, at the home of Miss Ella Serrell, 625 West Front street, was a charming affair. It was called a "birthday social". With each invitation sent out had been enclosed a neat satin bag, in which each guest was to place an amount of money equal to his age. The result was most gratifying, as the attendance was very large.

An excellent programme was arranged, that added very much to the pleasure of the evening. Charles. H. Biglow of New York sang several solos that were enjoyed. The selections by the trio, Miss Florence Serrell, piano, Edgar Serrell, violin, and Arthur Serrell, flute, were well received and deservedly won commendation. Miss Maude Chilton, of Jersey City, gave several recitations in an excellent manner, which were enjoyed to the fullest extent. Vocal solos by Mrs. George Chapman, and instrumental solos by Miss Florence I. Marsh and W. E. MacClymont, fittingly closed a programme of merit.

All present were then served with refreshments, which consisted of cake, wafers, tea, coffee and almonds. The society realized a gratifying sum of money which will be used for missionary purposes.

WEST END NOTES.

Miss Nellie McGinness was married to Fred. H. Robinson, of Connecticut, last night at her home, 957 South Second street. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell of Hope Chapel officiated.

A woman has been begging in the West End for several days, asking for enough money to complete her fund to purchase a ticket to Newark, where she claims her daughter is ill. Her story varies so much at different households that contributors who talk over their experiences with the woman pronounce her a fraud.

WEST ENDER.

Parties trying to introduce new cough remedies should know that the people will have Dr. Bull's cough syrup.

Lazy Horse, Tired Driver.

A black horse drew a road wagon down Park avenue yesterday afternoon. The driver, an old colored man, was asleep, and the horse appeared as if he wanted to sleep too. At the corner of Fourth street the horse stopped so suddenly that the old man saved himself from falling forward from the wagon by grabbing the dashboard. Then the crowd gathered. The Negro climbed up to the seat and fell asleep again, only to be aroused by the guying of the crowd. A start was finally made and the balky horse and the tired driver went up Fourth street together.

Thrown Out by a Runaway Horse.

Jame Kaedling, employed by Mrs. Clay, went riding yesterday with Miss Bullock, of Somerville. Near the Bryant School the horse was frightened by a dog and ran away. Both occupants of the vehicle were thrown out, Kaedling being dragged fifty feet before he let go of the reins. The horse ran to his stable on Putnam avenue. The harness was broken in several places.

Eloped With a Chinaman.

HAVERHILL, Mass., March 9.—Moy Chong Fong, a Chinaman who for several months has been working on Washington street, has left the city in company, it is said, with a well-known young woman, the daughter of respectable parents. The city missionary and the mother of the girl have gone to Boston in search of the missing girl.

Proposed Memorial to Gladstone.

LONDON, March 9.—The Westminster Gazette advocates a national memorial to Mr. Gladstone in the shape of a fund for the establishment of village libraries. In the article conveying this suggestion the Gazette says Mr. Gladstone has most zealously striven to implant a taste for reading in the minds of his countrymen, and with that object has himself formed a village library in Hawarden.

Steamer Paris Damaged By Fire.

LIVERPOOL, March 9.—Fire in the second saloon of the American line steamer Paris, which is being overhauled in Laird's shipyard at Birkenhead, burned for four hours and damaged the vessel considerably. It started, it is believed, by the overheating of the shaft preparatory to removing it. The loss is placed at £20,000, but this is probably an exaggeration.

New Vessel Inspector.

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Secretary Carlisle appointed Byron J. Holt, of New York, inspector of hulls and steam vessels for the district of Burlington, Vermont.

Troy Election Bill Vetoed.

ALBANY, March 9.—Gov. Flower has vetoed the Troy non-partisan election inspectors bill.

A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 8, 1892.

These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. They positively contain neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

Watchung Park Property.

Handsomely Situated

BUILDING LOTS

NOW OFFERED FOR SALE.

THIS PROPERTY is in the heart of the recently opened residence section of the city, being within a few minutes walk of the Central railroad station.

THE NEW WATCHUNG PARK, with its new streets and avenues, will be among the handsomest residence sections in this pretty suburban place.

ONLY HIGH GRADE RESIDENCES will be erected. The neighborhood will be restricted, making it as desirable as any in Plainfield.

ALL MODERN IMPROVEMENTS will be in force by early spring. The work of macadamizing the streets is now being pushed rapidly.

ELECTRIC CARS PASS the property. Electric lights, gas and city water will be introduced as soon in the spring as they are needed.

SCORES OF BEAUTIFUL HOUSES now fronting on Sandford and Westervelt avenues have been located on the old Crescent ball field.

JUST AS PROPERTY VALUES jumped in Sandford and Westervelt avenues, so will they also increase rapidly in Watchung Park. Those who buy now will reap the benefit of an early investment.

THE LOTS are about 50x150 feet in size and the map of the property printed in these columns on Wednesdays and Saturdays will give the public necessary information as to their location.

For further information regarding prices and terms, large copies of the map, etc., address or call upon

GEMS IN VERSE.

Centered.

To each man's life there comes a time supreme,
One day, one night, one morning or one noon,
One freighted hour, one moment opportune,
One rift through which sublime fulfillments gleam.
One space when fate goes tiding with the stream,
One Once, in balance 'twixt Too Late, Too Soon,
And ready for the passing instant's boon
To tip in favor the uncertain beam.
Ah, happy he who, knowing how to wait,
Knows also how to watch and work and stand
On Life's broad deck alert, and at the prow
To seize the passing moment, big with fate,
From Opportunity's extended hand,
When the great clock of destiny strikes Now!
—Mary A. Townsend.

Envy.

He was the first always. Fortune
Shone bright in his face.
I fought for years; with no effort
He conquered the place.
We ran; my feet were all bleeding.
But he won the race.

Spite of his many successes,
Men look him the same;
My one pale ray of good fortune
Met scoffing and blame.
When we erred they gave him pity,
But me—only shame.

My home was still in the shadow;
His lay in the sun.
I longed in vain; what he asked for
It straightway was done.
Once I staked all my heart's treasure,
We played—and he won.

Yes, and just now I have seen him,
Cold, smiling and blest,
Laid in his coffin. God help me!
While he is at rest,
I am cursed still to live—even Death loved him the best.
—Adelaide A. Procter.

A Cry.

Lo, I am weary of all!
Of men, and their love, and their hate
I have been long enough life's thrall,
And the toy of a tyrant fate.

I would have nothing but rest,
I would not struggle again;
Take me now to thy breast,
Earth, sweet mother of men.

Hide me, and let me sleep;
Give me a lonely tomb,
So close, and so dark, and so deep,
I shall hear no trumpet of doom.

There let me lie forgot,
When the dead at its blast are gone;
Give me to hear it not,
But only to slumber on.

This is the fate I crave,
For I look to the end and see,
If there be not rest in the grave,
There will never be rest for me.
—H. F. Clarke.

Foundations.

They taught the little child to pray
For things that he desired.
With faith increasing day by day
His simple heart was fired.
For things they knew he could not get
He earnestly besought,
And none was wise enough to set
A warning in his thought.
With Christmas disappointment came;
His prayers had not availed.
And him, in later years, they blame
Because his faith has failed.
—Detroit Tribune.

Her Birthday.

My darling, with eyes like October,
And heart that is young as the May,
What shall I wish thee, this day of days?
Bethink thee, sweetheart, and say.

I would that time could stand still for awhile,
And leave thee as now thou art,
As fresh as the early dawn is fresh,
As white as the snowdrop's heart.

Let the rest of the world grow old and cold,
But, oh! let me still keep thee—
The same forever, my girl of girls,
Forever a girl for me.

Till my life is old, and my heart is cold,
Let me wear thee upon my breast,
And then let me find thee and claim thee again
When I wake from the grave's long rest.

Semitones.

Ah, me, the subtle boundary between
What pleases and what pains! The difference
Between the word that thrills our every sense
With joy, and one which hurts, although it mean
No hurt! It is the things that are unseen,
Invisible—not things of violence—
For which the mightiest are without defense.
On kine most fair to see one may grow lean
With hunger. Many a snowy bread is doled
Which is far harder than the hardest stones.
'Tis but a narrow line divides the zones
Where suns are warm from those where suns are cold.
'Twixt harmonies divine as chords can hold
And torturing discords lie but semitones!

The Critic.

I sing the critic—one who all things knows;
Is competent all errors to disclose;
Ne'er read a book but he could write a better.
Is't poetry? Sadly lacking in the meter.
An essay? Merely verbiage, thought obscure.
A novel? Matter dull and manner poor.
A history? It has a partial air.
Travel? All wrong, though he was never there.
If you would be amused (you'll never rue it),
Take him your book and ask him to look through it.
Observe him well. His manner is delicious—
So bland, so wise, so kind and all factitious,
With pursed up lips and glistening, vain eyes
(A smooth shorn porker in bopedal guise),
He passes on your work his criticism,
The final trump, the deadly catechism.
The meeker you, more arrogant he grows.
In streams a profuse his erudition flows;
Marks every fault with jubilant inflection;
Matter and manner both require correction;
The plot is dull, the execution poor;
To crown it all, your name is too obscure.
You leave him in a state of sad dejection,
But learn upon a little calm reflection
There's no occasion for such dire despair—
His looks alone are wise; his words mere air.
—Ethel Kildow.

Don't Grow Old.

Do not grow old; there is too much to lose.
The world has need of all these precious things—
This fresh young face, these eyes like woodland springs,
This shadowy hair which every zephyr woos.

These subtle graces, all these lovely hues,
This voice like echoes from melodious strings.
Do not grow old; there is too much to lose.
The world has need of all these precious things.
—Frederick Peterson.

Love while you may, not when you will.
Time cools the blood and sets a chill
On ruby lips and robs the eye
Of all its fire, and roses die
Upon the cheeks, as on the hill
They fade when bleak winds, shrieking, fill
The hearts of June and work their ill
To every beauty under sky.
Love while you may.

"Blowing In His Tin."

She—All of which only convinces me that you married me for my money.

He—Well, it may not seem probable, but I honestly loved you.—Life.

Lightly—How do you manage to keep your gas bills so small?

Tightly—I have four daughters, and there's a beau in the parlor every night.—Life.

Pat's Ready Answer.

When Lord Thurlow first opened a lawyer's office in London, he took a basement room previously occupied by a cobbler. He was annoyed by the former occupant's callers and irritated because he had few of his own. One day an Irishman entered. "The cobbler's gone, I see," he said. "I should think he had," tartly responded the lawyer. "And what do you sell?" inquired the Irishman. "Blockheads," responded Thurlow. "Begorra," said Pat, "ye must be doing a mighty fine business. Ye ain't got but one left!"

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year, my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medicel College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment, There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is withbit a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

SOBS, THEN IS STOICAL

Miss Pollard's Queer Demeanor in Court.

Believed By Some That She Will Break Down Before the End of the Sensational Suit, Which May Last a Week—Testimony So Far in the Trial Against Col. Breckinridge.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—Miss Pollard's bearing in the court room at the first day's proceedings in her suit against Col. Breckinridge has led many who were present to predict that she will collapse before the close of the case, which may continue all next week. She was very nervous, and at certain times she buried her face in her handkerchief and sobbed, then again sat bolt upright and stared stoically at the witness or one of the attorneys.

The testimony of Mrs. Blackburn, widow of ex-Gov. Blackurn, of Kentucky, was interesting and damaging to the defense. She said she had lived in Louisville. In answer to Mr. Carlisle, she said she knew Col. Breckinridge and Miss Pollard. She had seen them together in her own apartments in this city on Good Friday, in 1893. When she entered the room Col. Breckinridge said:

"Mrs. Blackburn, I want to place this young lady under your protection. I expect her to become nearer to me, and she needs your motherly care. I expect to marry her when a sufficient time has elapsed after the death of my wife."

Col. Breckinridge had also talked with the witness about the engagement at other times.

At one time he spoke of the disparity between the ages of Miss Pollard and himself, and she agreed that such marriages were foolish.

Col. Breckinridge at another time said to her:

"Mrs. Blackburn, you appeared to be very much shocked when I told you of my engagement."

"I was," I replied.

"I think it a very poor return for so much devotion from your wife to become engaged so soon after the death of your wife."

Then Col. Breckinridge said:

"The reason I have become engaged so soon is that I think I have discovered Miss Pollard's feelings toward me, and, as an honorable man, I think I should ask her to marry me."

I said: "You certainly have taken an honorable view of the matter, Col. Breckinridge."

Mrs. Blackburn also told of how Col. Breckinridge had asked her to take Miss Pollard to Europe with her, but she was obliged to decline.

When rumors of his engagement to Mrs. Wing, his present wife, were being circulated, Col. Breckinridge had denied to the witness that there was any such relationship between Mrs. Wing and himself, and begged Mrs. Blackburn to contradict these stories, which would, he said, injure him with his family.

Mrs. Blackburn told of another incident between Miss Pollard and Col. Breckinridge at her apartments in Washington. The two had called on her, and Miss Pollard had knelt down beside Col. Breckinridge, and, putting her arms about him, said:

"Willie, will you name the day before Mrs. Blackburn?"

"I cannot do it now," said Col. Breckinridge, but I will come back and tell Mrs. Blackburn of the day I intend to marry the young lady to whom I am engaged."

Mrs. Blackburn was cross-examined, by Col. Thompson, in the usual manner and became somewhat nervous and excited under the strain.

"It is useless," she said, "to ask me any more questions. I have told everything I know concerning this case, and all further questions are useless."

She added, with tears in her eyes: "It is a terrible ordeal for me to pass through here, and which a man has forced me to. If I had the protection of a husband it would never have been necessary."

Col. W. G. Moore, superintendent of police, of Washington, testified that on May 13, 1893, Miss Pollard came to his office followed by Col. Breckinridge. Miss Pollard was greatly excited. Col. Breckinridge said that this lady threatened him with death and he wanted protection. Miss Pollard said Col. Breckinridge had promised to marry her and she wanted the marriage to take place that day. Col. Breckinridge said he intended to make her his wife on May 31. Miss Pollard placed her hands affectionately on his shoulders, the tears coursing down her cheeks.

The witness said he warned Miss Pollard against making threats. When Col. Breckinridge told of his intention to marry Miss Pollard he did so in an earnest manner. On May 17, 1893, Col. Breckinridge and Miss Pollard came again to his office. Col. Breckinridge said Miss Pollard was to leave for New York in the morning to prepare for the birth of his child.

Col. Breckinridge said that when the child was born they would be married, and wished Col. Moore to witness the understanding.

"They clasped hands," said the witness, "as if to bind the agreement. It was a very impressive scene."

There was a stir when the name of Dr. N. S. Lincoln, a distinguished practitioner of Washington, was called. Nearly everybody in the court room knew he had attended Miss Pollard professionally. In answer to Mr. Carlisle he said Col. Breckinridge and Miss Pollard called on him at his office in 1892, and Col. Breckinridge said he had presumed the doctor knew the relations of the plaintiff and himself, and that they were to become closer. Col. Breckinridge said Miss Pollard needed treatment. She was very low in spirits and he wished to place her in Dr. Lincoln's charge.

Mr. Stoll, the law partner of Col. Breckinridge, followed Col. Thompson in cross-examining for the defense. Dr. Lincoln said he met Miss Pollard professionally about five years ago, he thought. Some objections by the plaintiff to questions asked by the defense frittered away the time, and the court adjourned until Monday.

COUGHLIN SEEKING QUIET.

With His Family He Will Go to the Old Home in Michigan.

CHICAGO, March 10.—Daniel Coughlin, his wife, children and father, will leave this afternoon or Sunday night for the old Coughlin home in Hancock, Mich., so that the ex-defendant can get much needed rest. Coughlin wants to escape from the congratulatory crowds who besiege his residence here. The younger friends of Coughlin want to get up a celebration in this city early next week in honor of his acquittal, but his more conservative friends are opposed to the plan on account of the impropriety of it and the fact that the famous ex-prisoner is in no condition to be the central figure of such an affair.

Coughlin's faithful wife is in a distressing mental and physical condition, the re-action from the fearful strain of the last four months having set in. The entire night before the case was given to the jury she spent in prayer for husband's freedom.

An afternoon paper says on the authority of an "Irish agitator" that one of the men most prominently identified with the old triangle has been marked for death by the men who believe he was the arch-conspirator in the Cronin murder. It is said that the acquittal of Coughlin has only served to increase the hatred between the factions which has existed since the murder and that the removal of the ex-triangler was originally set for three weeks ago, but postponed on account of the effect it might have on the Coughlin jury. The friends of the murdered doctor consider the verdict was a miscarriage of justice.

MR. IVES' SUDDEN AFFLICTION.

He Has Softening of the Brain and Cannot Recover.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 10.—It is the opinion of the physician in charge of Hoadley B. Ives, the millionaire bank president of this city, who became violently insane yesterday afternoon, that he has softening of the brain and will die. His friends were greatly shocked when informed of his condition, and insisted that everything possible be done before the question of removing him to an asylum should be considered.

The first intimation anyone had of his affliction was when he entered the house of President Wilbur F. Day, of the New Haven bank, and demanded that his wife be released so that she might prepare his dinner. He then rushed out and came back with two boiled eggs and asked for a plate. After eating these he became so violent that the police had to be notified. A detail of three patrolmen was sent to the house. He was taken to his home, which is next door to the Day residence. His wife is out of town, but friends came and medical assistance was called in.

Mr. Ives is over 80 years of age, and is rated to worth be from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. He is president of Ives' National bank, a director of the Yale National bank, president of the Fair Haven and Westville Horse Railroad company, and is a heavy stockholder in the New Haven & Hartford railroad.

Coaching Run.

PHILADELPHIA, March 10.—All the arrangements for the coaching run between Philadelphia and New York are now complete, and at 6 o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, May 2, the first four-in-hands will make their initial run. Starts will be made simultaneously from the Hotel Waldorf, New York, and the Hotel Bellevue, this city, reaching Princeton together at noon, where luncheon will be served. The fare for the round trip has been placed at $25, one way $15, and the lucky possessor of a box must pay $10 extra for the privilege. The coaches to be run are Initial and Alert. Relays of horses will be found at convenient points, it being calculated to make the entire trip of 90 miles in about 10 hours, with a change of horses every 8 or 9 miles.

Activity in the Coke Region.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., March 10.—Coke production in the Connellsville region passed the 100,000-ton mark last week for the first time since June. Shipments were also the largest since the same date. In production there was an increase of about 4,000 tons and 200 cars gain in the shipments. Just 800 idle ovens were added to the active list. Between 900 and 1,000 cars wer shipped last Monday, the latter figure being the average shipment when the coke trade is in its normal condition.

Nickel Mines Abandoned.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 10.—Work at the nickel mines in this county has been indefinitely suspended. After over a year of fruitless prospecting for new beds of ore, it was finally decided to abandon the work. The pumps have been withdrawn and the mines allowed to fill with water.

TROY ELECTION CRIMES.

Two Able Lawyers Engaged to Assist in the Prosecutions.

ALBANY, March 10.—As a result of the conference between Gov. Flower and District Attorney Kelly, of Troy, in relation to the prosecutions of the persons concerned in the election crimes committed in that city last Tuesday, able counsel have been employed to assist the district attorney. They are ex-Speaker Charles E. Patterson and Seymour Vansantvoort, both of Troy. These gentlemen held a long conference with the governor. He told them that he desired them to take complete charge of the prosecutions and to carry them on vigorously and impartially. Both gentlemen expressed some hesitation about undertaking so responsible a task, but when urged by the governor, consented to act if the people of Troy so desired.

They will confer with their friends in Troy and if public sentiment favored acting they will accept the commission. Mr. Patterson stands at the head of the Troy bar. He was speaker of the assembly in 1883. Mr. Vansantvoort is a younger man, prominent member of the Troy bar and one of the speakers at the citizens' mass meeting Thursday evening. Both gentlemen are democrats.

INSANE FOREIGN PAUPERS.

Supported in Massachusetts' Hospitals at Public Expense.

BOSTON, March 10.—With regard to the published statement from Washington that the federal government is supporting foreign paupers in Massachusetts hospitals, who were insane when they came to this country, and the assertion of Assistant Superintendent of Emigration McSweeney, of New York, that no insane immigrants have been passed through that port, Assistant Superintendent of Emigration Wrightington said to-day: "There have been supported at the public expense, in the lunatic hospitals of Massachusetts, insane persons who had landed at the ports of Philadelphia, New York or Boston within one year of their commitment thereto. And it has been certified, in some cases, that their distress was from causes existing prior to their landing."

Crazy Over Religion.

GREENCASTLE, Ind., March 10.—Much excitement exists in this county over the results of the preaching of two trance evangelists from Illinois and a woman who is with them. Lucas Martin, a farmer, has gone mad. He wants to preach in a nude condition. He says Jesus Christ was nude. Ella King became crazy after remaining in a trance for three days. A protracted meeting lasting 36 consecutive hours has just closed. One man prayed. Soon his hands began to rise, until, on tiptoes, with outstretched arms at full length, as if ready to ascend, he stood for 30 minutes by actual count. Then he fell to the floor and remained in a trance for several hours. Six others followed the same programme. At other times ten at a time were shouting prayers, tearing their hair and having all sorts of visions. Some said they had conversations with Christ. Two more persons are threatened with insanity.

Rough on Ex-Priests.

KEOKUK, Ia., March 10.—The state council of the American Protective association closed a two days' session in this city. In his annual address President Jackman, of Boone, said: "The average ex-priest is simply a leech, sucking the life blood of the councils for his own enrichment. We claim in our principles that we attack no man's religion and make no warfare on the religious tenets of the Roman Catholic church, and yet we hear these ex-priests abuse all of the peculiar observances of this church and vilify and and make fun of its observances." We thereby stultify ourselves and bring reproach upon the order and its principles." The council unanimously adopted a resolution favoring the plan of the president, and hereafter no ex-priest will be employed unless properly accredited by the president.

Presidential Nominations.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Wallace Macfarlane, United States attorney for the southern district of New York.

Ed. Grosse, collector of internal revenue for the third district of New York.

Postmasters — New York — Jonah T. Howe, Trumansburg; George H. Parker, Bolivar.

Pennsylvania — John C. O'Donnell, Pittsburg; Cornelius Casey, Sharpsburg; James W. Sweely, Williamsport; James J. Finney, Tarentum.

Massachusetts—Orson G. Couch, Amherst; Edwin H. Horton, Athol Center; Albert E. Rice, Barre.

Connecticut—Francis G. Beach, New Haven; James T. Coogan, 2nd, Windsor Locks.

CINCINNATI, March 10.—A great mass of earth, estimated to be nearly ten feet in depth, from two to three hundred feet in length, and more than a hundred feet in width, and to weigh fifty thousand tons, is slowly but with ominous steadiness slipping down the steep south side of Mount Echo. The top of the mass has traveled about one hundred and fifty feet, and its lower part damaged a handsome cut stone residence, forcing its occupants to seek safety in departure. St. Martin's Catholic church and other houses further down are menaced, and unless it stops of its accord, no human agency can stop it.

Roby Wins the First Round.

CROWN POINT, Ind., March 10.—The grand jury adjourned without having found indictments against the pool sellers at the Roby race track. Judge Gillette declares now that he will call a new jury that will act and prosecute the company to the end of the chapter.

HE URGES SEPARATION

Joseph Royal Favors Canadian Independence.

The Governor of the Northwest Territary Issues a Pamphlet Containing His Views—Annexation With the United States Then Certain—Canada Not a Desirable Accession.

MONTREAL, March 10.—Hon. Joseph Royal, lieutenant governor of northwest territory, recently a viceroy and representative of her majesty, the queen, confidential servant and officer of the dominion government, has just issued a brochure urging the separation of Canada from the British empire. Governor Royal declares that such a step is necessary if Canada is to occupy the position she is entitled to and says he has no fear that Canada will be annexed to the United States in event of her independence.

"It is true," he continued, "we should lose a protection of the British flag, and this is apparently the most powerful objection that can be urged against the proposed change. Having for neighbor a nation of 65 million souls, what would become of Canada if left to her own resources with a population of only five millions. The United States would but make a single mouthful of us, if they entertained a desire to swallow us. That may be quite true, but it is probable that the desire would never seize our neighbors. In the first place we do not see what interest they would have in the conquest of Canada viet armis. Is it not their interest on the contrary to permit Canada to develop her own institutions which, although different in some respects, are quite as democratic as their own? It is to territorial ambitions that in all time wars have mostly owed their origin, but such ambitions are not entertained by the United States. Statesmen at Washington are careful of the future of a great nation, and will always, we believe, refuse to run the risk of an advantage of which would in any case be problematic. Canadian civilization is, besides, a character of its own, which distinguishes it from that of the United States. There are marked differences between their government system and ours. Our democracy is more real because it never ceases to act upon the government, and it also borrows from the happy combination of nationalities, a constitutional texture eminently sound and conservative. We claim to possess regime; that of our neighbors is most complicated. The annexation of Canada would increase neither power, wealth nor progress of republican measure proportionate to embarrassment they would occasion in its domestic policy. Our very weakness might turn out to be our strength, and our most formidable protection to have no armament at all, almost none."

PATERSON STRIKE TROUBLES.

The Entire Police Force Necessary to Protect Silk Weavers.

PATERSON, N. J., March 10.—It required the entire police force in this city to protect the employed silk weavers last evening when leaving the various mills. Eighteen night patrolmen found it difficult to save the operatives in Bamford Bros. factory from violence at the hands of the strikers who surrounded the building.

"New Jersey State Democracy."

JERSEY CITY, March 10.—A gathering of representative democrats from all over New Jersey was held at Taylor's hotel yesterday afternoon, the object of which was to discuss the party's affairs and strengthen its lines. There were present representatives from almost every county in the state. Resolutions denouncing democratic opposition to the Wilson bill and other party pledges, the democratic senators of New Jersey for not organizing with the republicans in the usual manner and at once repealing the race track measures; and denouncing the democratic state leaders. Committees were appointed and a committee meeting will be held at Trenton next Tuesday to perfect permanent organization. It was decided that the association be known as the "New Jersey State Democracy."

Gen. Miles Wants to Come East.

NEW YORK, March 10.—In anticipation of Maj-Gen. O. O. Howard's being relieved of the command of the department of the east and being granted leave of absence until his retirement on Nov. 8, Maj.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles has made formal application to be transferred from the department of Missouri to the department of the east. Gen. Miles will be next in rank to Gen. Schofield when Gen. Howard retires, hence it is believed that his application will be granted in June. This done, there will be a general redistribution of commands with the probability, it is believed by officers, that the requests of the southern representatives for the establishment of the department of the south will be favorably acted upon.

A Thief from Childhood.

PITTSBURG, March 10.—The sealed verdict in the Annie Alexander case found the defendant guilty as indicted on each of the five charges of larceny. The young woman who has been an all-round thief from childhood, was not in the least disturbed, and when called before the bar smiled in the face of the court. She was remanded to jail for sentence. Her home is at Newcastle, Pa. Her sensational escapades are almost without number.

Daring Attempt at Murder.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Rueben L. Armstrong, well-known to the police as a crook, suddenly drew a revolver from his pocket while riding on a Broadway car last night as a prisoner in charge of Police Officer William McCullough and fired point blank at the officer. The ball went through McCullough's coat and vest and just grazed his skin. Armstrong was then disarmed before he could fire a second shot and locked up.

Mortally Injured His Wife.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., March 10.—Mrs. Mary J. Holihan, aged 32 was found dying in a room at the Kilbourn house last night. Her husband, Thomas J. Holihan, a professional pugilist, beat and kicked his wife in the face and stomach, mortally injuring her. Holihan has fled.

320 Men Resume Work.

JERSEY CITY, March 10.—The Curtis Electric works of Lafayette have resumed work, after having been shut down for some months. There are 320 hands employed in the place.

NERVE DEATHS.

THE NUMBER GROWING AT A FRIGHTFUL RATE.

The Proportion Has Increased 20 Per Cent. In 40 Years.

The Boston Journal Asks, "What is the Remedy?" And Finds the Answer Not a Hard One.

A Quarter of All Deaths Due To American Disease.

The Boston Journal is certainly to be admired.

One of Boston's greatest newspapers, it frankly devotes some of its energetic editorial space to the subject, which at this season is of more importance to this and every community than all other topics.

"One hears the voice of the man whose knowledge of nerves is almost unbounded," says the Journal, "saying that beyond any dispute nervousness is growing upon us at a frightful rate."

Quoting from Dr. Weir Mitchell it continues: "In some busy centres he finds that the number of deaths due to nervous causes has increased 20 per cent. in 40 years; that one-fourth of the deaths now are from nervous diseases. His opinion is very confident, too, that the Americans are, from this cause becoming a short lived people."

A clear statement of the nervous weakness among the dwellers in cities and towns would send a pang of horror and alarm through the country.

Women are more under the influence of this terrible scourge than men; and town dwellers more than country folk.

The Journal asks what is the remedy, and finds an answer readily.

Increased cares and duties, increase in mental strain, lessened physical labor and increased mental work have been gradually giving us bodies in which the nervous element predominates.

Those with an insufficient reserve of vigor and nervous energy fall winter victims to contagious diseases and to special diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys.

Refreshing sleep comes from Paine's celery compound. Excitement headaches go. Chronic constipation no loner troubles one, and the terrible heart throbbing from which so many tired women suffer leave them in peace.

People of the highest standing in every class of society, in every city and town in the Union, have been benefitted by the use of this, the greatest of all remedies for the cure of the numerous ills that result from impaired nervous system and impoverished blood.

Here is the cure—the greatest medical discovery of modern times—the remedy first prescribed by the greatest physician of this age, Prof. Edward Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college—the remedy that has made more people well than any other ever known—the truest food for the nerves—the most known strengthener of impoverished blood—the remedy that from one end of the country to the other, and blessed by thousands.

Now and then a discovery like this one is so greatly in advance of its day that it startles the whole body of physicians. No great remedy ever caused as much talk and inquiry as Paine's celery compound. Scientific men in Europe have analyzed and discussed it, and the medical world has agreed in recommending it as a truly remarkable remedy for disorders originating in impure blood and impoverished nerve tissue.

Paine's celery compound will rob one of the "run down" feeling, the languor and despondency that come from badly nourished nerves, thin, pale blood and underfed organs of the body.

New life, a buoyant feeling and the joyousness of health will come when plenty of good red blood begins to fill the arteries and invigorate the system.

This is just what Paine's celery compound is doing for thousands of tired men and women throughout the whole extent of the country.

Preparing for Vigorous Prosecutions.

WAVERLY, N. Y., March 10.—Since the Lehigh strike in November last there have been several collisions between the old and new employees of the company at Sayre, and this was the principal cause of the recent order requiring thirty freight crews to lie over at Wilkesbarre instead of at Sayre. The borough authorities have now determined to prosecute vigorously all future offenders. Charles Hauser is under arrest for threatening violence to a workman who was employed during the strike and was held over to the grand jury in $500 bonds.

Infernal Machine Found in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, March 10.—Officers searching the house of Hermann and Otto Sasse, recently arrested in connection with a postoffice robbery in De Soto, Ill., discovered an infernal machine of a new pattern. Two fire bricks were found strongly cemented together, and on examination they were shown to be hollow, and the cavity filled with nearly a quart of giant powder. A small opening was left for a fuse.

A Candidate to Succeed Blair.

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 10.—Hon. John C. Crawford, of this city, has come out in an open letter to the republican electors of the 1st congressional district, formally announcing his candidacy for the nomination for representative to succeed Congressman Blair.

Paul Jones Successful at New Haven.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 10.—Paul Jones, the globe trotter, has been very successful since arriving here. He has made $75 selling pictures, making speeches and singing songs to the Yale men. He will remain here until next week.

Confirmed By the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—The senate has confirmed the nomination of Samuel E. Mutchler to be postmaster at Phillipsburg, N. J.

THE HOSE QUESTION.

Carney Bros. Claim to Have Been Misrepresented and Tell Their Side of Former Dealings.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your issue of March 8 you say a city official says that the firm of Carney Bros. never sold any hose to the city. This is the only part of his say there is any truth in, and that is only half true: the hose was sold to the Plainfield Fire Commissioners. Next he says the hose they did sell was for $1 a foot. That is wrong; the price paid was 85 cents, yet outside parties received $1 a foot for the same grade of hose.

Again, he says it was sold for old junk four years later for 13½ cents a foot. This shows that some official has neglected his duty to the city and to the taxpayers, in not holding the manufacturers to their guarantee, which would compel them to make good all that rotted or mildewed inside of their guarantee. The manufacturers would have willingly replaced foot for foot, which would have been better than 1½ cents a foot.

Next he says the authorities seemed to think Carney Bros' bid ridiculous, being 10 cents a foot lower than the manufacturers'. Here again he is wrong. Our bid is only 5 cents a foot lower, and in this we claim we have the right to give our commission to the city or to anyone else if we so choose.

Last, he says the city prefers to deal with the manufacturers, and save agents commission. How much do they save, and when did they deal direct with manufacturers?

Now so much for his say. Let us look at the facts. In June, 1887, one thousand feet of Diamond hose was purchased by the Plainfield Fire Commissioners at 85 cents a foot, under the guarantee of the manufacturers for a term of five years. One half of this hose the Plainfield Fire Deparrment used for the full term of five years, then sold their share to the Fanwood Fire Department at 20 cents a foot, not 1½ cents a foot as the city official claims. The balance of the hose is still in use in the borough of North Plainfield, by Warren Engine Company, No. 1, who are satisfied the hose was and is all that was claimed for it.

Now in justice to the public and to us kindly name the city official on whose authority you based your statement in your issue of March 8. CARNEY BROS.

DONE IN DUNELLEN.

Happenings of Interest, Among Plainfield's Thrifty Neighbors.

The Presbytery of Elizabeth will meet in Rev. A. I. Martine's church in April.

William Liable is fencing in his new property on West Front street.

The Presbyterians have begun to hold a series of cottage prayer meetings. The first was conducted at the home of Henry Kirchner, of Lincoln avenue, last evening.

A representative of Frank Linke, of North Plainfield, visited the alleys in Taylor's Hotel today, making measurements and taking notes preparatory to the attachment of alleys to Mr. Linke's hotel.

The Road Committee of the Borough Commissioners are putting a coat of stone on parts of West Front street which need it badly. There will be no opposition to the spending of money for this purpose in still larger amounts.

Two games on C. D. Taylor's alleys are scheduled for next week. Wednesday evening the Dunellen Club will bowl the Lincoln's, of Newark, in the deciding one of a three-game series. Friday they will commence a new series with the Pioneers of Elizabeth.

The net proceeds of the old folks' entertainment given by the school children in the Presbyterian Chapel Thursday evening were $28. To this amount the State will add $10, making quite a sum to be used in benefiting the school library by the purchase of books to supplement the information given in the works of reference now owned.

"Red Pat" McMann and "French Mike" Shone were arrested by Constable Warden yesterday morning and brought before President Brakeley. Mike had received his first pension money with back pay and generously invited Pat to share it on a spree. Mike had $17 left this morning. Thursday night the pair were barred out of their lodging place by Blacksmith Voorhees, but managed to break in. Mike's sentence was thirty days and $10 fine, while Pat was sent to New Brunswick for three months.

A social of the Sans Ceremonie Club, which meets every two weeks, was held at the home of Thomas Thomas, of Washington avenue, last evening. Mrs. Thomas furnished refreshments and Joseph and Lewis Thomas were the hosts. Dancing to the accompaniment of Musician Johnson was the pleasure of the first part of the evening. The affair concluded with games and general merriment. The club members present included Miss Bessie Benton, Miss Jennie Churchill, the Misses Maltby, Miss Nancy Thomas, Hazelwood Craig, C. A. Corlell, Lewis Thomas, C. D. Boice, Travis Sutphen and Joseph Thomas.

Failure of a South Plainfield Manufacturer.

William E. Smith, doing business as William E. Smith & Co., butter and cheese commission merchant, at 300 Greenwich street, New York, has made an assignment to Robert J. Dean, giving preferences for $10,000. Mr. Smith has been identified with the trade for many years, was for nineteen years of Smith & Underhill, who were succeeded in 1886 by William E. Smith & Co., of which firm Jarvis Carter, the "Co", died in August, 1892 Mr. Smith is president of the American Lactose Company, manufacturing sugar of milk at South Plainfield, N. J., and at Leon, N. Y., with an office at 300 Greenwich street. This company was incorporated under New Jersey laws in November, 1892, with a capital stock of $250,000, and William E. Smith was considered as the capitalist of that concern. He was reputed to be worth $80,000. At the Smiths' place of business it was said yesterday that no statement of his liabilities could be made at present, but his assets were much greater than his liabilities.

Brave Stop of a Runaway.

While James B. Lambert was transacting business with a customer on North avenue, Fanwood, Thursday, he left his gray mare standing unhitched. The mare took fright and dashed frantically down the avenue, rapidly approaching a number of children at play, and was almost upon them, when E. L. Kleb's man Patrick rushed out and at the risk of his life succeeded in stopping the terrified animal, and saved the children, who were apparently too stupefied to move out of the way. The citizens who witnessed Patrick's heroic action are loud in their praises of his indomitable courage.

Truth on the Half-Shell.

There is nothing more reliable than reliability. Even the pessimist will be found singing in the same key with the man who airs this statement. And if over twenty-five years of continuous study of the people's needs in a certain line of trade does n't establish reliability, what does? This is the record at Collier's, where all eye-troubles are treated scientifically, and where you are not required to wait a week before the immediate needs of your trouble are relieved.

Choral Society, Important.

Special rehearsal for sopranos and altos, Monday, 12th inst., at 3:30 p. m. Full rehearsal at 8 p. m. The last before the concert. A full attendance is desired. N. RUNYON, Secretary.

EXPELLED

—every poison and impurity from your blood with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Rheumatism has its origin in a poisoned condition of the blood and is always relieved by this remedy, which acts on liver, kidneys and blood. Dyspepsia and stomach troubles are most often the result of a diseased liver. Rouse the torpid liver to action with the "Discovery."

J. S. LIST, Esq.

I feel a great deal better than I did before taking your "Golden Medical Discovery" for my rheumatism, and it does all that it is recommended to do. I have a daughter who was troubled with a weak stomach so that she vomited everything that she ate and the "Discovery" cured her also, which I am thankful for. Yours truly, JOHN S. Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.
In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.
The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

SURPLUS IN TREASURY.

THAT'S THE HAPPY RESULT OF LOCAL DEMOCRATIC ADMINISTRATION.

Wise and Judicious Management of North Plainfield Affairs Which Should Be Perpetuated by the Voters at the Polls Next Tuesday —Figures that Prove the Democratic Superiority—Food for Tax-Payers' Sunday Reflection.

Prosperous North Plainfield!

She today has a surplus of nearly $3,500, under Democratic administration.

Never before was the borough in such excellent financial condition.

Democratic good judgment, Democratic good management, accomplished this glorious showing.

Look at the record.

The figures are eloquent with argument in favor of complete Democratic victory at the polls next Tuesday.

A surplus of $3,554.42!

Net!

And that in spite of unusual obstacles.

In spite of extraordinary expenditures incurred during the fiscal year of which the appended table is a record.

More particularly was there extra expense in the Fire Department, where nearly $1,200 was expended for the use of fire hydrants, for the building of a hose tower at the engine-house, and for a fire-alarm whistle.

It is customary to print the annual report of the Borough at least 10 days before election.

The voters are accustomed to judge for themselves, from a personal examination of the document, from a study of this record of how local affairs have been administered, just what ticket to vote at the polls.

Not satisfied with the records made from year to year by the Republicans, they overthrew the political complexion of the Borough, and made the administration Democratic.

So well did the Democrats administer their stewardship that the people rewarded their faithful representatives by continuing the Democrats in power.

The financial record herewith shown forth, is a diploma of North Plainfield's prize administration.

In it you see the evidence of what the Democratic party has done.

In it you see its pledge for the future.

With a continuance of the same party at the helm, the prospects for reduced taxation in the near future would seem to be an assurance that all should accept.

It is so glorious a showing, so clinching a plea in favor of continuing Democratic government in North Plainfield, that the Republican organ which as the only bidder was given the contract for printing it in pamphlet form, has up to date withheld its issuance.

Why is its publication thus summarily suppressed?

The copy furnished to the printer by Borough Clerk Vetterlein was as handsome and legible a piece of accounting as any expert could produce. It was so clean and clear that everyone who saw it paid him high compliment. The printer could find no fault with the copy, and it was set in type, proved, corrected, and printed days ago.

The time for circulation was 10 days before election.

Still, delivery is withheld.

For this delay there can be but one reason.

The evidence of the figures is too overwhelming in favor of the Democracy.

The delay is a partisan trick.

Just what you might expect from a Republican organ!

But The Daily Press, being a newspaper and not an organ, prints the report today free of charge, so that all may read.

The report is news.

It is good news.

It is glad tidings that should convince every unprejudiced voter in North Plainfield that his best interests as a taxpayer are best subserved by the Democratic party.

Here are the figures.

At the masthead of this paper are the tickets.

The figures are clear.

The tickets are clean.

Vote Tuesday.

Vote the Democratic ticket.

Then you've done credit to yourself and to your family.

Then you're right.

DOINGS AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Athletic Association Forms a Cycling Club—Mock Trial Arranged for—Other Notes.

The Plainfield High School Athletic Association held a meeting Thursday afternoon. A cycling department was organized. A. Woltmann, '94, was elected captain; E. I. Serrell, '95, first lieutenant; H. C. Wells, '94, second lieutenant, and Volney Green, 96, color-bearer. As soon as the weather becomes suitable, Captain Woltmann will organize the racing team and prepare for club runs.

C. L. Riley, 94, was elected manager of the base-ball team of the P. H. S. A. A.

The High School Lyceum held its regular meeting Friday afternoon. There was no regular programme.

The Lyceum will hold a mock trial some time during April, the participants of which will be as follows:

Judge—C. H. Angleman.
Prosecuting Attorney—C. L. Riley, '94.
Attorney for Defence—H. C. Wells, 94.
Sheriff—C. B. Morse, '95.

As the weather has been warm during the past week, the military drill at recess has been resumed.

Dissolving Views and Good Music.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational Church held a sociable last night and afforded the attendants a delightful time. The entertainment included an exhibition of dissolving views, part of which were local views procured from the Camera Club through the kindness of John E. Stewart. In the miscellaneous views loaned by Mr. Morse was a beautiful series "Rock of Ages", during the exhibition of which Miss Morse and Miss Whiting very effectively sang the hymn which the pictures illustrated.

A Plainfield Girl Goes on the Stage.

The manager of the "High Roller" company now rehearsing here preparatory to opening its spring and summer season in Music Hall Monday night, heard so much of the voice of Miss Nellie Pickett of this city that he was induced to give her a hearing, and so well pleased was he with her singing that he has engaged her to join the troupe.

—The Amherst Glee Club will give a concert in the Casino April 15. Seats are now on sale at Reynolds's.

—Today's Daily Presses, if spread out over the route, would carpet the Somerset street trolley road from end to end.

—The Spring opening of White's millinery department, under the direction of Miss Kittie Daly, will take place Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, March 14, 15, 16 and 17.

—H. O. Hance is a young man of push and vigor. He can be found at home whenever wanted, during the day as well as at night. Isn't it time the Borough tried a home-body for Mayor? A commuter is a hard man to reach, when he's wanted most.

—Applications for the admission of patients to the Hospital during the months of March and April should be made to Dr. Probasco, 175 East Front street. Visitors to patients are admitted Tuesday and Friday afternoons from 2 to 4, and Sundays from 2:30 to 4. At other times permission must be obtained from the physician in charge of the patient.

—A conundrum sociable is being arranged by the Young People's Association of the Park Avenue Baptist Church to occur next Tuesday night. Over fifty conundrums are to be used in such a manner as to promote the greatest sociability, and besides this feature an excellent musical and literary programme has been arranged. A good time is assured.

—Three times more "Wants and Offers" ads are published in The Daily Press from day to day than in any other Plainfield paper. In general advertising The Press leads similarly. This proportion, steadily maintained, is another popular recognition that The Press is the widest circulating and best advertising medium in Plainfield. The advertising columns of The Press are the official source to Plainfield people of all trade or mercantile news, and buyers and sellers use and read them to keep one another posted up to date.

PRESIDENT, G. F. BROWN.

Baptist Christian Endeavorers Begin Another Year of Faithful Work.

The annual business meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist Church was held last evening, with President George F. Brown in the chair. After the devotional exercises, business was considered. Several new members were elected, and a communication was received from E. M. Cave, president of the Local Union, urging all to do more this year than ever before, in the important lines of Christian Endeavor work. Robert W. Barnes, Chairman of the Lookout Committee, presented an excellent report of the work done by the committee.

Charles French, chairman of the prayer-meeting committee, read an interesting review of their labors, from a devotional standpoint.

George H. Batchelor told of the progressive work accomplished by the Temperance and Missionary Committee.

The Treasurer's report presented by Robert Love showed the receipts to be $47.04; disbursements, $39 40; balance on hand, $7 64.

The report of Secretary John G. McLaughlin was very interesting, as he related in detail the work done by the society. The membership is now 65 active, 1 associate and 10 honorary.

Norman Probasco reported progress for the Junior Christian Endeavor Society.

After remarks by Rev. Dr. Yerkes and George F. Brown, officers were elected as follows:

President—G. F. Brown.
Vice-president—G. H. Batchelor.
Treasurer—Robert Love.
Recording Secretary—Norman Probasco.
Corresponding Secretary—Miss Emily Coriell
Chairman Lookout Committee—Robt. Barnes
Chairman Prayer-meeting Committee—U. B. Crane.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The Ministers Association will meet next Monday afternoon at 5, at the home of Rev. Robert Lowry.

—Another harbinger. A strolling hand-organ ground out unpopular airs on the streets of Plainfield today.

—No one should be without a new spring hat, this year, as U. B. Crane has the latest, for 50 cents to $3.50.

—"Don't miss the opening chapters of the fascinating new serial "The Ten-Foot Drive", in The Press next Monday.

—J. E. Simpson of Grove street is building an addition to his barn, previous to the arrival of a new team of horses.

—Contractor John P. Emmons began the mason work on C. W. McCutchen's new house on Willow avenue, yesterday.

—Iona Council, No. 14, K. of P., will give their first annual masquerade ball in Red Men's Hall, Wednesday night, March 28.

—The elegant display of fresh vegetables in front of Demarest's today was the admiration of all housewives. Demarest rushes the seasons.

—The elegant new club car Plainfield went into service today for the first time, going to New York this morning at 7:58. The regular return trip of the club will be by the 6:20 train each evening.

—For the first time in ten years J. W. A. Bauersachs's name has been omitted from the North Plainfield Republican Township ticket. He has held several offices during that time, from constable to overseer of the poor.

—A cottage prayer meeting of the First Church of Christ is to be held at the home of the pastor, 748 West Front street, Monday evening at 8, and one Tuesday evening at the home of David Smith, 14 Linden avenue.

—Up in Somerville, where they know the next Borough Mayor from his having received his legal education there, they say: "Mr. Hance would make a good Mayor, and we hope the voters of North Plainfield will elect him."

—The Women's Relief Corps met last evening to arrange for an entertainment. Miss Cooper of Westfield was present and was consulted in regard to the same. The committee in charge is Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, chairman, Mrs. Angleman, Mrs. Brokaw and Mrs. McVoy.

—Miss Alice B. Spangenberg will be present next Monday night at the missionary meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church. Her address will be on missionary work, and she will tell what is needed to make Christian Endeavor mission work successful.

—What Charles H. Lyman does n't know about real-estate values is n't worth telling even to the lonely owner of a South Jersey sand wilderness. He can size up property so that no one has cause for complaint of disproportionate assessments. Is n't that the kind of a man to elect Assessor?

—What choicer councilmanic trio could a North Plainfield voter cast his ballot for, than Faber, McCullough and Bovey? They're level-headed, experienced business men, who know the Borough needs, and who can best be trusted to administer public affairs in the highest interests of the citizens.

—Miss M. S. Wilson, of 182 East Front street, announces an exhibition of specimens of her work in art embroidery next Wednesday. Since her coming to Plainfield from Philadelphia Miss Wilson's needlework has attracted much attention among those in this city interested in the art, and her work is well worthy of examination.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

A STARTLING FACT.

Sixteen Per Cent of Life Insurance Applicants Rejected on Account of Diseased Kidneys.

Dr. Lambert, the general medical director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, New York, said: "We reject sixteen per cent of the applications made to us for insurance, and I have saved the entire expense of the medical department by the rejection alone of applicants who had diseased kidneys, and who died within two years after I rejected them."

This appalling statement should have the attention of our citizens. There is no reason to-day why people should allow kidney disease to get such a hold on them. Nature sends her warning in the slight pain in the back, poor circulation of the blood, sediment in the urine. When any of these symptoms appear, Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy should be taken in small doses at once, and thus drive the poison out of the blood and restore the kidneys to healthy action. To our knowledge this is the only medicine that surely cures this almost universal complaint.

We note the recovery of Mr. Oscar Lambert, of Jerico, Mo., whose case has been talked of in the papers the world over. Quoting from his letter to the Press, Mr. Lambert says: "I neglected the first symptoms until I found myself in bed with a complicated disease of the kidneys. No mortal ever suffered more and lived. My physicians failed to help me. I then used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It relieved my kidneys almost immediately, and in a few weeks I was clear of all pain, and entirely cured."

Mrs. A. J. F. Manchester, of Providence, R. I. writes: "I began using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for kidney disease, when doctors failed to relieve me. It drove a bad humor out of my blood, and cured my kidney trouble."

Favorite Remedy has had more free advertising in the columns of the daily papers than anything we know of, from the fact that it does as is promised—Cures disease.

DON'T WEAR RED ROSES.

That is, If You Don't Want to Be Suspected of Robbing Churches.

A number of people in the Borough are indignant over what they term an outrage—the search of the home of a worthy family by Plainfield detectives.

Since the First Presbyterian Church was broken into Tuesday night, Charles Dodd and Tunis J. Carey have been investigating, and their attention became directed to John Jones, a youth of sixteen, who lives with his mother, Mrs. Charles H. Bryan, on Chatham street. He was employed by J. C. Allen in his novelty store until a short time ago. At present he is working for W. J. Conroy, carriage maker.

According to Mrs. Bryan's story, Dodd and Carey went to her home at 2:30 Thursday afternoon and introduced themselves by showing detectives badges. They began to question in regard to the character, associations and habits of her son John. Mrs. Bryan was astounded at their questions, and could hardly speak for the moment, but finally told what she knew of the actions of John in the past week. Monday night he returned from the Y. M. C. A. rooms at 9 and went to bed. Tuesday, the night the church was robbed, he went to the Salvation Army services with his mother, but did not stay long. When Mrs. Bryan returned home, which was before 10, John was in the house.

After obtaining this information from the woman, the men said that they knew John's companions had stolen something—what, they would state—and that he was suspected of hiding it. They demanded that a search of his room be made, and thoroughly ransacked his belongings, measuring his number 6 shoes to prove they fitted number 8 tracks in the mud. When they were leaving, Mrs. Bryan was told that John was suspected of stealing a pair of men's black kid gloves. John was afterwards visited and questioned in Conroy's shop.

The principal reason which is giving for suspecting John is that a red rose was dropped in the pastor's study by whoever broke in. It is claimed that John had been in the habit of wearing similar ones, obtained from his brother-in-law's greenhouse, and that he had furnished them to members of the Uncle Sam Social Club to which he had belonged.

Mrs. Bryan with six neighbors called on Mr. Allen last night. He gives John a good recommendation and knows of nothing he ever did wrong. Chief Marshal Pangborn was notified this morning.

Pastor Herring says he has relied upon the detectives to investigate the matter and knows nothing of John Jones or his friends. The rose found in the study was certainly dropped by the thief and the men had taken up the clue more especially because such flowers are scarce at this season. The matter is a serious affair and it is time the Plainfielders who have entered the church on four occasions should be punished.

The theory is advanced that boys who had disturbed the church Sunday by bringing in a dog had been prompted to mischief by the pastor's severe reprimand but circumstances connected with the other thefts seem to disprove this.

While you are waiting to hear the news of the election of Mr. Hance, you can spend an hour very profitably with the cameriats. The slides to be shown are those made by the Department of Photography of the Brooklyn Institute, consisting of beautiful views made in all parts of this country and Europe. The time is 8, the admission 25 cents.

—When Henry Newton Spencer first ran for the office he now holds, the Republicans of North Plainfield would not support him, and the Democratic voters of two Republican townships elected Mr. Spencer to office. When Mr. Spencer ran for the office of Surrogate the Democrats of the same townships by their votes, gave the same gentleman the unprecedented majority in North Plainfield of 315. The Citizens Ticket is now attempting to elect men who supported Mr. Spencer.

TO SAVE THE OLD BOAT

Work on the Kearsarge Will Soon Begin.

The Boston Towboat Company to Undertake the Task—Their Big Steel Steamer Orion Will Start Next Monday or Tuesday Well Equipped for the Difficult Work.

BOSTON, March 10.—Although the contract between the government and the Boston Towboat company for raising the wrecked Kearsarge has not yet been signed the company has been ordered to proceed with the work and is making diligent preparation for it, and will by the first of next week have one of its big steamers on the Roncador reef with all the necessary wrecking appliances.

The Orion is the steamer selected. She is now on her way to Boston from Newport News with a cargo of 2,250 tons of coal and is expected to reach this port today. It will take about 20 hours to discharge her cargo, and then she will be fitted and provisioned for the long cruise to the Caribbean sea, and will sail either Monday or Tuesday, stopping at Norfolk for coal.

How long she will be gone, how long it will take to raise the Kearsarge, or whether the work can be done at all or not are questions which even the experienced wrecking men of the company cannot answer, for they do not know the condition in which the Kearsarge will be found, how badly her bottom is injured nor any of the details, which could be secured were the wreck only a few miles instead of many hundred miles away.

The outward voyage will take about ten days. Everything will be done to make the venture a successful one and if the Kearsarge is not raised it will not be the fault of men thoroughly at home in that kind of work. The work will be in charge of Capt. Wm. F. Humphrey, treasurer of the company, and he will have under him about 50 men, all told.

"The Orion will carry a complete wrecking outfit," said General Manager Winsor, of the company, "including powerful centrifugal, pumps such as were used in raising the Gen. Whitney. She will also carry all the necessary material for patching the Kearsarge's bottom, and in short everything which will be needed in a job of this kind. We must take everything we want along with us, for at the reef we shall be 200 miles or more from anywhere. Just how the work will be done I cannot say, not knowing the condition in which the vessel will be found. The usual way is an examination of the bottom by the divers, the patching of the holes and the pumping out. We shall have three or four divers with us and the method of work will depend entirely on the reports of their examinations. The time it will take is also a matter of uncertainty, because we do not know just what is to be done, but we shall go provisioned for a long stay, if need be."

The Orion is a steel steamer of good carrying capacity and great power.

The crew will be landed on the reef and provided with tents and provisions during their stay. Lieut. F. T. Brainard, who took the news of the Kearsarge's wreck to Colon in a small boat, will go out on the Orion to represent the government. It is expected that the experts will be able to tell soon after seeing the Kearsarge what are the chances of saving her, and that after putting the workmen ashore, the Orion will proceed at once to Colon and report the prospects.

Lieut. Brainard who is now in Washington, is reported to have said that he did not think there was much if any chance of saving the vessel, but the party that goes with him has had great success heretofore. When the warship Galena was being towed from Brooklyn to Portsmouth a few years ago and was wrecked at Gay Head, Martha's Vineyard, the Boston Towboat company saved her.

The company will endeavor to bring back all possible salvage from the wreck, whether the vessel is saved or not, as her contents are valuable and every piece of wood in her would sell for relics. Congress would probably authorize the purchase of anything useful that is saved.

Grover Probably Killed Himself.

READING, Pa., March 10.—The mystery surrounding the death of Wentworth Grover, who came here from Chicago, continues, but there are stronger evidences now that he poisoned himself. It is learned that his wife in Chicago had applied for a divorce and that the case was to have come up on March 26. Grover joined the Knights of Pythias at Oakland, Ind., and the members of the order here will comply with his wife's request and give the body a christian burial. He originally came from New York state and is said to have been a distant relative of President Cleveland, being a connection of the family from which the president gets his first name.

Bismarck's Health Greatly Improved.

HAMBURG, March 10.—Prince Bismarck's health has been so exceptionally good in the last three weeks that Dr. Schweninger has decided to leave him and take his annual holidays in Italy. Preparations are making throughout the empire to unusually honor the old chancellor on the occasion of his birthday celebration. Yesterday Prince Bismarck received a deputation of Chicago Germans, who presented to him a picture and an illuminated address.

LONDON, March 10.—The Parnellite manifesto issued by John Redmond is generally regarded as a most absurd fulmination which will have no other effect than to heap ridicule upon its authors. Some of the newspapers treat it as a weak joke.

HON. EX-SPEAKER NOYES.

Our Statesman Cured by Dr. Green's Nervura.

The Great Senator and Representative Recommends Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy to the Weak, Nervous and Ailing---It is the Best Spring Medicine to Take.

PROBABLY more depends upon the character of the recommendation than on anything else. If a person you personally know tells you that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will cure you because it cured him, you take his word. Here is Massachusetts' greatest and foremost statesman whom all our readers know, Hon. ex-Speaker Noyes, of the House of Representatives, who tells you what this wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, has done for him and advises you to take it and get well, if you are sick, weak, nervous, sleepless, debilitated or run down in health. He assures you that it cured him and he is positive that it will cure you.

The newspapers say of Hon. Mr. Noyes: "No citizen of Boston stands higher in public estimation than he. In public life for nearly half a century, he is a representative citizen one of the most popular and best known men in the United States.

If you are suffering from any form of nervous or chronic disease, are weak and debilitated, if you have kidney or liver complaint, take this wonderful medicine and you will be restored to health. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

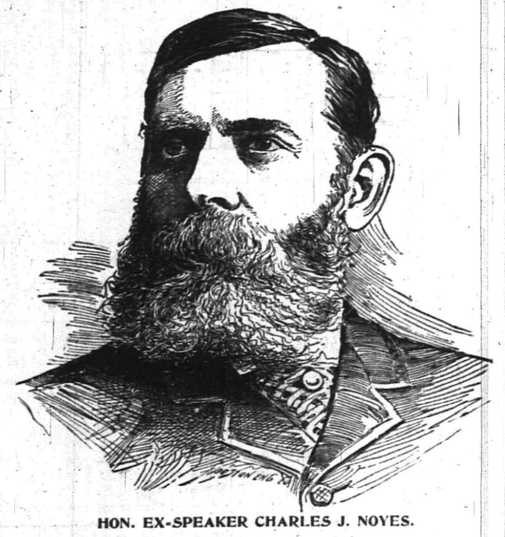
"He was elected a Senator and was 8 times returned to the house of Representatives. It shows in what high estimation he is held by the people. Gov. Long made him a justice, knowing that he is of unquestioned integrity, superior ability and great conscientiousness. A man of majestic brain, he is a great statesman and has few equals as an orator. At one time he was a candidate for Lieut. Gov. and he nominated Alger for President in the National convention."

Such is the eminence and standing of the gentleman who writes the following for the public welfare:

"Having used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy during my convalescence from a severe rheumatism, by imparting a healthy tone to my whole overwrought nervous system, I write that others needing a like restorative may have a like advantage.

"It seems to me nothing could have contributed so much to invigorate as it were, my severely taxed nerves and debilitated vitality as it did this remedy. No medicine is so universally used in the homes founded for the aged the feeble, the weak and suffering. A list of the public institutions alone where this compound is daily used would extend to great length. A sound body and a sound mind are sure to follow the persistent taking of Paine's celery compound; try it and be convinced, as thousands of other are, that it is the greatest remedy in the world. I am willing that the best possible use be made of this note to bring the matter to the attention of others suffering as I was.

CHARLES J. NOYES,
Equitable Building, Boston, Mass.



HON. EX-SPEAKER CHARLES J. NOYES.

Hon. Ex-Speaker Noyes is and always will be a boon to his fellow men, and in thus giving his advice to the suffering, and the weight of his high standing and eminent reputation to his indorsement of the wonderful curative powers of the great medical discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, he is proving himself a benefactor to those who are sick and ailing. It is a fact that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cures. People who do not call themselves sick, but who are ailing, do not feel just right should take, for it will put them in perfect health and strength. Everybody needs it now when a spring medicine is necessary to maintain health. It is the best spring medicine possible to take.

The spring is the best and easiest time to cure disease. It is purely vegetable and harmless. Its discoverer is Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, the well-known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all free of charge, personally or by letter.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the name will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

The WREN in Business

It is characteristic of the Wren that it will sneak in and occupy the nest made by another bird, in preference to building one of its own. This same trait is often seen in business. It is shown by the imitators of

COTTOLENE

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. Any housekeeper can be easily and cheaply convinced of the value of COTTOLENE by simply giving it a trial. They will then be unwilling to go back to lard, or go down to fraudulent imitations.

Scheig Will Roll in Wealth When Released.

So Say the Floyd Brothers, Who Were Found Guilty of Complicity in the Famous Minneapolis Bank Steal.

Mrs. Floyd Refuses to be Separated From Them—She is Grief Stricken.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 12.—The Floyd brothers, whose sensational trial has been the talk of Minneapolis for two weeks past and who were found guilty of complicity in the famous steal of Phil Scheig from the Bank of Minneapolis, were seen at the county jail by a United Press reporter, and in talking of the case made the startling statement that Phil Sheig had $50,000 buried in the neighborhood of Chicago. From 1888 to 1892 Lou Floyd says Shieg spent about $60,000, and from 1892 to the time of his capture he did not spend over $28,000. Sheig placed his total stealings at $123,287.40, leaving, according to Lou, a balance of $50,000 to be accounted for. Sheig emphatically denies that he has any money planted and says that he has spent all the money he stole, while Lou adds that when Sheig comes out of Stillwater he will again roll in wealth. The Floyd boys are making the best of their conviction and taking matters as philosophically as possible. Mrs. Floyd refuses to be separated from them and lies on a cot in the cage room at the county jail, moaning hysterically. It is understood that a strong effort will be made to obtain a new trial for the boys and that other matters concerning Sheig's past life will be gone into, which will make the trial very sensational.

THIS TIME A KENTUCKY GIRL

Another Rumor that the New York Senator is to Marry.

CINCINNATI, March 12.—A despatch from Louisville says that Kentucky society is in a flutter by the announcement of the reported engagement of Miss Letty Scott, a well known belle, and Senator David B. Hill, of New York. The report lacks confirmation or denial, for the reason that both parties are at present in Washington. Miss Scott is the niece of Vice-President Stevenson, and, according to the report printed in an afternoon paper, she was visiting her aunt in Washington when she met the senator. An engagement followed. Miss Scott is a beautiful young woman, and, while Bloomington, Ill., is the place of her nativity, she is the daughter of a Kentuckian, her father, the late M. L. Scott, having resided at Lexington. Her mother and Mrs. Stevenson are sisters. Her relatives here refuse to discuss the reported engagement.

UNCLE SAM'S REVENUES.

Belief that the Shortage Will Fall Below Carlisle's Figures.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—There are good reasons for the belief that the deficiency in the revenues of the government for the present fiscal year will fall considerably below Secretary Carlisle's estimates. In his statement before the house judiciary committee, on Jan. 25 last, the secretary expressed the opinion that the deficit for the year would be $78,000,000 or $79,000,000, but the conditions have changed somewhat since then, and it is now the opinion of experts, who base their estimates upon the best data obtainable, that the deficiency at the close of the present fiscal year will be found not to exceed $70,000,000. This conclusion is arrived at independent of any increase in the receipts from internal revenue incident to a probable increase in the duties in the liquor, tobacco and other schedules of the pending tariff bill.

Going to Sea in a Bowl.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 12.—Sometime during the middle of April, Captain Adolph Fristsch of Milwaukee, will set sail alone on board the little thirteen ton schooner Nina for Stockholm, Sweden, which port he hopes to reach by August 15, at the latest. Captain Fristsch conceived the daring plan over a year ago, and at once set to work making preparations. He began to build the little schooner in February, 1893, completing her during July of the same year, and every plank laid, nail driven and sail made is the work of his hands. On the way down the trip will be made via the Erie canal, stops being made at Cleveland, Buffalo and New York.

Trouble Over Mileage Tickets.

CHICAGO, March 12.—The Western Passenger association has a fight on its hands with the National Travelers protective association. The cause is the abolition of the two cent rate for 2,000 mile tickets. The chairman of the railroad association has been notified that proceedings against it will be commenced in the courts under the anti-pooling law of Illinois, unless a return to the old rate was agreed to. The increased rate is 2½c a mile, or $25 net for 1,000 mile tickets. The reason given for the change is the manipulation of mileage books by brokers, but the traveling men say that is only a subterfuge.

Vermont's Maple Sugar Harvest.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., March 12—The last thirteen days have been so warm throughout Vermont that maple sugar making commenced nearly a month earlier than usual. A prime quality appeared in the markets early last week. Many owners tapped their orchards early, though expecting colder weather. The prospects are good for more than an average crop on account of the snow in the woods.

M'KANE'S TANGLED ACCOUNTS.

Certain to Be an Investigation at Gravesend—Bonds Missing.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The complication of the accounts of John Y. McKane, as supervisor of Gravesend, with those of the town, will probably result in an application to the supreme court for a commission to investigate the financial condition of the town for the last seven years. Charles C. Overton, secretary of the board of auditors of the town, says the accounts of McKane are so loosely kept and tangled up in such a way that it will be difficult for experts to unravel them. Mr. Overton added:

"As a matter of fact, he was so in the habit of handling money and accounts in a careless way that I much doubt if he could exactly tell what disposition was made of the outstanding bonds, of which, it is alleged $200,000 cannot be accounted for. As the chief of police he owes to almost every policeman from $100 to $500 back pay, from his exceedingly slack way of doing business. Between the board of auditors and the citizens' association these mixed-up affairs are certain to be straightened out, and somebody will certainly have to make the deficiency good."

By the act of 1892, giving supervisors power to expend money on town improvements, John L. Voebis, chairman of the board for the investment of public funds, turned over to McKane $255,000 in cash, which has never been reported by McKane. It is known that McKane spent $21,000 on a fire alarm system for Coney Island and $3,000 for a bridge at Sheepshead bay. He also expended $20,000 in improving the streets at Coney Island and in the vicinity. The new police building at Coney Island received an appropriation of $90,000, and not a cent has been spent on the building, and, in consequence, the building is now in only a half-finished condition, and work has been at a standstill for some time.

Among the minor amounts unaccounted for are the following: $6,500 excise money; $11,000 turned over by the town treasurer for payment of small bills; $14,000 turned over by the tax collector; $6,000 to the board of health to defray expenses during the cholera scare.

McKane has admitted himself that he deposited all town funds in his own name.

The board of audit is composed of Charles E. Overton, H. R. Williams and Jacques Stryker. They assert that they have not received a single voucher for all this money.

WILLETTE NOT WILLIS.

A Waif Discovers His Identity After Thirty-seven Years.

MANITOWOC, Wis., March 12.—After being in ignorance of his name, birthplace and parentage for 37 years, Frank Willis, the waif of the burning steamer Niagara, has learned who he is, and will, in a few days, be reunited with the members of his family who survived the memorable disaster off Port Washington in September, 1857, when, as a two-year-old babe, Willis floated ashore on a plank from the blazing vessel. Advertisements were inserted in many papers in the hope that they might meet the eye of some one related to the child or who would recognize him from the name Franc Willette engraved on the cross attached to the little one's neck. All these efforts at identification failed, however. Willis has now learned that his name is Franc Willette, and that he was born at Winooski, Chittenden county, Vt., 39 years ago; that his father and mother and three brothers, he being the next youngest child, were lost on the Niagara; that he has an uncle and an aunt in Fond du Lac, Wis., a cousin in Grand Island, Neb., and other relatives at the place of his birth in New England.

CRISIS IN BRAZIL'S WAR.

Preparations For a Decisive Battle at Once.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 12.—The entire fleet of vessels which were purchased by the Brazilian government to replace the war ships seized by Admirals Mello and da Gama have arrived outside the harbor. It is expected that their arrival will result in decisive action immediately which will bring hostilities to a close. Whether the termination of the revolution will be brought about by a naval battle, a compromise, or an unconditional surrender, will doubtless be known within twenty-four hours. The government fleet consists of the dynamite cruiser Nictheroy, the Piratiny, America, Bahia and Tiradentes and five torpedo boats purchased in Germany.

It is officially announced that the insurgents have made no progress in their march upon Sao Paulo, and that the state is prepared to repel the invasion with its own resources.

Martial law is only in force in the states of Pernambuco, Sao Paulo, Parana, Santa Catarina and Rio de Janeiro.

Mac-Veagh Presents His Credentials.

ROME, March 12.—Wayne MacVeagh, the new United States ambassador, called at the quirinal at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon and presented his credentials. King Humbert conversed with him afterward most cordially, assuring him that Italy prized most highly the friendship of the United States.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Brief and Uninteresting Document Read to Parliament To-Day.

LONDON, March 12.—The queen's speech which will be read to parliament to-day is, as was predicted, much briefer than usual. Her majesty congratulates the members upon the continuance of Great Britain's friendly relations to the powers. She mentions the satisfactory conclusions of the Behring sea arbitration as especially gratifying. She refers to the Anglo-Russian negotiations concerning frontiers in middle Asia and the Anglo-Chinese arrangements as regards the borders of Burmah, and expresses her regret for the encounter between French and British forces near Warina, northwest Africa. The encounter is mentioned as a "lamentable accident." The speech proposes in domestic politics the expected programme, with two or three additions. The measures recommended are the abolition of plural voting, the extension of Scotch local government, the organization of boards of conciliation to settle labor troubles, the amendment of the factory acts, the disestablishment of the church in Wales, the relief of the evicted tenants in Ireland, and registration reform.

CIRCLED AROUND THE SHIP.

Steamer Castillian Prince Narrowly Escapes from Waterspouts.

NEW YORK, March 12.—Capt. Coull, of the British steamship Castillian Prince, just arrived from Havana, states that on March 9, while off Cape Hatteras, three large water-spouts appeared, passing very close to the vessel. "I never was so near one before," he said. "The one which passed nearest to the vessel made a beautiful appearance, looking like two large funnels, one inverted under the other; or, rather, like a large hour-glass reaching from the sky to the ocean, and approached us so closely that I feared it would burst over the vessel and crush us with the immense weight of water it contained, but fortunately the wind caused it to circle completely around us. It finally broke about a quarter of a mile astern of us, the water falling with tremendous force and churning the sea into a foam for a considerable distance. The others passed away from the vessel at a distance and we were greatly relieved when we saw the last of them."

YOUNG WEBSTER FOUND.

Where, His Mother Declines to Tell Probably a Romantic Escapade.

NEW YORK, March 12.—A Paris cablegram says: Mrs. Theodore Conkling, the mother of Edward Webster, the missing American schoolboy, says that her son has been found, where, she declared, she could not tell, but said he was not in America. "He is well and there is nothing in his disappearance which reflects on him. I shall see him in a few days," she said.

The news of the discovery of the whereabouts of young Webster has also been announced by the counsul to the American embassy. It is believed that when the story of young Webster's disappearance is told it will be found to be full of romance.

ONLY HER BULL REMAINS.

Everything Above Board of the Old Kearsarge Gone.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 12.—The British steamer Elliott, which arrived here today from Bluefields, passed the wreck of the old United States corvette Kearsarge on Roncador reef last Tuesday morning. She went within about five miles of the Kearsarge, affording an opportunity for a good view of the hull. The captain of the Elliott says there is nothing left of her but the hull. The decks have been swept clean. The smokestack, masts and everything above board are gone. The hull, he says, is in a very dangerous place, but so far as he could see, it showed no signs at present of going to pieces.

Disgusted With the Reichstag.

BERLIN, March 12.—Rudolph von Bennigsen, member of the reichstag for the eighteenth district of Hanover, and leader of the national liberal party, has decided to resign all his offices and retire to private life. Rumors that he would take this step have been current for several weeks, but they were not confirmed before. Dr. Von Bennigsen's ostensible reason for leaving public life is that his health is poor. The truth is that he has become disgusted with the unmannerly proceedings in the reichstag since men of the Sigi and Ahlwardt stripe began making themselves conspicuous in the debates.

Dying of His Injuries.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 12.—Charles Lonz, a cigar manufacturer of New York city, who moved to Carlstadt, N. J., five months ago, was among those injured two weeks ago, when a local train on the New Jersey and New York railroad collided with a solid Pullman train in the Erie depot. Coroner Ulhman called on him yesterday and took his ante-mortem statement. He is rapidly sinking, due, the doctors say, to concussion of the spine.

Suicide of a Blind Man.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 12.—Jacob Smith, who had been totally blind for two years, shot himself in the head yesterday while suffering from an attack of melancholia and cannot recover. He was formerly employed at the gas works at Coatesville, his duties there causing him the loss of his sight. A wife and five children survive him.

FIGURES ON THE TARIFF

Estimates of Results Based on Importations of '93.

The Wilson Bill as it Passed the House Leaves a Deficit of $20,000,000, While the Bill as it Now Stands Shows a Surplus of $34,000,000—Sugar Duties Cause the Difference.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—A comparative estimate of the results of the working of the Wilson tariff bill, as it passed the house, and as it has been reported to the senate finance committee, with the operations of the McKinley bill for the year 1893, based upon the volume of importations for that year, has been prepared for the information of the committee. They are interesting as showing how far the proposed legislation will go towards providing revenue to meet the expenditures of the government.

In the year 1893, under the McKinley law, the customs receipts were $198,978,452.97. The equivalent average ad valorem rate was 49.56 per cent., making the total value of importations in round numbers $400,000,000. The receipts from internal revenue were $161,027,623, miscellaneous $26,418,551, making the total for the year $385,819,993. The expenditures for the year 1893 were $383,477,954.49.

As the Wilson bill passed the house, the receipts from customs under it would be $134,603,004, the average ad valorem duty being 35.52 per cent., making the value of dutiable imports in round numbers $368,000,000. The income tax and internal revenue receipts will be $206,000,000, with the $26,000,000 of miscellaneous receipts the total will be $357,000,000, leaving a deficit of approximately $26,000,000.

The bill as it now stands before the finance committee will produce from customs $55,903,771, upon an average ad valorem duty of 34.19 per cent., the estimated value of imported goods being $380,000,000. The internal revenue and income tax receipts would be $228,000,000. Added to the receipts from miscellaneous sources otherwise provided for, these items would make the total receipts $416,000,000, leaving a surplus of $34,000,000. The sub-committee of the senate finance committee have transferred $130,000,000 of importations from the free to the dutiable list, all but about $10,000,000 of this, however, is in sugar alone. The revenue proposed to be derived from this one article by the duty fixed in the senate bill is $41,000,000.

DEMANDED HIS RIGHTS.

An American Citizen Released From Military Duty in Germany.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

BERLIN, March 12.—The United States embassy here has intervened successfully to rescue Siegfried Apt, an American citizen, from the clutches of German militarism. Apt emigrated from Germany to the United States when he was 14 years old. He was naturalized and eight years later returned to Berlin. He had hardly set his foot in the city before he was summoned to a recruiting station, from which he was taken to the barracks and drilled. He protested repeatedly against the right of the military authorities to impress him into the service, but for some time his protests were not heeded. Eventually he was allowed to draw up a statement and send it to the United States embassy. Ambassador Runyon at once lodged a demand at the foreign office for his immediate release. The next day Apt was a free man in citizen's clothes.

Boycott on Non-Union Cigars.

MILLVILLE, N. J., March 12.—At the annual meeting of the trade federation, composed of all the labor unions of this city, a resolution was passed to discountenance the sale of non-union made cigars, which virtually means a boycott on all cigars made by men who do not work in union factories. Delegates from all the labor unions were instructed to have a similar resolution passed by their unions. These unions represented four-fifths of the workingmen of the city. As many of the dealers in this city have stocks of non-union made cigars on hand, they are considerably worked up over the action of the trade federation.

Rev. Henry Mohn Sued.

READING, Pa., March 12.—John E. Mower, of Philadelphia, formerly one of the officers of the Reverting Fund Assurance association, whose main office was located in Reading, has brought suit in equity against Rev. Henry V. Mohn, of Mohnsville, this county. The latter is charged with appropriating to his own use $5,000 which should have been divided among the former officers of the association who only received $1.50. Rev. Mohn, who was president of the association, denies the charge.

Non-Union at Reduced Wages.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 12.—The Mount Washington glass works opened this morning as a non-union shop and at a reduction in wages of 10 per cent. It is probable that the entire plant will be forced to shut down unless a large importion of non-union help is forthcoming. The workmen have been making from $16 to $21 per week. They will receive $6 strike money from the union.

Excitement Over Spring Elections.

HACKENSACK, N. J., March 12.—The spring elections in Bergen county, which take place to-morrow, are causing considerable excitement. North Plainfield voters will do their duty tomorrow by voting for the candidates of the Democratic party which as proved by The Press of Saturday gave their treasury a surplus of $3,500

The Press had no candidate for the postmastership, but it did feel, and does feel, that James E. Martine, long-time leader of the local Democracy, was entitled, as a reward for his earnest devotion and valued labors, to some voice in the matter. The Press believes in awarding such an office to some member of the party who by his zealous labors has proved his claims as well as his fitness.

THE GROOM AND THE DUDE.

Fanwood's Fastidious Meets His Match in an Irish Hostler.

As one of Fanwood's most immaculate gentlemen was carefully brushing out his hallways and banging away at his rugs hung over the piazza balustrades at an hour when he supposed all other fashionables were enjoying the sunshine, their coachman as well, he being for the time keeping bachelor hall, he was startled by a voice from the adjoining premises suddenly exclaiming—"Begob, sir, there 's a pair of us at it, but you seem to be doing the great act, but the lamming I give 'em will never take the nap off 'em. The missis is away, but she gives me a dollar a week extra for this 'ere beatin' of the rugs, and I ain't goin' fer to beat 'em to pieces, her bein' so liberal."

The dude turned and looked with scorn upon the honest Irish face now projected above the intervening hedge. "Aw!"—said he—"I am just doing this for exercise, me boy, don cher no."

"To blazes with that" was the reply.—"Yes don't dare kape a gurl while yer wife's away, and yez has ter do that or have yer house like a sty"—and the irrepressible turned with a martial tread to attend to his extras at a dollar per week.

Burglars Got Nothing.

The police prevented the robbery of Shoemaker William J. Ford's shop, 139 North avenue, at 4 yesterday morning.

Policeman Frederickson heard the noise of someone walking on the roof of the one-story building, and with Policeman Cooney went to the rear by way of Second street. No one could be seen. A ladder placed against the adjacent barn of Carl Kaerth showed how the roof had been reached. The skylight over the counter had been removed.

POSTMASTER HETFIELD.

CONGRESSMAN DUNN SETTLES THE FIGHT FOR THE OFFICE.

Judge Wm. A. Coddington Pleaded John M. Hetfield's Cause Effectively, and All Other Candidates Are Dropped from Their Burning Suspense.

The postmaster of Plainfield succeeding Elias R. Pope will be John M. Hetfield.

Congressman John T. Dunn announced this decision to a number of Democrats who waited on him Saturday night.

When asked why he had concluded to give the nomination to Mr. Hetfield, Mr. Dunn replied that Mr. Hetfield's petition was the best that had been received from the Plainfield candidates, being signed by nearly all the clergymen, many of the physicians, and a large number of leading business men. The personality of the signers, he said, was splendid.

Besides that, his cause had been most fairly and ably presented by Judge Wm. A. Coddington, whom Mr. Dunn took to be a shining representative of Plainfield's Democracy.

Mr. Dunn said that he had given the contest his most faithful consideration and had decided the case purely on the merits presented by each candidate. He had sent the name of John M. Hetfield to the President, and the appointment would speedily be made.

John M. Hetfield is a native of Plainfield. His age is 35. He is a lifelong Democrat, a married man, and a coal merchant. He started in business with a small capital, and has developed it into a successful condition. His friends are confident in his executive ability and his adherence to duty. They consider him a most capable man.

His contest for the office of postmaster was managed solely by Judge Coddington, and was clean. He took no unfair advantage of his opponents, and breathed no word against them. He is to be congratulated on having such powerful friends and so worthy a counselor, and in winning such a spirited fight against so many adversaries.

FIRE IN THE BOROUGH.

A Small Clothing Shop Damaged by a Midnight Blaze.

Warren Engine Company was called out at 11 Saturday night by a fire in a small clothing shop on Pearl near Warren streets, in the rear of the home of the owner, Samuel Falkenfald.

The building was of one story, with an attic and shingled roof. Water was obtained from a hydrant opposite and poured through the windows on the first floor. Meanwhile the fire, unnoticed, had gained headway in the attic, and the flames burst out when Fireman William Krewson cut through the roof with an axe. The fire was extinguished after a half-hour's work. The cause is unknown.

The building belongs to the estate of Moses French and was insured for $350 in the Citizens Insurance Company of New York. The clothing, machines and fixtures were insured in the Franklin Insurance Company of Philadelphia through M. M. Dunham's agency. The amount on the clothing was $75. The cloth was valued at $250 and the labor expended in manufacture cost $100. It belonged to the Blue Front Clothing Company of Somerville, whose representative came here this morning. Mr. Falkenfeld has made arrangements to make good the loss.

Fell in Good Hands.

A German boy about 18 years of age landed in New York a few days ago. He has an uncle living in Philadelphia and was anxious to find him. Yesterday afternoon he stopped in the W. C. T. U. rooms, thinking he could be assisted. As he was unable to talk English, there was some difficulty in understanding him. Mrs. Jacob Voehl came in later, and learned the boy's mission. A collection was taken, and $2 realized. Mrs. Voehl took care of the boy last night and this money secured a ticket for him and started him on his journey.

—A. L. Titsworth, organist of the Trinity Reformed Church, generally practises on the large pipe organ in the new Seventh-Day Baptist Church Sunday afternoons, and quite a number of people have taken the advantage of this opportunity to hear some good music. Yesterday several dropped in to enjoy the fine playing and admire the church, which looks especially beautiful when the electric lights are all turned on.

The American Catarrh Cure

Is the result of twenty-six years' study and treatment of the disease. One bottle convinces the most skeptical. It is always ready for use, needing neither douche nor atomizer. It restores the hearing, cures the hawking cough and expectorating, removes the headache and nose bleeding, increases the appetite, produces sound sleep, invigorates the whole system and increases the vitality. Prepared only by W. B. Jones, M. D., No. 1336 South Eighth street, Philadelphia. For sale by T. W. Randolph 21 West Front street Price $1.

GRAY HAIR has a beauty of its own, but a BALD PATE——that is different! Now it may not be possible in every case to prevent baldness, but a test of fifteen years goes to show that PETROLEUM HAIR TONIC is almost an absolute specific for baldness, falling hair and dandruff. Originated, made and sold only at REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, Park and North avenues.

Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.
In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.
The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

ONE WAY TO BEAT THE HARD TIMES.

How a Small Boy Raised the Dust in a Muddy Street, and Opened New Avenues of Industry and Enterprise.

A small boy momentarily lost his equilibrium in West Front street, Saturday afternoon, and got mixed up with the mud and the wheels of a wagon. If he had been twenty years older no doubt the episode would have resulted fatally, but, as before remarked, he was a small boy and no one ever heard of a small boy carrying accident insurance. It is, however, the prerogative of every freeborn American kid, being denied the consolation of accidental death, to yell until the sympathetic atmosphere is cleft into countless fragments and the human population driven to distraction or absinthe or bromocaffeine.

The small boy exercised his God-given birthright and developed vocal powers second only in enormity to the warbling of the North Plainfield fire whistle. A crowd of fair shoppers gathered and in shrill voices questioned the boy, and the horse, and each other.

"Poor child!" cried one dear girl, with the tears of sympathy sparkling in her bright eyes. "Is he killed?" The boy howled by way of reassurance, and the ladies, all talking at once, tried their best to persuade him that if he were not dead, he must at least have broken a leg, or fractured his skull, or dislocated a wrist. But it was no use. The small boy was ungallant enough to intimate that he had n't even torn his pants, and the disappointment of his fair admirers was painful to observe.

A few horrid men on the edge of the crowd laughed unreservedly, and the boy began to be uneasy. He put one more howl to his credit and then, breaking away, darted around the end for the other side of the street. But womanly kindness was not thus easily to be shaken. One of the girls cried:

"Oh, the poor, dear boy! Do let me have some money; I have n't a bit!"

A generous lady produced a few pieces of silver, and the pretty philanthropist started in pursuit with the coins of the realm.

She found no difficulty in overtaking the boy, immediately he divined her object, and she soon returned in the happiness of duty.

The crowd dispersed and The Press man went along up the street after the dear boy, whom he discovered around the first corner in animated conversation with some other small fry.

"How much did yer git?" inquired one youth. The capitalist displayed his income to great applause.

"Say", he observed, "youse fellers want to catch onto dis racket. All youse has to do is to fall down an' yell, an' the ledgies does the rest!"

It is altogether likely that the small boy who made such a hit Saturday will repeat his peformance, six nights and a matinee, during the present week, and that his lead will be followed by all of his enterprising colleagues.

To Entertain Their British Cousins.

The Amherst College Musical Association, which is going to give a concert with its Glee, Banjo, and Mandolin clubs in the Casino April 5, is now planning a novel trip for a college association.

Henry E. Whitcomb, the manager of the association, is making arrangements to take these clubs to England this summer. Our college crews have shown what they could do in English waters, but no college has ever sent its glee and banjo clubs abroad. These organizations represent the social life of the college, and it is believed that they will be well received in England.

The members of the clubs are all undergraduates. They have had careful training in music, and the songs that they sing are distinctively American college songs. Amherst has always had a good club, and, if it makes this experiment, the result will be watched with interest by other college men.

Conductor B. W. Colwell, well-known to railroad men in Dunellen, had a foot crushed and a wrist broken in Yardley, Saturday. He was taken to Trenton Hospital for treatment.

Conductor Morris Rarick, of this place, has been laid off indefinitely by the Central Railroad. The cause was his mistake Feb. 5, when he started his train too soon from the North Avenue station, Plainfield, two women having a narrow escape from death in consequence.

BY THE WAY.

—The water main is being extended into Fairview avenue, Watchung Park.

—Justice Nodyne today granted Moses Carney a warrant of removal against Godfrey Harney.

—The local paper affords the best basis for an estimate of the present and future of the region. Written information from a friend is not apt to be as impartial, and cannot be as broad. Travelers' views are often entertaining, but oftener superficial. In the quietest places are mooted questions, diverse forces at work; on their solution and outcome depends the future of the locality. The papers show these in a living way. To the man who meditates settling, to the man who would plan a new business connection, to an investor in local securities in any region, the local paper is the best guide. The Press is Plainfield's local paper.

Funeral of Voris Van Vliet.

A very large number of friends and relatives attended the funeral services of the late Voris Van Vliet, at his late home on Emily street yesterday afternoon at 2.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes conducted the ceremonies, and after reading several appropriate Scripture lessons gave a very impressive talk concerning the life of God and man.

In speaking of the departed, he said:

"Many present today were well acquainted with our late friend. He was a man who had lived and walked uprightly before his fellow-men, and he was only known to be respected and loved by all, as a man of high integrity. From my personal knowledge I know that he was a man of faith and trusted in God, and from many conversations with him I was led to believe that he had a strong hope in the Divine Master." Dr. Yerkes closed his remarks with prayer. Those present were then given an opportunity of viewing the remains.

In connection with the death of Mr. Van Vliet it may be said that for 60 years he and his wife had lived together, a life of peace and happiness.

The pall-bearers at the funeral were Wm. Shotwell, John Thickstun, Albert J. Leader and Lewis E. Barkalew.

The body was interred in the North Plainfield cemetery, beside that of his brother James, who died several years ago.

The Bane of the Country, Says Mrs. Lease.

The Kansas Woman Talks to Working People on Boston Common. "Emancipate the Women and Then, if Men Cannot Settle the Trouble, the Women Will," She Declares.

BOSTON, March 12.—Mrs. Mary E. Lease, of Kansas, spoke at a meeting of the unemployed held on the Common last evening. The assemblage was quiet and orderly. Morrison I. Swift presided. The meeting voted to hold Governor Greenhalge responsible for not contradicting the story that a riot occurred at the state house February 20. Mrs. Lease commenced her address by saying that the problem of the unemployed was not confined to Massachusetts, but prevails in every state and territory in the Union. She continued:

"We are now fighting for the emancipation of labor, and in doing this we are carrying on the work for which our fathers and brothers died. What we want is justice for all and special privileges for none. We are now in a condition of industrial slavery, and the plutocracy of this country cares not for the welfare of the workingman. The preservation and the perpetuation of this republic depends on the condition of the workingman. Today a mighty tidal wave of unrest is spreading all over the country. The hope and the salvation of the country depends on the farmers—on the boundless prairies of the west. A great educational movement is also spreading throughout the country, a country in which a beneficent God never intended the cry of hunger to be heard. Look at the conditions to-day. Three or four millions of people are denied the privilege of earning their living by the sweat of their brow. The two great enemies of humanity are the despotism of royalty and the despotism of the money power. The death-knell of the former was sounded one hundred years ago, when the streets of Paris ran red with blood. In place of the despotism of royalty and the crown came the despotism of money, which tramples all liberty under foot. It has increased our debts and decreased the means of meeting them."

Mrs. Lease then discussed woman suffrage, and said that the men alone were to blame for the present condition of affairs in this country. "We can fix everything all right if you only realize the immense power of the ballot. Anarchy is the legitimate offspring of monopoly. You can never settle the present difficulties until you enancipate the women. Then, if you can't settle the trouble peaceably, why, go home and mind the babies and we will. We have had enough of warfare and bloodshed. Instead of bankers and lawyers for legislators get your representatives from the laboring classes, and then you will get your rights. You must render loyalty and allegiance, and it is the duty of the government you defend in war to feed you in time of peace."

A resolution was passed to the effect that legislators would be left at home if they did not take care of the petition of the unemployed.

Poughkeepsie's Distinguished Visitors

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 12.—An immense congregation filled St. Peter's church morning and evening when Mgr. Satolli and Archbishop Corrigan took part in the ceremony of blessing the new stations of the cross. The stations are the work of Aristides Dies, one of the most celebrated of modern Roman painters, and are said to be among the finest in the country. The visit of Mgr. Satolli and Archbishop Corrigan is taken as a high compliment to Rev. James Nilan, who has been rector of the church since 1877, and who is greatly beloved by his congregation and very popular with churchgoing people of all denominations in the city.

Did Curtis Confess Murder?

SAN FRANCISCO, March 12.—The story told by Chief-of-Police Crowley and Detective Lees that Attorney H. L. Kowalsky related to them a confession he declares M. B. Curtis made to him regarding the murder of Policeman Grant is denied by the lawyer, but the police officers reiterate that Kowalsky did tell them.

SERVES THEM RIGHT.

A house owner needs a lightning rod. Instead of calling on a permanently located dealer in lightning rods and employing him to do the work, he enters into a contract with the first shark that comes along and signs an agreement, which eventually turns up as a note in the hands of an "innocent" party and mulcts him to the tune of several hundred dollars, and the popular verdict is, "Served him right."

A predilection for strangers and the mania for buying goods in other than the regular channels of trade seem to be peculiar to a certain class of mercenary people of the community. They doubt the honesty and good intentions of their home artisan or merchant, whom they have known for years, and refuse to believe his assurances of fair treatment, but turn a willing ear to the first smooth tongued swindler that comes along. This trait of human character is well known to the smooth worker, and the amounts realized each year through the gullibility of their victims is greater than is generally known.

The farm implement and musical instrument agent comes from no man knows whither, makes a sale at a low price and levants. In a few days a man with a chattel mortgage on the same article arrives and wrests it from the buyer, and he has no recourse unless he can find the agent. A dealer in this man's own locality stood ready and anxious to sell him the same goods at a fair price, but he preferred patronizing a stranger with the vain hope of getting something for nothing. He got duped, and his happiness is not increased when his neighbors declare that it "served him right."

Farming communities are now being visited by agents for grocery concerns and shoddy dry goods houses located in one of the large cities. The bargains they offer have the effect of gathering in scores of victims. In one locality visited, sugar by the barrel was offered at a price lower than it could be obtained from the refinery. There was, however, a condition to the sale—that the buyer was also to buy a certain amount of spiced and fancy groceries in order to make a bill large enough to justify the house in making a shipment.

The goods came C. O. D., and much to the disgust of the consignee everything but the sugar was utterly unfit for use.

Let these bargain seekers take the hard cash which they always seem to have ready and waiting for the shark and go to your home merchant and plank it down, and you will find that, taking into consideration the quality of the merchandise, he sells much cheaper than the traveling vender.

THE OLD HOME PAPER.

Ill printed, old fashioned and homely,
Bearing name of a small country town,
With an unfeigned sneer at its wrapper queer
The postman in scorn throws it down.

Dispatches and pictures are wanting;
For cablegrams terse search in vain;
Yonder great city sheet, with its "features" replete,
Makes the columns seem shabbily plain.

But I can every line that it offers;
Each item brings something to view
Through the vista of years, of youth's pleasures and fears,
And serves their keen touch to renew.

The death of a girl I once courted,
The growth of a firm I once jeered,
The rise of a friend whom I loved to commend,
The fall of a man I revered.

As I read I drift dreamily backward
To days when to-live was but joy;
I think and I pore till the city's dull roar
Grows faint—and again I'm a boy.

Rare perfumes of green country byways,
Far music of mowers and bees,
And the quaint little town, with its street leading down
To the creek and the low bending trees.

Around me the forms of my comrades;
About us earth's glories unfurled;
Each heart undefiled, with the faith of a child
Looking forth to a place in the world.

And the paper tells how all have prospered.
I follow their lives as they flow,
Applauding each gain and regretting each pain,
For the sake of the days long ago.

Then somehow my cares seem less heavy
For the voyage I take as I read,
And I fancy, forsooth, that the vigor of youth
Is imbibed to replenish my seed.

Above all the huge city dailies,
With ponderous utterance wise,
This scant page hath power to spread out for an hour
A fairyland sweet to mine eyes.

Ill printed, old fashioned and homely,
Bearing name of a small country town,
I wait and I seek for the moment each week
When the postman in scorn throws it down.

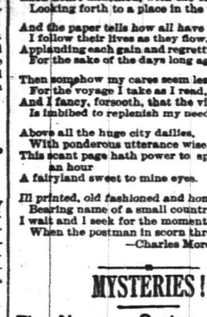
MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.



Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great specialists of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are worthless. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus' dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle. six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS

Programme of the Work in Both Branches.

Senate Will Give Up Four Days to the Seigniorage Bill, Causing More Delay for Tariff—The Sundry Civil Appropriation Bill Will Probably Consume the Entire Week in the House.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Golden silence will give place to silver speech in the senate from its re-assembling at noon today until its probable adjournment for the week on Thursday next. Under agreement the Bland seigniorage bill in the form in which it passed the house, with all its alleged crudities unchanged, will come up immediately after the morning hour to-day, and will hold its place as the unfinished business until 2 o'clock Wednesday, when the vote is to be taken on Mr. Allison's motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was read the third time and put upon its passage. That motion failing, the motion to commit will be voted upon, and that failing, debate is to be continued under the five-minute rule until 2 o'clock Thursday, when the vote is to be taken on the final passage of the bill. Should Mr. Allison's motion prevail the final vote will be taken at the same time, but the bill would in the meantime be open to amendment. No senator has given notice of an intention to speak on this bill, but silver coinage is a subject upon which some senators at least are never dumb. Expectation, however, centers upon the views of others, whose remarks are expected to be brief and pointed, Mr. Allison, of Iowa, heading the list. It is altogether unlikely that the finance committee will be able to report the tariff bill to the senate this week, as the members of that committee are all more or less interested in the seigniorage bill and will be anxious to be in the senate during the debate. This leaves but two hours, from 10 to 12 daily, for committee work, and not much headway can possibly be made in that short time.

House Programme.

The sundry civil appropriation bill, which was called up by Chairman Sayers just before the house adjourned Saturday, will engross the attention of the house probably nearly all the week. This is the bill which covers all the great appropriations of the government not included in the five general departmental appropriation bills and matters pertaining to Indians and rivers and harbors. It is the omnium gatherum of all the odds and ends, and is the only bill into which a new appropriation can safely be injected without running the risk of being thrown out on a point of order, consequently it is a bill upon which discussion lasts longest and to which amendments are most numerous. The sundry civil bill for the present session, as reported by the committee on appropriations, carries in round figures $33,306,000. The amount recommended to be appropriated by the estimates was $36,881,000. The amount appropriated for like purposes for the current year was $41,716,000. The bill covers ninety-eight pages and many of the items will probably give rise to extended debate. Before the week closes the committee on Indian affairs expect to report the appropriation bill allotted to it under the rules. It is practically completed now, except one paragraph of an administrative character. Secretary Hoke Smith has issued an order transferring the Indian warehouse from New York to Chicago, and the northwestern members of the house are desirous of having the reform in that direction still further extended. They want the warehouse divided between Chicago and Omaha, the former to be the purchasing station and the latter the distributing station. Friday next has been set apart on eulogies upon the late Representative W. H. Enochs, from the eighth Ohio district, and at their close an adjournment until Monday, the 19th inst., Saturday being St. Patrick's day.

Journeymen Tailors' Troubles.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The Journeymen Tailors' society held a meeting to canvass the vote taken in all the shops of the city yesterday on the question of accepting the 15 per cent. reduction of wages proposed by the Merchant Tailors' association. The result showed 1,195 votes against the reduction and only two votes in its favor. The latter were members of the general committee and the meeting forthwith dismissed them from service in that body. As the merchant tailors have determined to stand firmly by the reduction, a protracted fight seems inevitable.

War on Amsterdam Saloons.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., March 12.—The new city government will be inaugurated today. The council will be republican, 9 to 2. The outgoing council was democratic, 7 to 4. Changes will be made in the police force. The temperance excise commissioners say that in order to properly carry out their reform movement, they must be sustained by the police. There are now 150 saloons here and the board say they will reduce the number to less than one half.

Against Football and Lotteries.

ABILENE, Kan., March 12.—Football received a hard scoring at the hards of the Kansas Methodist conference. It was declared a brutal game and the conference voted unanimously not to lend its aid to colleges that allowed football teams to practice flying and mass plays. A resolution was also adopted to oppose the election of any state legislative officer not pledged against the lotteries being run at Kansas City, Kan.

No Beer, No Variety Theatre.

DALLAS, Tex., March 12.—The court of criminal appeals, the entire bench concurring, has just signed the death warrant to variety theatres by making a decision declaring constitutional the city ordinance, which was enacted in September last, prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquor in any theatre.

Left Numerous Debts Behind.

NEW YORK, March 12.—A special from Stony Brook, L. I., says: William Gould, postmaster of this town, has disappeared. It is alleged that he has left $1k,000 of indebtedness, distributed among a number of people.

Oxenbridge Resigns.

LONDON, March 12.—Viscount Oxenbridge, appointed master of the horse immediately after Mr. Gladstone's accession to powgr in 1892, has resigned his office.

New York Legislature.

ALBANY, March 12.—The only important legislation scheduled to come up in the legislature this week is the O'Connor non-partisan election inspectors bill, which will be considered by the conference committee to-night, and the ballot reform bill. The committee appointed by the republican assembly caucus to draw up a bill providing for a blanket ballot without the paster will, it is expected, be ready at an early day. The calendars in each house is pretty well filled, but most of the bills thereon are of a local character.

Big Haul of Chinese Gamblers.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 12.—The police last night executed a successful raid upon two well-known Chinese gambling dens and were rewarded with a catch of sixty-seven prisoners. The places raided were at No. 76 Fair street and a laundry located in the Florence house. The dens are less than two blocks apart. Forty Chinamen were secured at the Fair street joint while that at the Florence house yielded twenty-seven.

A 12-Year-Old Murderer.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 12.—Arthur Cardwell, 12 years old, shot and instantly killed Pat Patterson here last night. Patterson and T. C. Cardwell, father of young Cardwell, were in a fight in the latter's store when young Cardwell ran behind the counter, seized a revolver and fired, shooting Patterson through the heart. The fight was over the Houk-Gibson election.

Johnson Steel Works to Move.

CLEVELAND, O., March 12.—Congressman Tom L. Johnson, owner of the Johnson Steel works, of Johnstown, Pa., authorizes the announcement that his big works will be removed to Cleveland as speedily as arrangements can be concluded. The company will erect a $3,000,000 plant in this city, which will include four blast furnaces, a converting plant, a blooming mill, a standard "I" rail mill, a street railway mill and a shape mill. Mills will also be erected for girder rails for street railways and for structural iron. The company will also erect its own coke ovens. Three thousand men will be employed.

Fiendish Dynamite Plot.

WHEELING, W. Va., March 12.—A fiendish plot to murder over a hundred people has just leaked out. On February 22, a big dance was given at a hall at Portland, four miles up the river. The next morning the janitor of the hall discovered four dynamite bombs placed in the basement, with a half burned fuse attached. Detectives have since been at work and sensational arrests are promised. The entire destruction of the hall, containing over a hundred people, was averted only by the failure of the fuse to explode the bombs.

New Yorks Will Stay at Home.

NEW YORK, March 12.—George B. Stockhouse, secretary of the New York baseball management, said that the New York team would not make the southern trip as was contemplated some months ago.

CHAPTER I.

THE NEW MASTER.

"There's the carriage!"

"And that's him on the back seat!"

"What! that pale, wizened, little"—

"Hats off! Hats off!"

With an imposing rumble of wheels and clang of gold mounted harnes sthe handsome carriage whirled by in a cloud of dust. Battered hats and shaggy caps were pulled off; brawny, coal begrimed arms were waved in salutation, and a cheer from a hundred throats went echoing among the barren, stony cliffs that frowned upon each other across the narrow mountain stream. The employees of the Monckton Coal and Iron mines, marshaled to welcome the new master and heir to Thomas Monckton's millions, performed their part of the ceremony with commendable zeal. The figure in the carriage responded with the slightest of bows, and then, as if even that trifling exertion had wearied him, he sank back upon the cushions with an expression of utter indifference, almost apathy, which seemed habitual to his fine but effeminate features.

There was one among the assembled miners, however, who took no share in the demonstrations, uttered no cheer and offered no sign of respect. He did not even remove the wide felt hat which shaded his scowling brows. With bare arms folded across his broad chest, and his powerful frame poised in a defiant attitude, he surveyed the excited throng with a smile of bitter contempt. When one of his companions touched him upon the shoulder to attract his attention, he shook off the hand with an angry movement and turned away, vouchsafing no reply to the questions addressed to him.

As the carriage swept by, the frown deepened upon his forehead, and his attitude became still more insolently aggressive. It seemed as if he wished his insulting and offensive air to be marked by the occupant of the vehicle. If that was his object, he attained it, for, standing in the front rank of the crowd, the carriage passed within an arm's length of him, and for an instant the gaze of the young proprietor rested full upon him. But it was with a cold impassibility that only added fuel to the anger and hatred raging in his breast. It would have gratified his imperious and discontented spirit if the mine owner had exhibited some sign of shrinking or annoyance, but the frigid stare which met his own lowering look abashed him in spite of himself.

His attitude became still more insolently aggressive.

"I am less than the dirt under his horses' hoofs," he muttered between his set teeth as his eyes followed the sumptuous equipage disappearing in the distance. "But our turn will come one day, and then"— He left the remainder of the sentence significantly unspoken.

He pushed his way roughly through the crowd and was joined upon the road beyond by two or three of his most intimate associates. He gave no heed to them, however, but walked moodily on, with his head bent upon his chest and his eyes cast down. Though a workman like themselves, his companions evidently regarded him with a respect not altogether unmixed with fear, and for a time they kept step with his long, impatient stride, without venturing to interrupt his meditations.

"He seems a decent sort of young fellow, the new proprietor," remarked one of the number at length.

"He don't favor his father, as I can see," said another, "and that I take to be a good sign for us. Old Monckton was as ugly as a hitching post and harder than a flint, whereas the son is what you may call handsome and ought to be liberal and easy according."

"That's good logic, John," replied the man who had first spoken. 'Handsome is as handsome does, eh, John?"

"I've an idea, mates," put in the third man. "It's this: I move we draw up a paper, addressed to the new master and signed by all hands. Matthew North, here, could do it up in great style. He's got education, in a way, and writes like book print."

"And what is this paper that Matthew North is to draw up 'addressed to the new master?'" There was a ring of scorn in the deep voice, and the dark eyes gleamed sternly from under the frowning brows.

"Why," was the hesitating reply, "a sort of petition like, saying as we, the hands employed in the Monckton mines, presents our duty and welcomes our future boss, with good wishes, et cetery. Then you throw in, promiscuous, as how things has been pretty considerable hard on us for a spell back, and how we would be grateful for a raise of prices and wages; likewise, also, a reduction of hours. All fair and square and respectful, as is proper between master and men."

Having concluded this speech with a flourish, the speaker glanced at his companions as if expecting some sign of approbation, but the man addressed as Matthew North broke in with a loud, angry laugh.

"'Present our duty,'" he repeated sneeringly. "Why not humbly petition for the privilege of living at all? Are we not poor, enslaved and degraded enough already that you wish to formally sign away the small fragment of liberty we have left?"

"Now don't lose your temper, Matthew," responded the other deprecatingly. "It was just a notion of mine which I spoke out frank and friendly, as among old side pardners. But if you don't approve, why, there's an end of it. We all agree that you have the longest head among us, Matthew, and we're bound for to follow your lead."

"You are a pack of children and fools," rejoined North harshly. "Because this man is young and what you choose to call handsome you believe he will be just and generous. Wait and see! Old Monckton—Miser Monckton—was a coarse, ignorant, grasping scoundrel, but he was one of us, for he handled a pick in these very mines in his youth. This man, his son, is a gentleman!" The hatred and contempt with which he uttered the last word cannot be described. "Yes, a gentleman. He was educated abroad; he knows nothing of us or our condition and cares less. To him we are merely the drudges which he inherited with his father's wealth. We are not men in his eyes; we are less than his horses and dogs, and so long as we consent to toil, starve and risk our lives to pamper his luxury we and our wives and children may rot in our poverty and degradation."

North had the true demagogue's power, and his belief in his own words lent him a rude eloquence which was irresistible over the class with which he consorted. The kindling eyes and quick breathing of the three men he now addressed testified to the influence he wielded.

"You say he is handsome," he went on, with increasing heat. "He may be; I am not a judge, but as he passed, lolling in his carriage, covering us with the dust from his wheels, I looked into his cold, dead eyes and his pale, womanish face, and I tell you before many months are over you will wish old Miser Monckton, three times as ugly and three times as mean and grasping, were back again."

For a moment after he had done speaking there was silence; then, in a low, threatening tone, one of the men ejaculated:

"Mates, it's no petition that we'll take to the new proprietor. It will be a demand."

"And if he refuses we'll burn the house over his head."

"And him with it."

"The sooner the better, say I! To-day—this hour!"

"Will you never learn wisdom?" interrupted North impatiently. "You go from one extreme to the other. You will break a few windows, make a disturbance, get yourselves shot and beaten for your pains, in the end submit, glad even of the chance to toil and starve in the old wretched way."

"What a fiery one you are, Matthew!" replied the last speaker in humble admiration. "Nobody ain't thought of going agin you. All you have got for to do is to say the word and leave us for to carry out your orders."

"That's so," chimed in the other two. "We'll stand by Matthew North."

"And you will do well," said North. "Your cause is mine. It is just and must prevail. Wait! Bide your time until 'tis ripe, and then"—he glanced from one to another of the attentive faces, with the gleam of fanatic resolution in his eyes—"strike for your rights and strike hard and sure."

"Hurrah for Matthew North!" cried the three men in a breath.

A cold smile flitted across the dark features, and again he repeated, in a significant tone:

"Wait.

CHAPTER II.

IMOGENE DUKE.

At a crossroad leading to a small hamlet clustered about the mouth of the coal pits his three companions left North to continue his walk alone. He had not gone a dozen yards when the beat of hoofs caught his ear, and a girl, riding a powerful black horse, swept around a turn in the road and pulled up sharply, opposite where the young miner stood.

As he caught sight of her his whole manner changed instantly. The moody expression left his face; a slight flush rose in his brown cheek, and the wild light in his eyes gave place to a tender, beseeching glance. His haughtily erected head was bowed humbly, and as he removed his large hat and remained silent, waiting for her to address him first, he presented a very different figure from the fanatic and demagogue whose violent words had cowed his rude companions 10 minutes before.

"Is it you, Matthew North?" said the girl, in a clear, resonant voice that sounded in the young man's ear like a chime of joyous bells. She beckoned him to her side with an imperious wave of her small, gloved hand. "What are you doing here at this hour, and why are you not at your post in the mine?"

North approached, holding his hat in one hand, while with the other he stroked the glossy neck of the horse.

"It is a holiday," he replied, with an accent of contempt struggling through his respectful tone. "The new proprietor—the young lord of the manor—came to take possession of his domain this morning, and we, his servants, were graciously given leave to welcome him."

"Ralph Monckton," exclaimed the girl vivaciously. "What is he like, Matthew? When I saw him last, he was a lank, overgrown boy. Little as I was, I remember, he was afraid of me and blushed furiously when my father introduced him to me. Tell me about him."

A flame of hatred sprang into North's eyes as he answered:

"I only caught a glimpse of him as he went by in his carriage. He did not condescend to speak to us."

"Is he handsome, Matthew?"

"It may be so, Miss Duke," replied the young man, with an affectation of indifference which his resentful air belied. "I profess little knowledge of such things. His features are regular. His face is colorless as a sick girl's. His hair is light and carefully parted in the middle. His figure is small and slight"— He raised his own powerful frame unconsciously, as it seemed, to his full height. "His eyes are pale blue and cold as a dead man's. That is about all—oh, to be sure, I did see something like an eyeglass hanging to the lapel of his coat."

"Oh, Matthew, Matthew!" laughed the girl, "why do you hate the poor gentleman so?"

"Gentleman!" repeated North, stepping back as if he had received a blow. "Yes, you are right, Miss Duke," he added in a low, bitter tone. "He is a gentleman, the owner of millions, brought up in luxury and college bred—yes, that makes him a gentleman, even here in America, where we pretend to recognize no class distinctions—and I, a poor workman, his paid laborer, have no right to criticise him."

"Come, Matthew," replied the girl seriously, "you are unjust. I did not mean to wound you. You know I have no class prejudices. A man is a man, no matter what his station may be, and so that he is honorable and upright it is nothing to me whether he wears broadcloth, or"—glancing at the coarse flannel shirt which displayed the grand muscles of North's chest—"the meanest attire. I am a true American girl, Matthew. Never forget that."

"I thank you for those words," exclaimed North, with a passionate gesture which caused the young horsewoman to straighten herself in her saddle, while her cheek flushed faintly. "A man is a man, as you have said, and you may have the chance, one day, to see for yourself which is the real man—this languid, weak eyed millionaire or Matthew North, the gang boss."

"So long as you act worthily, Matthew," said the girl, turning her lustrous eyes upon the excited face of the young miner, with a gentle glance which seemed to quiet him at once, "I shall always be your friend—if my friendship is of any value to you."

"Oh," he murmured impulsively, "it is worth all the world to me. I would lose life sooner than your good opinion."

The black horse, which throughout the conversation had pawed and snorted restively, now seemed to get his head, for he bounded forward suddenly, as if relieved from the curb. For an instant Matthew North saw a little hand waving him adieu; then horse and rider disappeared in a cloud of dust.

For many minutes North stood gazing after them like a man in a dream; then, with a deep breath, he passed his hand confusedly across his forehead. A small, dark object lay in the road at his feet. He stooped and picked it up; it was a lady's riding glove. He brushed the dust off it reverently, turned it over and over on his large palm, and with a sudden, passionate movement pressed it to his lips. Glancing about him with a shamefaced air, as if fearing he had been observed, he hastily thrust the glove into the breast of his shirt and strode rapidly away.

CHAPTER III.

THE PETITION.

Miss Imogene Duke's curiosity as to the new proprietor was not speedily gratified. Ralph Monckton remained secluded in his dwelling, and though, as a boy, before his long stay abroad, he had known the few families of the better class in the neighborhood, he seemed to be in no hurry to renew his relations with them. Nor did he exhibit more interest in the welfare of his mines, leaving all business to be transacted by his agent and overseer, a burly, square jawed, grim looking person of the name of Joyce, whom he had picked up somewhere on the other side and brought home with him. Joyce appeared to be invested with absolute authority, and his narrow, tyrannical nature and overbearing manner soon won him the ill will of every man connected with the mines. He proved himself a merciless slave driver, and the discontent which the severe rule of the elder Monckton had aroused among the employees grew daily in intensity, and though for the time restrained smoldered beneath the surface, ready to burst into devouring flame at any moment.

Of this state of affairs Ralph Monckton was ignorant, or if he had any knowledge of it he was supremely indifferent. He never once visited the pits whence his vast wealth had been drawn and knew none of his employees by sight. Once he had passed a group of them on the road and in return to their respectful salutation had stared at them through his eyeglass without other response, a circumstance which did nothing toward softening the dislike he shared with his overseer.

One afternoon three weeks after Monckton's arrival Miss Duke, returning from her regular daily ride, observed a group of workmen gathered about the main gate of the Monckton mansion. Among them she recognized Matthew North, whose flushed face and glittering eyes betokened ill restrained anger. The girl pulled up her horse at the outskirts of the crowd and listened. The overseer, Joyce, was speaking evidently in reply to some demand on the part of the miners.

"I tell you no!" he said in a harsh, peremptory tone. "The mine is safe enough as it is, and we are not going to spend money to humor your whims."

"The expense would be but trifling," replied North, with a slight tremor in his voice, "and might be the means of saving many lives. The oldest hands among us—and Reuben Wilkes, here, who was in just such a disaster himself—say they can hear the water behind the head wall in Ten Foot Drive, and that it will surely break through. A stout bulkhead of heavy plank"——

"I tell you no, for the last time," interrupted Joyce, still more harshly, "the Ten Foot Drive is going to stay as it is."

"Will you not at least lay our request before Mr. Monckton?" asked North, his broad chest heaving in his effort to retain his self control.

"I will not," was the sharp answer. "My word is final."

"Then the blood of those who will be murdered by your inhuman neglect be on your head," exclaimed North, giving way to his passion. "You have been warned in time, and you have refused to heed the warning."

"I have heard enough," retorted the overseer roughly. "And take notice, you, Matthew North, I've my eye on you for a mischief maker. Mind what you are about, or it will be the worse for you."

North's lips parted to give vent to a wrathful answer when he caught sight of Imogene Duke sitting upon her horse, an attentive observer of what was going forward. He checked himself instantly, and though the blood still surged to his temples he addressed his companions in a voice that was almost calm.

"Disperse, friends," he said. "We have done our utmost to obtain our rights, and we have failed. There is nothing more to do here."

Muttering among themselves, but obedient, the men moved off, leaving North to walk beside Miss Duke's horse. Both were silent for some moments.

"You heard?" he said finally.

"Yes," she replied, bending her bright eyes upon him approvingly, "and "I have heard enough," retorted the overseer roughly.

I saw what pleased me greatly, Matthew—that you kept your temper and spoke moderately."

"Thank you," he answered in a low tone. "It was hard, but I could do harder things than that with your eye upon me."

If the girl noticed the warmth with which this was spoken, she gave no sign of it.

"And is the danger as great as you represented?" she questioned.

"If anything, greater," he returned gloomily. "The Ten Foot Drive will surely be drowned out sooner or later. A score of men work in that section, and if the water breaks through while they are there not one will escape alive."

"And that overseer refuses to take precautions?"

"As you saw," he replied bitterly. "But what are the lives of a few poor laborers? Their wives will weep and their children go hungry, but others will take their places, and so it will go on while the few are rich and ruthless and the many are ignorant and helpless."

"Is there no remedy?" The girl's beautiful face was full of pain and sympathy. Her lip quivered, and there was a mist in her mild, calm eyes. "Can nothing be done for these poor people?"

"Yes," he answered, with sudden vehemence. "Were we, who are far the stronger did we but realize it, to turn the tables and put the lives of our heartless masters in jeopardy, there would be a change. And, by the living light, the time will come"——

"Matthew!"

The word was very gently spoken, and there was no accent of warning or reproach in the speaker's tone, but it calmed the man's excitement instantly. The powerful arm raised in menace dropped to his side. He hung his head, and in a low, smothered voice he said:

"Why can I not remember? Why can I not be as you would have me?"

"Please do not speak so," was her earnest response. "It is not what I wish, but what your own sense of right should teach you. I am only an ignorant girl, Matthew, but I am very sure that wrong cannot be righted by wrong."

North made no reply, but continued to walk beside her horse with his head moodily bent until they reached the crossroad leading to the pits, where she bade him a smiling adieu. He paused a moment to watch her as she rode onward.

"Bless her, sweet angel!" he murmured brokenly. "She knows I love her without hope, yet she does not scorn or avoid me. Poor, foolish dream of mine! Between the day laborer and the rich man's daughter there is a gulf as wide as the world. Heaven help me!"

MISS POLLARD'S SUIT

Dense Crowd in the Court Room This Morning.

Great Interest as to the Outcome of the Fistic Encounter Between the Lawyers Last Night—Miss Pollard Breaks Down When a Witness Refers to the Death of Her Child.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Judge Bradley's court room, where the Pollard-Breckinridge suit is being heard, was densely packed this morning, the extra interest being the desire to learn the outcome of the fistic encounter last evening between the attorneys of the plaintiff and defendant, or, more properly, the assault on Miss Pollard's counsel by the opposing lawyers. The case has already developed much bitter feeling between the contending forces, breaking out at frequent intervals in displays of hot southern blood, and at times threatening to develop into old time southern court room proceedings. Judge Bradley will probably take due notice of the proceedings of last night that will deter, at least until after the close of the case, any attempt at further hostilities. Among those present in the court room this morning were a number of Col. Breckinridge's colleagues in the house, looking on as interested spectators, but only a few women tried to gain admission, Judge Bradley's order of yesterday directing that no women be admitted other than those who came as witnesses in the case, having the effect of keeping the fair sex away.

Miss Pollard entered the court room at 10 o'clock, attended by Miss Ellis of the Episcopal Home of Mercy and the woman friend from Cincinnati, who sat beside her throughout yesterday's hearing. Miss Pollard was dressed as on her first appearance in the court room.

She said "good morning" to her counsel. A faint smile was upon her face, but this quickly died away as the man whom she is prosecuting entered the room at a doorway directly within her line of vision. Col. Breckinridge nonchantly walked over to the jurors' hat rack and hung up his overcoat. Then he sat down in his chair almost immediately behind and about six feet distant from Miss Pollard. Col. Thompson, Major Butterworth and the other counsel came in stragglingly.

The origin of the trouble of last night was at the close of proceedings when Mr. Johnson, who is assisting Mr. Calderon Carlisle for the plaintiff, in opposing a motion, contended that the defense was guilty of chicanery, effrontery and insolence in endeavoring to keep certain depositions out of court. When Mr. Johnson made the remark about chicanery there was a murmur from Col. Breckinridge and his counsel and as Mr. Johnson continued to make the other uncomplimentary remarks, they plainly showed their objection. Shortly afterward, when the court was declared adjourned for the day, nearly all the people in the court-room, including Judge Bradley, passed out through the door reserved for witnesses and jurymen, to the right, and back of the judge's bench. Mr. Shelby, Col. Breckinridge, Col. Phil Thompson, Major Benj. Butterworth, Chas. H. Stoll, W. A. McKenny, and Desha Breckinridge, went out in a body. At the door of the lobby outside the court-room, Mr. Calderon Carlisle and Mr. Johnson were stopped by Mr. Shelby who had waited there for them.

"Mr. Johnson," said Mr. Shelby, "I consider your remarks to be insulting and I demand satisfaction."

Then Mr. Shelby slapped Mr. Johnson's face before the latter could say more than, "well sir."

Mr. Johnson made a movement to strike his assailant, but Mr. Carlisle placed his body between the two. Just then Col. Breckinridge rushed in with his arms extended.

"Keep your hands off me, sir," cried Mr. Carlisle expecting an attack, "or you'll suffer for it."

"I intended only to separate them," said Col. Breckinridge.

Mr. Carlisle raised his hands to avert any hostile intention of Col. Breckinridge, and as he did so somebody struck him in the back of the head.

"Who struck me?" said Mr. Carlisle, turning quickly.

A couple of bailiffs were hurrying off through the crowd with Desha Breckinridge and Capt. Leonard, the deputy marshal of the district, told Mr. Carlisle that he was the one who made the attack.

All this happened in less time than it takes to tell it. Mr. Shelby and his brother counsel hurried out of the court house, while Col. Breckinridge remained to make an explanation to Judge Bradley, who had heard of the row and had at once come back. Mr. Carlisle, Mr. Johnson and others also told the judge of the affair, and he promised to settle the matter to-day.

One of the important witnesses yesterday was Claude de la Roche Francis, a young law student residing in New York, but who said he had spent a large part of his life abroad. He is said to be a cousin of Ward McAllister and a nephew of the Marquis de la Roche, chamberlain to the pope. He testified to having often met Miss Pollard and Col. Breckinridge at the house of Mrs. Thomas in Washington; that Miss Pollard had repeatedly spoken to him of her engagement to Col. Breckinridge; told him how dearly she loved him, and how she kept a revolver at her bedside with which she would kill herself if Mr. Breckinridge deserted her. The threat was made after the rumor was spread that Col. Breckinridge was paying attention to Mrs. Wing. Young Francis said that Mr. Breckinridge's manner toward Miss Pollard was extremely paternal and very kind—very affectionate also. Miss Pollard's manner toward Mr. Breckinridge was one of respect, deference and affection.

Dr. Tabor Johnson, a prominent physician of Washington, testified to having met Miss Pollard professionally at a house on H street on May 24, 1893. She had symptoms, he said, which showed him that a premature birth was in progress.

While the doctor was testifying Miss Pollard sat with bowed head, her face hid in her handkerchief.

Several letters, the doctor said, which Miss Pollard had received and which she requested him to read during the week he was visiting her, were produced in court. They were from the defendant and were all in reference to her care during her illness. They were signed with the defendants full name and were without headings and not of an endearing nature.

A middle-aged woman, who gave her name as Mary Parsons, a physician of Washington, testified to having attended Miss Pollard through confinement at a house on Second street on Feb. 3, 1888. The child, a boy, died the following April.

When the witness spoke of the death of the child Miss Pollard broke down. She tried to keep back her tears, but as the witness answered some more questions about her child, Miss Pollard sobbed aloud. Prior to the child's death, and while he was lying dead, said Dr. Parsons, Miss Pollard had gone to see it.

At this point the plaintiff's sobbing became so violent that the proceedings were stopped.

Miss Pollard was led out of court by her two companions, Mrs. Buchanan and Miss Ellis, and the examination of Dr. Parsons continued.

After some objections by the defense as to questions as to the paternity of the child, Dr. Parsons said she called on Col. Breckinridge at the request of Miss Pollard and presented to him a bill for professional services to the plaintiff. This was at Col. Breckinridge's house on N street. Col. Breckinridge sent the witness the amount of the bill.

TROY ELECTION CRIMES.

Change of Special Counsel to Assist in the Prosecutions.

ALBANY, March 13.—Gov. Flower was informed that the gentlemen suggested by him as special counsel in the prosecution of election crimes committed in Troy last Tuesday were not entirely satisfactory to the committee of citizens. He thereupon summoned Assistant District Attorney Fagan before him and told him that he should depend upon him to make a vigorous and thorough prosecution of all those violations of law. Mr. Fagan said he thought it was due to the district attorney's office that it be allowed to conduct these prosecutions, and if they were placed in his hands he would do all in his power to see that every law-breaker got his just punishment. At the same time, in cases of this kind, where party feeling is at white heat, he preferred to be assisted in the prosecution by competent counsel representing the different political elements of the city, and requested the governor's permission to associate with him in the cases Messrs. Frank S. Black and Seymour Van Santvoord. The governor squiesced in this suggestion.

Mr. Frank S. Black is one of the most prominent republicans in Troy. He is counsel for the senate committee which is now investigating election frauds in that locality.

MONSTER DYNAMITE BOMB.

NEW YORK, March 13.—At about 3:30 o'clock a. m. policeman Conners while at St. Nicholas avenue, crossing 120th street, noticed two men acting in a suspicious manner. One of the men carried a bundle under his arm. They were conversing in low tones when Connors made a dart for the man with the bundle and grabbed him by the collar. The other man dashed away in the darkness. The man whom Conners held tried to pass the bundle to the other man before he ran, but was prevented from doing so by the policeman. Conners took his prisoner to the station house where he gave his name as John Kelly, 50 years old, and his address as 583 Grand street.

The bundle was laid upon the sergeant's desk. When the latter unrolled the piece of newspaper he staggered back and nearly fell off his chair with horror. The package contained nine loaded paper dynamite cartridges and three dynamite bombs. The latter were pieces of gas-pipe about three inches in diameter, about a foot and a half long, and were riveted with bolts at the ends. They were bound tightly together by wire, and from the end of which a long fuse protruded.

An expert, after looking at the bombs, declared that they were fully charged and that there was sufficient dynamite in them to blow up a block of houses. He said the fuses had been so arranged that when they were ignited it would have taken them about six minutes to have reached the deadly dynamite. It was said that each of the paper cartridges contained enough dynamite to blow down an ordinary house.

At police headquarters the prisoner, Kelly, was interrogated by Superintendent Byrnes, Inspector McLaughlin and Inspector Conlin. The prisoner had but little to say. What he did say led the superintendent and inspectors to believe that he knows much more about the dynamite found in his possession than he has told so far. All he would say at police headquarters was that he and the man who escaped were hired by a stranger at Grand street, East river, to take the package containing the dynamite cartridges up to Westchester. He claimed that the man who hired him was a perfect stranger to him, and that the man who helped him to carry the stuff was also a total stranger.

From developments at police headquarters it is thought that the prisoner may know something of the bomb explosion in Park street on Saturday night. That Supt. Byrnes regards the arrest of Kelly an important one is evident from his reticence when questioned about the capture. He would say nothing beyond that he was making an investigation. Inspector McLaughlin was close-mouthed, and Inspector Conlin declined to say anything.

There is no more fashionable section uptown than the one where the man was captured. There are rows of tall apartment houses occupied by wealthy citizens, and in the immediate vicinity millions of dollars are invested in buildings. Should the bombs have been designed for the neighborhood there is no doubt that hundreds of people might have been killed and thousands of dollars' worth of property destroyed.

TWO MURDERS NOW.

Another of Emile Henry's Bomb Victims Dies in Paris.

PARIS, March 13.—Ernest Bordes died in a city hospital last evening of injuries received in the cafe of the Hotel Terminus on the evening of Feb. 12, when Emile Henry threw a bomb among the guests. As this is the second death which was caused by the Hotel Terminus explosion the charge of murder is likely to be established against Henry without great difficulty.

Paul Bernard, one of the most dangerous international anarchists in Europe, has been sentenced to one year's imprisonment for having exhorted an audience in Roanne four years ago to murder and pillage. After serving the term to which he has just been sentenced Bernard will be turned over to the Spanish authorities to stand trial on more serious charges.

The chamber of deputies voted urgency on a bill forbidding the publication of reports of anarchist trials. The framers of the bill argued that the notoriety given to men like Ravachol and Vaillant by public trials was the most powerful incentive to other anarchists to commit horrible crimes. The proposal for urgency was opposed most strenuously by the socialist deputies. It was approved by a vote 258 to 203.

Short Legislative Session.

TRENTON, N. J., March 13.—The republican senate held a three-minute session last night and adjourned until Thursday. The democratic senate held a one-minute session and adjourned until to-day. The republican senate had no business to transact and the democratic senate can do nothing but adjourn. While the republicans were together Senator Packer presented a communication from the republican voters of Dayton, Gloucester county, in which they "heartily endorsed the firm stand taken by the republican senators in defending their rights to their seats, and pledged their hearty support in resisting democratic aggression and outrage."

Paterson Strike Troubles.

PATERSON, N. J., March 13.—The police force of this city are kept busy to-day preventing riotous disturbances at the various silk mills, dye houses, and at the two large flax spinning mills of the Barbour brothers.

Big Strike at Lowell.

LOWELL, Mass., March 13.—The employes of the Merrimack mills at Dracut have struck. Two thousand men are affected.

AFTER A MONTH'S TOIL

First Body Recovered at Plymouth at Midnight.

It Was a Shapeless Mass of Flesh and Entirely Unrecognizable—Undoubtedly Killed at the First Fall of the Rock—Intense Excitement Around the the Gaylord Mine Shaft To-day.

PLYMOUTH, Pa., March 13.—One month ago the country was startled by the awful calamity at the Gaylord mine by which 13 men were entombed by a fall of rock in the main gangway. Every hour of the day and night since that time rescuing parties have worked with the energy of despair to reach the victims dead or alive and during that time suspense in Plymouth has been awful. The wives and children of the victims have haunted the mine day after day, and as the shifts were changed their pitiful appeals for news of their loved ones would move the stoutest heart. But although brave men at the risk of their own lives toiled on unceasingly it was only at midnight last night that the first definite news of the victims reached the surface. At that hour the anxious watchers at the mouth of the shaft were startled by an unusual commotion among the officials. The engineer was signalled to hoist quick and in a few minutes the cage came to the surface. The watchers crowded close to the shaft and saw four grimy miners tenderly lift and carry into the engine house a plain pine coffin.

The news spread like wildfire and in a short time the shaft was surrounded by fully a thousand people.

The news was passed that one of the bodies had been found. A United Press representative gained entrance to where the body lay. The remains were crushed beyond all recognition and it was impossible to discover who the victim was. He was buried under a mass of rock that crushed the life out of him instantly and at the same time obliterated all semblance of human shape.

From the moment of the news of the finding of the body, the excitement has been intense, and the scenes this morning at the mine are more heartrending, if possible, than even at the time of the terrible accident.

STREET RAILWAY MONOPOLY.

All Lehigh Valley Roads to Pass Under Control of the Johnsons

LYNN, Mass., March 13.—William A. Boland, of Lynn, has purchased from the Industrial Improvement company of Boston the stock of the Allentown & Bethlehem Rapid Transit company of Allentown, Pa. This company owns and controls several electric roads connecting Allentown with 20 or 25 of the principal cities and towns in the Lehigh valley, Pennsylvania. The Allentown Electric Light company, with a capital of $300,000, is included in this purchase.

It is understood by the purchase of these properties that a consolidation will be made with the Allentown & Lehigh Valley Traction company, which is owned and controlled by Hon. Tom L. and A. L. Johnson, the railroad and steel rail manufacturers at Johnstown, Pa.

By acquiring the roads purchased by Mr. Boland a monopoly will practically be given the Johnsons of all the street railways in the Lehigh valley.

Allentown Secures King Kelly.

NEW YORK, March 13.—King Kelly, the idol at one time of the baseball world, has signed for next season. He plays with the Allentown (Pa.) club, of which Albert L. Johnson is sole owner. The deal was consummated in the St. James cafe, and the great and only Michael went away saying: "Well, the king will play the game of his life. He'll show them there's no 'has been' about him." And he said so in all sincerity. He will go to Allentown on Monday morning to take immediate charge of the club and put it in trim. The club opens its season the last of April.

Minister Thurston to Wed.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—Minister Thurston, of Hawaii, is reported to be engaged to Miss Harriet W. Potter, of St. Joseph, Mich. The prospective bride has been employed at the mid winter fair as secretary of the Hawaiian village and panorama. She served in the same capacity at the Hawaiian cyclorama in the Midway plaisance, where she met Minister Thurston. Miss Potter resigned her position two weeks ago and returned to her Michigan home with the intention, it is said, of preparing for the wedding.

Proceedings in Congress.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The sundry civil appropriation bill is the important work before the house to-day and will continue to be until Friday when adjournment will be taken until Monday. Yesterday was District of Columbia day and the time was fitted away, without action, on the question allowing the Metropolitan Street Railway company to change its motive power. In the senate the seigniorage bill still holds the floor.

Money Order Clerk Missing.

PHILADELPHIA, March 13.—Edward J. Schlenk, 27 years old, money order clerk at the Kensington Postal station, is missing and an investigation shows that $400 is gone. It is further discovered that a postal note book containing 250 blanks, each of which could be filled up for any amount under $5, has also disappeared.

A Tartar for Dixon.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Jack McAuliffe, just returned from the west, brought with him Jerry Marshall, the little colored wonder of Australia, who he is anxious to match against George Dixon. McAuliffe declares that if the men can be brought together Dixon will discover that he is up against a tartar.

Spread of Tuberculosis.

LYNDONVILLE, Vt., March 13.—The valuable herd of cattle on Mountain View farm at East Bourke, owned by R. A. Darling, of New York, is found to be infected with tuberculosis, and 78 head, out of a total of 91, must be destroyed.

Michigan Day at the Midwinter.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—Yesterday was Michigan day at the midwinter fair, and, the weather being delightful, the celebration was a grand affair.

REVOLT AGAINST HETFIELD.

Dissatisfied Democrats Protest Against His Appointment.

Telegrams and letters of remonstrance against the appointment of John M. Hetfield as postmaster of Plainfield have begun to pour into Washington, and the local Democratic leaders will do all in their power to secure a transferral of the office to some applicant who has done more work for the party. The disaffection against Hetfield is strong and widespread, and influential citizens are fighting his appointment.

There is good reason to believe that Hetfield's name has not yet been officially sent in, and in view of the ferment Mr. Dunn may be induced to withdraw his support of the man he has named.

A Republican Point of View.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Congressman Dunn has settled the row over the Plainfield Postmaster by recommending the appointment of John Hetfield. And this leaves Rowland M. Stover, Elmore D. Moffett, John Kenney, and several others, in a most disgruntled condition, with vials of wrath carefully corked and laid away against next November. The appointment in Plainfield is about as satisfactory, from a party point of view, as the appointment in Roselle.

That to the pledge you sure will faithful be—
Oh, promise me!

"Our John" arises in great agitation, and drops a document labeled "Postmaster's Commission" from his pocket. All scramble to get it, but "Our John" puts his foot on it and they step back downcast. John sings:

Behold in me
The great John T.
My privilege to scoff is.
And not a flea,
Till I decree,
Can jump that fat post-office.
I cannot say
This early day
What suitor suits my fancy.
So bide a wee
Till I can see
My dear constituency.

ASPIRANTS:—
Your 'stituency's here,
In letters long, sincere,
Their names are wrote,
For me to vote,
Your duty now is clear.

JOHN T.:—
You all shall have it,
You all shall have it,
If such a result strange
I only can arrange,
This pie you've eyed,
Why not divide?—
'T would be a novel change.

ASPIRANTS:—
We want it all,
We want it all,
If you make such division,
You just can bet
That you will get
Congressional revision.
(Exeunt.

JOHN T. (softly):—
Was ever man so vexed,
So perfectly perplexed?
Oh, dear, dear me!
Would I could see
Just what is coming next.

Voice floating through the window:
Oh, I have carried the mail,
And I know how the letters go
That office of postal Shepherd
Belongs to Joe!

JOHN T. (sotto voce):—
Not for Joe—
Oh dear no!

Enter an Aspirant, alone. He sings:

I've a little song to sing,
I'm the leader of the ring.
So let me know
Before I go
Who holds the winning string.
You surely can't refuse
To name the man I choose,
For that's the proper thing.

JOHN T.:—
You've worked so hard
That full reward
Is surely your true merit.
Your wish is mine,
Your hand should shine
With that post-office carat.

Exit Aspirant, wearing broad smile. Enter another. He warbles:

To Washington
To get the bun
I've come, John T., a scootin'.
I want no hifaluting'——
Will you give me the bun?

JOHN T.:—
Most certainly,
If I can see
That you deserve the bun.

Exit Aspirant, jubilant. Enter a third, singing:

Most honorable sir, to be post-officer
Is why I've drifted thither.
Oh grant me the grace of a smile from your (face,
Or this Flower shall surely wither.

JOHN T.:
Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear.
Full many a Flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste it's sweetness on the Front street (air.

But since you've asked me for no more,
I'd like to move you to that shop next door.
To bloom anew, O gentle Flower,
In Uncle Sam's great postal bower.

The old warrior departs, and is succeeded by one who trills:

John T., John T., give me your answer, do!
Was n't that office made for the Kenney Shoe?
If you want to please the nation,
Grant me administration.
If Rafferty
Holds this 'ere key,
Then I'm your gay cuckoo!

JOHN T.:—
John, John,
Here's a John another,
John, John,
I love you for your brother-
In-law, John, John,
To you I much'd rather
Give to you the office, John.

Exit delighted Aspirant, and enter John M., accompanied by his arch counselor. He sings:

Pass me not, oh noble statesman,
I implore your sure decree,
I can show a thousand reasons—
Let Pope's mantle fall on me!
Self-praises others may have sung,
Have nothing been but fudge,
My worth is far beyond my tongue—
Refer you to the Judge.

THE JUDGE:—
Here's a nobleman,
Do the job he can,
All the citizens endorse him,
Opposition can't unhorse him;
Clergymen and doctors too
All for him they parleyvoo;
Merchants, druggists, lawyers, tailors,
Dentists, butchers, masons, nailers,
All for him declare—
He's the pop'lar heir.

JOHN M.:—
All others are but smudge—
Refer you to the Judge.

THE JUDGE:—
A word as to myself—
The great Republican
Who up against me ran.
Shall not the Democrat
Who did a deed like that
Have his sweet say
Decreed this day?

JOHN T.:—
Enough, enough!
You are the stuff.

Sings:

Oh, John M. H., my Jo John,
Be thou my patron saint.
They said you were too slow, John,
But sure begobs you ain't.

[CURTAIN.]

As curtain falls, the tramp of the homeward army is heard, to the air of "I've got it, I've got it, but you must not tell!"

SCENE 2—Asbestos Club-rooms, Plainfield. Crowd of Aspirants grouped expectantly. 6:04 train halts in the foreground, and a long-bearded man alights

CHORUS:—
Behold Elmore Moffett,
The sure-enough prophet;
How firm and majestic he seems.
He comes martial treading,
And how we are dreading
To hear the result of our dreams.

He distributes bandanas, and sings dolefully:

Prepare to weep,
And put to sleep
Your mad anticipation.
No power you wield
Like John Hetfield—
He's got the nomination.
His lawyer bold
Has dumped you cold,
In sad exasperation.

CHORUS OF THE DISTRESSED:—
His lawyer!

THE PROPHET:—
Aye, aye,
You may jaw,
You may sing
But the law
Will defy
Your decry.

CHORUS (revengefully):—
Pretty politics!
John T., you we'll fix!
At the polls you'll be rejected,
Never, never resurrected,
Sent up seven Salt Creeks!

(Disconsolately)
Oh, what is the worth of a pull,
A solid, political pull!
The wires in our paw
Not an office can draw,
Just because we neglected to call in the law.

Oh, what chumps were we,
Not the fact to see,
That you cannot win a case
On your backing or your face,
Lest you have an attornee,
Hired to run things for a fee.

Exeunt, singing:

We thought we had it solid—
S-O-L-I-D—I-D!
But the fact confronts us stolid—
We are S-O-L-D—Sold!
But now the fight's begun,
We've got the mitten,
We're badly bitten,
John M. has got the bun.
But that John T.,
You wait and see,
Will soon be done,
D-O-N-E!

ELECTRIC POWER ON CANALS.

A Fifty Year Contract Secured By the Cataract Company.

ALBANY, March 13.—The most important proposed improvement in state canal operations has been formally approved by the state authorities. Mr. Frank W. Hawley, of Batsford Farms, near Rochester, was in Albany yesterday afternoon. He is vice-president of the Cataract General Electric company and when he left town he had in his pocket a fifty-year permit from Superintendent Edward Hannan, of the state department of public works, for his electric company to put in some kind of an electric plant along the lines of the state canals by which boats can be operated with electricity. The company shall not charge for use of such power by the canal boatmen at a rate exceeding $20 per electrical horse power for each season of navigation. Mr. Hawley says that is the maximum charge that can be made but that the rate will undoubtedly be much lower.

The company will obtain its electrical power at Niagara Falls, from the Niagara Power company, and transmit it to Albany along the line of the Erie canal.

The operations of the Cataract company are not to interfere in any way with boats navigating the canals by steam or horse power.

SUGAR BOUNTY BENEFICIARIES.

Ex-Senator White Among the Favored for Nearly $50,000.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—In response to a senate resolution the secretary of the treasury has sent to the senate a list of all persons who have been paid a sugar bounty and the sums so received. In the list appears the name of ex-senator Edward D. White, who in 1892 and 1893 received $31,967.06 and up to March 1 of the current year, $18,186.86. Senator Caffery owns a plantation where he raises cane but has it handled by the Caffery Sugar refinery, in which, however, he has no pecuniary interest.

The grand total of all bounties paid up to March 1, 1894, was $19,230,806.30.

Young Dow Returns to 'Frisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 13.—Clarence M. Dow, son of the Denver millionaire, who deserted from Angel Island and eloped to Mexico with Miss Enlo, daughter of the sheriff of Marysville, this state, has returned to this city. After cutting a wide swath in Mexico he went to Fort Sam Houston and gave himself up to the military authorities as a deserter, but his father obtained his discharge through the secretary of war. Dow says his father contemplates purchasing a New York bank, in which event he will go there to live.

New York Dry Goods Market.

NEW YORK, March 13.—While the dry goods market opens this week without any spirited action on the part of purchasers, it shows, according to concensus of reports, some improvement in the demand over the opening of last week, and is thus far encouraging to those who are counting upon a better trade this week than last. The mail order demand has been the best feature.

Only Five Strikers Returned.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., March 13.—The Standard Silk mill, which shut down two weeks ago because of a strike, started up yesterday, according to previous announcement, but only five of the 250 weavers reported for work. The mill employs over 600 hands and there is now no telling when the trouble will be adjusted and the mill again in working order.

Improving the Opportunity.

TROY, N. Y., March 13.—Mayor Whelan's term of office expires to-day at noon. Yesterday he appointed two school commissioners to fill vacancies. Five of the seven members of that board are now regarded as anti-Murphy members. Mayor Whelan also appointed a police commissioner who is opposed to Murphy.

Verdict Against Corbett.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 13.—George W. Heberly, of this city, has been awarded $22.80 damages by referee Henry W. Gregg on a judgment obtained in the trial of an action brought against Champion James J. Corbett for violation of a contract to give a sparring exhibition in this city in September, 1892.

Liquor Dealers Vacate Their Appeals

HARTFORD, Conn., March 13.—Eight liquor dealers convicted of the illegal sale of liquor in local police courts and who appealed to the superior court from heavy fines have vacated their appeals.

GRAY HAIR has a beauty of its own, but a BALD PATE——that is different! Now it may not be possible in every case to prevent baldness, but a test of fifteen years goes to show that PETROLEUM HAIR TONIC is almostan absolute specific for baldness, falling hair and dandruff. Originated, made and sold only at REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, Park and North avenues.

Economical Women

Understand the wisdom of cleaning and coloring. Even in good times, if the price of one dress can be made to cover two, it's certainly worth trying for.

In times not quite so good, when it is hard to spare the price for even one gown, dyeing solves the problem. It's a heap better and cheaper to pay two dollars for coloring the old blue dress than it is to pay ten dollars for a new black one.

The principle—and the practice too—is the same in men's clothes—try it.

ENLARGING THE SCOPE.

THE CHARITY COUNCIL ATTACKING OTHER EVILS.

To Prevent Poverty by Attacking Its Causes—Warring Against Laudanum Drinking, Truancy and All Sorts of Social Evil.

The meeting of the Council of the Citizens Organized Aid Association held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church last evening was called to order shortly after 8 by President Mason W. Tyler. The roll was called and the minutes of the meeting of February 12 read by the Secretary, Miss Edith B. Leonard, were approved.

In making a report, Treasurer H. P. Reynolds said he had prepared a report of the finances of the Association from its organization up to and including yesterday.

It was as follows:

Subscriptions received in December	$71.00
Subscriptions received in January	87.82
Subscriptions received in February	171.25
Subscriptions received from Mch. 1 to 12	71.00
Total receipts	$401.07

EXPENDITURES:

Printing	$91.35
Stationery and postage	5.10
Car fare and coach hire	2.50
Salary of agent	55.00
Rent, six months	20.00
Total expenditures	$173.95
Balance on hand	$227.12
With additional receipts	234.12

The report stated that the Association had no outstanding bills and included a list of all the subscriptions.

Mr. Reynolds asked for instructions in regard to the matter of admitting to membership all who made contributions of $2 or more. After discussion the suggestion of John M. Whiton, who told of the rules of Muhlenberg Hospital, was adopted, it being decided that a notice of reception to annual membership be sent to every contributor of $2 or over, except in cases where the donor stated his unwillingness to join.

The Secretary's report stated that W. H. Reilly had consented to serve on the District Committee. E. M. Cave, Mrs. J. W. Yates and Mrs. Geo. D. Hallock had accepted their election to membership. Mrs. Johanna Fisher had been appointed the representative of the Mount Olive Baptist Church. Rev. Hobart Clark, elected to represent All Souls Church, said he could not serve because of other duties. The First M. E. and the Seventh-Day Baptist Churches had not been heard from.

Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, as Chairman of the Co-operation Committee, reported that twenty-one churches had expressed their willingness to aid the Association.

The Captain of the Salvation Army had expressed her sympathy with the Association's movement, but as there was no Slum Committee in Plainfield they had no regular charity organization to co-operate. Various secret and beneficial organizations had been consulted. They had stated their desire to dispense charity to members privately.

The W. C. T. U. had been asked to use the Association's register in discriminating between worthy and unworthy applicants at the soup houses. The committee thanked various persons, especially Frank Day, for the use of their carriages. In regard to the distribution of householder's tickets the committee reported that the methods now in use had failed, as but twelve persons had applied for the tickets. It would be well to have the slips left at the various houses in the city.

Mrs. Tiffany's report was accepted and ordered filed. On motion of Dr. W. H. Murray the recomendation in regard to systematic distribution was adopted.

The Chairman of the Committee on Legal Matters was not present. Mr. Reynolds, of the Printing Committee and Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, of the Employment Committee, reported progress.

For the District Committee Rev. G. Kennedy Newell reported that frequent meetings, at which Mrs. W. A. Woodruff attended, had been held since the last report. The sixty applications in the month of February had been acted upon as follows:

Given work on streets	25
Refused to work	4
Others not previously aided	23
Sent to Relief Association	16
Aided by Dr. E. W. Hedges	1
Sent to First Presbyterian Church	1
Found unworthy	5

Up to March 1, 178 cases had received attention. Last Saturday 93 men were on the street improvement pay roll. Of the 34 cards expiring Feb. 24, 22 had been renewed for March.

A disreputable house had been reported to the proper authorities. An application for truant officers had been made to the Board of Education. The committee urged the hiring of a trained nurse, but withdrew their recommendation when informed that one had been decided upon by the King's Daughters.

The refusal of Rev. Mr. Clark to serve leaving a vacancy in the District Committee, on motion of H. B. Newhall the selection of a successor was postponed for a month.

Rev. Mr. Newell said that there remained one matter which he had not mentioned in his report. He found that many tradesmen in Plainfield were accustomed to selling morphine and laudanum to any one who might apply. He knew the practice had been very harmful. He asked the Committee on Legal Matters for an opinion on the best method of stopping the sale of poison in this way. He knew that in two attempts, one successful, at sdicide this last winter, nearby grocery stores had furnished the poison used. Drummers had been in town inducing store keepers to deal in drugs.

Mayor Gilbert said that the sale described was criminal and could be stopped if evidence were obtainable.

The opinion of Mr. Reynolds having been asked, the druggist said he had written, about twenty years ago, the principal State law bearing on the subject. By this law a Board of Pharmacy had been established and the registration of druggists made compulsory. Severe penalties were fixed for the sale of active poisons by others than licensed pharmacists. Even druggists were restricted in such sales.

Dr. M. S. Simpson said he had attended the two cases of laudanum poisoning referred to in which the drug had been bought in a neighboring grocery. In one house he had found 22 bottles which showed what an amount a single person could purchase from a storekeeper. He understood that C. B. Smith, a wholesale grocer of Newark, sold to a number of stores in Plainfield and Mayor Gilbert asked any one who could obtain direct evidence to call at his office.

Mr. Reynolds cautioned those interested in prosecuting offenders against confusing paregoric with laudanum as the legal methods of procedure would be different in treating the sale of the two preparations of opium.

Mrs. Tiffany's request for the appointment of a friendly visitor for each of the families reported, the selections to be made by the District Committee, was granted.

The meeting was then adjourned.

APPEAL TO THE BISHOP.

HOLY CROSS PARISHIONERS WANT A NEW CHURCH.

Seventy-five Dissenters from T. L. Murphy's Rectorship Sign the Petition to the Bishop, and Others Are to Follow.

A meeting of dissatisfied members of Holy Cross Church, including those who last year requested the resignation of the rector, Rev. Timothy Logan Murphy, was held last night in St. Peter's German Lutheran Church on Grove street.

The eighty people present were not only representatives of the wealthiest class of the church, but included in their number many of the most religious workers. George R. Dupee was elected chairman, and H. R. Phillips secretary.

The purpose for which the meeting had been called, the petitioning of the Bishop for permission to start a new church, was treated in a general discussion. Other topics were touched on, and a number who had previously pledged themselves to aid the project financially, doubled the amount of their subscriptions.

It was decided to send a petition to the Bishop within three days asking for the desired permission. Seventy-five persons signed their names to the document and other signatures are promised. The number of signers will reach 100. There is no doubt that the church authorities will agree and anew church be formed. The Bishop and the Standing Committee, a body of eight, four clergymen and four lay members, have the authority to act.

No further action will be taken until an answer is received from the authorities. If it is formed, the members of the new church will probably worship in the German Lutheran Church until a new one is built by them, although that church has not yet been hired. The Bishop will have thirty days to answer.

AIDS IN MISSION WORK.

Aggressive Action Advocated in C. E. Societies.

The lecture room of Trinity Reformed Church was filled with an attentive audience of Christian Endeavorers last evening when soul-stirring address was given by Miss Alice B. Spangenberg. Her subject was "How to make the cause of missions more successful in the Christian Endeavor Society."

Miss Spangenberg has become widely known throughout the State for her earnestness and zeal in the work of the society. From her practical knowleege and experience she is able to present many helpful suggestions which, fol lowed out, will make a society a most successful agent in mission labor.

In presenting her subject she spoke on the following necessities for aggressive labor: Efficient officers and committees, wise plans, well-filled library, and a missionary fund. Miss Spangenberg related several touching incidents which were especially helpful to all.

The Missionary Committee, of which Miss M. M. Berkaw is chairman, arranged the meeting and deserve much credit for their work in interesting the members.

TOLD ABOUT PHYSICAL CULTURE.

Practical Talk to Plainfield Women by Dress-Reformer Miss Lindley.

Miss E. Marguerite Lindley's lecture on "Physical Culture," given in the Guild room of Grace P. E. Church yesterday afternoon, was well attended.

Miss Lindley's style is that of conversational argument. She introduced many clever illustrations showing the absurdity of mistaken ideas now accepted as correct and explaining the effects of her treatment on individuals. Her descriptions of the desirable in dress and explanations of her manner of living were especially interesting to the audience.

A subject dwelt upon at length was "Self preservation and mistaken ideas of duty." Miss Lindley's ideas on the duties and privileges of the mother as regards household work were plain and practical. She explained the difference between the Swedish methods of body-development which she used and those taught in ordinary gymnasiums, and illustrated the various movements. The general discussion by the women showed the interest in the speaker's words.

Tam O'Shanters Dance.

By invitation of Miss Negus, the Tam O'Shanter Club gave an informal dance at her home in Bound Brook last night. The hard-wood floor made dancing a delight, and the time flew rapidly by. Refreshments were served about 12, and the dancing was resumed. Mr. and Mrs. R. F. R. Huntsman acted as chaperones. Among those present were: Miss Lulu French, Miss Helen Hasbrouck, Miss Lisaignolo, Mrs. Huntsman, Miss Margaret Vermeule, Miss Chandler, Miss Negus, Miss L. Negus, Mr. Huntsman, John Kirkner, John McLoughlin, Clarence Smith, Frank Richards, Mr. Voorhees, Mr. VanSickle, Mr. Close, Mr. Whitlock, Mr. Negus and Mr. Perry.

A Plainfielder in the Color Line.

James T. Scott of 543 West Seventh street headed a delegation of Malden Lane jewelers who objected to the brilliant orange hue which Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry painted his building across the way. The reddish-yellow light reflected made their diamonds look sick, and spoiled trade. Mr. Scott's energy secured a repainting of the building in a more harmonious color.

The Delay Was All Republican.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—The article in last night's News headed "To Deceive the Voters" I find is a parcel of misstatements. The facts are substantially as stated in your issue of Saturday, which was simply a condensed copy of the report.

In reference to placing the blame of the delay in getting out the borough report upon Mayor Saunders and myself, the facts are that the copy was given to the printer, The Courier, on Feb. 23, by Councilman Edwards in my presence, with the understanding that the report was to be printed and ready for distribution not later than March 2 or 3.

The matter of printing the report having been taken out of my hands by resolution of the Council, no blame for delay can attach to myself. JOHN VETTERLEIN, Borough Clerk.

Da Gama Seeks Asylum on a Portuguese Vessel.

Offer of Surrender Said to Have Been Favorably Received By Peixoto—Guarantee of Safety Demanded By the Insurgents—Closing Hours of Brazil's Long Drawn Out War.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—The state department has just received two important despatches from Minister Thompson at Rio. The first one stated that Admiral Saldarha da Gama had offered through the Portuguese naval commander to surrender on condition that he and his followers should be guaranteed safety.

This message was brought to President Peixoto by the Portuguese officer in person.

Peixoto's reply is not given, but it is inferred from the second despatch of Minister Thompson, received two hours later than the first, that the terms were favorably received. According to the second despatch Admiral da Gama had left his ship and gone on board the Portuguese vessel as an asylum.

Secretary Gresham understands from the despatches that the war has virtually ended and is gratified that the result has been reached in time to avoid further bloodshed.

Minister Mendonca said this morning that he had received information fully in accord with those of the state department but giving no further particulars.

Poor Timber for Yale's Crew.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 13.—An elaborate criticism of the candidates for the Yale crew has been prepared by Capt. Johnson and the coaches, based upon the work of the men during the entire period of indoor rowing, which may be summarized as follows: As a whole the men are slow with power, slow with hands, slow starting aft. They hang on the catch, and the time is irregular throughout the boat.

The Ithaca Tragedy.

ITHACA N. Y., March 13.—Judge G. A. Forbes, presiding over a special term of the supreme court in this city, in his charge to the grand jury paid particular attention to the recent poisoning at the Cornell freshman banquet, at which a colored woman, Mrs. Jackson, met her death.

TRENTON, N. J., March 13.—After standing out against a second reduction in their wages for more than nine weeks the employes of Wilson's woolen mills, numbering between 300 and 400, decided yesterday to return to work, and this morning they presented themselves for reinstatement.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.
Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment, There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medicel College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

CHAPTER IV.

A REMARKABLE YOUNG PERSON.

Half a mile beyond the crossroad Miss Duke met a gentleman, mounted like herself, coming from the opposite direction. In the slight, compact figure, light hair and blue eyes she recognized Ralph Monckton. He glanced at her with the very faintest appearance of interest and languidly lifted his hat with the air of performing a troublesome duty. With a feeling of irritation and contempt the young girl was about to pass on, ignoring his perfunctory salutation, when a sudden thought caused her to rein in her horse abreast of the mine owner.

"So you have returned, Ralph Monckton," she said carelessly.

The young man gazed at her deliberately for a moment; then in his slow,

"So you have returned, Ralph Monckton," she said carelessly.

unmodulated voice, and without the slightest change of expression in his cold, colorless face, he replied:

"I remember you now. You are Imogene Duke."

"Thank you for the mental effort made in my behalf," she answered mockingly. "Yes, I am Imogene Duke."

"You were a little girl in short frocks when I saw you last," he said, with the same deliberate voice and manner. "You have greatly changed."

"And you were a boy—a rather unpleasant boy, I thought," she retorted, with provoking candor. "You have not changed much."

He bowed gravely. "And your father," he questioned, "is he well?"

"Certainly none the better for any interest you have shown in his welfare," she returned sharply. "I am told you have been back nearly a month, yet you have not thought it worth your while to visit your father's old friends."

"Do they affect the usages of civilized society in this barbarous region?" he asked, with a drawl and a slight lifting of his handsome eyebrows.

"I wonder why you have consented to become a dweller in 'this barbarous region,'" she replied sarcastically.

"It was not my own wish, I assure you," he said composedly. "It was my father's strict injunction that I should take personal charge of the mines."

"Which you have obeyed by never once going near them and deputing your duty as proprietor to a petty tyrant as ignorant of your interests as he is careless of the needs of your employees."

"You, at least, appear to be well informed," he responded, with the faintest trace of irony. "The grimy delvers in Monckton pits have reason to be flattered."

A touch of color shot into the girl's cheek. "I know only what is common report," she replied steadily, "that the men in Monckton mines are poorer paid, more harshly driven and more shamefully neglected than the workers in any other mines in the state. And heaven knows the lot of a miner is wretched at best. Your mines, Ralph Monckton, are a byword in the whole country."

"Really?" he asked indifferently. "Then the whole country is indebted to me for a bit of gossip and scandal. I feel quite the public benefactor. But I am amply rewarded by this charming conversation with my fair neighbor."

"As I rode past your gate just now," she pursued, biting her lip to keep down her vexation, "I heard a deputation from the miners complaining that a portion of one of the galleries called Ten Foot Drive is in a dangerous condition, liable at any moment to imperil the lives of those working there. I also heard your overseer, Joyce, roughly refuse the protection required."

"Yes," he said languidly, "Joyce understands those people. I have great confidence in Joyce."

"I heard them also ask the privilege of laying their case before you," she continued, with a flash of anger in her clear eyes. "It was denied."

"Excellent Joyce," said Monckton carelessly. "He knows how such trifles bore me."

"Bore you! Trifles!" cried the girl indignantly. "Surely you are not in earnest."

"My dear young lady," he said, lifting his white, shapely hand in protest, "why excite yourself over the vagaries of those ill conditioned vagabonds? Joyce is paid to look after them. Let us leave them to Joyce and speak of more important things—ourselves, for example."

"You have been warned," she retorted coldly, gathering up the reins as she spoke. "The lives of those poor men are in your hands, and if they come to harm through your neglect you will be responsible. That is what I had to say, and I have said it. Good day."

"A remarkable young person," commented Monckton as her horse bounded forward under a cut of the whip, carrying his young mistress out of sight in a moment. "But she amuses me, and she is certainly very beautiful."

"I can't make him out," was the girl's reflection as she rode homeward, with a perplexed and irritated frown wrinkling her pretty forehead. "Is he utterly weak and selfish, as he seems, or is it affectation? I don't like him—but he is very handsome."

CHAPTER V.

"THEY ARE HUMAN BEINGS."

A day or two later Monckton called upon Miss Duke and invited her to ride with him. After a moment's hesitation she consented, and the two were soon speeding along the mountain road at a swift gallop. A splendid horsewoman herself, the girl observed with admiration the firm, easy seat and graceful poise of her companion. Habitually indolent as he was or affected to be, Monckton rode like a centaur, and Miss Duke noted with what perfect control and power the delicate, womanish hand lifted the fiery animal over the ruts and obstructions in the narrow, rugged highway.

During the first portion of the ride neither referred to the subject of their previous conversaiton. Monckton spoke but little and always in his languid, drawling fashion, but Miss Duke was secretly surprised at the glimpses of originality and power thus partly revealed to her. Had she mistaken this man? Was he really something more than the selfish idler, feeble of mind and effeminate of body, which at first she had believed him to be?

As they neared the crossroad to the mines a tall figure in a workman's dress stepped out from the shrubbery, and catching sight of the riders paused abruptly and stood watching them as they rode up. Miss Duke recognized Matthew North and saw with a feeling of uneasiness the fierce expression upon his dark features. She waved her hand to him, with a smile, but he gave no answering salutation. His eyes were fixed upon the calm face of the mine owner, who had pulled up his horse sharply to avoid riding him down.

"Who is our melodramatic friend?" queried Monckton, with a slight accent of surprise, coolly surveying the menacing figure through his eyeglass. "Bless my soul! Am I mistaken, or am I the object of his distinguished regards."

"Matthew," said the girl, controlling her agitation by an effort, "this is Mr. Monckton, the new proprietor. Have you anything to ask of him?"

There was fierce jealousy in the glance which North turned upon her. "No," he answered huskily, "I have nothing to ask of him or any one. I have asked for justice and right for the last time. They have been denied. Let him"—pointing at Monckton—"remember that if he forces us to violence he and his overseer are but two against 500."

"I am sorry to hear you talk in this way, Matthew," said the girl, with an anxiety she could not conceal. "I have always believed you to be a man of good feeling and good sense"——

North interrupted her with a harsh laugh. "Fine words!" he exclaimed. "Do you take me for a fool to suppose that I do not understand you? But have no fear. Though I am not a gentleman"—he uttered the word with an indescribable accent—"I am at least incapable of taking advantage of my strength to injure an unarmed man."

"Pardon me, my worthy soul," interposed the calm voice of the mine owner, "do me the favor to stand aside and let us pass. Any business connected with the mines may be transacted with my overseer at his office during business hours."

North's eyes emitted a gleam of hatred, and his hands clinched tightly, but catching sight of the girl's troubled face he stepped back, and after a moment's hesitation raised his hat. The young proprietor gave no more heed to him than if he had been some inanimate object, but Miss Duke, turning in her saddle, smiled back at him as if to make amends for her companion's carelessness.

"I hope," said Miss Duke hesitatingly as they rode onward, "that you will not remember Matthew North's words and manner today against him. He has an invalid mother and a young sister dependent upon his earnings."

Monckton lifted his hand with a languid gesture. "I beg of you," he replied, "let us avoid that subject. My mouth tastes of coal dust as it is. I have no interest in that class of people whatever. They always have invalid mothers and dependent sisters, do they not?"

"They are human beings, as we are," returned the girl seriously, "with the same capacity for suffering and happiness that we have, though in our dealings with them we ignore or forget the fact. There is not a more faithful, honest set of men in the world than these miners are, and none that receives worse treatment. Helpless in their ignorance and poverty, they are ground to the very earth by their heartless masters. They bear their wrongs patiently until they may be borne no longer; then they rise in mere brute strength and strike blindly. Who can blame them?"

She spoke with unconscious vehemence, and her companion, watching her face under half closed lids, thought among the many beautiful women he had known this one was the most beautiful. Her youth, freshness and simplicity affected him like the delicate perfume of the mountain flowers he had loved in his unspoiled boyhood.

"What is it you wish me to do?" he asked, with far more earnestness than he had thus far exhibited.

"Do these poor people justice," was her quick answer. "Give them the protection they ask. Investigate for yourself and then act according to the testimony of your own eyes and the impulses of your own heart."

"I think," he said slowly, "I could do much to please you."

"And you will overlook the rudeness of Matthew North today?" she asked, bending her head to hide her confusion.

She did not observe the change in her companion's manner as she spoke North's name. The slight show of feeling which had momentarily appeared in his face faded away, leaving it colorless and apathetic as before.

"You need be under no apprehension," he replied, with a touch of haughtiness in his tone. "I attach no importance whatsoever to the incident."

She raised her eyes with a quick, inquiring glance, but he was not looking at her, and his handsome features wore their old bored, indifferent air.

"Thank you," she said curtly, and during the remainder of the ride both were silent.

"I wonder," reflected Ralph Monckton as he rode homeward after bidding Miss Duke farewell at her door, "I wonder if I am still capable of making a fool of myself over a woman. If I thought so, I would go away tomorrow and resume my old wandering life. And I wonder if she cares for that fellow North. He is certainly handsome, and she is a little radical—such things have happened. Pshaw! why should I care?" His horse plunged violently under the sharp stroke of the spur and broke into a reckless gallop, unheeded by his rider.

CHAPTER VI.

"IF I WERE TO TELL YOU THAT I LOVE YOU."

Matthew North's associates marked a change in their friend and leader. He had grown moody and taciturn. He avoided companionship, and when off duty shut himself in his dwelling and would permit no intrusion. When at work, he wrought with feverish energy, as if he wished to crush down disturbing thoughts with sheer physical exhaustion. In his capacity of mine boss he visited the Ten Foot Drive daily and listened to the ominous sound of the water behind the partition wall, with a face of deepening gloom. At times he would escape from the village and spend hours tramping among the hills, stealing into his cottage at night, worn out and haggard. He was returning late one afternoon from one of these expeditions, weary, dusty and dispirited, when he met Imogene Duke coming from the town on foot, carrying a small basket in her hand. He would have avoided her, but she caught sight of him and beckoned to him.

"I have been to see your mother, Matthew," she said as he slowly and reluctantly drew near. "I have taken her some jelly and preserved fruit."

North drew himself up, with a frown. "I thank you," he replied coldly, "but my mother is not a subject for charity, Miss Duke. I am able to support her without assistance, however benevolently intended."

"Matthew!"

Though his hand trembled and his chest heaved with suppressed emotion, he turned his face resolutely from her and would not see the pained look in her eyes.

"No," he continued, with his face still averted, "I have fooled myself long enough. It is over now. Take your way and leave me to take mine."

"What do you mean, Matthew?" asked the girl gently. "Have you ceased to regard me as a friend?"

"Friend!" he echoed bitterly. "Full well you know that between us two there can be no true friendship, for only those who are equals can be friends. Oh, it was a sweet thought, and I let it delude me until—until I saw you with Ralph Monckton; then the scales fell from my eyes, and for the first time I understood it all. He is your equal, one of your own kind; I am not."

"You are unjust to me, Matthew," she answered reproachfully, "and you are unjust to yourself"——

"See," he interrupted vehemently, facing her as he spoke, so that she saw how worn and pale he had become, "would you admit me into your father's house, take me by the hand and present me to your guests and say, 'This man, this laborer who works for his daily bread, is my friend?' Would you do that?"

Though his tone was rough, and he tried to throw into it an accent of irony, there was an intense, eager light in his eyes, and he held his breath as he leaned forward awaiting her answer. The girl did not flinch or hesitate. She returned his gaze mildly, almost pityingly, as she replied:

"Yes, Matthew, I would do and say that."

His broad chest rose and fell heavily. The blood surged to his forehead, and there was a wild, exulting expression on his dark features.

"And if I were to tell you," he said passionately, as if carried beyond his self control, "that I love you—that I have worshiped you from the first hour I saw you, that blessed hour when you came to visit my sick mother, lighting up my poor home like a ray of sunshine; if I were to tell you that since then I have lived only for you, without hope, without presumption, humbly, faithfully—oh, do not turn away in anger, dear heart! I had meant never to let my secret escape my lips. I meant to die with it and bear it away with me to that other world where they tell us there are neither poor nor rich, high nor low. But my breast was too full, and it seemed I must either speak or die. And now—and now"——

He choked and became silent, his vast frame quivering and the breath coming between his white lips in gasps.

The girl had tried to check his tempestuous words in vain. She was very pale and stood with bent head and drooping figure, as if smitten with a sudden grief. With a deep sigh she raised her swimming eyes to his at length and gazed at him sorrowfully.

"Why have you told me this?" she asked in so faint a voice that he could hardly catch the words. She would have said more, but her emotion overcame her, and putting her hand to her eyes she wept silently. The man stood watching her with an expression of helpless misery and self reproach.

"Don't cry," he said hoarsely. "I can't bear it."

Gradually she recovered her calmness, and drying her eyes with her handkerchief she said to him:

"You have made me very unhappy, Matthew, for no woman can listen to such words as you have just spoken without sorrow, if—if she finds no answer to them in her own heart. You must give me your promise never to return to this subject, or we must not see each other again."

"You have my promise," he answered gloomily. "I was mad for a moment. Do you think, in my senses, I could dream that such a hand as this"—he held up his large, toil hardened palm—"might mate with yours?"

"It is not that—it is not that," she exclaimed in distress. "Will you not believe me when I say it is not because of any false pride on my part, but because, while I respect you, I have no warmer feeling for you?"

He was about to reply when he observed that she was gazing up the road with an air of annoyance and embarrassment. Following her glance, he saw Ralph Monckton approaching on horseback at an easy canter, looking wonderfully fresh and cool in his elegant riding suit.

In an instant the man's whole being seemed to undergo a malignant transformation. The softened expression passed from his features like a mask that has been snatched away, and the eyes in which the tears had stood a moment before glittered like those of a wild beast.

"Tell him," he muttered, pointing at Monckton with a shaking finger, "what has just passed between us two. He will see the humor of it. Tell him, too," he added sternly, "that there are healthier climates than Monckton mines for such as he." And without waiting for a reply he turned roughly away just as Ralph Monckton drew rein opposite the agitated girl.

JUST IN TIME.

A Lucky Discovery and Its Results.

There is probably no happier woman today than Mrs. A. D. Seitz, of Whitestone, L. I. She has lately attracted great attention, not only in her own town but for many miles around. As it is a subject which will most deeply interest everybody she has been induced to make her experiences public. She writes the following letter to her fellow workers:

"I had suffered for three years or more with nervous prostration, nervous weakness of the heart and kidney disease. I was treated by different doctors who told me that as I grew older my heart would grow weaker. I was giving up all hope of getting better and about made up my mind I could never recover.

MRS. A. D. SEITZ.

"I heard of the wonderful cures being when I should have weighed 180 pounds. I was unconscious at one time for 5 days. I finally commenced the use of Dr. Greens Nervura blood and nerve remedy and immediately began to improve.

'I would have bad speels at any time blood and nerve remedy during my convalescence from a severe rheumatism, by imparting a healthy tone to my whole overwrought nervous system. I write that others needing a like restorative may have a like advantage.

What greater prize could the world contain than a medicine which can cure such suffering as that? Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is constantly performing the most wonderful cures all over the land.

The spring is the best and easiest time to cure disease. It is purely vegetable and harmless. Its discoverer is Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, the well-known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all free of charge, personally or by letter.

WHO TOLD THE JUDGE

That Breckinridge's Lawyers Were Armed?

That is What is Perplexing Them Now, Otherwise the Unpleasant Affair of Monday Night is Forgotten—Sensational Developments Lacking—The Case Still Interesting

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Although the testimony of the last two days in the Pollard-Breckenridge case has not been as sensational as the morbid taste of some desire, interest in the proceedings have by no means waned. The report that Col. Breckinridge would make the defense that he had been married to Mrs. Wing previous to the date on which Miss Pollard alleges he became acquainted with her, whetted the appetites of the public and again drew a crowd to the court room this morning.

The lawyers for the defense are greatly perplexed as to who represented to the court that they carried concealed weapons during the proceedings. As the judge informed them that his information did not come from the plaintiff's counsel they cannot imagine who the guilty one can be. Their denial of the accusation, and the judge's statement that, as the encounter Monday evening occurred outside the court room, and after adjournment, he had no jurisdiction in the matter, has had the effect of quieting all parties concerned, and the unpleasant incident has almost been forgotten.

The only slight advantage gained by the defense so far was secured yesterday in the controversy over the admission of depositions as evidence.

Mr. Carlisle then asked that the deposition of Mary S. Logan, of Cincinnati, formerly Dr. Mary L. Sweet, be admitted, but Mr. Butterworth objected and another legal controversy began.

After the arguments had progressed for more than an hour Judge Bradley overruled the objections of the defense and admitted the depositions of Mrs. Logan as evidence. Mr. Carlisle then read the deposition, in which Mrs. Logan said she attended a young woman who gave her name as Mrs. Monica Burgoyne in 1884. This was while Mrs. Logan was Dr. Sweet, a practicing physician of Cincinnati. The young woman said her husband was dead, and acted as though there were some family reasons why the matter should be kept secret.

The deponent said: "Mrs. or Miss Burgoyne had gone to a lying-in house kept by Catholic sisters on the Reading road, near Cincinnati. Mrs. Burgoyne had told Mrs. Logan that she was 18 years old; she did not look older than that. After the birth of her child the young woman went to the house of Drs. Ferry and Buchanan, where she took another name. One day, while the deponent was calling on a patient, an elderly gentleman came to the patient's house to see her and asked about Mrs. Burgoyne. Mrs. Logan said she did not remember what the man looked like, except that he was elderly.

"Have you ever seen Mrs. Burgoyne since?" was asked the deponent.

"Never, except that may be this is the lady. Yet they seem very different; their hair was different and this lady is thinner. I think the other lady wore glasses."

Miss Pollard does not wear glasses. One of Mrs. Logan's statements was that when the elderly gentleman called on her he looked like a pigmy standing below her at the foot of a staircase.

"Do I look like a pigmy?" asked Col. Breckinridge, laughingly, of his counsel when this was read.

Two black-bonneted, black-robbed, kindly faced Sisters, who seemed to be out of place in the court room, then entered, and one of them took the stand. She said she was Sister Cecelia of Pueblo, Col.

Sister Cecelia said she belonged to the Order of Sisters of Charity, and, in 1885, was in charge of the Norwood Foundling asylum, near Cincinnati. She did not recall any person by the name of Burgoyne who was at the asylum while she was there. She did remember Dr. Mary Street who afterwards became Mrs. Logan. Dr. Street had visited the asylum twice to see a patient.

The four volumes of Irving's works, which the defense tried so hard to have excluded from the trial, were shown Sister Cecelia and in answer to questions, she said books resembling those had been presented to her by a female patient at the asylum. When the witness went to Pueblo she left the books at Norwood.

In answer to other questions by Mr. Carlisle the witness said she remembered a female patient who had been discovered corresponding with another person through the Cincinnati Enquirer. She had met Miss Madeline Pollard since coming to Washington and had once received a letter from her. Mr. Carlisle asked if in this letter and in conversations Sister Cecelia had correctly described the foundling asylum, but Major Butterworth objected.

Judge Wilson explained that the questions were asked merely to ascertain whether certain things existing in the asylum in 1885 had been correctly described by Miss Pollard.

Before the argument proceeded farther Judge Bradley ordered an adjournment for the day.

Alien Y. M. C. A. Manager.

NEW YORK, March 14.—The immigration authorities have been notified from Washington to be on the lookout for Charles Templeton, who is expected to arrive here shortly from England. It is alleged that Mr. Templeton is coming here in violation of the alien contract labor law to act as assistant superintendent of the Young Men's Christian association at Chicago.

Michigan Municipal Elections.

DETROIT, March 14.—Municipal elections were held all over the state of Michigan Monday. In towns where party lines were drawn the returns show that the republicans were generally successful, with large gains in their vote. In towns where a citizen's or workingmen's ticket was in the field it swept everything.

Mr. Sherman Going South.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Senator Sherman will leave Washington, probably tomorrow evening, for Asheville, N. C., where he will remain for perhaps two weeks recuperating his health. His friends deny the printed stories that he is losing strength and will be unable to participate in the tariff debate.

ELECTIONS IN NEW JERSEY.

Result of Yesterday's Battle for Minor Offices at Several Points.

TRENTON, N. J., March 14.—Election results from numerous points in the state show on the whole, that the republican gains yesterday were very large.

At Rutherford the republicans elected their entire ticket. Hackensack, for a generation democratic, elected a republican collector, the democrats retaining the assessorship.

At Somerville the democrats elected a majority of the ticket by slight gains over the election of last fall.

At West Cape May the democrats re-elected their mayor by a majority of three, the republicans capturing the councilmen. At Cape May the freeholder elected is a democrat and the two councilmen republicans.

Bridgeport elects a republican mayor by over 300 majority, and the freeholder and every councilman. Every township in the county elected a republican freeholder except Deerfield.

Woodbury elected all republicans, including a mayor, except one councilman.

At Westfield the republicans elected their entire ticket with two exceptions.

At Anglesea with four tickets in the field the reformers—favoring closing of saloons on Sunday—won.

At Riverside the usual democratic majority of 600 has been reduced to 300 and possibly wiped out.

HOUSE MEMBERS CONSULTED.

Senate Committee Working Very Careful on the Tariff Measure.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—If all the reports about the capitol be true the democratic members of the senate finance committee are taking no chances on the failure of their tariff bill, but intend that it shall be such a measure as the house will accept. It is said that prominent members of the house committee on ways and means have been taken into the confidence of the majority of the senate committee on finance, and all the amendments of the senate have been discussed freely with them so as to ensure in advance favorable action of the house conferees when the bill gets into conference. It is said that the senate committee has received satisfactory assurances from the house committee, some of whose members are noticed as frequent visitors in the finance room of the senate.

The probable length of the tariff debate is a matter upon which democratic senators cannot agree among themselves. If the democratic members of the finance committee could control their own side of the chamber much of the doubt now surrounding this question would be eliminated, but there is every indication that the democratic side of the chamber will not be controlled. Mr. Voorhees favors the briefest kind of debate. He will himself make a terse statement when he calls the bill up and let the matter end there. Other members of the committee will also speak. But so many other democrats are opposed to certain schedules that they will feel bound to protest and put themselves right with their own constituents.

Democratic members of the finance committee expect to see the bill signed by the first of June, but republicans say the long days of August will be upon us before Mr. Cleveland will be permitted to approve the act that thus supersedes the McKinley law.

Harvard Graduates Planning to Honor Their President.

BOSTON, March 14.—The Harvard clubs, which exist in nearly every city of the country, propose to take fitting action regarding the 25th anniversary of Mr. Eliot's presidency of the college. The plan agreed upon is set forth in the following votes adopted: That a gold medal be struck to commemorate the 25th anniversary of his accession to the presidency, to be presented at the dinner of the alumni on next commencement day. That a committee of fifty or more be appointed with full power to execute this purpose, and also to consider, and, if expedient, act upon, some plan to make the commemoration of lasting benefit to the university by raising a fund to establish scholarships or for other desirable objects. But one president of Harvard (Edward Holyoke, 1737-1769) has served a longer time than President Eliot.

THE LIQUOR QUESTION.

Differences Between Gov. Tillman and Government Revenue Officers.

COLUMBUS, S. C., March 14.—Governor Tillman and the internal revenue department are clashing on the liquor question. Collector Townes recently notified the governor that whiskey seized by the dispensary was liable to seizure under the United States statutes, and Governor Tillman told the collector that if he attempted to seize liquor confiscated by the dispensary he would go to the courts, and if they decided against him he would still seize it and dump it into the streets. Commenting on the matter, the governor declared that Townes, who is what is known in state politics as a conservative, or anti-Tillmanite, was acting under instructions from political enemies.

Trying to Resurrect Silver.

LONDON, March 15.—At the request of the merchants and others in England having large East India and China trade interests, the London chamber of commerce has represented to the government the urgency of the reassembling of the international monetary conference with a view to finding some remedy for the heavy fall and violent fluctuations in silver, which are represented as causing grave injury to eastern trade.

The Bomb Fiends.

NEW YORK, March 14.—So far the police have failed to capture the mysterious friend of John Kelly, the stableman, who was arrested with a bag filled with explosive bombs in his possession. Kelly was rearraigned at the Harlem police court and again remanded. The prisoner sticks to his story that he did not know the nature of the contents of the bag.

Queer Proceedings.

GANANOQUE, Ont., March 14. — Rev. Father O'Gorman, Roman Catholic priest of this place, refused to allow the body of an old Irishman to be brought into his church because the undertaker, Colonel McKenzie, was a Protestant. The result was that the funeral took place without any religious ceremony.

BEATTY MUST STAND TRIAL.

Decision in Vermont in the Celebrated Organ Swindling Case.

NEW YORK, March 14.—Mr. John E. Ashe, inspector in charge of the New York division of post office inspectors, has been advised by the United States district attorney for Vermont that Judge Wheeler of the United States circuit court had handed down an opinion in the case of the United States against Daniel F. Beatty, the maker of parlor organs, in which he holds that an indictment found in that state is good and that his trial shall be set for May 15, at Windsor, Vt.

The particular offense for which Beatty was indicted, and for which he must now face a jury, was the sending of circulars through the mails offering to sell an elaborate organ for $50, declared to be worth $100, and on account of which representation a man named Ned E. Sawyer, of Feichville, Vt., holds that he was defrauded out of his money. As in other cases which have been brought to the attention of the postoffice authorities the goods offered for sale were represented to be of the most finished and alluring description, whereas, instead of an elaborate affair the recipient secured only the most insignificant, cheap and commonplace instrument. It had but eight stops instead of the 34 it was advertised to carry, and of these six were dummies and the remaining two operated on the same set of reeds.

Beatty was arrested here on July 24, 1893, it being held that he had been guilty of swindling by the use of the mail. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields and held in $1,000. It was supposed in view of the fact that Beatty was committed in Washington, N. J., he could not be held for trial in the other state where indicted, but that he must be discharged or the case removed. Judge Wheeler's decision disposes of this contention.

ISABELLA PLATT'S CONDITION.

Still Very Serious, But She May Regain Her Reason in a Week.

ANSONIA, Conn., March 14.—Isabella Platt is still in a serious condition, having eaten nothing since Thursday except two spoonfulls of cracker food and beef tea. During her delirium she has said: "Mamma, I have walked all the way from Shelton through the mud, I thought I should never get home."

A young man has been found who says he saw Belle at the Derby railroad station, a mile from Shelton, at 8 o'clock Thursday night, a little more than an hour before she reached home. This makes the connection between her remarks about Bridgeport and Stamford, as the train from those places arrive about 8 o'clock. Dr. Pinney thinks she can tell her story in a week.

MERCIER'S ULTIMATUM.

Liberty for French-Canadians or Revolution as a Last Resort.

MONTREAL, March 14.—Mr. Mercier has issued his ultimatum. After delivering a lecture before the Club National, the leading liberal organization in the city, he addressed the members in a private manner on the school question, and said that if French-Canadians failed to obtain the liberty that was their right, to teach their own schools, and to pray to God as they wished, after exhausting every constitutional means, they would be anything, even revolutionists, rather than submit to tyranny. He would, he said, himself be disposed to become a revolutionist. The sentiment was heartily applauded by the members of the club.

D. & H. Canal Boats Laid Off.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 14.—Boatmen on the Delaware & Hudson canal have been notified that 100 boats would be laid off the coming season, which will begin about March 20. This is a severe blow to the owners, as they have wintered their horses with the expectation of running their boats during the coming season. The company is a part owner of all the new boats, and many of the boatmen say they will refuse to let the company have them to use on the river without compensation.

Fired Canada's First Locomotive.

NORTHPORT, L. I., March 14.—Joseph Whitehead, who died Monday at Clinton, Huron county, Canada, was a member of parliament and one of the oldest railroad contractors in Canada. He built the Buffalo & Lake Huron railroad. He began life as a fireman under Stevenson, the inventor. He acted as fireman on the first engine, "The Budget," built in Canada, and, as engineer, he took the first engine into Manitoba. He leaves property worth $300,000.

Legislative Deadlock Broken.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 14.—The senate yesterday passed in concurrence the Woonsocket bond bill, the first piece of complete legislation enacted at this session of the general assembly, which has been tied up in deadlock since the last week in January. Business will now be transacted as usual and the appropriation bills passed.

Were Only "Playin' Injun."

CAMDEN, N. J., March 14.—James Dugan, Thomas Brown and James Eldridge, the three boys who tied little Charles Berry to a stake and started a fire at his feet, are held to await their victim's recovery. Berry is improving, but is seriously burned. The doctors are trying to ward off the necessity of amputating his legs. The boys under arrest tearfully exclaimed in court that they were only "playin' Injun." They will be arraigned again to-morrow.

EX-MINISTER TO AUSTRIA.

Hon. John M. Francis One of the Thousands Whom Paine's Celery Compound Has Benefitted.

Among the men of international reputation in America no one deserves better of his country than Hon. John M. Francis, ex-minister to Austria.

The highest political honors have come to him unsought. Pres. Grant appointed him minister to Greece. Pres. Garfield had chosen him for the mission to Belgium. Pres Arthur appointed him minister to Portugal, and in 1884 he was envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Austria, with a residence at Vienna.

At the last New York State election class of society, in every city and town in the Union, have been benefitted by the use of this, the greatest of all remedies for the cure of the numerous ills that result from impaired nervous system and impoverished blood.

Mr. Francis is conspicuous among the really great editors of today as the editor increased cares and duties, increase in mental strain, lessened physical labor and increased mental work have been gradually giving us bodies in which the nervous element predominates.

The life and labors of Mr. Francis present one of the most attractive objects which one can contemplate.

New life, a buoyant feeling and the joy-ousness of health will come when plenty of good red blood begins to fill the arteries and invigorate the system. Industry, conscientiousness, absolute fidelity to duty and preference for a high plane of moral conduct have been conspicuous traits of his character. They were the adequate guarantee of the eminent success that has crowned his efforts and of the tribute of esteem that is paid to him.

Mr. Francis though he has reached the psalmist's allotted three score and ten, is in excellent health and mentally vigorous and alert. The first of this year he went to California with his daughter to spend a few months.

Before going he requested Mr. Wm. B. Wilson, who, under Mr. Francis and his son, Hon. C. S. Francis, is the wideawake head of the business department of the Times, to say for him to the proprietors of Paine's celery compound: "I have used the medicine moderately and with favorable results.

The expression is characteristic of the dignified gentleman who, so last fall's vote shows, is in the right sense the most popular citizen of the empire state.

Mr. Wilson himself, writing an unsolicited letter to Wells & Richardson company says of this wonderful remedy that makes people well:

"For some time past I have been using Paine's celery compound as a nervine and tonic and have found its effects very beneficial. I have heard and known of its good work among my friends, several saying that they "could not keep house without it," and never allow the supply to become exhausted. I shall always stand ready to say a good word for Paine's celery compound, for I honestly believe that it will do all that is claimed for it."

Those with an insufficient reserve of vigor and nervous energy fall winter victims to contagious diseases and to special diseases of liver, stomach and kidneys.

Refreshing sleep comes from Paine's celery compound. Persistent headaches go. Chronic constipation no loner troubles one, and the terrible heart throbbing from which so many tired women suffer leave them in peace.

Now and then a discovery like this one is so greatly in advance of its day that it startles the whole body of physicians. No great remedy ever caused as much talk and inquiry as Paine's celery compound. Scientific men in Europe have analyzed and discussed it, and the medical world has agreed in recommending it as a truly remarkable remedy for disorders originating in impure blood and impoverished nerve tissue.

Paine's celery compound will rob one of the "run down" feeling, the languor and despondency that come from badly nourished nerves, thin, pale blood.

The medical journals of this country and Europe have given more space to the many remarkable cases where the use of Paine's celery compound has made people well than to any other one subject.

Democratic Victory in Westfield.

The fight in Westfield Township was on the election of Freeholder and Assessor. The fight for Freeholder was a tremendous personal contest. In spite of the heavy normal Republican majority, the Democrats got what they were striving for. Addison Clark, Dem., was elected Freeholder by 5 majority. J. M. C. Marsh, Dem., was re-elected Assessor by 100 majority. The balance of the Republican ticket was elected as usual. Six ballots were thrown out as illegal. S. W. Reese, the defeated Republican candidate for Freeholder, talks of a contest.

Bound Brook Votes for Progress.

In the Bound Brook Borough election yesterday Mayor C. Howard Perry was triumphantly re-elected by about 40 majority, over W. H. Whiting, notwithstanding the heavy vote given the latter by Superintendent Chandler of the Woollen Mills, and his cohorts.

J. Erwin Hillpot (also a regular caucus nominee) and Jacob K. DeMott of the Citizens Reform ticket, were elected Councilmen by smaller majorities, Charles J. Gummersbach, regular nominee, being knifed by a number of the dissatisfied Germans.

The vote is a strong expression of public sentiment in favor of sewers, progress and improvement, ex-Mayor Whiting standing pledged to the contrary: and is a hearty endorsement of the policy of Mayor Perry, who for the past two years has so ably administered Borough affairs.

After the result was made known last night Mayor Perry was serenaded at his home by the Bound Brook orchestra and band, and received the congratulations of many citizens.

Democrats Sweep Warren Township.

A heavy vote was polled in Warren Township, and after a hot fight the Democratic ticket won in full as follows:

Assessor—Peter Newmiller, 3 years.
Collector—George Terrell, 3 years.
Chosen Freeholder—Rober Zergiebel, 3 years.
Overseer of Poor—James Ralph.
Township Committeeman—John Gunten, 3 years.
Surveyors of Highways—Peter Bowers, Jr., Henry P. Williams.
Commissioners of Appeal—William H. Stites, Phessenden S. Stites, Andrew D. Flammer.
Pound Keepers—Antone Ammon, Henry Burnett, Jacob Koechlein.

For Support of Poor	$ 500 00
For Repair of Roads	1,000 00

Somerville Democratic.

The local elections held in Somerville resultrd in the election of a Democratic Assessor, Collector, and a majority of the Democratic ticket. The Democratic majority is 250, a gain of about 500 over Thompson, Republican Senator elected last fall.

Democratic Gains in Bridgewater.

Bridgewater Township gave Charles L. Voorhees, Democratic candidate for Assessor, 250 majority; and Ferdinand Vanderveer, Democratic candidate for Collector, 9 majority. Last fall the Republican ticket won by 400.

Dunellen's Freeholder Republican.

Abner Coriell, Republican candidate for Assessor in Piscataway Township, was defeated by Charles E. Kelly yesterday. George W. Day, Democrat, was elected Justice of the Peace. The Republican candidates for Freeholder and Collector were elected.

The Board Republican.

The full returns show the Union County Board of Freeholders to be 9 Republicans to 8 Democrats. The coming election of 4 Freeholders in Elizabeth cannot increase the number of Democratic members.

A RETIRED BUSINESS WOMAN.

A Page From Her History.

The important experiences of others are interesting. The following is no exception: "I had been troubled with heart disease 25 years, much of that time very seriously. For five years I was treated by one physician continuously. I was in business, but obliged to retire on account of my health. A physician told my friends that I could not live a month. My feet and limbs were badly swollen, and I was indeed in a serious condition when a gentleman directed my attention to Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and said that his sister, who had been afflicted with heart disease, had been cured by the remedy, and was again a strong, healthy woman. I purchased a bottle of the Heart Cure, and in less than an hour after taking the first dose I could feel a decided improvement in the circulation of my blood. When I had taken three doses I could move my ankles, something I had not done for months, and my limbs had been swollen so long that they seemed almost putrified. Before I had taken one bottle of the New Heart Cure the swelling had all gone down, and I was so much better that I did my own work. On my recommendation six others are taking this valuable remedy."—Mrs. Morgan, 509 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, a discovery of an eminent specialist in heart disease, is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is positively free from all opiates or dangerous drugs.

GRAY HAIR

has a beauty of its own, but a BALD PATE——that is different! Now it may not be possible in every case to prevent baldness, but a test of fifteen years goes to show that PETROLEUM HAIR TONIC is almost an absolute specific for baldness, falling hair and dandruff. Originated, made and sold only at REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, Park and North avenues.

To Lay the Corner-Stone.

An Easter grand rally will be held in Reform Hall Easter Sunday, March 25, for the benefit of the Emmanuel Baptist Church. At 11 a. m. there will be preaching by Rev. William Wallace, of Cranford; in the afternoon at 3, the corner-stone will be laid of the new building Fillmore avenue. Many distinguished divines will be present, among them Revs. Dixon, of Brooklyn, and R. D. Wyman, of New York.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

PLAINFIELD CLUBS TO ENTER.

Both Lyceum and Crescent Wheelmen to Have a Try for the County Championship.

Preliminary arrangements for the annual bicycle races for the team championship of Union County have been decided on, and the races are to be held early this year.

The meeting of the Executive Committee was held Monday evening in the Elizabeth Journal office, and was an enthusiastic one. There were five teams represented, and all seemed anxious to enter teams and for the success of the races. In the absence of Chairman Morrell and Secretary Berdan, W. S. Harrison acted as temporary chairman, and A. G. Drake as temporary secretary. The representatives were: Mr. Kelly for the Lyceum Wheelmen and Mr. Haynes for the Crescent Wheelmen of Plainfield; Mr. Breuckner for the Cyclers of Elizabeth; Mr. Brown for the Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers, and Mr. Davey for the Elizabeth Wheelmen.

After some discussion it was stated by the delegates that the Elizabeth Wheelmen and Elizabeth Athletic Cyclers would have a team in the race, and the others said they desired to enter teams if they could get the men together. To allow all clubs equal chances to form teams and to enter them, it was decided that the entries for the races should close May 30.

The selection of a date for the races was the next subject brought up for discussion. It was generally conceded that it would be advisable to hold the races early. In view of this, and of the fact that should all five clubs enter teams trial heats and a final would be necessary, Mr. Davey offered a motion that the first trial heat, if a sufficient number of teams enter to necessitate more than one race, or, if trial heats be unnecessary, then the final race for the county championship be held on Saturday, June 9. This motion was adopted unanimously.

There was some discussion about the rules to govern the races, but the subject was left for definite action until a future meeting of the committee. Action on the selection of the course was likewise laid over for future consideration, and after an informal discussion of prospects for the races the meeting was adjourned to assemble next Monday evening, March 19, at the Journal office.

FOUGHT IN THE MEXICAN WAR.

Death of J. H. Meyers, a Respected Resident of Washington Valley.

The death of J. Henry Meyers, yesterday morning, will be deeply felt. He was a respected resident of Washington Valley for the past forty years. He leaves a wife and eleven children to mourn for a dear father and loving husband. He is the father of Christopher S. Meyers, employed in Scott's Printing Machine Works, of Mrs. W. Newmiller of Somerset street, and of Mrs. George Wilson of Millington. Another son is Dr. Probasco's faithful driver. He was born in Germany, came to this country in 1849, and served in the Mexican War. After the war he went to California and made quite a fortune. He then went back to Germany to visit his parents. After remaining there a short time, he came east, married, and settled down on a farm in Washington Valley. He was 78 years old. His funeral will take place Friday afternoon at 2:30 from the Coontown Church.

Brilliant Talent for the Charity Benefit.

The artists already secured by Madame Iza Lezem for her Music Hall entertainment for the charity fund, include Miss Minnie Renwood, serpentine dancer, Miss Lola Yberi, Spanish dancer, Little Frida (Sunbeam), prodigy, all pupils of Madame Lezem; all the children of her dancing class, fancy dances; John F. Dillon, humorist and dialect comedian; Billy Williams, Negro sketch artist and minstrel; Mrs. Buckley, pianist, and Theo. F. Appel's orchestra.

Little Frida is a pupil of Madame Lezem; she is a very bright child, aged 6. She is graceful and talented, and is called Little Sunbeam, being a clever rival of Little Tuesday, and in many steps surpasses her. She is a pupil of the Sacred Heart, New York, and is at present only to appear for a charity benefit by kind permission of the Sisters.

Billy Williams is a well-known Negro sketch artist, and gives side-splitting comic entertainments.

Mrs. Buckley, the pianist, kindly volunteered her services.

White's Millinery Opening.

The Spring opening of White's millinery department, under the direction of Miss Daly, commences today, and will continue all this week. To attempt to describe all the different styles of the hats would be impossible. They must be seen to be appreciated. One very pretty hat is a brown sailor, trimmed with brown velvet and steel, lace facings and lace wings. It is a style that is sure to be popular with young women. Another, a little jet bonnet with side trimmings of yellow and black roses, moire and satin ties and lace facings, is a beauty. Everyone was delighted with the exceeding good taste displayed by Miss Daly in the decorations and arrangement of the department.

They're Going Fast.

Those Watchung Park building sites of A. D. Thompson are gradually being disposed of to the best class of Plainfield's citizens, and soon there will be none left for the man who is looking for a site for a home in one of the prettiest neighborhoods in the town.

If you are contemplating making an investment that will be a paying one, you would better see Manager Ryder at Mr. Thompson's North avenue office, and pick out a lot.

Had Enough of Paying Base-Ball Bills.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

No team of semi-professionals will represent Plainfield on the diamond this season. The Crescent League is a thing of the past, and the men who formerly backed its team have decided that they've had enough of the expensive luxury.

HELD FOR GRAND LARCENY.

A Man May Under Certain Circumstances Steal His Own Property.

Not quite a month ago a notice may have been seen set up in several public places that on February 26 last at 2 p. m., one Albert Brown would sell at public auction a spring peddler wagon, owned by Aaron Brower, to pay a debt of $73, due for work and material thereon furnished by Brown in repairing the same. The sale did not take place. It was adjourned. It still stands adjourned. There is a reason for this. On the afternoon of the day preceding the day fixed for the sale the wagon was secretly taken and carried away from the shed of Sheriff Kyte at Fanwood, where it had been left by Brown for safe keeping and possession of it has never been recovered by Brown. Suspicion was at once directed towards Brower and a young colored man named Jackson, and on complaint of Sheriff Kyte a warrant for their arrest was issued by Justice Nash. They were both arrested and Brower gave bail for his appearance at an examination before Justice Nash at 2 p. m. yesterday; it clearly appearing that Jackson acted in ignorance of the facts in the case and without criminal intent the charge as to him was not pressed. At the time appointed yesterday afternoon a hearing was had before Justice Nash, Brower being represented by John K. Van Ness, Esq., commonly known as "The Count", a member of the New York bar. A very lively trial was had. Mr. Angleman, of Jackson & Angleman, appearing for the complainant, did not seem to regard with even the slightest approval the position taken by the "Count" and acted on by his advice by the defendant, that because the defendant was the general owner of the wagon he had a right to take it in whatever manner he pleased and from whom he pleased without regard to the lawful claims of the party who had a right to its possession, without being guilty of the offense charged; Mr. Angleman holding with Greenleaf in his treatise on evidence, "that the lawful possession with a qualified property as bailee or agent is sufficient proof of ownership against a wrongdoer." And "hence the general owner may be guilty of larceny, by stealing his own goods in the possession of his agent or bailee, with intent to charge the latter with the value."

Notwithstanding a very lengthy and animated argument by the "Count", Justice Nash decided in favor of Mr. Angleman's view of the law, and held the defendant in $100 bail to answer to the Grand Jury on a charge of grand larceny.

Knights Have a Merry Dance.

The ball of Crescent Division, No. 13, U. R. K. of P., held in Hulett's Hall last night, was a complete success. The attendance was large, and the management was highly praised for the excellence of the arrangements. The ball was in charge of the following:

Floor Manager—Sir Kt. Louis J. Coombs.
Assistants—Sir Kt. Herald Jacob Blimm, Jr., Sir Kt. J. F. W. Bamberger.

Committee of Arrangements—Sir Kt. Jos. C. Blimm, Sir Kt. L. J. Coombs, Sir Kt. J. F. W. Bamberger, Sir Kt. D. Angerbauer, Sir Kt. E. Garretson.

Altogether three hundred people took turns at dancing, crowding both of the upper floors of the building. The music of F. M. Hulett's orchestra was excellent. William Kline furnished refreshments. The grand march was led by Brigadier-General Cramer and Mrs. Cramer and was directed by Floor Manager L. J. Coombs. Among the dances was the Caledonians, danced only by Sir Knights, 75 of whom were present. The visitors included Gen. Rhoades, Col. Davis and daughter, Capt. Cramer and Mrs. Cramer, Sir Knight Morrison and Mrs. Morrison, and Capt. Farewell, of Unity Division, No. 3, of Elizabethport; and Grand Master-At-Arms Rockfellow, of Somerville.

Now All You Who Have More Than That, Read This and Act.

The Plainfield Relief Association finds it necessary to make a special appeal for extra funds to carry on their work for the remainder of the year. While the donations this winter have been unusually large, the demands have also been extraordinary.

At the first meeting in March 67 families were receiving assistance as compared with 21 at the same date last year. All of these have been investigated and found to be in absolute need.

Notwithstanding the $500 received from the citizens fund the Treasurer's report on March 14 shows only a balance of 30 cents in the treasury. Immediate aid is required or the work must stop.

The managers feel sure it is only necessary to state the case plainly to their friends in order to receive the help so greatly needed.

Contributions can be sent to the treasurer, Mrs. H.P. Reynolde, 71 Washington avenue, or left at H. P. Reynolds's drug store, North and Park avenues.

CANNON'S OF NEWARK.

One of the Largest Furniture Houses in the State.

The prudent housewife is more than ever inclined to save money while she spends money, and to do this she requires a thorough knowledge of the market prices of articles which she wishes to purchase. So far as her outlay in house furnishings is concerned, she has found a ready educator in the immense Newark furniture house of "Cannon's". Since last Summer this firm has been a constant advertiser in our columns, and has from week to week presented to our readers accurate illustrations and faithful descriptions of furniture and household goods, giving prices for the same that are apt to make competitors wince.

"Cannon's" have more floor space than any other furniture house in New Jersey, crowded with reasonable articles in every desirable grade. They have endeavored during the past few months to prove by plain statements of fact that their prices are as low as the lowest—often lower; that their selection of goods is unlimited; that the quality of the same if irreproachable. For over thirty years they have conducted a business carried forward on the plan of making every new customer a continuous one and a close friend of the house. Their advertisements are written as pledges with the public, and as such are always kept faithfully. When a picture appears of a chair, or table, or any article of furniture, the public may depend upon its being an accurate reproduction, for all of these "cuts" are made directly from a photograph of the article itself. Their announcements will bear close and constant scrutiny, for there will be frequent changes, detailing the periods of special sales in the different departments, and it is quite probable that the prospective buyer will profit many dollars by scanning them.

Conundrum Sociable.

The social given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church last evening was one of the best ever enjoyed by the young people, and was largely attended.

The room was neatly decorated with palms and flowers.

For the first half hour those present participated in a very amusing arrangement of conundrums, with duplicate cards, on which were written questions and answers.

The following programme was then rendered:

Overture—"Light Cavalry", Violin and Piano, Miss Alice Coard and Mr. Korff.
Recitation.....Miss Stella Shotwell
Piano Solo—"Gavotte".....Goddard
Miss Kate Biglow.
Song—"Old Black Cat".....Junior C. E. Society
Piano Duet,
Miss Kate Biglow and Miss Alice Coard
Recitation.....Miss Smith
Violin Solo.....Mr. Korff
Song—"Swinging under the old apple tree",
Junior C. E. Society

This was followed by an abundance of excellent refreshments.

Came to Plainfield to Get Good Lawyers.

Jackson & Angleman yesterday issued summons in two suits against the J. W. Fowler Car Company, a manufacturing concern of Elizabethport, to enforce the collection of two lien claims against the buildings and lands of the company. They represent Henry J. Brown, a builder and contractor of Brooklyn, who has two claims against the company for work done and materials used in the construction of the building, which with the machinery, is worth about $200,000. The lien claims were filed Saturday.

Y. M. C. A. Entertainment.

A social meeting of the Young Men's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the Association rooms last evening. The committee in charge was W. G. Smith, Philip Suffern and Robert LaBoyteaux. The president, Edgar Shepard, read a report of a boys' conference held in Orange March 2, after which a short programme was rendered and refreshments served. Next Tuesday the boys will continue the spelling match held last week.

A PANSY EVENING.

Presbyterians Sing Through Holes in a Curtain.

The parlors of the First Presbyterian Church were crowded last evening with members of the congregation and their friends and "An evening with the pansies" enjoyed. A large curtain on which was painted a large bunch of pansies was erected in the front of the room. Through the centre of each pansy could be seen the face of a participant.

In the first part the Misses Blair, Williams, Perrie, Laine, Overton, Herring, McKillop and Messersmith sang an "Alphabetical Chorus" consisting of solos, duets, rounds and chorus which were very well rendered and much enjoyed by the audience. Miss Petrie was the accompanist.

The curtain was transformed in the second part by the addition of the faces of Messrs. Blair, Williams, Flannery, Hazeltine and Petrie, and the following programme rendered:

ARBOR DAY EXERCISE

A PLEASING ENTERTAINMENT FOR THE YOUNG TO GIVE.

Opportunities For Effective Costuming and Stage Setting — The North Wind, the South Wind and Mother Nature—Some Pleasing Recitations For the Young.

THE following exercise, written by Lizzie M. Hadley for The Journal of Education, will admit of some effective costuming and stage settings, though they are not described in the exercise.

Mother Nature may be impersonated by a tall, fine looking girl, dressed in flowing green robes of tarlatan, tissue paper or any thin stuff like cheesecloth. A crown of flowers is on her head, and a girdle of leaves passes over one shoulder. A border of leaves may surround the trailing gown.

North Wind is a boy with a rough coat and thick cap. They may have a fringe or edge of fur, dashed with white and slightly sprinkled with diamond dust to glisten like frost. He carries a leafless branch from some tree.

South Wind is a girl with flowing hair, who carries a fresh green branch of leaves. Her dress may be of a light silvery gray, trimmed with leaves and caught up with knots of flowers. She is crowned with leaves and feathery grasses.

The various trees who take part are boys and girls, either dressed in green, with leaf coronets and trimmings, or in everyday costumes, with the same accessories.

The cards should be about a foot square, pure white, with green leaf borders and letters of the same:

Characters — Mother Nature, North Wind, South Wind.

Trees — Aspen, Rowan, Beech, Oak, Red Cedar, Dogwood, Ash, Yew. Each tree should carry a card with a letter upon it.

North Wind—Ha, ha! Ho, ho!

Mother Nature—What is the matter, North Wind? What mischief have you been doing?

North Wind—Oh, just running round the country with Jack Frost. What fun we've had! (Laughs again.) Ha, ha, ha! We tweaked the children's noses and pinched their toes. Crept into houses and cracked all the pitchers. Ha, ha!

Mother Nature—(shakes her head)—Oh, my child, Jack Frost is a mischievous sprite. I wish you would keep away from him. You had better be packing up to go home. The South Wind will soon be here, and she and you can never agree.

North Wind—Pooh! Who's afraid of her? [Knock outside.]

Mother Nature—Who is there?

South Wind (outside)—

I'm the South Wind, your fair daughter,
Come to turn your ice to water,
Just the South Wind come again—
Come to turn your snow to rain.
I the icy streams unlock,
Pussy Willow's cradle rock,
Start again the frozen sap,
Wake the flowers from their nap,
Tell the bluebirds spring is coming,
Set the early bees a-humming.
Oh, 'tis time work should begin.
Mother Nature, let me in!

Mother Nature (opens the door)—Why, bless me, here is the South Wind already. Come in, come in. I'm glad to see you, my child. I've just been telling your brother, North Wind, that he'd better pack his trunk and go home.

South Wind—Yes, 'tis time for him to go. (To North Wind):

Come, sir, pack your drifts of snow.
Gladly now with you we part.
Take your icicles and start.
Time for freezing winds is past.
Your cold reign is o'er at last.
Better start at once. No growling.
Let me catch you round here prowling.
You will then be glad to go, sir,
But you'll go without your snow, sir.

North Wind—Now, my dear, what is your hurry? [South Wind goes toward him, and he starts back.]

Oh, I'm going. You need not worry.
For your threats I do not care,
They are "trifles light as air."
To the land of snow and rime
I am going—as 'tis time.
But, when autumn leaves are flying,
And the grass and flowers dying,
Then 'twill be your turn to fly.
Now 'tis mine. Away I'll hie,
Mother Nature, now goodby.

[Goes out.]

Mother Nature—What a blustering fellow he is! He keeps the whole house in a tumult when he is here. I'm glad he's gone. Now for spring cleaning. South Wind, see that the streams are unlocked, the icicles melted down, the snow swept up and the ground ready for the flowers. Hark! I hear music. Some one is coming.

THE SOUTH WIND.

[Voices outside singing. Tune, "Bonny Dundee."]

We have come from the meadow, the mountain, the wood,
And the gifts that we bring you, behold, they are good.
So drive off cold winter and every rough breeze,
And a welcome now give to the bonny green trees.

CHORUS.

Here's maple and birch; here's oak, ash and beech.
Welcome! a welcome, oh, give unto each!

Let all your soft zephyrs around them now play,
For they herald the coming of glad Arbor day.

[A knock at the door. Mother Nature opens it. Enter Trees.]

Mother Nature—This is truly a goodly company! What may be your business with me?

Trees—Dear Mother Nature, we have come from our homes to crave your blessing on the enterprise that would preserve the forests which man hath for ages so carelessly destroyed. Bless, dear mother, those who would plant us, that seedtime and harvest may not cease throughout the land, that the birds may find shelter in our branches, and that insects may not destroy your crops. We are for use and for beauty. We absorb the hurtful gases and add to the healthfulness of the atmosphere. So pray, kind mother, bestow your blessing upon the day we would celebrate.

Mother Nature—What is the day?

Tree—

Not I alone
Its object here to tell.
But we together now for you
Its name will gladly spell.

Aspen—

The aspen tree, I come to you
From forest, hill and dell,
And stand the first one in the line
That makes the words we spell.
With ev'ry wind that lightly blows
My trembling branches toss,
Old legends say that from my wood
Was made the Saviour's cross.

Rowan Tree (Mountain Ash)—

A graceful pyramid of green
My form you'll often see.
Now from my mountain home I come
To you, the rowan tree,
And by her fire, on wintry nights,
Full oft the old wife tells,
That he who bears the rowan tree wood
Is safe from witches' spells.

Beech—

Now gayly marching from the wood
You may behold in me,
As clad in living green I come,
The spring's epitome.

When winter comes, its biting winds
My green leaves often bleach,
Yet closer to my boughs I cling—
By these you'll know the beech.

Oak—

In crimson, purple, lilac dressed,
O'er all a silv'ry sheen,
I come, but as the springtime goes
I change to glossy green.

The Druid's sacred tree am I,
In olden tales renowned,
And with my leaves in ancient days
Were Roman heroes crowned.

Red Cedar—

With feath'ry sprays of living green
I come where'er I'm bid,
Today I stand the fifth in line,
A fragrant pyramid.

On barren, rocky hills I dwell,
Where birds in sorest need,
When winter's drifting snows have come,
Upon my berries feed.

Dogwood—

I come to take my place in line,
As ev'ry green tree should,
In all the land, no lovelier one
Than I, the fair dogwood.

"WHAT MAY BE YOUR BUSINESS?"

Like wintry flakes my blossoms lie
Among their leaves of green,
And north and south my slender shape
In ev'ry wood is seen.

Ash—

A comely ash, I come to you.
On rocky banks I stand
And watch the river's ceaseless flow
O'er beds of shining sand.

Tradition says that from my trunk
Jove made a race of men,
And when luck flies my leaves will make
It come to you again.

Yew—

Within the dark and shady wood
My form is sometimes found,
Or bending o'er the peaceful dead
In consecrated ground.

Once cunning workmen made of me
Crossbows so strong and well,
And still in Switzerland I'm called
The tree of William Tell.

All—

The aspen, rowan, beach and oak,
Red cedar, we are here;
The dogwood, ash and gloomy yew
To spell the words appear.

Inwrought in green, our letters now
We'll turn to you this way. [Turn cards]
That all may read our names aright
And find we're Arbor day.

All the Trees—We are here, dear Mother Nature, to celebrate the glad Arbor day and to pray that you will take the trees planted under your care, that they may be fanned by your softest breezes, watered by your cooling showers and warmed by your bright sunshine. Do this, O Mother, and together

We'll bring you shelter, food and heat,
We'll give you cooling shade,
For this from out our forest homes
We have this journey made.

Mother Nature—Dear Trees, I will gladly do my part to preserve the forests, and I am sure my children will all help forward the good work.

Pupils representing trees clasp hands, and looking up recite:

O Painter of the fruits and flowers,
We thank thee for thy wise design,
Whereby these human hands of ours
In Nature's garden work with thine.

Give fools their gold, give knaves their power,
Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall.
Who sows a field or trains a flower
Or plants a tree is more than all.
—Whittier.

All sing (Tune, "America"):

Emblem of liberty,
Here let us plant a tree
In the brown earth.
Father above us bend,
Help as we drop the seed,
Send rain and dew to feed.
Give it new birth.

CHAPTER VII.

THE STRIKE AT MONCKTON MINES.

That night the employees of Monckton mines held a stormy meeting. Matthew North was present, but, contrary to his usual habit, spoke little and without his customary violence. It was remembered afterward, however, that the few words he did utter were barbed with the bitterest irony, stinging his already dangerously excited companions into uncontrollable fury. At the close of the meeting John Turner and Roger Tyler, two of his self constituted lieutenants, joined North in the road.

"Well, Matthew," observed Turner in a complacent tone, "I hope you are satisfied with the way we carried out orders."

"Yes," added Tyler, "Matthew can't find no fault this time."

"I gave you no orders," replied North coldly. "I did not so much as offer a word of advice."

"That's true," said Turner, scratching his head, with a perplexed air. "I don't understand it. But, hang it all, Matthew, you don't mean to say"——

"I mean to say," interrupted North, with a sinister look, "that if I gave no orders I also offered no opposition, and whatever you and the men decide upon as best for your common welfare you will not find me in your way."

"That's the talk!" exclaimed Tyler significantly. "We don't need it set down in black and white, Matthew."

"And if," continued North, with a strange, mirthless smile, "our men are sometimes unruly and should happen, in their just indignation, to break a head or two, why, who can blame them?"

The next day the employees of the Monckton mines went out on strike. The demand of the miners for an increase of prices and redress of grievances, among which was the dangerous condition of the oft mentioned Ten Foot Drive, was peremptory, and the refusal of the overseer Joyce, acting for the proprietor, was equally peremptory. The deadlock was complete.

Ralph Monckton, so far as appearances were concerned at least, regarded the revolt of his 500 miners as of less importance than the fit of his shirt collar or the cooking of his chop at breakfast. He was heard to speak of the whole affair as "a disgusting bore" and of the strikers themselves as "ill conditioned ruffians" — observations which, being reported to the malcontents, added fuel to the flame of revolt.

Monckton had fallen into a habit of riding out to Miss Duke's dwelling every afternoon, spending an hour in her society, and returning home at nightfall. It was a curious association which had sprung up between these two. His apathy and indolence, his effeminate manners and his cynical views of life could not fail to disgust a girl of her high spirit and warm heart. Yet he attracted her, too, in an odd, inexplicable way. Was he, she often asked herself, really no more than the selfish weakling he appeared to be? Was there not something below the surface; some good thing spoiled; something really great and sweet, captiously warped and suppressed? At times a word, a look, had startled her with the surprise of a discovery, to be followed by some drawling sneer or vapid jest. On the whole, if she had been asked her opinion of Ralph Monckton, she would have answered that she despised him. But, as she discovered, at some period of his life he had read much and thought deeply; he had traveled extensively and observed acutely, and when, at rare intervals, he consented to talk he talked well and interestingly. He piqued her curiosity; he was a perplexing problem, which accounts for the fact, no doubt, that she came to expect his afternoon visits and to feel irritated if by chance he failed to present himself.

The men scowled or sneered in his face.

During the first few days the great strike at the Monckton mines progressed without incident. The men maintained a resolute but orderly demeanor, and even the detested Joyce was allowed to go and come without molestation. But as their scanty savings began to give out, and want, the inevitable accompaniment of such a struggle, showed its grim visage in their poor homes, the first symptoms of serious trouble manifested themselves in petty depredations on the property of the owner. One night the grounds of the Monckton mansion were invaded and the flower beds trampled into ruin. On another a valuable young orchard was destroyed. Fences were thrown down, cattle turned loose, and a hundred such outrages were perpetrated, trivial in themselves, but indicating the growth of a spirit of dangerous lawlessness.

Joyce fumed, investigated and threatened dire vengance without avail. The men scowled or sneered in his face, and even ventured on one occasion, while he was haranguing a party in the village tavern, to hustle him, not without damage to his clothing. His angry complaints to his employer elicited only unsympathetic requests not to trouble him with matters strictly within his own province.

"But, sir," insisted the overseer in great indignation, "they have destroyed your property. The garden, the orchard"——

"Hang the garden and the orchard! Have them repaired and set a watch over them. Let out the dogs. Do whatever you like. Why the deuce do you bother me with these things?"

And the unhappy Joyce was compelled to retire in discomfiture.

CHAPTER VIII.

AN OMEN OF DANGER.

One morning a few days after the above conversation the overseer rushed uncermoniously into his employer's presence in a high state of excitement. Extending toward the young man a small square of dirty white paper, he gasped, "There, sir, read that!"

"Well," said Monckton after he had glanced at it, "what does it mean, and what is the matter with you, man? You appear to be in a blue funk."

"I may well be, sir," responded Joyce, mopping his forehead with a shaking hand. "They found an effigy

"Why not give the fellows what they ask, Joyce, and stop this nonsense!"

hanging upon a tree near the main gate, and this paper was fastened to the breast of it by a knife driven through it. You see the plain threat, sir?"

Scrawled upon the sheet in a rough uncouth hand were the words:

"This For Owners and Oversears."

Monckton tossed the paper aside with a gesture of contempt.

"That is not all," added Joyce, still breathing heavily. "Some one tried to set fire to the stables during the night. If one of the grooms had not detected the smell of smoke in time, the building would surely have gone and the whole stud with it."

"Oh!" ejaculated Monckton, slightly changing countenance, "this is serious indeed. Why not give the fellows what they ask, Joyce, and stop this nonsense?"

"Impossible, sir," responded the overseer, the despotic instinct triumphing over his personal terrors. "It would give them the whip hand of us, and there would be no end to their exactions. You have intrusted me with the management of this noble estate, sir, which was built up by the energy and talent of your respected father, and it shall be my duty to see that your best interests are protected."

To which magniloquent peroration Mr. Monckton replied by an amused look. "Well," he said, "take your own way. Petition the governor to send us a regiment of troops and a battery of guns to put down this tempest in a teapot, if you like. Only let me hear nothing about it. I have told you 50 times that I hate and abhor the whole thing, from the bottom of the lowermost shaft to the top of the tallest chimney, and I won't be bored with it."

CHAPTER IX.

MONCKTON'S PROPOSAL.

That afternoon when he called upon Miss Duke the girl's quick eye detected something unusual in his manner, and she was not long in learning the cause.

"They mean to force you to extremities," she said thoughtfully. "You must either fight or yield to their demands. Which are you going to do?"

"I?" he queried, lifting his eyebrows in mild wonder. "I shall do nothing. It is Joyce's quarrel. He got into it, and he must get out of it as best he may."

"Surely," she exclaimed incredulously, "you cannot be in earnest. You, the employer of these men, cannot stand quietly by while"——

"Pardon me," he said easily, "I shall not stand by at all. I shall go away and let Joyce and the men have it out together."

He looked at her inquiringly, as if expecting some word of approval, but as she uttered none he continued:

"I hoped that you would applaud my resolution to get away from the whole detestable business. In fact," he straightened himself up and adjusted his eyeglass with a slightly nervous gesture, "I hoped you would be willing to go with me."

"I do not think I quite understand you," she responded coldly.

He arose, and drawing near to where she sat said, with a formal tone and manner in which, however, there was an underlying agitation:

"I wish to put myself and my fortune at your disposal. Will you honor me by accepting them?"

She arose in turn and confronted him, flushing and paling by turns.

"I presume, as a gentleman, you would not jest upon such a subject." Her voice was hard and firm.

"I certainly would not," he answered. "But why do you ask?"

"Because your proposition must be either a jest or an insult," was her retort. "In this country men are supposed to love or at least respect the woman they desire to marry. Of love you have not even made a pretense, and you surely cannot respect the woman you ask to join with you in a mean and cowardly act."

"You cannot respect the woman you ask to join with you in a cowardly act."

He stood in silence gazing at her as if utterly confounded. Those who had known Ralph Monckton best would hardly have recognized him at that moment. The careless languor of manner which had grown a second nature, the cold indifference of expression, the easy self assurance which seemed but thinly to hide a cynical contempt of all things—all these were gone. A deep flush overspread his face; his lip trembled as does that of a woman who is about to weep. Shame, anger and wonder seemed struggling together within him. The girl was astonished and perhaps a little alarmed at the effect of her words, but she would not retract them.

When at length he spoke, it was not in the slow, affected voice habitual to him. It was unsteady and full of feeling.

"I will not pretend to misunderstand you," he said, "at least so far as your opinion of me is concerned. I did not suppose I still had the power to feel a wound to my pride as deeply as I do at this moment. If I have insulted you, as you say, you are amply revenged."

"There was no such thought in my mind," she answered in a softened tone. "Perhaps my words were harsher than I intended."

"Do not defend yourself," he said, raising his hand, with a smile, half sad, half bitter, "for whether you have done me full justice or not you have taught me a salutary lesson. You have shown me how others regard me." He paused and walked across the room with bowed head. "Mean and cowardly," he repeated, as if to himself. "Am I indeed that?"

There was pain in the girl's face now as she watched him in his humiliation, for by nature she was gentle and full of sweet sympathy. She had spoken in indignation and had struck deeper than she had thought. This man was revealing an entirely new and unsuspected side to his character. She had meant merely to sting his vanity through the thick shell of selfish apathy, and she had drawn blood.

"Listen to me, Ralph," she said earnestly, using the familiar name as she had been wont when they were boy and girl together. "You must listen to me, for if I have been unkind I wish to be just. From my standpoint what you proposed was mean and cowardly. I can't withdraw that. Your father left you master of these mines, with the hundreds who toil in them. When you took possession of your inheritance, you assumed a responsibility which you have no right to evade or lay upon others. When you first came here, your men were prepared to give you a hearty welcome. You could have soon won their love and confidence. A few kind words, the smallest evidence that you had their welfare at heart, would have done it, instead of which you have utterly ignored them. You have shown that you despised them, and even these rude, ignorant people have pride which may be outraged. You deputed your own proper duty to a hard, narrow souled tyrant, whose brutality and injustice have driven those who might have been made humble and devoted friends into revolt. The Monckton mines have an evil reputation throughout the whole region for poor pay, hard work and danger. The mines are notoriously unsafe. That part called the Ten Foot Drive is liable to be flooded at any moment, to the certain destruction of everything living within it. Your overseer was notified of the fact and requested to take precautions. Acting in your name, he refused, though the expense would have been trifling. Acting in your name again, he has cut down wages, so that many families in the village were in want, even before the strike began. At this hour, as we sit here, there are helpless women and children slowly perishing of hunger—the wives and little ones of your men."

The tears were running down her cheeks now as she spoke, and the beautiful face turned toward him was full of angelic pity and sorrow that moved the man's soul as it had never before been moved in his whole life.

"Are you speaking from hearsay?" he asked in a low voice. "Do you know these things to be true?"

"I have gone into their poor homes," she replied, "and I have seen sights to make the heart bleed. You were not ignorant that great wrong was being done, Ralph. I told you myself, but you would not heed me. The subject bored you, and you waved it aside with a jest. But you could not put aside your responsibility. For every child crying for bread in yonder village, for every broken hearted woman's tears, for every act of madness and despair which those men may do, yours is the blame, Ralph, yours alone."

He opened his lips as if to speak, but his head dropped upon his chest again, and he remained silent.

"When those patient creatures could bear no more and declared a strike against you," she went on, though with evidently increasing effort, for his attitude of complete nonresistance discomfited her, "you manifested the most perfect indifference. You took no interest in the struggle, either on your own behalf, as owner of the mines, or as a redresser of crying injustice wrought by your hireling, Joyce. But—and I am ashamed to say it, Ralph—one day, when your own proper person seemed to be threatened, you suddenly awoke, not to a sense of neglected duty, but to the possibility of physical injury. Then your resolution was promptly taken—not to fulfill a long neglected duty, but to slip away and so evade both danger and responsibility. You have become accustomed to my society"—a red spot came into her cheek, and she raised her head haughtily—"and you offer me the bribe of your name and fortune to accompany you in your flight. You have no love to offer, and you cannot respect me, or you would never have proposed such a marriage to me."

She stopped, and with her hands clasped before her gazed earnestly at the bowed figure of the man. For many minutes he neither moved nor spoke, appearing to be buried in a profound and gloomy revery.

UNIMPEACHABLE TESTIMONY!

A WONDERFUL STORY BY AN IRVINGTON WOMAN.

Fearful Failure of Fifteen Physicians—Serious Surgical Operation Suggested.

For four years I have suffered from a complication of diseases which physicians said were dyspepsia, liver and kidney complaint, nervous prostration and womb disease. No words of mine can describe the terrible pains and distress I have experienced—the dizziness, trembling fears of evil, chills, fever, melancholy, restlessness and numerous other dreadful sensations which I am unable to describe. Have been treated by fifteen physicians, some of whom were sure they could cure me within two or three months, and all of whom have had from two months to three, four or more, as they said was needed. One I tried for a whole year until last May I found myself disappointed, discouraged and about ready to give up altogether, as, after treating me for a year my physician told me I would be obliged to undergo a surgical operation before I could commence to get better. Just at this time I was advised by friends to consult Dr. Starkweather of No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, as they knew of some very remarkable cures which he had performed.

I followed their advice and visited the doctor on May 5. How glad I am that I took this step no one can realize who has not been similiarly situated. The doctor gave me a complete history of my case, describing with surprising accuracy the conditions and symptoms which I had endured for years, but what gave me the greatest surprise and pleasure was when he assured me that there was no need of any surgical operation. Proper means, he said, would overcome my troubles without any surgery. I commenced at once to follow Dr. Starkweather's directions and treatment. Having gradually and steadily improved since that time, as he stated I would, until now I am the wonder of all my friends, while rejoicing in renewed health, strength and spirits. Am constrained by a sense of duty and gratitude to accord the praise due Dr. S. for his gentle, soothing and skillful treatment of my case, and advise all sufferers from whatever cause to consult this eminent physician. MRS. WM. R. MANSER.

Smith street, Irvington, N. J.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment, There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not born out by facts and living witnesses.

Any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receives examination and advice without charge. The rapidity with which this popular system has grown into public favor is without a parallel. The number of new applicants increases daily, and the remarkable results of the treatment they receive both surprise and gratify.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medicel College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Those living at a distance can consult the doctor by letter. Send or call for our book of testimonials.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays, 4 to 6 p. m.

to suppose that an imitation offers the customer any guarantee like the original does. WILSON WAS POLLARD

So Defendant's Lawyers Are Trying to Prove.

Testimony Regarding Certain Occurrences in Cincinnati in 1885—Evidence of Two Doctors—Miss Pollard Becomes Nervous and Leaves the Court Room Suddenly.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Interest in the Pollard-Breckinridge case does not diminish, as was again made apparent this morning by the well-filled court room when the case was resumed. It is now believed that the case will occupy all of this week and probably one or two days of next week.

The defendant's counsel are making diligent effort to identify Miss Pollard with a young woman who gave birth to a child in Cincinnati in 1885. They are endeavoring to prove that Miss Pollard was identical with Monica Burgoyne, who was a patient at the Norwood Foundling asylum, and that Louise Wilson was an alias of Madeline Pollard.

In her deposition—cross-examination—Mrs. Kate Perry Kane, a physician of Cincinnati, and a member of the firm of which Dr. Belle Buchanan was the senior partner, said that one time (in 1885, when a woman calling herself Wilson was a patient at the house of Drs. Kane and Buchanan) Miss Wilson had gone out to meet her betrayer at a hotel, permission being given by her physicians. When she came back Miss Wilson told the deponent that she had met the man, but that it was impossible for her to marry him; she loathed him, she said; she had steeled her heart against him; she loathed him and would not marry him. She disliked him so; he had ruined her. Miss Wilson also said that the man had offered to marry her to clear things up, but she disliked him so that she refused.

This testimony was important in view of the effort the defense is making to show that Col. Breckinridge did not betray Miss Pollard. Col. Breckinridge was a married man in 1885, while Miss Wilson, whom the deponent said was Miss Pollard, had said her betrayer offered to marry her.

Mrs. Kane identfied Miss Pollard as the Miss Wilson who was her patient in 1885.

After the reading of the foregoing deposition, Dr. Belle Buchanan took the stand. She swore positively that Miss Pollard and the Miss Wilson of 1885 were one and the same person and that Miss Pollard came to her house from a foundling asylum in 1885 and remained several weeks. She was at that time recovering from child birth. The defense's attorneys sharply cross-examined the witness, asking many questions about her own life, most of which were objected to and sustained by the court.

Miss Pollard became somewhat nervous during the testimony and left the court room with Miss Ellis of the House of Mercy. Col. Breckinridge sat complaisantly reading a newspaper through most of Dr. Buchanan's testimony, apparently unconcerned at the proceedings.

Mrs. Wesleyana Robinson was then heard through her deposition taken in Cincinnati. She knew Miss Pollard, she said, at the Wesleyan college, of which her father, W. K. Brown, was president, and where Miss Pollard was a pupil. Miss Pollard had sent witness a letter to be opened on the night of the witness's graduation in June, 1885, and she had last seen it just before her husband, W. F. Robinson, gave it to Col. Breckinridge without her consent. The deponent had corresponded with Miss Pollard, and remembered writing a letter in August, 1884, addressed to Miss Madeline Vivian Breckinridge Pollard. The address was written merely because it was a good, long name, and would create a smile."

The deponent testified that Miss Pollard told her she had met Col. Breckinridge on a train, and this encounter with so distinguished a man was talked over a great deal in the college. It may have been through this talk, said the deponent, that the name "Breckinridge" was inserted in Miss Pollard's name by her schoolmates. Miss Pollard had always seemed to the deponent to be an innocent, pure-minded girl.

Mr. Carlisle read the letter, which the deponent had received to be opened at graduation, in full. Most of it has been published, but some parts that were not given to the press became public through the reading in court. It was an account of Miss Pollard's life. The letter told of Miss Pollard's meeting with old man Rodes, her contract with him and her inability to pay him back. Reference was made to "my blind sweetheart, or in other words, my modern Barnabas." Miss Pollard said she had for him "the strongest and most ardent sentiments I ever entertained for mortal man." She also said "I do not love Rozell at all. I feel that God throw him across my pathway." After ending with her blind sweetheart, Miss Pollard said she "settled down in a flame of pure love for Prof. Obinger."

Mr. Stoll read the story by Miss Pollard enclosed with the letter. It was a romance of Cincinnati, such as would have been written by a romantic young school girl, and like the letter, was full of extravagant, girlish expressions. The reading of the story created much amusement, particularly where the hero clasped the heroine to "his careworn yet nevertheless loving heart."

When the story had been concluded the court adjourned until to-day.

DESERTED THEIR MEN

Da Gama and Mello Seek Safety for Themselves.

The Former on a French War Vessel—Mello Seen in Montevideo—The Sailors to Be Pardoned, the Officers Court-martialed—Great Rejoicing in Rio Over the Termination of War.

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 15.—Everyone here is rejoicing now that the long drawn out, but somewhat tame war, is at an end, and already people are thinking again of business. The rejoicing is particularly great in the harbor, where the insurgents had interfered with, and at times completely paralyzed, business. Exchange has already improved 25 per cent. Not a symtom of disorder has appeared in the city.

President Floriano Peixoto's triumph is complete.

The insurgent vessels surrendered without having answered with a single shot the fire cannonade from the government's hilltop batteries. The report that Admiral da Gama had fled is confirmed. He has sought safety on the French cruiser Magon.

The American officers of the government warships came ashore last evening. They report that the crews of the vessels are well and delighted that they won without a fight. Excepting the officers, nobody aboard Peixoto's men-of-war seems to have been eager for battle.

In coming up the harbor yesterday the government fleet saluted the United States flag and Rear Admiral Benham. The United States fleet will disperse soon. The men aboard the American warships are in excellent health.

The people are preparing to celebrate the collapse of the insurrection.

The Aquidaban and Republica, which constitute about all that is left of the insurgent cause, are reported to be in south Brazilian waters. Both are said to be disabled.

Admiral Mello has just been seen in the streets of Montevideo. He has deserted his followers, as Admiral da Gama deserted his officers and men on the harbor fleet. The insurgent sailors here will be pardoned; the officers will be courtmartialed.

GAYLORD MINE VICTIMS.

The Second Body in a Standing Position When Discovered.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 15.—When the night shift came out of the Gaylord mine this morning they expressed the belief that they are nearing the other bodies, as the odor in the place where they are working is almost unbearable.

The second body, recovered yesterday, that of Michael Welch, was in a standing position when discovered by the rescuers. Both arms were across the forehead, indicating that he was trying to ward off some terrible blow or to shut out the awful sight and thought of the fearful crash that was to him his death stroke. When taken from his awful position he was recognized only by a cord that he wore about his body, his body being putrefied to such an extent that indentification was impossible.

Diagnosis for Tuberculosis.

ALBANY, March 15.—The following excerpt is taken from a letter received by Gov. Flower from Chief of Bureau Salmon of the United States department of agriculture: "Secretary Morton, on his return from Albany, requested me to write you, giving my views in regard to the use of tuberculine in the diagnosis of tuberculosis among dairy cows. Our tests have shown it to be a very reliable agent, not entirely infallible, but very nearly so. Its failures may reach one or two per cent. of the individual animals tested, not more, and; probably the proportion would be less. It is far in advance of any other means of determining the presence of the disease."

Prison Engineer Resigns.

BOSTON, March 15.—Engineer Fred C. Gohring of the state prison has tendered his resignation, to take effect March 31. It is stated that the resignation was asked for. It has been publicly stated that Engineer Gohring has been an assistant, at least in the "underground railroad" communication, between the prisoners and their friends on the outside of the prison.

TARIFF WORK SECRET

Members of the Committee Bound to Silence.

Press Accounts of the Proceedings Entirely Too Accurate—No Indication Yet as to When the Bill Will Be Reported—Probably Not Before April—Little Accomplished So Far.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The finance committee is making little progress in its discussion of the tariff bill. One thing done was the passage of a resolution binding the members of the committee to silence regarding what transpired in the committee room, this resolution being called forth on account of the accuracy of the press accounts of the sessions.

At the last meeting an effort was made to come to some conclusion as to when the bill should be reported, but no action was taken. The republicans did not appear to be so mindful of the day when the bill should be reported as they did of the day when Mr. Voorhees should be instructed to call it up and make it the unfinished business of the senate. The democratic members desired to report the bill next Monday and call it up for debate by the first of the week, the republicans protesting, however, that they must have ten days or a fortnight after reporting in which to prepare. Judged by the pertinacity with which the republicans cling to the time they have named it does not look as if the general debate could begin until about the 1st of April. An effort was also made to limit the hearings given senators, but this matter was left hanging in the air.

Senator Proctor was before the committee to protest against the reduction of the duty on marble, and Senator Daniel, of Virginia, appeared in behalf of some of the new industries of his state, his address being chiefly directed towards the establishments producing soda-ash and caustic soda.

In the general discussion the republicans offered some suggestions, all of which the democratic members said they would take under consideration, but no amendments were offered, and in view of the statements made by democrats, that they alone would be responsible for any changes made, the republicans say they will not offer any amendments. The income tax, as amended by the senate committee, was discussed at some length and vigorous objections made by republicans to changes in the administrative feature of the bill.

SENATE MAY INVESTIGATE.

J. Marshall Wright Said to Have Defamed Lincoln's Memory.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The president will not be notified at present of the confirmation of J. Marshall Wright to be naval officer at Philadelphia, as the case may be reconsidered by the senate. It appears that the confirmation slipped through without objection on the part of republicans by inadvertance, although neither Senators Quay nor Cameron opposed him. The anonymous circular sent to senators some days ago asserted that it was a matter of record that Wright expressed his delight that Lincoln was assassinated by Booth. Pending a motion to reconsider, the republicans will endeavor to find this document.

Dynamite Threat at Montreal.

MONTREAL, March 15.—Mayor Villeneuve to-day received a letter containing a threat that the city hall would be blown up Monday next if certain things were not done. NOW SHE IS DESERTED

Trouble Seems to Follow Zella Nicolaus.

Her Widowed Sister Skips Out With Al Ruhman—The Woman Who Sued George Gould Now at Her Home in Indiana Destitute—She Threatened to Return to Nicolaus.

WABASH, Ind., March 15.—Zella Nicolaus is now in Wabash apparently without funds and deserted by her protector. Last Saturday the widowed sister of Zella, Mrs. Effie Wetherbee, of this city, received a telegram to meet Zella and her husband, Al Ruhman, at Fort Wayne. She went and Zella stated that she had been ill treated by Ruhman and that she intended leaving him and returning to Nicolaus, whom she would meet in Chicago. The Chicago she went Monday to meet Nicolaus, leaving Mrs. Wetherbee and Ruhman at Fort Wayne.

Mrs. Wetherbee returned to Wabash Monday night and Zella and Ruhman came down at 9 o'clock Tuesday night, Zella refusing to talk to Ruhman. Upon her arrival here she jumped into a cab and gave the driver $10 to keep her out of Ruhman's way. He drove her home and Ruhman followed her. There an excited colloquy occurred, in which Zella denounced Ruhman, but the latter was defended by Mrs. Wetherbee. Her parents sent for officers, but Ruhman had quieted down when they arrived. The trouble was renewed when the police left and Mrs. Wetherbee came down town and took rooms at a hotel. Ruhman later went to the same hostelry and early in the morning they employed a driver to take them to Largo where they boarded the Wabash train for Chicago. Zella is heartbroken and took to her bed. Her trunks, which she says contains $6,000 worth of jewelry, are at a Fort Wayne hotel.

Zella's sister is not near so good looking as she.

BLOODSHED FEARED IN DENVER

Gov. Waite Decides to Act Regardless of the Court's Decision.

DENVER, March 15.—The situation at the city hall is still considered critical in spite of the court decision. One local paper asserts that the governor has said "The court be damned," and that he has declared he will act regardless of the court's decision. Another paper says the police force will stand by Commissioners Orr and Martin to a man and that the sheriff's officers stand ready to back them up. If these claims are well founded it is reasonably certain that there will be bloodshed before this trouble is settled, as those who favor the new board are clamoring loudly for the governor to declare martial law and call out the militia to assist in ousting the old board.

While there is apparent calm on the surface there is serious trouble beneath and the beginning of hostilities on either side means an open clash between the executive and judicial branches of the government, the final result of which cannot at this time be conjectured.

The governor late last night determined to install the new members of the police board in office to-day and he has ordered the militia to be in readiness to march upon the city hall at a moments notice. This action will bring him into contempt of the district court and his arrest is anticipated. Then the supreme court will be asked to settle the matter.

The patrolmen have all been ordered to report at the city hall at 10 o'clock this morning.

Dunraven to Try a Centerboard.

LONDON, March 15.—Lord Dunraven, owner of the Valkyrie, has bought the Dragon, a crack 20-rater which made a good record last year. He will enter the Dragon for all races in the Solent and elsewhere. Before the beginning of the season the Dragon will be taken to Southampton and converted into a centerboard yacht. It is believed that the subsequent performances of the Dragon will decide Lord Dunraven whether to enter a centerboarder or a keel boat in the next race for the America's cup.

AN EASY WAY TO ECONOMIZE.

A PLAINFIELD WOMAN'S METHOD OF SAVING THE DOLLARS.

New Clothing Made from Old By Diamond Dyes—Spring Dresses, Suits and Wraps With no Expense for New Material—Dressing Well With Little Money.

In these hard times a Plainfield woman has found diamond dyes the greatest help in economizing. With their aid, her husband, her children and herself have dressed comfortably, although nearly all the clothing was old material, dyed over.

Diamond dyes make such beautiful colors that goods dyed with them cannot be told from new. Any one can use them, as the directions are so plain and simple that no skill is needed. The color is there to stay and will not wash, wear or fade out.

Silk, cotton, wool, dresses, cloaks, stockings, feathers, laces, carpet rags, are all easily colored by diamond dyes. They are specially prepared for home use and the makers guarantee them the strongest and fastest of all dyes. Use a package and see how easy it is to dye at home; the diamond are the original package dyes, and no one should accept any of the inferior substitutes that are sometimes kept by dealers for a larger profit. Many of the dyestuffs in diamond dyes are original discoveries that simplify the work, and cannot be had in other dyes. Insist on having the diamond, and you will always be successful in home-dyeing.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

Final Vote to Be Taken on the Bland Bill This Afternoon.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—The vote on the passage of the Bland seigniorage bill will be taken this afternoon, and there is every indication this morning that the measure will have a small majority. The greater danger, from all accounts, is then to come, for it is generally believed that the measure is opposed by the president and Secretary Carlisle and will be vetoed. Yesterday the bill ran successfully past the two hostile points of attack which had been prepared and reserved for it. The first was Senator Allison's (rep., Ia.) motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill had been ordered to its third reading, and the second was Senator Manderson's (rep., Neb.) motion to refer the bill to the committee on finance with instructions to amend it so that the silver certificates provided for in it should be in anticipation of or in lieu of the 55,000,000 of silver dollars. Mr. Allison's motion was defeated by a vote of 28 to 45, and Mr. Manderson's by a vote of 27 to 44. Two speeches were made in favor of the bill by Senator Teller (rep., Col.) and Senator George (dem., Miss.), and one against it by Senator Carey (rep., Wyo.). Most of Mr. Teller's speech was directed against Mr. Sherman's argument last week, particularly as to the "hoard of idle silver money in the treasury," and he denounced Mr. Sherman's statement on that point as absolutely untrue.

The governor late last night determined to install the new members of the police board in office to-day and he has ordered the militia to be in readiness to march upon the city hall at a moments notice. This action will bring him into contempt of the district court and his arrest is anticipated. Then the supreme court will be asked to settle the matter.

The patrolmen have all been ordered to report at the city hall at 10 o'clock this morning.

SAVED DUNDEAR'S LIFE.

Remarkable Success of the New Antidote for Narcotic Poisoning.

PITTSBURG, March 15.—Tuesday night George Dundear took five ounces of laudanum with suicidal intent. A physician used all ordinary means for resuscitation, but with no avail. As a last resource Dundear was removed to the Homeopathic hospital. Notwithstanding the fact that the would-be suicide was blue in the face and his nervous system paralyzed, Doctors Moreland and Gregg resolved to try the newly discovered antidote, permanganate of potash. The doctors had no data to go on and could only use experimental doses of the remedy. With the fifth injection the muscles began to contract. Seven injections in all were made and then the patient was pronounced out of danger, and to-day is practically as well as ever.

This is the first time that this treatment has been used in this city and possibly in the world outside of New York city. It was only the apparent hopelessness of the case that prompted the physicians to attempt the use of the new antidote.

PROOF OF BRIGHTENING TIMES.

A Pittsburg Paper's Roseate Hue of the Business Situation.

PITTSBURG, March 15.—A republican paper here prints three columns of matter to prove that business is brightening. It says that three-fourths of the regular forces are again at work at the iron and steel mills and factories, and that of the unemployed class 2,000 are city contract laborers, who are always idle during the winter, but will again be at work on April 15. President William Smith, of the Flint Glass Worker's union, and a republican politician, is quoted as saying that reports of the number and state of the unemployed have been exaggerated. The National Tube works at McKeesport, employing 5,000 men, is reported to have booked more orders last week than any other week in the history of the company.

Mrs Hartford Will Be Prosecuted.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 15.—It has been stated that Mrs. George Hartford, of Candia, who was charged with cruelty to the Stroedler boy, was to bring suit against the selectmen of Candia for defamation of character. It is now reported that the selectmen will prosecute her on the charge of cruelty.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

THE PROGRESS OF ONE BENEFICIAL TO THE OTHER.

Co-operative Effort of Farmer and City Dweller Will Best Conserve the Interest of Both—A Word About Kickers—The Value of a Newspaper.

The interests of a town or city and the community and country surrounding are identical. That which benefits one is certain to favorably affect the other. Often there is an unreasoning antagonism in the farming community against their home town. From some inexplicable reason they consider it their duty to oppose every movement that has for its object the forwarding of its interests and depreciate its importance in every conceivable manner.

Fortunately in this community all of our best and most progressive farmers and landowners have a kindly interest in the town and are as enthusiastic in wishing it success and exercising their energies to attain that end as any one who dwells within its limits. But the fact cannot be disguised that we have many individuals in our vicinity who display the same characteristics that distinguish those who have been the bane and curse of other localities.

These people only speak of their home town, community and neighbors in terms of disapproval. Their good points are kept in the background, while what they are pleased to call their faults are proclaimed from the house tops. They sell their products in a distant market and buy their supplies at the same place. They are simply barnacles on the ship of progress, and the sooner they take up their residence where they transact their business and make room for some progressive and liberal minded citizen the better it will be for the community.

The fact cannot be controverted that a town cannot increase in size and importance without at the same time making the country contiguous a better place to live. As its population increases it furnishes a better market for the farmer, his land is enhanced in value, the amount of taxable property in the town becomes greater, and a consequent decrease of the farmer's tax results. The literary, social and educational advantages and church privileges keep pace with the town's growth, and the farmer, his wife, sons and daughters enjoy them equally with other citizens.

Suppose, for instance, that our thriving center of business and trade was swept away, and in its stead we had a crossroads hamlet, with a postoffice, blacksmith shop and grocery store. Do you think that this community would be as desirable a one to live in as at present?

On the other hand, should the growth of this community continue until we had as large a population as some of the larger cities we might name, with their manufacturing industries, commercial, literary and educational institutions and all the conveniences which are in reach of those who live convenient to metropolitan centers, would not the life of a farmer be more pleasant and comfortable and his vocation more profitable, his daughters better educated and his sons given a better chance in life than as present situated?

Probably we shall never be a New York or Chicago, but by a united effort of our citizens we can build up a place of which we may feel proud and secure to the community many of the advantages that go to make life worth living in the great cities and at the same time make our callings in life more attractive and profitable. This consummation can only be secured by the co-operative effort of the entire population of the community—farmers, mechanics, merchants, laborers and professional men as well as capitalists. Each can contribute his share by assisting his neighbor with his patronage and by giving every worthy enterprise or undertaking his hearty and unqualified support and approval.

Every business and professional man in this town should have an advertisement in this paper if it is nothing greater than a two inch card. In addition to the benefit it does the advertiser in bringing his business to the attention of the public, it is a slight token of his appreciation of the benefit that a well conducted and enterprising newspaper is to a town. Further, it a notice to the world at large that his particular line of business is represented in the place by an enterprising man and gives those seeking locations a good opinion of the business men represented. The advertising columns of the local paper are a good criterion to judge a town by.

The Valuable Citizen.

The citizen who is of the most value to a community, town or city is not always the man who possesses the most wealth, the highest intelligence or the most aristocratic lineage. Of course the two former will increase a man's usefulness if he will but exert them in the proper direction. But the valuable citizen par excellence is the man who believes thoroughly in his town, its people and its business and professional men. He does not make it his business to decry the honesty of his local banker or merchant or the ability of the resident lawyer or physician. But instead he is an enthusiastic advocate of all things that pertain to the welfare of his own locality. He has the interest of its schools, churches, societies and people at heart and exploits their excellence abroad. We need more of this class of citizens and have the material in our midst to construct them.

A newspaper with evidence of substantial support in its pages speaks volumes for a town. The fact that every trade seeker has an advertisement in its columns proves that the people are up with the times and favorably impresses the stranger into whose hands it chances to fall.

If you spend a dollar at home, it will return to you before many days, but if you spend it abroad it is forever lost, both to you and your community.

It is good policy to patronize the merchant or mechanic who is the most liberal in his efforts to assist in building up the community.

$10,000 FOR HIS THUMB

THAT'S WHAT JOE MILLER DEMANDS OF BILLY TRUST.

Papers Served in an Important Suit, the Result of a Bar-Room Assault—Witnesses Say Miller Should Have Shot His Assailant.

Judge Wm. A. Coddington has had papers served on Wm. F. Trust in a Supreme Court action brought by Joseph B. Miller, who claims $10,000 damages for a ferocious, atrocious and murderous assault alleged to have been committed upon him by his former backer in the Elkwood business.

The time of the alleged assault was last week, in a local bar-room. Witnesses say that Trust began a quarrel against Miller, whom he claims still owes him money loaned to start him in his Elkwood venture. It is alleged that he became so furious that he picked up a stone match-box and would have thrown it at Miller had not Stephen Davis taken it from him. He also, it is said, attempted to use a knife, but was disarmed. Trust then grappled with Miller, shut his teeth down on Miller's thumb, and ground the flesh and bone to a pulp. It is alleged that the strength of two men was required to force his jaws apart. Trust was then put in charge of the police, and fined for disorderly conduct. Miller's thumb was so frightfully injured that it will probably have to be amputated.

Besides being civilly responsible, Trust is liable to criminal prosecution, mayhem being a State Prison offense.

MEDICINE CONCEALED IN MILK.

Mrs. Morse Is Improving and Thinks Faith-Cure Alone Is Helping Her.

Mrs. F. W. Morse, of Westfield, daughter of Morgan C. Bird, of this city, who has pneumonia and believes the Lord will heal her without the aid of medicine, is getting along nicely on her diet of milk. She does not know that each glassful means a dose of medicine. Disguising the medicine is the only way the doctor could get her to take it. She objects to the physician's calls, but tolerates him on his plea of coming to see how she is getting along.

Her husband said: "My wife is taking medicine regularly in milk, although she is not aware of it. I shall not say whether I think her improvement is due to Dr. Smith's prescriptions or to our earnest prayers. It might be misconstrued if I expressed any opinion. Mrs. Morse is much better today."

Mr. and Mrs. Morse are devoted to church work. Mr. Morse simply believes that if the Bible is true in one place it is in another, and that the passage stating that the sick shall be healed by faith means just what it says.

Mrs. Morse has gone through the worst stage of her illness, and is expected to recover slowly.

The Baker Tragedy in Wax.

A new group of wax figures occupying the Chamber of Horrors of the Eden Musee, presents a realistic picture of the frightful Baker tragedy which was enacted a fortnight ago in Franklin Park. The participants in the wholesale slaughter are all vividly represented in wax, and their forms are invested with the blood-bespattered garments that were purchased, along with other relics of the murder, from Moore Baker himself.

MR. WILEY.

B. F. WILEY, of Box Elder, Converse Co., Wyo., writes: "I had bronchitis for twenty years and over, and I could not work without coughing so hard as to take all my strength away. An Important Engagement.

In the American Theatre during the week beginning Monday, March 19, with a special matinee Wednesday, the attraction will be that sterling actress, Miss Rose Coghlan, supported by the strongest dramatic company in America. The bill for the week will be as follows: Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and Wednesday matinee, "A Woman of no Importance"; Thursday and Saturday evenings, "Diplomacy"; Friday evening and Saturday matinee, "Forget-Me-Not". Miss Coghlan will present the above plays with special new scenery and handsome stage settings. Among the players supporting this admirable actress, are the Misses Ada Dyas, Effie Shannon, Dion Boucicault, Kate Denin Wilson, Winona Shannon, Nora Lamison, and Messrs. John T. Sullivan, Aubrey Boucicault, Thomas Whiffen, Robert Fischer, Grant Stewart, Edgar Norton, Burlis Raymond and Edwin James.

Magnificent Revival.

"Rosedale; or, the Rifle Ball", the play Lester Wallack made so famous, was reproduced Monday night by the stock company of the Boston Grand Opera House, in the Star Theatre, New York city, where it is booked for three weeks. Old-time theatre goers will remember the success it had at this same house, which was then known as Wallack's, when it had an unprecedented run of one hundred and twenty-five performances. Under the able management of A. H. Dexter, it has made a great hit and is likely to crowd this popular theatre during its stay in New York. Special attention will be given to all out-of-town patrons in the selection of seats by mail.

Two Sound-Proof Booths for Public Use

Manager Runyon, of the Telephone Company in this city, is about to make arrangements for increasing the efficiency of the service for Plainfield subscribers. The sound-proof booth used at the central office will be moved from its present position to the front part of the office, opposite which another booth will be placed. The partition separating the two rooms will be taken down altogether, and a neat iron fence substituted. These improvements will assist materially in making the telephone service in this city one of the best in the State, and people will not be slow to appreciate the efforts of Manager Runyon in this direction.

Adrain Sworn in as President.

Robert Adrain, President of the Democratic Senate, was not sworn in till Tuesday. He took the oath before his private secretary, William Pintard, who is a master in chancery. SUING THE CENTRAL.

TWO YOUNG WOMEN HAVE A SERIOUS GRIEVANCE.

They Want $5,000 for Being Insulted and Ordered Away from the Station by Railroad Detective Corsa.

Suit is being brought by Attorney George W. DeMeza against the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey for $5,000 damages claimed by Miss Susy Hubbard of Dunellen.

Miss Hubbard says that she came to Plainfield to visit her sister, Sunday, and was at the North Avenue station in the evening, waiting for a train for home, when Railroad Detective Corsa approached her, grossly insulted her, and ordered her away from the station. She alleges that he did not even ask to see her ticket, but made grave imputations against her character.

So frightened were both Susy and her sister at Corsa's strange conduct, that they left precipitately, missed the train, kept away from the station till another train came in, then ran for it and boarded it in momentary fear of being arrested by the officer.

Next day the case was placed in the hands of Mr. DeMeza, who has instituted proceedings to recover damages for the indignity to his client.

$30,000,000 SLIPS AWAY FROM PLAINFIELD.

The Natives Will Never Gaze Again on the Fortune that Has Passed.

Thirty millions of dollars in gold bullion passed through Plainfield this morning at 11. It was shipped from New York on the Philadelphia train leaving there at 10 a. m., billed to the Mint at Philadelphia. The bullion was incased in sixty-six boxes, and guarded by six men armed with Winchester repeating rifles. After loading the precious metal into the regular baggage car, the weight was so great that the springs closed together. The boxes were then carefully unloaded and Car No. 10 substituted for the regular car and the train drawn by Engine 385 proceeded on its way.

The bullion was so carefully guarded that not even railroad officials were permitted to approach it, the guards with rifles at full cock sternly ordering everyone back. The boxes were of wood, iron-bound, and upon every crevice was affixed a seal.

Judge Moore met the shipment at Westfield and escorted the treasure car through Fanwood Township.

The shipment reached its destination safely.

Union County Freeholders.

Full returns from the Union County township elections show the Republicans elected five Freeholders and the Democrats four. The next Board, which meets in May, will be Republican by one majority, even if Elizabeth next month should elect four Democrats. The Freeholders chosen Tuesday are: Summit, Wm. H. Swain, Dem.; Clark, John A. Halliday, Dem.; Union, Noah Woodruff, Dem.; Westfield, Addison S. Clark, Dem.; Springfield, J. Martin Roll, Rep.; Cranford, Geo. W. Littell, Rep.; Fanwood, Dr. Frank P. Westcott, Rep.; Linden, Henry Krouse, Rep.; New Providence, Eugene D. Badgeley, Rep.

In Union Township the first Republican Town Committeeman in thirty years was elected, Daniel H. Beach, who had seven majority over Thomas Fitzpatrick, Democrat. Summit elected Republicans except Freeholder, Overseer of the Poor and Constable.

Has to Rest His Endorsement.

Judgment for $3,458 was entered yesterday against Charles C. Cokefair, of 29 Broadway, New York, and 119 Crescent avenue, Plainfield, in favor of Benjamin W. J. Fox, on a note of Hotchkiss & Co., bankers, which he endorsed. The note was for $4,000, dated July 24, 1893, payable three months after date to the order of Cokefair or John I. Blair, to which were attached, as collateral security, five $1,000 first mortgage bonds of the Standard Coal and Timber Company, of West Virginia. The bonds were sold for $515 and $125 was previously collected on the coupons.

Rahway's Trolley Plan.

The Rahway Common Council has discussed the subject of granting an additional year to the Rahway Electric Street Railway Comyany to complete its roadway and put it into operation. It is understood that three months additional time will be granted, and the cars will run until July 1, 1896, without any fees. After that the company will pay $300 annually to the city, and add $100 additional every year until $1,000 a year is reached.

To Manage the Savings.

At a meeting of the managers of the Dime Savings Institution held Tuesday evening, Sheriff George Kyte, Frank S. Runyon and George F. White were elected managers to fill vacancies caused by the death of William White, Nathan Harper and Francis H. Gardner. The former two members were charter managers of the institution. The institution is in a flourishing condition, and has only first-class securities.

A Pertinent Question.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I notice in the controversy of the hose question between Carney Bros., and the city officials, that the hose was sold for 1¼ cents per foot, and if sold for 20 cents per foot, as a tax-payer I would like to ask what became of the difference.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

TROLLEYS TIED UP.

Street Car Traffic in Long Island City Suspended—A Superintendent Shot.

(Special to The Press.)

BROOKLYN, March 15—At 1:45 this morning the employes of the Hunter's Point & Steinway Railroad went on strike. The trolley railroads in Long Island City are all tied up, and the prospects are that they will remain that way for some time.

Trouble is feared, and the entire police force of Long Island City is on duty. It consists of but 41 policemen, and 33 of these are at the scene of the strike, the stables at Steinway.

The strikers are much excited. They have obstructed the railroad tracks with paving stones, bowlders, logs of wood and everything available.

The electric wires have been cut and grounded. It the dynamos are started the entire plant will probably be wrecked.

No attempt has been made to run a car since the strike began.

Soon after the strike was begun the assistant superintendent, John Cosgrove, was shot in the head while in the office of the company at Astoria by a bullet fired from a crowd that had gathered in front of the office. Luckily the ball caused only a scalp wound.

PURYEAR LYNCHED.

The Pennsylvania Murderer Escaped from Jail Last Night.

(Special to The Press.)

STROUDSBURG, Pa., March 15—Richard Puryear, who murdered Christian Ehler near Tannersville about a month ago, escaped from jail here this morning between 6 and 7.

A large crowd gave chase and Puryear was caught in Cherry Hollow woods.

He fought desperately, but was overpowered and was taken to Palmer Island by the mob.

A rope was obtained, and the murderer was hanged to a tree until he was dead.

—O. S. Teale has prepared plans and specifications for the proposed new brick stores and flats to be erected on East Front street by Jacob Voehl, on the site of the frame building now being torn down.

—The stockholders of Music Hall Association are to meet tonight, and a full attendance is desired, on account of the importance of the business. Many think that the price offered for the property is too low.

—The famous Henry Troemer prescription balance is now in use in Leggett's drug store. It is the same adopted by the U. S. Government, and is so sensitive that lead-pencil marks on a sheet of paper will turn the balance.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

CHAPTER X.

THE STORY OF A MISSPENT YOUTH.

"Rarely, I think," said Monckton at length, "has any man listened to such accusations as you have brought against me today. You certainly have not spared me, but meted out full judgment on my sins. Yet, all unworthy as I am, I might rake together a poor defense from the ashes of a misspent past. My father, as you know, began life as a common laborer in the mines that afterward became his own. He worked his way upward by methods which, whether my moral sense approves of them or not, I am too weak of fiber to imitate. Like many of his class, he did not comprehend the dignity of toil, but bowed down, poor soul, to the hollow effigy which in this country goes by the name of aristocracy. He resolved that his son should be a gentleman—that is, he should be college bred, dress well, spend money lavishly, drive fast horses, keep an expensive establishment—in short, become a genteel loafer. He rigidly excluded me from all knowledge of his business—time enough for that, he said, when he should have passed away. My business was to be pleasure. His greatest delight was to see my name in the papers beside doubtful titles and still more doubtful reputations. I think had I startled Paris with one of those scandals which furnish gossip for the jackals of society and a dozen columns of American reprint he would have been perfectly happy. But somehow my innate American decency kept me from the worst degradation. I went to Paris, a green boy, with the bank account of a financier. I was surrounded by parasites who drained my purse and laughed at me. I was flattered by women the touch of whose jeweled fingers sent a shudder through me. I plunged into dissipation and came out hating myself and all the world, tired, disillusionized, believing in nothing, despising men and distrusting women. Doubtless had I been stronger I should have passed through the ordeal unscathed. Being only poor Ralph Monckton, I became"—he shrugged his shoulders—"you have just told me what."

He began to pace up and down the room again with his hands behind him and his head bent.

"My father's death called me to the charge of the mines—a sorry farce indeed! What could the idler of the Paris boulevards know of practical affairs? And why should I have cared to know? I was already too rich, and I had none of the strange ambition which leads men to pile fortune upon fortune. My inheritance was simply a burden which I was neither willing nor fitted to bear. I employed an overseer to manage the mines, laying a single injunction upon him—never upon any account to trouble me with business details. Vague rumors of discontent among the miners came to my ears. I paid no attention to them. The employer and employee are natural enemies, and there is always war between them and always will be until the conditions of life are equalized. That is not my discovery—I read it somewhere. I have read a deal of rubbish for an idler. Anyway my overseer, Joyce, assured me that there was no ground for complaint. I believed him—it was easier to take his

"I don't think any man will ever love you as well as I do."

word than to investigate for myself. You spoke of injustice and danger, but I remembered that handsome fellow, North"——

She turned toward him sharply, but he checked her, adding, with a faint smile:

"I am making a clean breast, you know, and must hide none of my iniquities. Yes, that thought chilled some unformed philanthropic notions that were beginning to wander about in this weak brain of mine, and I fell back into my old cynical indifference. Perhaps it was my natural indolence reasserting itself; perhaps it was jealousy. It doesn't matter now. When the men declared war against me and threatened me with personal outrage—well, you have called it cowardice. I don't know. If had a dream of a new life of quiet contentment, far away from these petty annoyances, of which you were to be the guiding angel." He laughed a short, hard laugh. "I really did indulge in some foolish ideas of waking from my lethargy, of doing something fine, and you were to help me." He laughed again with mirthless self contempt. "I am awake now, Imogene, fully awake. And yet," he spoke in a musing tone, leaning his head against the window pane and looking out into the garden, "it is strange, but I don't think any man will ever love you as well as I do."

"Ralph!"

He turned around suddenly, as if her voice had startled him. "Yes," he said, taking up his hat to go, "I did not know it when I came here today. But I do now."

He fixed his eyes upon her a moment with a wistful expression, as if he hoped she would speak, but the words would not come to her lips. In an unsteady voice he bade her goodby and left her.

As the door closed upon him she took a step forward as if to recall him; then she checked herself, and sitting down by the window rested her head upon her hand and fell into deep thought.

CHAPTER XI.

A SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Ralph Monckton rode homeward at a slow pace, his mind in a strange confusion. He was aware that a great change had taken place in himself during the past hour. He was not the man who had lounged into the presence of Imogene Duke, resolved to ask her to be his wife, and yet not certain that he cared greatly what her answer might be; not the man without aims, without beliefs, almost without feelings of any sort. He had undergone a tremendous shock, and, as he had said, he was now fully awake, though still bewildered. Was it resentment, repentance or regret that was stirring his heart so profoundly? He could not have said at that moment. One thing he was sure of—that he loved Imogene and that he had lost her. He bitterly cursed his folly in offering himself to her with a supercilious indifference which would have stung the pride of a far less spirited girl than she was. Even if she had felt any inclination for him he had done his best to destroy it. He smote his thigh with his clinched fist as he pictured himself as he must have seemed to her, with his acquired air of foppish nonchalance. Oh, ass! triple ass! that he was not to have known that this pure, fresh, clean souled, earnest American girl must despise such an affected, dwarfed trifler as he had become.

He was in a state of moral transition, upon the point of balance from which a man either goes straight down to the devil or mounts upward on the wings of a good resolution. And he was near making up his mind to drop everything, return to Paris and drown his newly awakened conscience and his hopeless love in the wildest dissipation to be bought for money in that world mart of artistic wickedness. It was a strange thing that turned his thoughts the other way.

He was passing through a piece of woods where the road was hardly more than a bridle path, bordered on either side by dense undergrowth, when the report of a rifle and a keen, stinging pain in his right temple rudely aroused him from his meditation. He put his hand to the spot and withdrew it covered with blood. The bullet had grazed his head within the fraction of an inch of his brain. A puff of pale blue smoke was floating upward from the bushes beside the road.

He spurred his horse close up to the spot and called out:

"Show yourself, you cowardly scoundrel!"

The only reply to his challenge was the tramp of swiftly retreating footsteps and the crashing of a heavy body through the underwood.

Monckton waited until the sounds died away; then, giving no heed to the blood which flowed freely from the "Show yourself, you cowardly scoundrel"

gash in his temple, staining his collar and shirt front, he rode on at a gallop, with pale face and sternly compressed lips.

Arriving at his dwelling, he threw himself from the saddle and rapidly made his way to the overseer's office, where he found that individual in the act of completing a letter of portentous dimensions. He arose hastily as his employer entered and gazed at him with an expression of horrified amazement.

"What is the matter, sir?" he gasped. "You are hurt. There is blood on your face."

"Never mind that," interrupted Monckton curtly. "What have you there?"

"A letter to the governor," responded Joyce, "asking for military protection."

"Give it here." The young proprietor glanced through the document, then, to Joyce's unutterable dismay, deliberately tore it in two and threw the fragments into the wastebasket beneath the desk.

"I will have no outside assistance in this matter," said his employer coldly. "We will settle the trouble ourselves. Summon the committee—North." His pale face grew a trifle darker as he spoke the name. "That man Matthew North was their spokesman. Let him be sent for."

Joyce stared at the young man aghast. "But he is the worst of the lot, sir," he began, with an incredulous stare, "a regular demagogue and the head of the whole trouble."

"So much the better," responded his employer. "He is the man I wish to see."

Joyce expostulated. He was badly frightened himself, but with a company of militia at his back he foresaw the pleasure of overawing the malcontents and repaying them for the threats to his august person in a double measure of humiliation. He therefore contested the sudden and unaccountable exhibition of will on the part of Mr. Monckton with considerable acerbity.

He was silenced, however, when the young man turned upon him, frowning, and said:

"I am the owner of these mines, Mr. Joyce. If I have forgotten the fact too long, do not remind me of it today. If you are prepared to obey my orders, I shall be glad to retain your services; otherwise"——

"Of course, of course," interrupted the factotum hastily; "your will must be mine. I merely desired to express my views—ahem!—of the situation."

"Very good," said Monckton quietly. "You will send a message to the village and invite the men to a conference through their delegates. I will return in half an hour."

Appalled by the marvelous transformation in his young master and almost staggering on his legs with amazement, the overseer departed to execute his orders.

When the deputation of miners, headed by Matthew North, was ushered into the owner's presence by Mr. Joyce, they found him seated composedly at the desk, the mark of the would be assassin's bullet showing in a deep red line upon his white forehead.

The men had come to the conference in a visibly defiant mood. They regarded the summons to a conference with their employer as a sign of yielding on his part and were prepared to make the most of their supposed victory. They were rather taken aback by the perfect courtesy with which the mine owner received them and deposited themselves in the chairs which he ordered placed for them with a kind of surly bashfulness.

Matthew North alone seemed unimpressed by Monckton's demeanor. A few weeks had wrought direful havoc in Matthew's appearance. The ruddy bronze of his complexion had faded to a dull ashen hue, his face was painfully emaciated, and his hollow eyes shone under their heavy brows with a gloomy, portentous glow. It was plain that he had suffered as only a man of his violent nature can suffer and had vainly fought against the passions that consumed him with the whole strength of his savage pride. His wild love for Imogene Duke, which he knew to be hopeless, and his bitter hatred and contempt for the weakling he regarded both as his persecutor and his successful rival had absorbed all better impulses into themselves.

A NERVOUS WOMAN.

What She Thought About Nerves

The nerves are the most important part of the system. If they are weak the person is run down, tired, languid and does not feel like doing anything. She can sleep but little, her mind wanders, her appetite is gone and what she can eat does her no good.

This is just the condition Mrs. Milo Griffith, a well-known lady of Moretown, Vt., found herself in and the reader will see by the following letter that she knew what to do to get well.

"About seven years ago," she says, "I was taken with very severe nervousness and could not work. I also had the asthma badly. I was so nervous that at times I could not lay in the house but felt as though I must go out in the street and run.

"I had no appetite and what I did eat laid heavily on my stomach and sometimes distressed me severely. I had seen Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy advertised and heard it highly praised, and determined at once to take this medicine which was so favorably spoken of by everybody. I had only taken it a short time when I began to feel the good results from it, and am now entirely cured of all my complaints.

MRS. MILO GRIFFITH.

"I was so confined to the house that I could not go out evenings at all to any amusements, but go now when I please. When I commenced taking the medicine I weiged 96 pounds and now have got back to 132 pounds. I coughed and wee zed so that I would almost fall down.

"I would have bad speels at any time and blood nerve remedy during my convalescence from a severe rheumatism, by imparting a healthy tone to my whole overwrought nervous system. I write that others needing a like restorative may have a like advantage.

If you are suffering from any form of nervous or chronic disease, are weak and debilitated, if you have kidney or liver complaint, take this wonderful medicine and you will be restored to health. It is purely vegetable and perfectly harmless.

What greater prize could the world contain than a medicine which can cure such suffering as that? Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is constantly performing the most wonderful cures all over the land

The spring is the best and easiest time to cure disease. It is purely vegetable and harmless. Its discoverer is Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th street, New York City, the well-known and most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted by all free of charge, personally or by letter.

BLOOD MAY RUN TO-DAY

All the Militia in Colorado Ordered to Denver.

A Company of Federal Troops Now There—A Wagon Load of Ammunition Taken to the Besieged City Building—Governor Waite Defies the Courts—People Greatly Excited.

DENVER, March 16.—The political fight waged by Gov. Waite culminated yesterday in most exciting scenes and mob violence was imminent many times during the day. Fortunately the common citizen was calm and collected, and the prompt action of leading citizens in leaving their business and appearing in solid bodies to beg for time to consider the situation carefully caused a delay that probably prevented bloodshed, rioting and the assassination of Gov. Waite. In all probability had a shot been fired a mob would have quickly formed that would have captured the governor before official assistance could have rescued him.

GOV. WAITE.

At 6 o'clock the intelligence that the governor had called upon Gen. McCook to preserve the peace settled all fears of a contest between the militia and the police backed by as fearless a lot of deputies sworn in by the sheriff as could be possibly gathered together.

"Soapy" Smith's crowd of sports had been sworn in as deputies and they were placed in the hall to await orders. From 2 o'clock until long after dark a dense mass of humanity was packed in front of the city hall and upon the streets adjacent. They chaffed and joked, yet did not hesitate to express indignation at the situation. On Fourteenth street, the first regiment of the Colorado National guards stood flanking the Chaffee light artillery consisting of four Gatling guns, with caissons filled with solid shot, grape and canister and gatling ammunition. Their position commanded the entire front of the hall and at one time the militia was under motion to attack the hall when the arrival of Secretary Lorenz, with a message from the governor, stayed the attack. This was for a half hour's delay to permit another conference looking towards a peaceful settlement. From that time on, until the United States troops were called out, the most intense anxiety prevailed. All sorts of rumors floated about. The sheriff issued an order to arrest the militia and take their arms away. A friend of the deposed members of the fire and police board, went out of the city hall to apply for a warrant to arrest the governor. Committees of the most influential citizens were arguing with the board, with the militia, with the governor and with the police, but nothing was accomplished. The governor declared he would order the militia to fire upon the city hall regardless of the crowds of spectators and the police board within, as solidly maintained their position to resist attack. The police stood with guns in hand ready to charge if necessary and Chief of Police Stone said he would die before he would surrender.

Meanwhile business was practically suspended and the crowds gathered on every corner and upon the tops of the adjacent buildings.

Soon after 6 o'clock Chief of Police Stone received a message from Gen. McCook, stating that he had ordered troops from Fort Logan to protect the chief and aid him in preserving order. Soon after T. M. Patterson asked, on behalf of the governor, for a committee of arbitration, but the city hall people declined the offer, saying that they had made a similar offer early in the day and it had been refused. Then the attorney general, for the governor, made a similar request and it was also declined.

At 10 o'clock two wagon loads of breech-loading shotguns and ammunition were unloaded at police headquarters in the city hall. A quantity of dynamite cartridges was also stored in the police vaults in readiness for an emergency.

"We will hold the city hall against all attacks from the outside, if it takes dynamite to do it," was the expression of Chief of Police Stone. "We have 110 men on duty and they will be here as long as they are needed. If the governor wants 'blood to the bridles' we will give it to him, but he cannot have the city hall."

At 3:15 p. m. Brig.-Gen. Brooke, accompanied by four aides-de-camp, rode up to the city hall and stated that the governor's orders must be obeyed.

It was not until yesterday that the people realized the extent of the trouble and the determination of Governor Waite to have his way regardless of courts. As early as 9 o'clock the curious spectators began to assemble around the city hall and by 11 o'clock Laramie and 14th streets for a block in each direction were bitterly packed.

Gov. Waite remained in his private rooms at the Douglass house all day, admitting none but his closest friends, until a committee of citizens from the chamber of commerce called upon him late in the day. The result was a failure to get him to consent to anything.

"I shall order the militia to fire," he reiterated. "The people may assassinate me if they will, but I propose to have my way."

This was the situation when Gen. McCook asserted his position and prepared to preserve the peace.

The troops arrived by special train from Fort Logan at 8:15 o'clock and at 9:30 were bivouacked at the depot, the militia having been sent back to the armory.

At midnight Gov. Waite issued an order calling out every company of militia in the state. They are to come to Denver immediately and ready for action.

The sheriff will attempt to cause the arrest of the governor, Adjutant General Tarsney and Brigadier General Brooks.

The outlook this morning for the day is very serious.

MILL STRIKERS RIOT

Trouble at Phillipsburg Becomes Serious.

Deputy Sheriffs Stoned By a Mob While Conducting Girls to Their Homes—One Person Said to Have Been Wounded By a Pistol Shot—The Town Greatly Worked Up.

PHILLIPSBURG, N. J., March 16.—The strike among the mill hands in this city still continues, with more threatening aspects. At least 1,000 men, women and girls are out. Twenty-five deputy sheriffs have been sworn in at the request of the mill owners, as they fear trouble. The strikers stand firm, and say they will resist with force any attempt on the part of the owners of the mills to fill the places vacated by the strikers. The mill owners have advertised for hands, offering to pay more wages than they have paid to the old hands. Superintendent Larned says that he intends to win the strike at any cost. Few hands went to work unmolested this morning. Several of the workmen were set upon by the strikers and were severely handled.

Last evening while a number of deputy sheriffs were escorting girls from the Standard Silk mill to their homes, they were followed by a crowd hooting and shouting "scab" and blowing tin horns. At the corner of Fulton and Lewis streets a stone was thrown striking deputy sheriff John Keller in the face, cutting him. Keller discharged his revolver at the crowd which then scattered and ran, but afterwards formed again and stoned the deputies.

To add to the confusion one of the girls fainted and had to be carried into a dwelling.

Policeman Steiner arrested Keller, disarmed him and placed him in the lockup, to which he was followed by an exciting mob making angry threats. He was afterwards liberated on bail for a hearing today. Keller is one of the foremen in the mill. It is reported that the shot from his revolver hit a small boy.

The town is wild with excitement today.

Dynamite Bomb at Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., March 16.—A dynamite bomb was exploded in a yard on the southeast corner of East 19th street and 17th avenue at 9 o'clock last night, causing every house in that and the adjoining block to tremble. The occupants of most of the residences ran into the street. It is believed by the people in that locality that the explosion of the bomb was a warning to John Bates, who recently returned from St. Louis, Mo., to assume charge of the warping department in Hamford Bros.' silk mill, and who resides a few doors from where the bomb exploded. Everything is quiet around the mills this morning. The arrest and conviction of some of the strike leaders seems to have overawed the riotously inclined element.

WORKING HARD FOR M'KANE.

His Case May Finally Be Taken Before the U. S. Supreme Court.

NEW YORK, March 16.—John Y. McKane's lawyers do not intend to leave a stone unturned in their efforts to get the ex-chief of Gravesend out of Sing Sing prison. They now declare that they will go before the circuit court of appeals, and thence to the United States supreme court, if necessary. This declaration was made last night after Judge Lacombe had denied their application for a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds that McKane's constitutional rights are violated.

Confirmed By the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The senate has confirmed the following nominations: Oliver E. Branch, United States attorney for New Hampshire; Edward J. Donovan, collector of internal revenue district of Massachusetts. Postmasters—Vermont: W. D. McMaster, Woodstock; C. A. Fitzpatrick, White River Junction; W. P. Donahue, Proctor; G. B. Lynching of Puryear.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., March 16.—The feeling in the community over the lynching of Richard Puryear, the negro who murdered Christian Einers near Tannersville about a month ago, is favorable to the lynchers. When Richards escaped from the jail yesterday he was pursued by about 20 men and hung by them, but no one mentions any names, and it is probable that none of them will ever be brought into court for their act.

Newspaper Art Supplements.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 16.—An application to the customs department for the placing on the free list of various art portfolios, now being brought into Canada from the United States by many of the daily newspapers, has been refused and the duty of 20 per cent. on these articles will remain.

CA CRIM IS IN A FIX

He Can't Get Away From Brazilian Waters.

On Board a Portuguese Vessel, But Peixoto May Demand His Surrender—A British Skipper Refuses to Receive Him as a Passenger—San Francisco to Leave for Bluefields.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 16.—The Americans who helped man the government's warships have been paid off. They will leave the city on the first ship sailing from this port for New York. E. A. Barney, who commanded the crew of the dynamite gun aboard the Nictheroy was dismissed at Bahia because he kept the gun out of order. The government officers suspected him of being a traitor, purposely rendering the gun useless.

The French warship Magon, on which Admiral da Gama sought refuge just prior to the surrender of the insurgent fleet, cruised off the coast for a short time and then returned to port. She transferred da Gama and eight other insurgent officers to the Portuguese warship and then put out again. Several hours later a French mail steamer was stopped as she was leaving port, probably because the general authorities suspected that she carried the insurgent admiral. Her captain protested against the search of the Brazilians, however, but none of the insurgents was aboard.

President Peixoto and his cabinet are considering whether or not they will demand from the Portuguese the surrender of da Gama. It is known that the insurgent admiral was more anxious to get an asylum under the British flag, which has been more or less at his service since the beginning of hostilities. He applied for passage aboard a steamer of the Royal Mail Steam Packet company, whose vessels ply between South American ports and Southampton, but the captain declined to carry him.

The Nictheroy's dynamite gun is to be mounted at Fort Santa Cruz. The United States warships will sail to-day.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Sec Herbert has ordered Admiral Benham to proceed to Bluefields on the San Francisco without delay. It is supposed that no time will be lost in getting away from Rio in the long stretch to Barbadoes, where a stop will have to be made for a day or two for coal, but with fair weather, taking into consideration the foul condition of the war ship's bottom, she ought to reach the Mosquito coast between April 1 and 5. Admiral Benham's date of retirement is April 15 and his natural anxiety to get home before that time will probably make the ship's stay at Bluefields very brief. The administration has great confidence in Admiral Benham, particularly since his brilliant action in maintaining American rights at Rio and it is probable that as soon as he has asserted the great interest the United States has in the Mosquito coast he will come home by way of New Orleans.

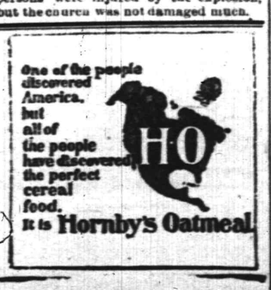
IMPORTANT TO MINERS.

"Big Joe's" Suit For $25,000 Damages Decided Against Him.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 16.—The case of Joseph Matuskowitz, better known as "Big Joe", who brought suit against J. Chayden & Co., a few days ago for $25,000 damages resulting from his incarceration in the Jeanesville mine for 19 days without food, was taken from the jury yesterday afternoon and a verdict for the defendant ordered by Judge Woodward. It was shown at the trial that Joe agreed to exonerate the company from the payment of all claims in consideration of $50. The judge gave binding instructions to find for defendant company on the ground that damage was caused by the negligence of A. J. Womelsdorf, mining engineer, whose survey and map was inaccurate, he being a co-employe. Some of the jurors protested against the ruling, but as the case was taken out of their hands, the protest was unavailing. It is said the case will be taken to the supreme court, as it furnishes one of the best tests of the present mine law ever brought into the courts for decision. The question whether a mining engineer is a co-employee of a miner or laborer is an important one, and if Judge Woodward's ruling is upheld it will be very difficult in future to secure a verdict in suits for damages against coal companies.

The Dead Bomb Thrower Identified.

PARIS, March 16.—The anarchist who was killed and his body terribly mangled by the explosion of a bomb which he was carrying into the church of the Madeleine with the intention of throwing it into the group of worshippers yesterday afternoon has been fully identified. His name was Pauwles, an anarchist well known to the authorities and an associate of the most desperate leaders among the reds. Two persons were injured by the explosion, but the church was not damaged much.



THE COLONEL WAS BAD

Even if He Didn't Promise to Wed Miss Pollard.

Witnesses Testify to Their Relationship Before She Began Wearing Long Dresses—Met at a House in Lexington "Fifty Times"—Asked Not to Appear for the Plaintiff.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—No matter as to whether Col. Breckinridge is guilty or innocent of the charge for which Miss Pollard has demanded $50,000 as recompense for the wrong she says she has sustained—failure of the defendant to keep his promise to marry her—there is one thing, disclosed in the latest testimony, that has gone a great way in condemning Col. Breckinridge in the minds of those who are watching the proceedings, and that is the age of the plaintiff at the time it is claimed that the wrong-doing began. A negro woman who kept a disreputable house in Lexington, Kentucky, testified that at the time Miss Pollard met Col. Breckinridge at her house the plaintiff was in short dresses, or dresses that did not fall below her shoe tops, and that she wore her hair in a braid down her back. Other witnesses also testified to her youthfulness at a time after the alleged relations between the couple.

The Lexington negro woman swore that Col. Breckinridge met Miss Pollard in her house 50 times. When questioned as to who first brought Miss Pollard to her house she said:

"Col. Breckinridge. He did not remain there long with her—about half an hour—and then went away. Col. Breckinridge came back again about dark and remained there until 11 o'clock."

"Did you see any leave-taking when Col. Breckinridge left?"

"Yes, sir; he kissed her."

"Did you see them in the room together?"

"Yes, sir."

"Was Miss Pollard dressed or undressed?"

"She was undressed. Col. Breckinridge was dressed."

"When did Col. Breckinridge come again?"

"Saturday night. He stayed for some time. When he came in he put his arms about Miss Pollard and kissed her. When he went he kissed her and bid her good night."

"Did Col. Breckinridge come back Sunday night and occupy this front room with Miss Pollard?"

"Yes, sir; they stayed in the front room until between 10 and 11." She had heard Col. Breckinridge tell Miss Madeline that she must get breakfast early and 'get down there' to meet Mr. Hodes on Monday morning."

Led by Mr. Farrell, the witness said Col. Breckinridge and Miss Pollard came back to her house a year later. Col. Breckinridge came to the witness a year ago last summer and asked her to take Miss Pollard, but she had refused, saying 'she didn't keep no company now." Col. Breckinridge had come to her again last fall after the suit was filed and asked her not to testify against him, and also to keep Mary Scott and Mary Wilson, who had lived at her house, out of the way "because he didn't want them to get them."

Mrs. Minear, who runs the boarding house in New York, where Miss Pollard boarded during the winter of 1893, testified that Col. Breckinridge had called several times to see Miss Pollard at her house, and that they had gone out together on several occasions.

Mrs. Burt, a clerk in the general land office, recognized the plaintiff as the young woman whom she had seen at a boarding house in Washington in 1887, and who then went under the name of Mrs. Foster. She said she seen Mr. Breckinridge at the house once. The defendant, she testified, was at that time about to become a mother.

The reading of the deposition of Mrs. Ketcham of Lexington was then begun. It was shown by the deposition that an attempt had been made through questions asked the deponent during her examination to implicate Col. Swope and other citizens of Lexington with Miss Pollard, but Mrs. Ketcham's answers were all to the effect that Miss Pollard had acted in a modest manner, as a chaste and good girl. To the knowledge of Mrs. Ketcham Swope had never come to her house to see Miss Pollard. When Miss Pollard came to board with the deponent in 1884 she wore dresses to the top of her shoes, and was apparently a young school girl. Col. Breckinridge had a room at her house for a short time while Miss Pollard was there. Miss Pollard, said the deponent, occupied a down-stairs room, leading to the street, but Mrs. Ketcham did not think that Miss Pollard could have received any visitors without her knowledge. Miss Pollard had left the Sayre institute because of humiliation over the action of Mr. Rodes in telling the principal that he was paying for Miss Pollard's tuition on condition that she would marry him.

Hayes Assessment Bill Killed.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 16.—The Hayes assessment bill was killed in the house by a vote of 58 to 31. The hall was crowded. Several members explained their votes and indulged in spicy personalities. Sensational charges were made against "political parasites" and "corrupt rings." After the bill had been tabled a motion to reconsider the vote and to table that motion was made. The friends of the measure filibustered for an hour amid great excitement, but were defeated by the decisive vote of 58 to 28.

DEAR OLD GRANDMOTHERS.

HEALTHY, HEARTY, HAPPY, USING PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND.

How to Make the Last Miles as Smooth as Possible—The Illness of the Aged Mainly Comes Under the Head of Weakness.

For ages the world has been piling up its indebtedness to the sweet, sunny, saintly grandmothers, who, when mothers' hands has been full and strength overtaxed, have surrounded the young lives under the home roof with the atmosphere of peace and unselfishness.

Care for them, then.

Give them the best of care and love and thought.

Do not let the old folks any longer think they are retired and must sit clear back out of sight from the world, feeling that they have no relation to it.

Give them your arm when the streets are slippery. Carefully avoid saying anything that implies that they are in the way. Remember that they, more than younger people, need something to stir and clear their slow blood and give strength and tone to their nerves and more feeble powers of digestion and assimilation.

The illness of the aged mainly comes under the head of weakness, but none are too old to be helped by Paine's celery compound.

It brings new material for building up worn out nerve tissues.

The many forms that nervous weakness takes all disappear when once the veins are supplied with pure, more abundant, more vigorous blood.

Paine's celery compound cures dyspepsia, sleeplessness, headache and neuralgia. It cleanses the blood of every trace of poisonous humors and encourages a rapid addition of the red corpuscles upon which the vigor of the entire body depends.

White cheeks, white lips, badly nourished frames indicate thin, poor blood. Paine's celery compound restores a rich, pure current to the blood and a healthy action to the nervous system.

To those who cannot sleep because of nervous exhaustion, Paine's celery compound will show itself the one thing needed. Men and women of every age who have to struggle daily to meet the needs of too great nervous expenditures should take this great remedy. Its invigorating, soothing action begins at once at nerve centres which manufacture the nervous force for every muscle and organ of the body.

Not only has too little attention been paid to the aged, but the prevention of nervous diseases in children and young adults has been neglected. Paine's celery compound is genuine food for the tired and used-up nerves. It cures a tendency to headaches and all those diseases which are due to a disordered nervous system. Try it: you will be convinced.

Jersey M. E. Conference.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 16.—The deliberations of the New Jersey M. E. conference yesterday were of more than ordinary interest because of the warm debate that took place when Revs. J. R. Thompson and B. C. Lippincott, sr., introduced a series of resolutions providing for the holding of executive sessions when character of candidates for admission to the conference shall be passed upon. The discussion soon resolved itself into an attack upon and a defense of the press in connection with the publication of conference reports. The resolutions, after having been slightly amended, were adopted, with but few dissenting votes. They go into effect at once.

Consul Parker Not Ill.

LANCASTER, Pa., March 16.—Referring to a paragraph published yesterday to the effect that Mr. Geo. F. Parker, consul at Birmingham, England, is there dying a victim of quick consumption, Attorney General Hensel, who has for many years been a close personal friend of Mr. Parker, said that he was certain there was no foundation whatever for the report. He has received letters from Mr. Parker dated as late as March 3, which testifies that he is not only in the best of health and spirits, but active in business.

Comstock Raids a Famous Club House

NEW YORK, March 16.—Anthony Comstock, of the Society for the Prevention of Vice, last night raided the club house of the Tenderloin club, No. 114 West 32d street, and stripped the walls of paintings valued at $3,000. A number of other pictures were broken, and the whole carried away. Only one or two members of the club were present and Mr. Comstock met with little resistance. The club is one of the famous organizations of its kind in the country.

Hard to Identify the Bodies.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 16.—The third body found at the Gaylord mine, supposed at first to be Joe Olds, was horribly mutilated and mortified almost beyond recognition. A second investigation took place and it was identified as being Thomas Jones. His funeral took place an hour later. The body of Olds is still in the mine with his other unfortunate companions.

SECOND CHORAL CONCERT

ANTON HEGNER'S PLAYING THE GEM OF THE EVENING.

Some Disappointment in the Work of the Vocal Soloist—The Chorus Improved, But the Lack of an Orchestra Painful.

The gem in last night's concert in Music Hall was the 'cello playing of Anton Hegner; its setting, the singing of the Plainfield Choral Society.

The second concert in the Choral series never seems quite satisfying; and this is not the fault of the chorus singers. Although unsupported by an orchestral accompaniment, they always strive to the utmost in an endeavor to make the second concert equal to the first and last, but success not always attends them.

Last evening the society members exhibited their musical ability, and the results of Prof. Fitzhugh's training, in a more marked degree than on December 21, but not to the advantage gained then.

Miss Utter tried to give instrumental support with a piano of indifferent tone, and succeeded remarkably well, as did also Mr. MacClymont on the organ, but those comprising the audience doubtless would gladly have subscribed a few additional dollars for an orchestra were the solicitation made early in the season. At least, they may safely promise to do so next year. Not even Miss Utter can do the impossible. Of Mr. Hegner, violoncellist, and his playing, too much cannot be said. It is perfectly safe to aver that no audience in Plainfield ever heard his equal. He was enthusiastically encored at his every appearance, and will receive a hearty welcome whenever he again visits this city. Of his solos "Cantilena", Goltermann, was perhaps as well enjoyed as any.

The vocal soloist of the evening was Madame Selma Kronold-Koert, who was certainly accorded very polite attention by this most courteous of Plainfield audiences. She appeared for the first time after Mr. Hegner had been enthusiastically encored, and was therefore honored no less than was he, to all outward appearances.

Madame Kronold-Koert's selections were entirely unsuited to her voice, and those who awaited her appearance in this city so anxiously must have been disappointed.

Noticeable improvement was marked in every chorus part. With such a miscellaneous programme as that presented last night there could not be other than enjoyment for everyone present. Gaul's "The Singers", opening with the words

God sent his singers upon earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to heav'n again was suggestive, because those voices which raised its melody were sweet and harmoniously blended, not only in this selection but in many others as well.

What might be termed a decided novelty in choral concerts was the waltz song, adopted from Strauss by Junius W. Hill, "The Wooing of the Rose". It was sung by the altos and sopranos, and was as blithe and gay as the effish title signifies it to be.

No piece was sung in more perfect harmony than Mendelssohn's creation, "Sing to the Lord". It brought out the full powers of the double chorus, and proved beyond peradventure the particular field in music open to the local society.

Schubert's Serenade was also beautifully rendered, and in like measure appreciated by an audience not inclined to be super-critical while deeply gratified for music of standard merit.

Herman Hans Wetzler, as piano accompanist for Mr. Hegner and Madame Koert, filled the position very acceptably, except during one of Mr. Hegner's solos, when he was two full notes behind the violoncellist.

The audience present was representative of all that makes Plainfield the delightful city it is socially and intellectually, as the night of rain did not stop many subscribers from venturing out.

After Borough Chinamen Next.

Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, Theodore Barcalow, is at work inspecting the Chinamen in the district of Middlesex and Somerset Counties, in compliance with the Geary law, which requires that each Chinese resident be photographed, measured and registered.

Collector Barcalow has already had Yo Num and Sam Wah, of Bound Brook, and Wee Dick and Loung Tong, of Somerville, before a photographer. The Chinamen were inclined to make a holiday of the occasion. Each wore an elaborate costume and an expansive smile, as he stepped in front of the camera, and then cheerfully handed over the dollar that goes to pay for the means of identification which Uncle Sam will hold for his future protection.

The Collector also reports having had fifteen Chinamen photographed in New Brunswick and two in South Amboy. These, together with the contingent from Somerville and Bound Brook, and two or three yet to be found in North Plainfield, are the whole number of Chinese residing in the counties of Somerset and Middlesex.

AWAITING OTHER OFFERS.

Shareholders Wish to Sell Music Hall, but Think That Higher Bids Can Be Obtained.

A special meeting of the shareholders of the Music Hall Association was held in the parlors of Music Hall last evening for the purpose of deciding whether the Hall should be sold. Mayor Gilbert presided. Five hundred and twenty shares were represented at the meeting.

A bid was presented by William M. Stillman who offered to buy out the Association for $13,000. A discussion followed which showed that the shareholders did not think it advisable to sell at this figure, as the building cost $49,000 besides the land, which was donated by the late Dr. Stillman.

By a vote of 510 shares for to ten against it was decided to dispose of the Hall. Mayor Gilbert was authorized to advertise for bids, and the meeting was adjourned until April 12

Another Victory for Leading Lawyers.

Jackson & Angleman yesterday won a signal victory in obtaining from Judge Van Syckel, of the Supreme Court, an order opening a judgment amounting to $729 05, regularly entered by the Gottfried Kreuger Brewing Company against Mrs Elizabeth Schorb of this city. Ex-Senator Marsh of Elizabeth appeared for Judge Kreuger, and made a strong effort to prevent judgment being opened but without avail. The judgment was entered in an action on a promissory note endorsed by Mrs. Schorb, who, although regularly served with a summons in the case, had failed to attend to the matter.

Mrs. Schorb will now be allowed to enter her appearance and plead to the action, and having a good defence this victory of her lawyers will save her a large sum of money.

The Scores Were Far Apart.

CURES OTHERS

M. W. SCOTT, ESQ., of the U. S. Marshall's Office, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "For many years my wife has been a constant sufferer from indigestion, sick headache, nervous prostration and all other complaints that the female sex is heir to, and, after trying many remedies and doctors with but little or no relief, I persuaded her to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery.' She was so out of heart, she returned the answer that it would be like all the rest—of no good; but on my account, she said she would try it, so I got one bottle each; and before she had used half of a bottle she felt that it was benefiting her, and she has continued to improve ever since, and now thinks it the most wonderful remedy on earth for her sex, and recommends it to all suffering females. She has not been so well in ten years.

LAUDANUM DRINKING.

Mayor Gilbert Issues a Warning Proclamation Against the Illegal Sale of Drugs.

As a result of the Monday-night meeting of the Charity Council, at which the evil of laudanum drinking was discussed, the following proclamation is made:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
PLAINFIELD, N. J., March 14, 1894.

The law of New Jersey forbids the retailing or dispensing of medicines or poisons by any person who is not a registered pharmacist. Violations of this law is made a misdemeanor, punishable, as to the first offense, by fine of not less than fifty nor more than one hundred dollars, and as to every subsequent offense by a like fine, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both, at the discretion of the Court.

Reputable citizens having represented to me on information and belief that this law is being violated in the City of Plainfield, especially in the sale of laudanum, it will become my duty, on receiving sufficient evidence, to set in motion the machinery of the law to bring about the conviction and punishment of all offenders.

Good citizens may have offended in this matter in ignorance of the law. If so, let them take warning and desist from further violation of a statute enacted in the interests of public safety and morality.

A. GILBERT,
Mayor.

Lost the Game, and Fed the Victors.

The C. Y. M. L. bowlers entertained the team of the Catholic Club of Jersey City last evening, incidentally allowing them to win a game. Throughout the rolling and at the supper served afterward the Plainfielders made their famous guests feel at home with their usual open-hearted hospitality.

The Catholic Club scored the highest until the ninth frame, when the C. Y. M. L. managed to get three ahead. In the final frame they fell back, however, and ended 24 pins behind.

The score:

Fed 'Em Strawberries, Spite of the Season.

Under the management of Frank Nelson and H. D. VanLlew about 100 colored people spent a pleasant evening in T. A. B. Hall, West Fourth street, last night. Dancing was supervised by Floor Managers George Randolph and James Potter, the grand march at 10 being led by Mr. Randolph and Miss A Green. The music of three pieces, furnished by Musician VanDyck, of Newark, was excellent, and nothing occurred to interfere with the joys of the evening. The refreshments were served in the form of an oyster supper, in cooking which Caterer Frank Scott displayed his skill. Oysters were not the only dishes on the bill of fare, however. Especially noticeable among the eatables was a strawberry shortcake, which graced the table in spite of the March hail storm outside. Among the guests was a delegation from the Victor Wheelmen, headed by the President, Edgar McCray.

In Memory of Dr. Pingry.

Services will be held in Westminster Presbyterian Church, Elizabeth, next Monday evening, at 8, in memory of the late Rev. John F. Pingry, Ph. D., who so many years was principal of the school bearing his name. The service has been arranged by graduates of the school, and will be a fitting testimonial to the memory of the loved teacher. A double male quartette will furnish the music and there will be six speakers, each limited to 15 minutes. Of these four will be graduates, and will represent periods of Dr Pingry's school life. They are: R. Wayne Parker of Newark, 1853 61; Rev. Mr. Meeker of Hackettstown, 1861 71; Prof. W. F. Magie of Princeton, 1871 81; Thomas N. McCarter Jr., of Newark, 1881-91. John Leal of Plainfield will speak for the teachers, and Rev. E. Kempshall, D. D., for the City of Elizabeth and the Clergy. All who formerly studied under Dr. Pingry are cordially invited to be present, and seats will be reserved for them until 7:55.

New Headquarters for Feminine Cyclers.

A committee appointed by the Ladies' Bicycle Club yesterday engaged rooms in the house corner of Park avenue and East Fifth street owned by Mrs. Kellog. The club will take possession April 1, and will fit up the rooms suitably. During the winter, the new headquarters will probably be used for the whist parties which are held every two weeks.

A new project with the club is the publication of the dozen club songs, set to old tunes, which have been contributed by different members. They will probably be printed in book form for the use of the club.

The members look forward to a season of still greater pleasure and enthusiasm. There are now forty members and new applications are received at every meeting.

Unfortunate Shopping Trip.

Miss Laura Myers and Peter Burnett came from over the mountain last evening on a shopping trip. Miss Myers made a purchase in John J. Kenney's shoe store, corner of Park avenue and Front street. She then had a pocketbook containing between $35 and $40.

The two then went across the street to the store of Schwed Brothers and thence to J. V. Berkaw's shoe store, 119 West Front street. There Miss Myers noticed that the purse and money were missing.

The loss of the money was reported to the police. The young woman felt her misfortune keenly and aroused the sympathy of people passing. She could speak but little English.

A BUSTLING BOROUGH.

THRIFTY DUNELLEN'S CHATTY BUDGET OF NEWS.

Squire Huff Convicts Hard-Times Victims Who Picked Waste Coal from Central Cars—A Wife Disappears—Bits of Personal Gossip.

Howard Giles is visiting in Somerville for a few days.

Mrs. Cornelius Compton and Mrs. John Morrison, of North Plainfield, spent yesterday with friends in Dunellen.

Will McMahon, an assistant around the station, cut his hand with a knife a few days ago and the injured member is very painful.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Oakley, of New Brunswick, spent yesterday with Mrs. Oakley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Swackhammer.

Messrs. Bambridge and Strupel, salesmen of New York, stopped at Taylor's Hotel yesterday and tried their hand at bowling. Mr. Bambridge rolled a score of 225.

John Gallagher, who nearly lost his eyesight last February, at the Pond Machine Tool Works, while casting, is improving slowly, and hopes soon to lay aside his glasses.

Will Carpenter, one of Dunellen's bright boys, assured several of his associates about the station yesterday that The Daily Press was the only paper that sold around these parts.

Adam Dealaman has been running a wagon all during the past winter, but will be prepared for the next fall of snow, as he purchased two sleighs at the Joseph Laing sale yesterday. Perhaps the snow squall at noon influenced him.

Mrs. John Liable of Church street has vanished. She disappeared with her household effects and children, nobody knows whither. The moving was done at night. Since Feb. 19 John had warned tradesmen not to trust his wife on his account, as he would pay none of her bills.

A large number of people attended the sale of the late Joseph Laing's personal property yesterday, which was sold by Constable Mahlon Sopher of Metuchen, under direction of the Orphans Court. The goods were all sold very cheap. John Tier, Sr., of Plainfield, bought a number of articles.

The case of Michael Gallagher for stealing coal was tried in Mair's Hall, before Squire Huff, yesterday. This was the case that Lawyer Hetfield of Plainfield had adjourned one week ago. The room was crowded to suffocation, with people interested not only in this case but in several others of the same kind, dependent on its result. There was not a sufficient number of chairs or benches, and the lawyers were not even given desks on which to write. For some reason no one had thought about having the room warm, and all suffered more or less from the chill. Lawyer Walter L. Hetfield again appeared for Gallagher, while Lawyer Barkalow, one of the Jersey Central's attorneys, represented the company. Two or three of Mr. Hetfield's claims were not considered, and when he asked for a jury that was refused. After both sides had been heard, Squire Huff decided that the accused should pay $1 and costs, which would amount to $6 35, and Lawyer Barkalow said that if the case was not carried up the company would drop all other cases of a similar nature. Mr. Hetfield was granted 24 hours to decide the matter of appeal.

Headquarters for the Best.

The argument of The Press that it pays Plainfielders to trade at home is amply substantiated by I. H. Boehm, who offers a splendid lot of bargains in all such goods as just at this time of the year keep feminine hands busy in Spring sewing. Beautiful are his millinery creations, and he loves of bonnets he displays are the admiration of the town. By actual comparison the prices are lower than in the metropolis. The line of jackets, capes and dress goods is complete; and the material for dressing floors affords abundant choice.

Dancing in Turner Hall.

The newly-elected officers of the Gesang and Turn Verein entertained the other members of the society with dancing and refreshments in the hall last night. Many were present and the social happiness continued to a late hour.

The officers who gave the reception were:

President—Charles Dresselt.
Vice-President—H. Bender.
Secretary—E. Hoerster.
Financial Secretary—P. Ferber.
Treasurer—A. Wolff.

Irish Patriotism Not Dead.

The society known in this city as the Enniskillen Dragoons is requested to meet at the home of Patrick Corrigan, South Second street, tomorrow evening at 8, when there will be on exhibition two shillalehs owned by Patrick Corrigan, Jr., and Thomas Colther, which did service in the Battle of Fonterroy. These two young men will also speak on the wrongs of Ireland. A good time is promised to all who attend.

FORTNIGHTLY WHIST.

Another Charming Evening, with Handsome Prizes Distributed.

The Fortnightly Whist Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. DeWitt Brokaw, 38 Sycamore avenue, last evening. These meetings, which take place every two weeks, are charming affairs, and the members spare no pains in making them all that can be desired. The club has been in existence five years, and these social gatherings are looked forward to with considerable pleasure.

Last night Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr., won first prize for the women, and received a handsome Dresden cup and saucer and spoon. A very pretty silver umbrella clasp was the second prize, secured by Mrs. Arthur Gallup. For the men, Frank Phillips captured first prize, which was a neat silver satchel tag, and George D. Hallock received a unique silver hat marker as second.

The members of the club are: Mr. and Mrs. D. Dewitt Brokaw, Mr. and Mrs. John H. French, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gallup, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Slawson, Mr. and Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Faber, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Phillips.

Takes Plainfield for Enthusiasm.

Plainfielders will be interested in a portion of a letter from Miss Spence, whose address on the reformation of the voting system greatly interested an audience in All Souls Church, to a member of the Monday Afternoon Club.

The Australian lecturer writes: "I am in hopes of a hearing in Montclair, but am being starved out of America and must sail for Glasgow the end of the month. I found Washington interesting but not profitable. We want a few Plainfielders for enthusiasm."

Hardware Sold at Sheriff's Sale.

Judgment was entered in the Circuit Court of Union county last week against Zimmerman & Rumpf, hardware merchants of West Front street, at the suit of Karl Zimmerman for $6,994. Levy was immediately made.

At the sale yesterday all the stock, fixtures and chattels were sold at public auction by George Kyte, Sheriff. The goods were bought by J. P. Powers, the attorney for Karl Zimmerman, for the sum of $4,820. The business will be continued in Karl Zimmerman's name.

From Bleak House to Our Mutual Friend.

A number of "Evenings with Charles Dickens" have been arranged to be held in All Souls Church. The discussion of each of the subjects will be introduced by a paper or address by the leaders named. The plan of the series is as follows:

Mch 26—"Bleak House"—Mrs. E. W. Conklin.
Apr. 6—"Pickwick Papers"—H. B. Wells.
" 20—"David Copperfield,"—W. H. Riley.
May 4—"Little Dorrit"—Mrs. F. D. Warren.
" 18—"Our Mutual Friend"—E. H. Mumford.

To Study Physical Culture and Dress Reform.

The lecture on "Physical Culture", given by Miss E. M. Lindley, of New York, under the auspices of the Grace P. E. Church Guild, last Monday afternoon, has resulted in the formation of two classes of women who will take a course of lessons from the lecturer. Twenty-five have joined already and it is hoped that others will join to comprise a third class.

Mirth and Music for Everyone.

The best minstrel show of the season will be given in Music Hall tonight. Besides the beautiful "Robin Hood" first part and the genuine old-time minstrel show, there will be specialties by the best artists in the business, in the line of contortion work, club swinging, dancing and juggling. The singing will be by superior soloists and a fine chorus, and the orchestra is an attraction in itself. There is nothing offensive to sex, in any part of the performance.

Ought to Have Known Westfield Better

When Charles McMurray went in town at Westfield to vote Tuesday he had a roll of bills in his pocket amounting to $90. On his way home from town he discovered that his money was missing. Just where he lost it he is unable to say. He carried the money with him because he was afraid that while away from home someone would break into the house and steal it.

The Colored Y. M. C. A.

The opening of the colored Y. M. C. A., which has its headquarters in Central Hall, corner of North and Park avenues, has been fixed for next Thursday evening, when a concert will be given. Prominent singers from out of town will participate, and the public are assured of an excellent entertainment.

Booming the Glazier Industry.

All of the windows in the Graceland station have been broken out again. The mischief is caused by coal train jumpers, who ride up and down on the coal trains and bombard with pieces of coal everything within reach. The glass will be put in again and the station watched.

Democratic, as Before.

Three Freeholders were elected in Somerset County, Tuesday: Andrew Lutkins of North Plainfield, and John H. Scomp of Montgomery, Republicans, and Robert Zergiebel, of Warren, Democrat. This leaves the Board Democratic by one majority, the same as last year.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

William R. Moore is very ill at his home on New street.

Mrs. L. D. Holmes, of Grandview avenue, is visiting relatives in Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Dupee, of Rockview avenue, left town today to spend Sunday in Atlantic City.

Mrs. John Bunnell, of Union, spent yesterday at the home of her uncle, J. H. Searing, Madison avenue.

A bright little daughter came to brighten the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Leal yesterday afternoon.

Elias Hotchkiss, of Rockview avenue, who has been suffering for several weeks with lung trouble, is rapidly improving.

Rev. Mr. Thompson, Principal of Canaan Academy, Connecticut, spent Wednesday night with the family of Geo. P. Dupee, Rockview avenue.

Mrs. E. T. Douglass of Washington avenue entertained a number of her friends this afternoon with progressive euchre. A club has been formed of about twenty-eight members who meet every two weeks, each in turn entertaining the others.

Wm. B. Brokaw of West Front street was agreeably surprised last evening by his relatives, who called to remind him of his birthday. He received them all most cordially, and the evening was happily whiled away with music, songs, games and an excellent luncheon.

Mrs. Anna Thomson, widow of James Thomson, died at her home, 33 Willow avenue, yesterday afternoon, after a long illness. Mrs. Thomson came to Plainfield last December thinking the change would benefit her, but her health failed rapidly instead. She leaves two sons and two daughters. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York.

Twenty women of the Bicycle Club went to Middlesex county yesterday afternoon, and as guests of Miss Maltby enjoyed one of the whist parties which are a feature of club doings when riding is not in season. After a pleasant series of games the handsome prizes offered were distributed and refreshments partaken of. The club adjourned to be entertained by Mrs. C. T. Pond, of Madison avenue, at a similar affair the afternoon of March 29.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Crawford of East Fifth street entertained a party of young people at the Choral concert last evening. After adjourning to the home of the host and hostess refreshments were daintily served, and the remainder of the evening spent in dancing and singing. In the party were Miss Patten, Miss Haynes, Miss G. Daniels, Miss Green, Miss Dryden, Miss Bowers, Messrs. Chapman, Gilmore Grayton, Arthur Freeman, Frank L. C. Martin, Fred Freeman, Harry Patten.

A surprise party was given to Lillian Hope at her home, West Fifth street, last evening. The young people met at the home of Miss Cora Harris and went to Miss Hope's house in a body. The evening was spent in playing games and other amusements. Refreshments were also served in abundance. The party included Mr. and Mrs. Doane, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Tallamy, Mrs. Harris, the Misses Edna and Cora Harris, Ida May Tallamy, May Murray, Della Grant, Grace Ulrich, Irene Hope, Edith Titsworth, Nollie Pratzner, Mary and Lizzie Stevenson, Kitty Larew, Haberle and Emily Runyon; Hervey Doane, William Pittis, Ernest Duffy, Rufus Larew, Harry Rogers, Clinton Mosher, William Pratzner, Charlie Sebring, William Pope, Percy Vail, Fred Sebring and William Bennett.

Suing Two Railroads.

Jabob S. Smalley of Bound Brook was injured nearly a year ago by a train which struck him as he was driving over Middlebrook crossing. For three weeks he was in an unconscious condition, and it was not expected that he would live. He has not been able to work since the accident, and probably never will be. Mr. Smalley is 30 years of age and is well-known in Plainfield.

Judge W. A. Coddington, his counsel, has brought suit against the Reading and the Central Railroads for $25,000. The case will be tried at Somerville in the Spring term of court.

—A fight between two lively birds took place near New Brunswick last night. A large number of sports were present.

A YOUNG GIRL'S FORTUNE.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

Nothing appeals so strongly to a mother's affection as her daughter just budding into womanhood. Following is an instance: "Our daughter, Blanche, now 15 years of age, had been terribly afflicted with nervousness, and had lost the entire use of her right arm. She was in such a condition that we had to keep her from school and abandon her music lessons. In fact, we feared St. Vitus dance, and are positive but for an invaluable remedy she would have had that terrible affliction. We had employed physicians, but she received no benefit from them. The first of last August she weighed but 75 pounds, and although she has taken only three bottles of Nervine she now weighs 106 pounds; her nervousness and symptoms of St. Vitus dance are entirely gone, she attends school regularly, and studies with comfort and ease. She has recovered complete use of her arm, her appetite is splendid, and no money could procure for our daughter the health Dr. Miles' Nervine has brought her."

When my brother recommended the remedy I had no faith in patent medicines, and would not listen to him, but as a last resort he sent us a bottle, we began giving to Blanche, and the effect was almost immediate."—Mrs. R. R. Bullock, Brighton, N. Y.

BAD MEN IN BOUND BROOK.

Three Bold Burglars Break Into the Post-Office and Then Leave Town With a Stolen Rig.

(Special to The Press.)

BOUND BROOK, March 16.—Three thieves broke into the post-office here at 12 last night by way of a rear door. They brought excellent tools and a can of powder and had just commenced operations on the safe when Constable Sebring, who is on duty at night, discovered them.

The men ran out at his approach and escaped. They left behind them the tools and powder, two overcoats, two umbrellas and two pairs of gloves. No marks or papers were found on the coats.

In their flight they stopped at the barn of Elmer Smith in East Bound Brook and stole a horse and carriage with which to continue their journey.

The authorities of the surrounding towns were notified but no trace of the men or the rig had been discovered at 3 this afternoon. Postmaster Mason says the men would have been well repaid for their trouble had they been able to get the money and stamps in the safe.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

CHAPTER XII.

A HEATED CONFERENCE.

As North entered the apartment with his companions his gaze met that of Monckton, and for a moment the two men regarded each other intently, North flushing and paling, with an evil sneer upon his lip, Monckton with that unmoved countenance and perfect self poise which the miner envied and yet hated in him.

"Hitherto," began the proprietor, addressing the men collectively, "I have taken no share in the management of the mines, partly, at least, for the reason that I knew myself to be wholly ignorant of their workings. Certain circumstances, which I need not enter into, have led me to take another view of my duty and responsibility as owner, and from today on I shall assume active control, making myself thoroughly acquainted both with the interests of my property and the wants of my employees."

There was a murmur of approval among the men. North, however, remained mute and frowning.

"First of all," continued Monckton, "you have cause of complaint against me and have organized a strike. Heretofore I have given the matter no personal attention, but it has been brought to my knowledge that many of your families are in great destitution, and my chief object in asking you to meet me is to see if we cannot come to some settlement."

The men glanced at Matthew North, as at their recognized leader, and it was North who replied. He spoke in a harsh, peremptory tone, without pretense of deference or conciliation. In common with his companions, he believed that the mine owner was simply treating for a surrender on the best terms possible for himself, and his heart was swollen with bitter triumph. He saw his enemy beaten and humiliated, and he, Matthew North, had accomplished it.

"We have already made our conditions," he said. "You know what they are. Take them or leave them, as you choose."

"That is hardly the tone I should have expected you to adopt," replied Monckton calmly, "considering the state of affairs in the village."

"No," retorted North contemptuously; "you expected us to cringe and crawl like beaten curs. You see, mates," he added, addressing his companions, "we ought to have presented our petition kneeling. The proprietor may refuse us because we came like men who know our rights and hold the whip hand too."

"I do not understand you," said Monckton coldly.

"You do," returned North roughly. "We have the best of the fight, and you have got to give in."

"If you mean that I have called you here today," said the mine owner steadily, "because I feared you or for any other reason than my own sense of right, you are mistaken."

North's only answer was a disdainful laugh.

"So that I act in accordance with what seems to be my duty in this matter," continued Monckton, with the same admirably maintained composure, "it can make little difference what motive you attach to my actions. It may, however, help you to comprehend me better if I tell you that more than once today I have thought of shutting down the mines permanently."

His gaze met that of Monckton.

The men glanced at each other with startled looks. North laughed again, and now for the first time Monckton showed signs of irritation.

"Instead of which," he said, "I have decided to offer you the opportunity of returning to your work that you may support your wives and children. Do not flatter yourself," he turned sharply upon North, "that I feel anything but contempt for cowards who fight their battles with clumsy, anonymous threats, arson and murder."

North jumped to his feet excitedly. "What do you mean?" he cried. "No fine phrases! Put it in plain words."

"Mr. North," replied the mine owner, with icy sarcasm, "you are a poor marksman."

The miner glared at his employer as if he were about to spring upon him, while the remainder of the deputation sat aghast, with open mouths and eyes starting from their heads.

"I—I"—gasped North in a choking voice, "I will know what you are hinting at. Do you hear? Speak out or"—

"Sit down!" The stern tones of the proprietor had an immediate effect upon the miner in the midst of his wild rage. He dropped into his chair, breathing heavily. "Some one," continued Monckton, "attempted to burn my stables last night. Had the attempt been successful two or three human beings, to say nothing of the animals, might have perished."

"And the effigy," broke in the overseer, who throughout this scene had been performing a sort of nervous dance behind his master's chair, "don't forget the effigy, sir, with the knife through the breast and the promise to kill us both, and"—

Monckton raised his hand, and the overseer instantly subsided.

"This afternoon," said Monckton, still keeping his gaze riveted upon North's face, "as I was riding homeward through a lonely part of the road, some one fired at me from ambush. A good shot could have snuffed a candle at that distance. As it was, fortunately for me, he was a novice with his weapon and only left the graze which you observe on my temple as a testimonial of his murderous intent and his bad aim."

North raised himself erect in his chair with a jerk. "And you believe I am the guilty man?" he asked hoarsely.

Monckton made no reply, but Joyce, behind his chair, nodded vigorous affirmation.

"On my word—on my soul, it is not so!" North cried out passionately. "I knew nothing of it. 'Mates,' he added, turning to the others, "you know I am not capable of such villainy."

The deputation, elderly men for the most part, looked greatly disturbed at the turn the conference had taken. One of them replied to North's appeal.

"None on us thinks you did it with your own hand, Matthew," he said gravely. "But you have talked rough agin the young master, and there's many a wild spirit among us that would need little urging to do the devil's work."

"Well, then," exclaimed North, rendered furious by these signs of defection among his own followers, "I did talk rough, as you call it. I did say that the heartless tyrants who own us workers, body and soul, grind us down, degrade us, keep us poor and ignorant, drive our sons into crime and our daughters to shame, take the crust from the mouths of our babes to support them in their selfish and indolent luxury—I did say such men deserved death. I did say it is just before God to defend ourselves with the only power left to us—the strength of our right arms. And I say it again, but"—he struggled to recover his composure as he faced the mine owner—"I lifted no hand against you."

"The distinction is a fine one," responded Monckton imperturbably. "You preached murder, but you shrank from committing it yourself."

North ground his teeth. "Take care," he said in a low, menacing voice. "Do not tempt me to do the thing I am guiltless of now."

"Come, Matthew, lad," interposed one of the men in a soothing tone. "We didn't come here to quarrel. We've had wrongs, but I think the master sees them now himself and means to do the fair thing."

North sank back in his chair as if exhausted by his own outbreak.

"I do," said Monckton seriously. "As I have told you, that was my purpose in calling this conference. I am prepared to do you full justice. Mr. Joyce"—turning to that worthy, who still maintained his post behind the proprietor's chair—"these gentlemen put into your hands, I believe, a statement of grievances at the beginning of the strike. Will you produce it?"

With a protesting face, but ready obedience, the overseer placed a paper on the desk before the mine owner. Monckton's cheek flushed, and he bit his lip as he read it.

"I regret that zeal for my interests," he said, "should have led Mr. Joyce to reject conditions as just as these. But the blame is wholly mine, and I do not seek to excuse myself. Gentlemen," he added, rising, "you may begin work tomorrow morning on the terms here set forth."

Something like a muffled cheer broke from the deputation, drowning Joyce's despairing groan and North's muttered oath. With beaming faces the men tramped heavily out of the room. But North, who went last, turned at the door, and in the momentary glance of his bloodshot eye there were undiminished hatred and dark menace for the enemy whose humiliation he had come to enjoy, but whose calm strength had withstood his bitterest attack.

When the miners were gone, Joyce, who was utterly overwhelmed and appalled by the wonderful change in his employer, began a confused jumble of protest and excuse. But the young man, laying his hand kindly on his shoulder, said:

"We have some lessons to learn, my friend. We will learn them together."

CHAPTER XIII.

DOWN WITH THE TYRANT!

On the following morning as the young proprietor sat in his library, alone and in gloomy meditation, Joyce burst in upon him in a tremendous state of agitation.

"These fellows are at it again," he exclaimed breathlessly.

The face which his employer lifted from his hand was pale and worn. He passed his hand across his eyes as if striving to brush away some anxious thought.

"What did you say?" he asked.

"There is more trouble among the men," was the reply. "That ill conditioned demagogue is of course at the head of it."

"But we acceded to their demands without reservation. I gave them all they asked for."

"That is true, sir," responded Joyce, "but their appetite has grown with eating. A part of them, the more respectable men, are willing to go to work, but it appears that North made a violent speech in the village last night, counseling new demands and a continuance of the strike. The upshot of it is that about half of them, including all the roughs, idlers and turbulent rascals, are banded together under North's leadership and bent on mischief."

Monckton's face darkened as he listened. "I half expected it," he said thoughtfully. "His object is not to benefit his followers, but to humiliate me."

"You were surprisingly patient with his insolence yesterday, sir," observed Joyce. "I wondered that you did not discharge him on the spot and send him away."

"Easier said than done," replied Monckton, with a slight smile. "With his rabble at his heels we have no power to enforce obedience. He is stronger than I am and can defy me with impunity."

"If you had permitted me to send for assistance"— began the overseer.

"No," sharply interrupted the young proprietor, "I will have no such assistance. I will face them single handed and stand or fall alone."

"You have had a warning of what they are capable of," responded Joyce, glancing at the red mark upon his employer's temple.

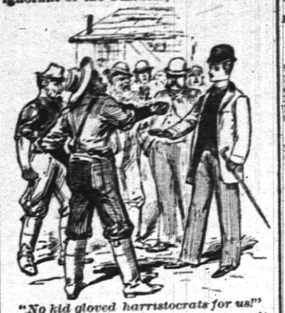
Monckton shrugged his shoulders indifferently. "What are their new demands?" he asked.

Joyce took from his pocket a folded paper covered with Matthew North's bold writing. Monckton's lip curled as he glanced over it.

"A transparent and clumsy device," he muttered. "He knew perfectly well that I could not grant a single one of these conditions and retain an atom of self respect."

"You observe they demand my immediate dismissal, sir," said Joyce, puffing with indignation.

"And," added Monckton, consulting the paper, "as I have confessed myself ignorant of the business, I am to be assisted in the management by a committee selected by the miners from among their number." He threw the paper on the table. "Well, they cannot have their committee."



"No kid gloved harristocrats for us!"

"Nor my dismissal," threw in Joyce.

"No, for I am alone responsible for your mistakes, and I need your help."

"Thank you, sir," returned Joyce, ignoring the first part of the sentence.

"Now," said Monckton, arising, "we will go down to the works and give them their answer in person."

Joyce held up his hands in horror. "What, right in the nest of them? Good heavens, sir, they would tear us to pieces!"

"Hardly that," replied Monckton grimly. "We must show them we are not afraid of them. At the same time," he said, glancing at the overseer's face, which had grown pale with alarm, "if you do not wish to risk it, I will go alone."

But obstinacy supplied the deficiency in Joyce's courage. Besides he had suddenly acquired a wonderful respect for his young employer, and he would have followed him anywhere now.

"I will go with you," he returned stoutly, buttoning his coat across his plump person with an air of great resolution.

Half an hour later Monckton and his overseer stood at the mouth of the main shaft, surrounded by a crowd of miners. Some of these were of the well disposed party, but by far the larger proportion belonged to the malcontent faction, and as the young proprietor ran his eye over their frowning faces he drew a deep breath and nerved himself for the coming struggle.

"What is this I hear?" he said in a sharp, authoritative tone, strangely at variance with his slender figure and almost effeminately handsome features. "I am told you refuse to resume work on your own terms."

"Just so, mister," replied one of the most ignorant and vicious of North's adherents, with an insolent grin. "We reckons to run these here works on our own terms. Matthew knows. Where's Matthew? Let him speak up for us."

"No kid glove harristocrats for us!"

"Down with millionaire tyrants! Down with coal barons and bondholders!"

"Matthew! Matthew North! Where's Matthew North!"

Amid the tumult of threatening cries, clinched fists and bludgeons shaken in the air, and the surging to and fro of the excited mob, ready primed for desperate deeds and needing but a hint to set them on, Monckton stood pale and composed, his brows drawn sternly together and his lips compressed. Behind him hovered Joyce, his ruddy cheek blanched to a dirty ash color, mumbling sugared professions of peace and good will, mingled with dire menaces of the law.

GOV. WAITE RATTLED

Sorry Now He Ordered Out the Troops.

Says He Will Probably Submit the Differences to the Courts—Talk of Inquiring Into His Sanity—Instructions to Gen. McCook—To Take No Orders Except From the President.

DENVER, March 17.—Last evening Gov. Waite announced that the proposition to submit to the supreme court the question of the rightful claimants to the offices of commissioners would probably be accepted by him, but he wanted a little more time to think over this.

The town had excitement enough, however, during the day in quaking over the narrow escape of the day before. When the local papers appeared with pages relating to the day's excitement, the people shuddered to think how close an escape the crowds had had. "Soapy" Smith, the well known sport, with five others, had gone into the tower of the city hall with dynamite cartridges, and they would have undoubtedly sent the fearful explosives into the militia had a single shot been fired. Deputy sheriffs, desperate characters, occupied points of vantage prepared to pick off the gunners with Winchester's, if need be.

Early in the morning crowds gathered about the city hall, ready to risk all this in order to see the fun. But the day passed and, when in the afternoon the police were sent out on regular duties, the crowds thinned out. Yet at dark many still lingered, hoping that something sensational would occur. The militia is ready to assemble at a moment's notice. Their conduct on the street has received much praise. Though the mighty crowds pushed and jostled them, scoffed at them and occasionally poked a soldier in the ribs, they stood throughout without making any bad breaks. The Fort Logan troops spent a rather dreary night at the Union depot. They spread their blankets on the hard platforms and managed to get some comfort out of the odd circumstance. In the afternoon Lieut. Young had found a most desirable camping place in the vacant Battle of Gettysburg building on Champ street and thither the troops were marched, causing a ripple of excitement on the streets in passing.

"The troops will remain," said Gen. McCook, "until all signs of trouble are ended. We shall keep the peace, prevent bloodshed and preserve the federal property from attack. The men have rations for eleven days. Meanwhile we shall await instructions from Washington."

Gov. Waite regrets having called out the troops. He stated to Gen. McCook, in the conference, that a man had told him that the general had intimated that he was ready to order out the regulars when the governor should call upon him for that purpose. Gen. McCook denied this. He was fully shown his position, and after a long talk he satisfied the governor that he had been deceived.

The official correspondence between the governor and Gen. McCook, about which there has been considerable speculation is as follows, Gov. Waite's first message reading:

"I have called out the militia in Denver (National guard) to enforce the laws of the state. I found an organized opposition by the city police, detective force and the sheriff's officers. I can enforce the laws, but not without great bloodshed. I call upon you as governor of the state to assist me in preserving order and in preventing bloodshed."

To this Gen. McCook replied:

"In pursuance of your demand, this moment received, I have ordered the troops from Fort Logan to come at once to the city for the sole purpose of preserving the peace. The troops upon arrival will be directed to act with great discretion and I will see that the laws of the land are not violated. I would recommend that an order issue that the National guard be returned to their armory."

To this the governor replied:

"Yours, by your aide de campe, received. I respectfully decline to order the National guard, now endeavoring to enforce the laws of the state, to their armory, but will confer with you or Col. Miriam, whoever shall be in command, when the troops arrive."

During the morning the governor issued the following letter, addressed to Gen. McCook:

"Yesterday at about 5 p. m., on informal notice that you had announced you would put seven companies of the United States troops in Denver at my call, I inferred that your object was to assist the state in the enforcement of the laws, as you were present in Denver and knew that the city companies of the National guard had been called out by me as commander-in-chief and were at that time on duty in the streets near the city hall. I therefore requested that you move the United States troops to this city, but I was careful to specify in my letter that the object of the call for the United States troops was that they might assist state troops in the execution of the laws and in preventing bloodshed. In conversation with you this morning at your office I find that in your opinion you have no such right. I therefore most respectfully withdraw my request for United States troops."

Gen. McCook was immediately furnished with a copy of the letter. The general emphatically declared that some of the statements therein were in error. He states that he had no such conversation with the governor as indicated. The general merely reiterated to his excellency that he could take no further action without orders from the president.

Sheriff Burchinell telegraphed the following to Daniel S. Lamont, secretary of war, at Washington:

"I am quite able to maintain peace here, unless the militia of the state are used against me. Nobody but the governor is seeking to disturb the peace, and he is acting in contempt of the district court of this county."

During the afternoon a number of prominent men assembled to consider the advisability of proceeding against the governor on the question of his sanity.

A committee was appointed to call upon Gen. McCook and find out what he proposed to do, and another committee will look up the lunacy laws. The question of lunacy is sprung solely for the purpose of preventing the governor from proceeding with the militia without the advice of anyone. It is an extreme action only to be attempted as a last resort. Hon. Caldwell Yeaman was at the head of this matter.

During the day all sorts of rumors were current and the people were in a constant state of expectation. From every city where a militia company is organized came the report that companies had assembled awaiting orders from the governor. The first indication that the cabinet at Washington had met to consider the trouble was received at the United Press and quickly thrown out upon the streets by extra editions.

GEN. M'COOK'S INSTRUCTIONS.

He Can Act at Denver Under Orders from the President Only.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Instructions have been telegraphed to Gen. McCook at Denver, Col., by order of President Cleveland. Secretary Lamont states they were in substance as follows:

"Gen. McCook was only authorized to use the troops for the protection of government, unless the representation was made to him by the governor of the state that the state authorities are unable to suppress the insurrection."

This is in effect an approval of Gen. McCook's action in ordering troops from Fort Logan to Denver, but not to the extent of giving him discretion to preserve the peace, or of rendering assistance to the state militia in enforcing state laws. Neither is the general to withdraw his troops at the command of the governor, nor is he to take any directions at all from the governor, who can expect nothing from the United States forces until he has confessed his inability to uphold the law, and at that moment Gen. McCook, under the constitution, and as the representative of the president, will preserve order under military regulations.

Gen. Schofield, commanding the army, says it is not possible for Gen. McCook to take orders from Gov. Waite or any other person than the president or the president's direct military subordinates. It is impossible to delegate any military authority to a civil officer and, therefore, Gen. McCook continues supreme so far as United States forces are concerned, and responsible to the president alone.

Gen. McCook's ability to go safely through the present complication involving, as it does, so many delicate points, is declared at the war department to be second to that of no officer in the service, and the fullest confidence is expressed that he will commit no indiscretion, no matter how great the provocation.

TRAMPS AND HOBOES.

The "Industrial Army's" Grotesque Departure from Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 17.—At a meeting of the city council, board of supervisors and officers of the associated charities the movements of the "Industrial Army" to march to Washington was denounced as revolutionary and the police authorities of the county were asked to disperse every organization of the kind. Many of the recruits, learning the result of the meeting, abandoned the barracks and marched out of the city. The authorities are watching them closely and will arrest every man within the county limits under the vagrant act.

About 300 men walked out of town with no organization and under no leadership. The leaders have looted the treasury and the main body is without funds or rations.

The march of the so-called army was grotesque in the extreme. The mob was made up of tramps and hoboes, whose only anxiety was to evade the police. A large majority were without blankets or provisions and before they had reached Alhambra, five miles from Los Angeles, many of them dropped out and were making tracks for the railroad in hopes of boarding trains.

THAT SECRET MARRIAGE

Will It Effect Miss Pollard's Suit?

Evidence That Col. Breckinridge Promised to Marry Her Before the Date of the Secret Wedding—The Plaintiff's Life's Romance Told By Herself on the Witness Stand.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The announcement of the filing yesterday in New York of a certificate of marriage of William C. P. Breckinridge and Louise H. S. Wing, the ceremony having been performed by Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton at his residence in New York on April 29, 1893, caused somewhat of a commotion among the lawyers for the plaintiff, although it had been openly hinted that the colonel was secretly married to Mrs. Wing some time before the public wedding and that this was to be sprung by the defendant's counsel at the proper time. There is some discussion now as to the effect of these disclosures on Miss Pollard's suit. The laws of the District of Columbia do not recognize as grounds for damages a contract of marriage unless both of the contracting parties are free from marital ties at the time the engagement is made, no matter if one is married and the other ignorant of the fact. Miss Pollard has produced several witnesses who testified to having heard Col. Breckinridge admit of his engagement to the plaintiff, but all except one, Mrs. Blackburn, stated that these admissions were made at dates after Col. Breckinridge was married to his present wife. It appears that when Col. Breckinridge declared to Chief of Police Moore, May 13, 1893, his purpose to marry Miss Pollard, he had been a married man two weeks. That would render this declaration void. But Mrs. Blackburn's testimony was that Col. Breckinridge made the same declaration about Miss Pollard to her, in the girl's presence, on Good Friday (March 31), 1893. This declaration would still be binding, and with all the testimony so far produced, is undoubtedly the strongest point in the plaintiff's case.

While it was the general belief that she would not be able to stand the ordeal of the witness stand, Madeline Pollard told the story of her life to a court room full of men. She was on the witness stand from early morning until adjournment and the tale she told was a romance. She was somewhat theatrical, very plaintive and confiding, and gave her testimony without hesitation. Her brightness, her keen wit and her appreciation of every question were particularly noticeable. For such a sensational case, her testimony was free from vulgar and suggestive details. Once when she was asked to tell of a conversation with Col. Breckinridge about her coming confinement, she burst out, half weepingly, with a protest against being made to say such things and before so many men and the question was withdrawn. Cold type cannot depict the rising and falling of her plaintive voice; the tone of her demure little acknowledgements about her early life, and the sharp yet courteous replies to inquiries of the defendants' attorney, Major Butterworth. She proved the most interesting witness of the now noted trial and every word she uttered was listened to with attention. She told how she had lived as a little girl; now James Rodes, an uncouth old man, had made a contract with her to pay for her education on condition that she would pay him back or marry him; how Col. Breckinridge came into her life; how she passed for nine years as a pure, innocent girl; of the alleged proposal of marriage after the death of Mrs. Breckinridge, and of what followed the defendants marriage to Mrs. Wing. Her cross examination was in progress when the court adjourned until Monday.

Col. Breckinridge was told by a United Press reporter that the certificate of the New York marriage had been filed with the bureau of vital statistics and asked if he would say something about it.

"No, I haven't anything to say," he said. "It will all come out later. I must not talk of these things now—you will have to wait until I go on the stand, then you'll hear the whole story. No, I really can't say anything about it."

Mr. Stoll, of Lexington, one of Col. Breckinridge's counsel, said laughingly, patting Col. Breckinridge on the back:

"Oh, you just wait until we get this old fellow on the stand and then you'll know the truth. But we're keeping quiet just now."

UNEASINESS OVER MR. WILSON.

He Telegraphs That He is Strengthening Slowly, But is Still in Bed.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The absence of definite information from Mr. W. L. Wilson, the chairman of the house ways and means committee, who went to Mexico a month ago to recover his health, has caused uneasiness to his friends. Mr. Isidor Straus telegraphed to Guadalajara asking if Mr. Wilson had left that place, and reply was received from Mr. Wilson as follows:

"Strengthening slowly; still in bed."

Jersey City Officials Indicted.

JERSEY CITY, March 17.—It is reported that the grand jury has indicted the street and water board on the charges made by Mayor Wanser two months ago and set aside by Governor Werts. The indictments will be handed up on Monday.

WARNED BY THE JUDGE.

Court Officers Prevent Trouble at Phillipsburg Last Night.

EASTON, Pa., March 17.—Trouble was averted at the Standard Silk mill in Phillipsburg, N. J., last evening by the presence of Judge Morrow, of Belvidere, and Prosecuting Attorney Stryker, of Washington, N. J., who appeared at the mill just before it shut down for the day. Judge Morrow addressed the crowd, numbering some 3,000 people, and explained to them the riot law. He advised them to disperse and not molest the employes when they came from the mill, as they had heretofore, for if they did arrests would follow and he would commit the offenders at once to prison.

There were some scenes of disorder, but no violence was offered to any of the workingmen and women when they emerged from the mill, but they were all escorted to their houses by policemen and deputy sheriffs. Deputy Sheriff Keller, who was arrested Thursday night by a policeman for discharging his revolver at the hooting crowd, after he had been hit in the face with a stone, was discharged by Mayor Davis, who reprimanded the policeman for making the arrest.

Sutherland Still Absent.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 17.—Officers are diligently searching for Police Justice Sutherland, the convicted Gravesender who failed to appear in court yesterday to receive sentence, and it is believed that he will not be on hand Monday unless detectives succeed in arresting him, which is unlikely. There is a good deal of talk about the other indicted Gravesend men being surrendered by their bondsmen. The total number indicted are Justice of the Peace R. V. Newton, for conspiracy; Constable Jamieson, for perjury, to be tried Monday; 18 election inspectors on various charges of neglect of duty; John Murphy, conspiracy; Justices of the Peace Stryker and Gaddine, conspiracy.

Rescue Work at the Gaylord Mine.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 17.—The work of rescue at the Gaylord mine is still attended with great danger. The fourth body found, that of Richard W. Davis, one of the pioneers, like those of the other three bodies found, was horribly mutilated. When discovered he lay face downward with hands and arms thrown out before him, indicating that he had been struck down while running. The fifth body was recovered late last night.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 17.—The state board of health has passed resolutions to the effect that all tramps in the state should be vaccinated.

CANDIDATE BANGS NOT THERE.

Fatima's Appearance Before the Palisade Club a Political Trick.

YONKERS, N. Y., March 17.—A prominent member of the Palisade Boat club of this place authorizes the following in regard to the party of club members who had an after dinner at Clark's restaurant on Twent-third street, New York, Thursday, at which Fatima, the Midway Plaisance dancer, appeared:

"It is only fair to the members of the Palisade club to say that the entertainment on Thursday evening at Clark's restaurant was without the authorization or knowledge of the club."

Rumor has it that a trap was laid to involve a popular candidate who is running for mayor of this town. Friends of John Kendrick Bangs, who has been charged with being present, deny that he was there. The Palisade Boat club is the swell organization of the lower Hudson. A number of its members and enough of their friends to make a party of 40 went to New York Thursday evening and, after dinner at N. Clark's restaurant, had all the doors of the room locked and the danse du ventre performed by Fatima. The dance was first given in the costume Fatima wore when the New York police stopped her performance at the Grand Central Palace. The dancer then appeared in the gauzy draperies which she wore at the World's fair before the lady managers interfered. Lastly she appeared with still less drapery. The matter is causing much talk in town.

Slot Machines Must Go.

NEW YORK, March 17.—Superintendent Byrnes has sent out a general order to the different stations, notifying the captains that the nickel-in-the-slot business which is being carried on in saloons and barber shops must be stopped at once. As soon as the order was received the captain of each precinct notified the slot machine people that the business must be stopped or their places would be raided as gambling houses.

GET STRONG---'TIS SPRING.

Paine's Celery Compound the Remedy That Makes People Well.

March, is, in fact, the first month in the year.

January stands first in the calendar only for convenience in business.

Now is the time to get well!

Through the long winter most men and women do not taste fresh air nor drink in sunlight oftener than once a week or once a fortnight.

It is no wonder that so many hard-working men and women approach spring with a feeling of weakness and debility and a languor of mind they cannot shake off without the assistance of a blood purifier and a true food for the nerves and brain.

Beyond a doubt the best spring medicine is Paine's celery compound; with its use diseases loosen their hold in the spring.

These are the favorable months for attacking rheumatism, lumbago, nervous diseases and weaknesses of the digestive organs—and Paine's celery compound cures them where everything else fails.

The most eminent professor, and a man of tremendous experience, Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., discovered the formula for Paine's celery compound in the famous labratory connected with the Dartmouth medical school. It is the remarkable outcome of the century's study of blood and nerves, and their close dependence upon each other for health.

But remember the time-worn text: "Spring comes but once a year." Take advantage of the favorable season. Get well and strong and free from the ailments that come from poor blood and worn-out nerves. Changes in the blood and nervous tissues take place very rapidly at this time. In March and April the blood is most capable of throwing off its impurities.

Purify the blood and invigorate the nervous system with Paine's celery compound. Hard times and overwork are best met with Paine's celery compound.

Indigestion yields to a reasonable care in taking Paine's celery compound. Liver and kidney troubles will not persist when only pure blood flows through these important organs; the cure of disease of the stomach and nerves by Paine's celery compound starts at the very cause of the trouble; thin, watery blood and jangled, shaky nerves.

Thousands of overwork business men and hosts of plain, hard-working people are today strong and happy whose lives were full of wretchedness and weakness before trying Paine's celery compound.

Disorders of the liver, stomach and kidneys can now be thoroughly driven out of the system by Paine's celery compound, the remedy that makes people well.

At the first indication of nervous weakness and a "run down" condition of the system, tone up the stomach with Paine's celery compound, regulate the nervous system and nourish the body by the great invigorator.

Try it and be convinced.

One of the best known young men of Holyoke, Mass., Mr. J. E. Moyett, whose likeness is given above, writes frankly:

"I have taken Paine's celery compound and found it to be the best medicine that I have ever taken. I felt weak and run down and could not eat anything in the morning, also had a vomiting spell every morning after getting up. I took part of two bottles of Paine's celery compound and feel better than I have for a year. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one. My wife is taking it now for weakness an nervousness and it helps her very much. The druegist where we trade tells my wife that Paine's celery compound outsells any other medicine that they keep.

That is the story from one end of the country to the other; because Paine's celery compound cures.

IRISH AND AMERICAN.

St. Patrick's Day and the Spirit In Which It Is Observed.

St. Patrick's day is about the only foreign national holiday that is generally observed in this country, and looking at it in almost any way it is really an Irish-American institution. It will be remembered by the student of history that the potato which was discovered in America was developed until it achieved the prestige of perfection in the Emerald Isle, thus making the potato an Irish-American or American-Irish institution, if you will.

Some 50 years ago the farmer who farmed in Morris county, N. J., and fought the earth for the benefit of his bank account and table, made it a point to plant his potatoes on the 17th of March. It seems almost incredible in this age of climate that potatoes could ever have been set out on St. Patrick's day unless set out before a horse. Yet this was done, and the first potatoes from that planting were always ready for the farmer's table on the ever glorious Fourth of July. It will thus be clearer than ever to the patriotic mind that the potato is so Irish-American that it is difficult to tell just where the Irish begins and the American terminates.

St. Patrick's day is as dear to the Irishman as the Fourth of July is to the American, for, upon this day of days in the history of Ireland, the Irishman, in being an American citizen, feels that he is both an Irishman and an American, and it is a matter of fact that both the Irish and American flags are as conspicuous in the famous processions as are the well known tunes of "Marching Through Georgia" and the "Wearing of the Green."

It is upon St. Patrick's day in the morning that he takes out the high hat that his great-grandfather's great-grandfather wore and brushes it with his sleeve and dances a breakdown of joy in the bosom of his family while he pictures in his mind the approaching hilarity.

It is often wondered how it is that an Irishman can dance so long without breaking down. We might answer that the reason he doesn't break down is that he is dancing a breakdown, and if he should break down it might only serve to break him up, but we will not give that answer to the question.

But we will say that St. Patrick's day is a great institution, and that its parade or cavalcade is one which the representatives of all other nations turn out to see and enjoy. The Russian may be seen contentedly munching on a wax candle, or, if the times are hard, on an ordinary tallow dip, on the corner of Canal street and Broadway, while he watches the men that keep England in an Irish stew skip airily along. The Italian who has generously given himself a half holiday is on hand in his Sunday earrings, and he is full of the procession to such an extent that his mind is not at home in the chestnut roaster, nor does he caper in spirit with the red coated monkey who is at home asleep upon the hand organ or grinding "Tim Finnegan's Wake" upon the same in honor of the day that is being celebrated.

It is the day upon which the Italian musician might make money if he would only have the business head to go forth and discourse Hibernian melodies upon the harp, inasmuch as Ireland and Italy stand together as firmly on the harp as do the famous governors of North and South Carolina upon something totally different and alien to and from this famous string instrument of poetry and song. On other things they do not so well agree. No Irishman ever had the same respect for macaroni and olives that the Italian has, and no Italian ever had such a leaning toward the corned beef and potato habits that the Irishman knows. But they are one when it comes to the harp, which is the connecting link of sympathy between the Irish dancer and the Tuscan player.

When the Irishman starts out on his St. Patrick's day parade, he is as light hearted and happy as a small boy starting homeward from school to begin a three months' vacation, and it is fair to assume that he is then in too good nature a frame of mind to be offended with the man who might step on the caudal terminus of his coat, and even as he capers lightly along he is in spirit at the Donnybrook or some other fair. And as he is marching all over the world we might go so far as to declare, if permitted to burst into song, that—

From Dan to Beersheba,
From China to Milford,
From Ghent to Hohokus,
From Cairo to Guilford,

From Dublin to Yonkers,
From Calais to Cortland,
From Rome to Coxsackie,
From Richmond to Portland,

From Hartford to Denver,
From Camden to Lansing,
Beneath the green banner
The Irishman's prancing.

And he is prancing along with a deep seated, heartfelt delight that makes him feel like a millionaire both in spirit and in pocket. Whether he is on a bounding billowy palfrey or upon his humble feet, the sensations of wealth and independence are the same. It is his day, and as he and his countrymen are celebrating all over the world it is the day upon which, figuratively speaking, they own the earth. And when he returns to his home at night, whether it is a brownstone front or a villa upon the rocks, he doesn't feel tired, but, on the contrary, feels just properly limbered up for a dance and to let the world know that he has no use for a king or a queen, except in a game of forty-fives. And when the evening is over he hangs up his blackthorn stick and his hat, and they remain hung up until the 17th of March next year. And then on St. Patrick's day in the midnight—

He is dreaming of Killarney,
And he wanders round in Cork,
And he sees the stone of Blarney
In the bosom of New York,
And in all his wildest snorings,
Kicking swiftly as he can,
He is with his boot heels scoring
Some infernal Englishman.

TO STAND BY HETFIELD.

THAT IS CONGRESSMAN DUNN'S ULTIMATUM.

Discussing Plainfield's Post-Office Question, He Says He Is Under No Obligation to Anyone, and Has Discharged His Duty to Former Orator Martine—Says Senator Smith Advised Him to Appoint Hetfield.

(Washington Special to Trenton True American.)

The recommendation of John M. Hetfield to be postmaster at Plainfield, which was made recently by Representative Dunn, has occasioned considerable disturbance in that town. It was expected that a delegation would be here today in the interest of R. M. Stover, but it did not put in an appearance. Mr. Dunn talks in his usual vigorous way about the matter. To a correspondent today he said:

"Mr. Hetfield is recommended to me as a business man and as a Democrat by men who express, in my judgment, the true interests of the Democratic party. Among them is Judge William A. Coddington, who came down here personally to endorse the appointment to the Postmaster-General and gave his word of honor that the office would be administered for the good of the people and the Democratic party. I prefer to take my inspiration, after a careful review of the field, from the fresh and young Democracy of Plainfield rather than from those who repel Democrats from the Democratic camp.

"I am under no personal obligation"—continued Mr. Dunn—"to any one man in Plainfield more than another. What I wanted was to find a good business Democrat. I believe I have got him and I propose to stand by him. Mr. Martine claimed the right to name the postmaster, and insisted upon Mr. Stover and nobody else. I offered the postmastership to Mr. Martine himself, but he refused it with indignation. If there was any obligation between Mr. Martine and myself, by which I should recognize him, that obligation was discharged when I offered the position to him. He has been looking for a political office, and this would fit him locally, if he wanted recognition such as he has the right, from his standpoint, to claim at my hands. Having discharged that obligation, he had no right to dictate that I should appoint those whom I had determined in my own mind from experience, knowledge and inquiry, to be unfit for the place and who would not give satisfaction to the people.

"This is my position,"—concluded Mr. Dunn—"and I care not how much they may threaten. I can afford to have these people threaten me; I can afford to have them defeat me, if they have the power, but I cannot afford to be run by any one man when I was elected by the people to perform the functions of my office. I propose to be the Congressman from my district. I do n't propose that Mr. Martine or any one else shall be the Congressman when I have determined what course I shall pursue. I shall act for myself and abide the consequences. I was tired of all the agitation, and so when Judge Coddington came to Washington with his representations, we went and saw Senator Smith. Mr. McPherson was absent. Upon his statement to Senator Smith, the latter advised me that the appointment of Mr. Hetfield was the best thing that I could do. That coincided with my views, and I propose to stand by my action to the last."

Ungrateful Republicans.

(From The Hunterdon Gazette.)

We see by The Constitutionalist, published at Plainfield, N. J., that at a recent meeting of the Council of that city, a resolution, asking for an appropriation of $100 to assist in defraying the expenses of Winfield Scott Post, G. A. R., on Memorial Day, was absolutely voted down. Such an ungrateful, unpatriotic, and we may say, small-soul act as that, is only becoming such places as Charleston, South Carolina, where no better treatment of our brave veterans could be expected. If the members of Plainfield Council, be they Republicans or Democrats, can derive any consolation from such a penurious and contemptible act, they are welcome to it; as for us, we want none of it. We had no idea that there existed a single town or city in the State of New Jersey that would be so ungrateful to our veteran soldiers as to refuse them assistance in commemorating and decorating the graves of the heroic dead. But we were mistaken.

The Eick Organ Recital.

As already announced in these columns, an inaugural organ recital, by Clarence L. Eick, will take place in the Congregational Church, Bound Brook, Wednesday evening, March 21.

The recital is in celebration of the finishing of the new organ just completed in the church, by Messrs. Muller & Abel, and will be a rare treat to those attending. William B. Martin, the celebrated baritone, will favor lovers of good music with several selections.

Mr. Eick as an organist has few equals, and his rendition of the "Black Prophet", which will be a feature of the evening, was enthusiastically received at an entertainment of like character given in Elizabeth a few weeks ago.

More Go to Gaze than Go to Pray.

New developments are expected in the Westfield Grace Church matter Easter Monday, the time for electing a vestry. The Newark News states that there are not enough men in Pastor Jennings's following to form a vestry board. For the past few Sundays a new source of annoyance for Mr. Jennings has arisen. During service people passing by go over to the church door and peep in to see the extent of the minister's congregation. It often happens that there are more persons in the vestibule waiting for their turn to look inside through the church door than there are in the congregation. Three of Mr. Jennings's congregation attend the services regularly; the other two are not always present.

Poked a Pistol at Him.

While Andrew J. Gavett was resting at his home last evening he was called to the door by the ringing of the bell, and was confronted by a cowboy who drew a revolver and threatened to shoot. The person was invited in and Mr. Gavett learned that it was all a joke, as the intruder was a friend in disguise.

SMALL BUT EFFECTIVE,

Was the little Monitor that met the Merrimac at Hampton Roads. So too are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, effective in conquering the enemy—disease. When you take a pill it's an important point to have them small—provided they have equal strength and efficacy. You find what you want in these little liver pills of Dr. Pierce. They're put up in a better way, and they act in a better way, than the huge old-fashioned pills. What you want when you're "all out of sorts"—grumpy, thick-headed and take a gloomy view of life, is these Pellets to clear up your system and start your liver into healthful action. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels, are prevented, relieved, and cured. Put up in sealed glass vials, and always fresh and reliable.

JAMES WILLIAM CRAIG, ESQ., of Georgetown, Ky., says: "My wife thinks your little 'Pellets' are the greatest pills out."

A Parliamentary Drill in Plainfield.

"Help keep good order and turn time to the best account by being prompt to make and second motions and brief and pointed in debate."

ON TRIAL FOR SNORING.

City Judge Coddington Holds Mock Court in a Sunday-School.

Court in the Sunday-school room of Trinity Reformed Church was well attended last night. The mock trial was as amusing and interesting as outside talent and the work of the young people of the Christian Endeavor society could make it.

The judge of the evening was City Judge William Coddington. He seemed to be well acquainted with the duties of the office, and his rulings were as impartial as the testimony would allow. The prosecution for the State, Charles J. McNabb, was assisted by E. E. Anthony and Robert Chamberlain, as counsel for the defendant, Frank Manchester. It was set been "guilty of disturbing the peace of the city by loud and continued snoring".

After a long "legal" delay Sheriff Frank Wyckoff finally succeeded in obtaining a jury consisting of Thomas E. Currin, Bertolette Archer, Joseph Runyon, John H. VanWagner, Jr., J. P. Laire, Julius Williams, Howard Ross, Harry Marshall, C. Bunnell Wilson, J. Owen Smith, Miss Nellie Archer, Miss Helen Bogart. The oddly constituted jury under which the jurors were summoned added much to the amusement of the audience.

Prosecutor McNabb divided the general charge of snoring into four specific charges. Loud disturbance was caused, neighbors were not able to sleep, residents of South Plainfield often confused the sound with the North Plainfield fire gong, brakemen on trains mistook it for engineers "on brakes" signals and earthquake effects were produced in distant towns.

The defense had three counter-statements: The prisoner was unable to snore, being afflicted with rheumatism, consumption and asthma; the noise referred to in the complaint was the comments of disappointed office-seekers on learning of Mr. Hetfield's success; the earthquake felt in New Brunswick was caused by the sudden drop in Somerville and Bound Brook real estate when Plainfield's water-works were put in.

Miss Fannie Madison, the complainant, and Miss Cora Dunlap, Jesse Mettler, Frank P. Storr and William Crawford testified for the State. On the other side the defendant was aided by the evidence of Edgar Sheppard, Chauncey Colthar and Miss Nellie Crawford. The witnesses were "sworn" to tell as little of the truth as they knew, and their testimony was full of jokes on local incidents.

The summing up on both sides was brief and to the point. The jury was charged to sift the evidence impartially and retired. They returned with a verdict of guilty and asked that the full penalty of the law be imposed. Judge Coddington thought one month of imprisonment in State's Prison the proper punishment, but suspended sentence after a pathetic discourse had been made by Manchester's counsel.

The court officials, the jury, the prisoner and the public then joined in the enjoyment of refreshments before the meeting was adjourned. The Committee of Arrangements appointed by the Y. P. S. C. E. were the Misses E. C. Benedict, Ella Gardiner, Carrie Mehl, Emma Gillem and Viola Huff.

The profits to the Endeavor treasury were $22.

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

A new tonsorial artist is coming among us. Next!

Miss Annie Staats, of Easton, is visiting her uncle, Postmaster Staats.

Tomorrow morning Rev. Mr. Martine will preach a temperance sermon.

Harry Illsley, of Scotch Plains, paid Cornelius Taylor a friendly visit yesterday.

Mrs. E. H. Holmes, of Plainfield, was entertained by friends in Dunellen yesterday.

George Liable is still in Dunellen, and not in the South as reported by one of the Plainfield papers.

Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the Baptist Church, New Market, will deliver an address in Clinton tomorrow evening.

Mrs. Vail, widow of the late E. B. Vail, will sell, Wednesday, March 28, the property, both real and personal, of her late husband.

As an entertainer John Tingley is one of the best. There is seldom a time when one cannot see a crowd around him, listening to his jokes.

Both the Dunellen and New Market J. O. U. A. M.'s are in a flourishing condition and progressing rapidly. New members are frequently taken in.

A meeting will be held, the evening of March 20, at 8, in the Whittier School, to elect a school trustee and transact other business of educational importance.

There will be no meeting of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Presbyterian Church tomorrow evening, on account of the union meeting of all the churches in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, New Market.

Michael Gallagher, who was tried for stealing coal, has not paid his fine yet, and it is thought he will carry the case to New Brunswick. Gallagher is said to have made a remark that he would spend $500 rather than get defeated.

Joseph Maier wishes corrected the statement in regard to the coal pickers trial being held in his hotel. It was not held at his hotel but at Squire Huff's office. He says if it had been held at his hall all conveniences would have been found in the way of plenty of chairs and a warm and comfortable room.

The Knights of the Pin visited Dunellen last evening, and rolled a game with the home team on Taylor's alleys. The contest was an exciting one, although the visitors walked away with the plum. The score:

A large representation of Epworth Leaguers from Westfield, Scotch Plains, Washingtonville, Monroe Avenue Chapel and Vincent Chapel, was entertained by the Epworth League of Grace M. E. Church of North Plainfield, last evening, in a most delightful manner.

Sociability reigned supreme, and all present enjoyed the event to the fullest extent.

The church was filled to overflowing with the young people and their friends.

Mrs. A. A. Taft deserves much credit for the training of the little ones in the "Cherubic Infantry", and they carried their parts exceptionally well.

THE DESERTED VILLAGE.

A Young Woman's Fanciful Description of a Retreat Familiar to Residents of Plainfield.

Feltville, the "Deserted Village", which is situated over the mountain back of Scotch Plains, has been the subject of innumerable sketches in prose and rhyme, since its picturesque scenery and desolate appearance attracted attention many years ago. During the past few years a number of Newarkers, among them Judge Depue of the Supreme Court, have established summer homes in Feltville, and the title of "Deserted Village" has been dropped for that of Glenside Park, although it will probably always be remembered by its former title by residents of Plainfield.

The following fanciful sketch of the village has been written by a young woman who prefers to remain incognito:

"We came upon it suddenly, a tiny hamlet, forgotten by the world, and wrapped in the brooding, luminous haze of September shadows. How quaint and old it looked lying there—dead—shrouded in its impenetrable Past and voiceless Present!

"One broad street pushes its way through the village, and we saunter slowly down its grass-grown middle, hushed with the thought that its quiet is that of death. Our feet fall noiselessly on the thick turf. Not even the note of a bird breaks on the air, heavy with silence. Here and there we see a house, but all are gray and weatherbeaten, and their eaves drop moss and lichens. The dooryards are rank and wild with old-fashioned lilac and syringa. Myrtle straggles over the pathways and stately phlox nods at us over rusty gate hinges.

"What is the history of the wierd little spot, I wonder? Tucked away under the protecting wing of that guardian mountain, it slept through the years like Rip VanWinkle, unconscious of the fact that Time had long since dropped it by the way. Unlike old Rip, however, methinks it could never have awakened to a sense of mouldy garments and grizzled locks; but slumbering, died. It could never have awakened to a realization of its condition—to dissatisfaction and a restless striving after the mad pace of the world—or else there would not be as now, the smile of rest and content on its quiet features and the spirit of a vague, deep peace brooding over it.

"Warm, sweet-breathed winds fondle scentless petals of faded flowers and wander away through tangled fields and hedgerows vainly calling, calling, calling for the lost caresses of a dead love. Was ever here life and death, toiling for bread, smiling for joy and crying for pain? Did ever roses bloom, and lovers pluck them wandering hand in hand? The questions float away westward to the dying day, but no answer comes back to the waiting ear.

"All are at one now, roses and lovers. None shall ever know of the weeping, the laughter, the kisses whose breath went seaward a hundred sleeping years ago."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTE.

Three prizes have been offered for the encouragement of the study of botany in the schools this season. They will be awarded for the best botanical collection made in either the High School or in any of the grammar schools, for specimens of trees collected by a scholar in a grammar school and for a similar collection from the High School.

A Hard Break to Find.

The break in the fire-alarm system which kept the gong and Chief Doane busy all yesterday afternoon was finally located by the Chief and Inspector Chamberlin. A wire entering Alert Hose Company's house by way of a window had parted between the inner and the outer casings, the insulating covering remaining intact. The wire was still a conductor except when the wind kept the outside end away from the point of meeting, thus breaking the circuit.

Oh, if for every tear
That from our exiled eyes
Has fallen, Erin dear,
A shamrock could arise,
We'd weave a garland green
To pierce the ocean through
All, all the way between
Our aching hearts and you.

A SHAMROCK'S CHARM

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

I'll seek a four leafed shamrock
In all the fairy dells,
And when I find the charmed leaves,
Oh, how I'll weave my spells!
—Samuel Lover.

"Oh, Gerald, I was so anxious to see you! I have found a four leafed shamrock. It grew near the sloe bushes at the banks of Teelin stream, and they say there's not a 'gentler' spot in all Tyrconnel. By that I mean there is no place more frequented by the fairies."

"Fairies!" repeated Gerald Gleason, to whom a fair young Irish girl addressed this novel greeting as he entered a neat whitewashed cottage in a quaint village in the north of Ireland. "Fairies! Sure, you're the sweetest fairy of them all yourself. You're fit to be their queen. They may be able to put a grander charm on a shamrock, but not one of them can charm a heart like you."

Una Costello blushed as Gerald emphasized his words by putting his arms around her and kissing the ruby lips upturned to his. His language was extravagant, as that of all Irish lovers is, but she knew there was sincerity behind it.

"You see," added Gerald, "I've been years away from these lovely glens and mountains and have forgotten all about the fairies. In the United States, you know, we have no such superstitions."

"Superstitions!" she exclaimed, surprised at his incredulity. "Don't you believe in the luck a four leafed shamrock brings?"

"Shamrock!" he remarked. "I'll wager it's only a clover. But your name—or that part of it you will not have to change, Una—means fortunate, so that you need no four leafed clover as a talisman."

Disengaging herself from his ardent embrace, she went to the window and held up to his inspection and admiration the shamrock, which seemed to be hiding itself among others that were of the ordinary trefoil. Una felt she had a prize, for she had found it the day before beneath a sheltered bower, where true love has prospered for centuries under the benediction of the little people whom the Irish fondly believe to be exiles from heaven—fallen angels who could find no place to remind them so much of the paradise they had lost as the green fields and brown hills of holy old Ireland.

"Now, is it a clover?" she asked triumphantly as he looked closely at it.

"I'm not botanist enough to say, and if I were I would not undermine your faith and patriotism. But"—as to avoid a discussion of the point he took the shamrock and put the leaves near her rosy cheek—"here's the green above the red. It's something I've often prayed for in the land beyond the seas."

"But it must be more real than that," she replied as the treasured sod was returned to her. While replacing it in the window she remarked a little pettishly, "I do think you Irish-Americans care for nothing but America."

Gerald Gleason was 30 years of age. He had left Ireland 10 years before for New York and since then had risen from a clerkship to membership in one of the great law firms of the metropolis. In New York he was welcomed by an uncle, a man who had made himself a power in municipal politics and had the influence to advance his nephew to a place that, sooner or later, Gerald's own industry and genius would have won him.

Gerald had returned to the old home to erect a memorial to his parents in the village churchyard, where they slept peacefully with their ancestors under the shamrocks and daisies which nature has bestowed so bounteously upon the Irish soil.

"NOW, IS IT A CLOVER?"

It was only natural that he should want to look in at the little school where his early education was received. The old schoolmaster he knew was there no longer, but in his stead a young girl with winsome smiles. Una Costello had just attained her majority, fresh from the training institute at Glasnevin, Dublin, and her artless manner, sylphlike form and true Irish beauty fairly won the young lawyer, whose toilful ambition had hitherto precluded thoughts of love from his mind.

So he staid among old scenes longer than he had intended. July fled and with it August. Scarcely a day passed that did not see him visit the cottage where Una and her widowed mother dwelt. The peasantry had already decided that Una would return with him to America. In fact, he had visited her that day to make the proposition.

Gerald followed her as she went to replace the shamrock in the window. As his arm stole around, some electric thrill of love warned her instinct that he had something to say. Her nervousness was betrayed in the trembling hands that kept arranging the shamrock sod in the box in which it had been planted. He was not altogether contained himself. It was the first case of the kind he had ever pleaded. He would make love readily, as all Irishmen can, but he hesitated to ask her to leave the quietude to which she had been accustomed, the dear scenes and dearer friends, for her love for him.

"Yes, America is everything to you," she repeated, not knowing exactly how to break the silence and its strain.

"Not quite everything," he rejoined. "There's yourself, for instance. America would be brighter and dearer to me if you were there spurring on my ambition. Una, darling, you will not let me go alone, will you? I have gone beyond my vacation limit now, dreaming here, planning a happy home under the stars and stripes, but there will be no such home for me, darling, if you are not there."

"Oh, Gerald, what would mother do? I cannot leave her."

"Leave her! Of course not. She will come with us."

"Oh, never, never!" exclaimed Una, looking up regretfully, appealingly, to him. "Oh, what will I do?"

"My darling, don't get excited. Something strange must have happened. Tell me about it."

Her emotions puzzled him. He could not quite understand the cause of her grief, for he did not imagine that Una's mother was so firm in her determination to cling to the old home that he could not induce her to share with Una and him the happiness that awaited them in America.

"Tell me," he said coaxingly, "what is this nightmare that haunts you?"

"It is no nightmare," she replied. "It is too real. You have heard mother speak of my brother Maurice—her only boy—who went to America some years ago. She never heard from him after the first year. She has conceived a strange notion of America. She likes its people for the good they do, but the country itself she looks upon as a siren that lured her most precious idol away to destruction. She would not live there, Gerald, and my place is with her. I am all she has left. Only last night she hinted at the probability of parting and advised me to leave her, if you asked me, and go with you. I had not thought of such a trial coming; I was so happy in your love. We must part, Gerald, but I will always remember you."

"I HAVE FAITH IN YOU."

Tears came to her eyes, and emotion mastered her. Gerald tried to reassure her, saying he was sure her mother would relent. But Mrs. Costello, when she returned, having been paying a visit to a neighbor when Gerald called, completely disillusioned him of the idea. Her appeal in vain was united with Gerald's to shake Una in her resolution to remain at her mother's side.

"It is only a short time, and I'll not be here, with my old notions, to keep you apart," said Mrs. Costello.

"You mustn't talk in that strain," said Gerald. "You will live many years, I hope, and soon outgrow this prejudice."

"I'm afraid it will live with the memory of my dear boy all my life," she answered, her voice tremulous with awakened sorrow.

Gerald realized that he had lost. Further discussion would but intensify the pain each felt. He arose and went to the window which looked out upon the ocean he was soon to cross, the white capped waves coming dancing in to the Irish shores, still singing to the toilers on the braes above of the queer climes that lay far beyond the horizon. His eyes fell on the shamrock. Calling Una to his side, he pointed to the shamrock sod and said:

"Una, I am going to ask a favor. Will you grant it?"

"If it is within my power," she replied, divining his request by the unerring intuition every loving woman seems to possess.

"This sod," he continued, "will have memories for me that will bring you often before me as you met me today. We will part for awhile. Circumstances may change your mother's views. Maybe the good genius of this shamrock will pity me in that faroff land when he hears my plaint and bring you to me. May I have it?"

"You do not believe in the mystic power," she said. "I'm skeptical myself now. But if you desire the shamrock as a memento, it is yours."

Mrs. Costello had considerately left them alone. Oh, how the good mother had argued vainly against herself, trying to break down the barriers her peculiar ideas had placed in the way of her daughter's happiness, but the years had so thoroughly impregnated them into a sensitive, impressionable organization that they could not be eradicated, and Gerald had to sail some days later unaccompanied by Una.

On landing in New York, Gerald went to the immigrant's mission at the Battery with a few blackthorns he had promised to bring to the manager, an old and valued friend. The manager was talking to one of those careworn unfortunates whom reverses send to the mission for advice and assistance. Gerald paid no attention to the visitor, but rushing in exclaimed as he laid the blackthorns on the manager's desk:

"Here I am again, and I've kept my promise, you see."

"Well, Gerald, how are you?" was the cordial greeting that followed the extended hand. "But what is that?" forgetting to return thanks when he saw the box of shamrocks Gerald carried, the keepsake being too precious to commit to other hands.

A shadow of pain crossed Gerald's features as he allowed his friend to examine the treasure. The thought of his love, now more distant than ever, with all the bitterness of parting, came to mind. Forgetting the presence of another, Gerald told in open words the story of the shamrock and of his disappointed love for Una Costello to this man, who had long been his confidential friend.

"Pardon me," said a voice behind him, that of the careworn visitor who had sat unnoticed and heard the story, "will you let me kiss that shamrock for the sake of the old land and its memories?"

There was a tremor, an earnestness in his voice that awakened Gerald's sympathy. The man's frame trembled with feeling as he stooped to kiss the sod. Tears fell upon the green leaves, and longingly and lovingly were the lips pressed to the shamrock. When his head again uplifted, the man said:

"I've drowned that shamrock in tears today. Too often have I drowned it in something else, too often steeped it and my senses in the flowing bowl."

Then, raising his right hand and looking upward as if calling on God to bear witness to his oath, he added:

"I swear by this shamrock never more to dishonor it and the land it grew in."

His passionate outburst impressed Gerald, who turned to the manager inquiringly, inviting explanation in his look. His friend seemed to read his query in his gaze and said:

"This man has come today for advice and aid. His appearance gives evidence that he has had the usual experience. I hate to recommend him to any one for employment, unless there is virtue in your shamrock that can redeem him."

Virtue in that shamrock! Who would dare deny it? Gerald himself might in Una's presence, but it had become sacred in his eyes afar from her, and he would resent any doubt as to the power resting in that cherished emblem of his love and land.

"I have faith in you," he said to the stranger as he took out his cardcase and hurriedly scrawled the address on the reverse side of his own card. Then, handing the same with a crisp bill to the man, he added: "Go to the man whose name you see there, and he'll fix you in a place according to your ability. Brush up a little before you go."

The man looked at the name and opened wide his eyes in doubt and bewilderment. It was that of the greatest political light in the city of New York. Brighter days were ahead. The poor man grasped Gerald's hand and said:

"I'll repay you for this."

He bowed himself out. The manager laughed. He had heard many such promises and saw nearly all of them broken. It was merely an incident of his day's business. He turned the conversation into other channels, and before Gerald took his leave the promise over the shamrock and the man who made it had passed out of mind for the time being.

Gerald took up the thread of his business where he had dropped it, and the rush to catch up with the rush kept him busy, but not too occupied to prevent him from giving due care to the shamrock that thrived in its native clay and flourished on his desk before him as well as if the Irish dew and the Irish air were upon it as in days gone by.

Gerald wrote to Una frequently, but her mother was still obdurate, and the time fled by until St. Patrick's morning. The sun streamed through the window, smiled upon the shamrock and awakened tender recollections within the heart of Gerald. His office windows overlooked the route of the procession. The gallant Sixty-ninth was to lead that day in honor of Ireland's patron saint. The manager of the mission had sent a message that morning to have a place reserved for himself and a few friends who wished to view the marching columns. Gerald awaited them.

The door opened. His eyes were on the shamrock, but the bang of the door as it closed awakened him from his reverie. He looked up and—did his eyes deceive him? There stood Una Costello and her mother, behind them two men, one of whom he recognized as his friend. But it was on Una that his eyes rested. He rushed forward to greet her. What ecstasy in that embrace!

After greeting Mrs. Costello, kissing her as if she were his own mother, Gerald turned to welcome the manager and his companion, but before an explanation could be asked the stranger stepped forward, offered his hand to Gerald and said:

"I have changed considerably. You may not remember me. I was the poor outcast you met at the immigrant home I heard your story and learned therefrom that my waywardness, my descent in paths that made me oblivions to mother, home and friends, was responsible for blighting the lives of those near and dear to me. I have kept the pledge made over the shamrock. Your card secured me a good position, and I planned this by way of compensation. I surprised mother and sister a few weeks ago as I now do you. With my return, mother's prejudice disappeared. I am Maurice Costello."

"You have more than repaid me," said Gerald, pressing Maurice's hand warmly. Then, turning to Una, he said:

"The four leafed shamrock had a charm, after all. See how I have cared for it."

He led her to the desk on which the shamrock rested. The others followed to look at the magic exile of Erin. Una grasped the box and raised the shamrock to her lips with fervid emotion, and tears fell upon the flower, but this time they were tears of joy. Then laying the box on the desk, she said to Gerald:

THE GREETING.

"For luck, I'll place a sprig in your lapel today."

Her delicate fingers parted a small branch from the parent stem. Gerald looked proudly as she fastened the shamrock on his coat. When she had finished, he took her in his arms again and kissed her, nobody paying attention to their fond caressings, as all but the lovers had gone to the window to view the procession, summoned there by the opening notes of "The Wearing of the Green."

Priest and Man.

Time—Sunday evening at 10 o'clock. Scene—A horse car on Broadway, New York. Among the passengers are two Italians, one very drunk, the other tolerably drunk. Very drunken one, making noise, disturbing passengers and frightening ladies. Enter intellectual looking but stalwart priest. Observes situation, speaks in Italian to less drunk of the two, saying: "Tell your friend that he doesn't know when he is well off. Keep him quiet or he will get into trouble."

Upon complaint of passenger very drunken man is put off. Other begins abusing priest. Asks in English, in rapid succession: "Are you a priest? Are you a spy? Are you an Irishman?

Priest retains self control perfectly until these questions are repeated several times in steadily rising tones. Then suddenly he responds: "Yes, I'm a priest, I'm an Irishman, and I'm a man. Shut up, or I will knock the head entirely off you."

Half drunken Italian subsides. Lady on opposite side of car says impulsively: "Thank you! I'm afraid of these people."

Priest, speaking from the man and the Irishman side of him, "Madam, no man shall hurt the hair of a woman's head in this car, no matter how treacherous he is, while I'm here."

The Puzzle Solved.

Perhaps no local disease has puzzled and baffled the medical profession more than nasal catarrh. While not immediately fatal it is one of the most nauseous and disgusting ills the flesh is heir to, and the records show very few or no cases of radical cure of chronic catarrh by any of the many modes of treatment until the introduction of Ely's Cream Balm a few years ago. The success of this preparation has been most gratifying and surprising. No druggist is without it.

SOME OF PATRICK'S MIRACLES.

Legends Concerning the Patron Saint of the Emerald Isle.

THE Druids were the bitterest opponents of good St. Patrick in his great work of Christianizing Ireland. Their priests were powerful and malignant magicians, and in order to prevail against their wicked works St. Patrick had need of all his miracle working power. In spite of his benevolence he had to curse their fertile lands and cause them to become cold and barren bogs, their rivers were made uninhabitable to fish, and their very kettles were cursed, so that no matter how hot a fire was kindled under them water would not boil within them. At last, all these things failing to prevail against the Druids, St. Patrick ordered the earth to open and swallow them.

According to the legends, St. Patrick's power over fire was not confined to rendering it inoperative when placed under the kettles of his enemies. He was quite able to use snow and ice for fuel, and there are several versions of the manner in which he did this. According to one story, he and a number of his followers found themselves one cold morning on the top of a mountain without a fagot to cook their breakfast or warm their stiffened limbs. There was much complaining, to which the saint paid no heed. "Gather a pile of ice and snowballs," he commanded, and when this was done he breathed upon the frigid mass, and it instantly became a pleasant fire. Long after this version was put in rhyme by a lovelorn versifier as follows:

St. Patrick, as in legends told,
The morning being very cold,
In order to assuage the weather,
Collected bits of ice together,
Then gently breathed upon the pyre,
When every fragment blazed on fire.
Oh! if the saint had been so kind
As to have left the gift behind
To such, a lovelorn wretch as me,
Who daily struggles to be free,
I'd be content—content with part.
I'd only ask to thaw the heart,
The frozen heart of Polly Roe.

Another form of the same story has it that when a child he busied himself one day in gathering bits of ice and snow, to the displeasure of his nurse, and when she told him he would be better employed if he gathered fagots he breathed on the ice, and it took fire.

Once, when St. Patrick met an old man who refused to believe the teachings of Christianity, the saint asked him if he would be convinced by the performance of a miracle. The answer being in the affirmative, the saint restored him to his youth, and of course the man became at once a convert. On another occasion, when in England, St. Patrick met a leper who desired to take passage on a certain ship, but the captain would not receive him. The saint threw a stone altar that had been blessed by the pope into the water. The leper was bidden to seat himself on the altar, which floated alongside the ship, bearing its single passenger, during the entire voyage.

The greatest of the miracles performed by St. Patrick was, of course, ridding Ireland of snakes and blessing the soil so that it would ever afterward be obnoxious to all reptiles. One legend goes that the saint called all the serpents to the top of a hill and compelled them to swallow one another till none was left. Another account is to the effect that Patrick drove them out by beating a drum, and that he struck it so hard as to knock a hole in it, whereupon an angel, lest the accident should frustrate the saint's object, appeared and mended the rent in the instrument, which, patch and all, was shown as a holy relic as late as 50 or 60 years ago. It is stated that one huge serpent was chained in Lough Dilveen, where it was bidden to remain till Monday. The word of release has never been spoken, and it is said that if your ears are properly quickened you may to this day at Lough Dilveen hear the snake call out on Monday mornings in good Irish, "It's a long Monday, Patrick."

The Irish Abroad.

"There were indeed Irish Roman Catholics of great ability, but they were to be found everywhere except in Ireland. One exile became a marshal of France, another prime minister of Spain. In his palace at Madrid he had the pleasure of being assiduously courted by the embassadors of George II and of bidding defiance in high terms to the embassadors of George III. Scattered all over Europe were brave Irish generals, dexterous Irish diplomatists, Irish counts, Irish barons, Irish Knights of St. Louis and of St. Leopold, of the White Eagle and of the Golden Fleece, who, if they had remained in the house of bondage, could not have been ensigns of regiments or freemen of petty corporations."

So wrote Macaulay of the Irish of the eighteenth century, and though better days have come for Ireland it is still true that there are more successful Irishmen in other lands. There are Irish governors and high officials of British provinces and American states.

Thomas d'Arcy McGee was among the organizing statesmen of Canada. Thomas Francis Meagher was governor of Montana and marked for higher honors when accident cut short his career. Gervan Duffy was the leading attorney of Australia. And of the Irish soldiers, scholars, statesmen and writers eminent in America the names would fill a column.

CHAPTER XIV.

"YOU LOVE HIM."

At this juncture there was a commotion on the outskirts of the gathering, and North pushed his way roughly to the front and faced Monckton. In the open air and bright sunlight his appearance was so disheveled and haggard that the mine owner was inspired with an involuntary feeling of pity and addressed him in a far milder tone than the situation might have warranted.

"Why have you done this thing, North?" he said. "What do you expect to gain by it?"

Blinded by his enmity, the miner mistook his temperate mood for intimidation. "What are you doing here?" he growled. "Go home, if you value your fine clothes and your girl's complexion, for there are those here anxious to spoil both for you."

"Your cause must be indeed a weak one if a vulgar threat is its only defense," was Monckton's answer.

"I am making no defense to you," retorted North; "don't think it. But I don't want your blood on my conscience, so I warn you to get away from here."

"I shall not go until my errand is accomplished," replied the mine owner. "I know that a part of the mines is unsafe, and I shall send the carpenters down to put up a bulkhead in order that the men who wish to return to their work may do so in safety."

"I will allow no bulkhead put up until you have agreed to my demands," said North. "If the men are fools enough to risk their lives down there, they may."

A spot of red appeared in the proprietor's pale cheek. He stepped up to the refractory miner and gazed steadily into his contracting eye.

"You will not allow it," he repeated. "And who do you take yourself to be?"

"Your master!" retorted North, losing all control of himself—"your master, do you hear? Your master, who will grind you in the dirt, as you and your kind have done me and mine for centuries!"

Whether North in his frenzy or Monckton, enraged beyond endurance, made the first attack, it was impossible to say, but in an instant the two men were locked in a desperate struggle, while North's friends rushed forward with execrations and Joyce skipped about the combatants, waiving his arms in complete imbecility of terror.

North was naturally by far the stronger, but his recent mode of life had shattered his vast muscular power, while, on the other hand, Monckton, a trained fencer and boxer, possessed resources of skill and agility, for which, with his slight figure and habitually languid air, he would never have been given credit. Howbeit, there was but a second's space of fierce panting and straining, when North was flung heavily upon the earth, and Monckton drew back, erect, gloomy and with dilating nostrils.

For a moment there was dead, motionless, amazed silence; then a large stone, thrown from the midst of the crowd, struck the proprietor upon the chest. He staggered, put his hand to the spot, but did not fall. Then followed mad confusion. The more respectable among the men did their best to restrain their lawless companions, but they were the minority, and in the ferocious temper of the mob the mine owner's fate seemed certain. Joyce, in a state of semiparalysis and shrieking like an Indian with sheer rage and terror, attempted to force a revolver into his master's hand, but the young man pushed it aside and continued to ward off the bludgeons aimed at his head as best he might with the light cane he carried. He was already wounded in several places, and the blood was flowing over his forehead and face. In another instant he must have gone down and been battered to death by the frenzied miners, when there was a clatter of hoofs, a shrill cry in a woman's voice, and Imogene Duke spurred her horse recklessly through the crowd and flung herself off the saddle and to Monckton's side at a bound.

With one of those involuntary impulses of respect for womanhood of which the lowest and roughest American is susceptible, the strikers at once drew back, leaving Monckton, Miss Duke and North, who had recovered his feet, in the midst of a clear space.

The girl's low, thrilling tones reached to the outermost listener in the throng.

"I have seen it all," she said, fixing her burning eyes on North's ghastly face. "Shame, shame on you, Matthew North."

North recovered himself with an effort. "This is no place for you," he ejaculated hoarsely.

"No," she retorted; "the place where a cowardly murder is about to be committed is indeed no place for a woman, Matthew North, what name do you give the man who leads 50 against 1, and he unarmed and defenseless?"

The miner raged like a maniac. "Go, go!" he exclaimed, "or I will not answer for myself."

"And leave you to complete the crime you and your companions have begun? No, I will stay, and you shall kill me too."

North gazed at her as if lost to all sense of his surroundings. "I knew it," his voice sounded as if torn up from the depths of his chest. "You love him."

It is doubtful if in her agitaiton she understood his words. But Monckton,

"No, I will stay, and you shall kill me too."

who had been leaning faintly upon Joyce's shoulder, turned upon him in sudden, fierce anger.

"Silence!" he said between his teeth. "Have you no manhood left in you?"

North's head sank upon his chest.

"Go!" he commanded in a barely audible voice. "Take her away while they are quiet—while I have some reason left! Curse you! Can't you see she's in danger among us?"

Dazed as he was by the struggle, there was something in the miner's tone that impressed the proprietor. Summoning his scattered faculties, he gave his arm to the girl and led her away, closely followed by Joyce. The couple were allowed to pass unmolested, but the luckless overseer did not escape so easily. More than one sounding thwack was delivered upon his stout person, and the shining silk hat, which was his particular pride, was reduced to a shapless pulp, and the tattered rim was jammed down about his neck as a parting compliment.

"Bless my soul!" he gasped as, with disarranged attire and streaming with perspiration, he was finally permitted to join the other two on the road. "I was never so shamefully bedeviled in all my days. And that hat!" regarding the wreck piteously. "I paid 30 shillings for it at Nixon's on the Strand, and this is the end of it!"

CHAPTER XV.

MY PLACE IS HERE.

Monckton walked on beside the girl for some minutes in silence. From time to time she stole a surprised and inquiring glance at his absorbed face. She saw that a wonderful transformation had occurred in him since their last meeting. The indolent manner and the cynical, apathetic expression which she had condemned and disdained had disappeared. He showed traces of physical fatigue and suffering from the recent struggle, it is true, but he carried his head erect, his step was firm, and about his mouth were new lines of resolution and strong will. He was indeed like one who has suddenly shaken off a long drugged torpor and with all his faculties alert has leaped into the very midst of life and action. His conversation with her on the previous day had proved that she had misunderstood his real character, and that beneath his artificial exterior there were resources of deep feeling. She had seen how the father, in his mistaken pride, had labored to the dwarfing if not total extinction of all that was noble in his son's nature, and her contempt had given place to a great sympathy for him. Now it was no longer sympathy, but wonder and admiration. She had seen him in the midst of a frenzied mob calm, fearless and proud. She had seen him overcome a man his superior in stature and muscle, and she had thought him beautiful at that moment.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S HERO.

Col. Wm. Silloways, Whom Secretary Stanton Called the Greatest Hero of the War, Cured By Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

PRES. LINCOLN.

There never was a time when so many of our great and prominent persons have been cured by one and the same remedy, as have been reported in the papers of late, cured by that wonderful medical discovery, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Hon. ex-Speaker Charles J. Noyes of the Massachusetts Senate and House of Representatives has been cured by this remarkable remedy, and now we report the extraordinary cure of the illustrious Col. Wm. A. H. Silloways, one of the most noted

COL. WM. A. H. SILLOWAYE.

officers of the war, of whom Secretary Stanton and Secretary Welles said in conference with President Lincoln: "Col Silloways saved President Lincoln's life, and we consider him as great a hero as any in the service."

Col. Silloways resides at 8 Pine street, Boston, Mass., where in an interview with him he talked very interestingly: "On the 19th of April, 1861, I enlisted in the army of the North. I weighed 162 lbs. After serving four years and 8 months in the army and navy and suffering from wounds and rheumatism, I was discharged; I weighed the day I was discharged 109 pounds. Every year I had attacks of nervous prostration, shortness of breath and the loss of appetite were not the least of my misfortunes. I tried numberless things. Nothing did me any good.

"While employed in Boston I was compelled to resign my position on account of ill health. I consulted several eminent physicians and took their medicines, No use—I grew worse day after day; they told me I could not live; I could not walk alone in the street without falling or clinging to the railings. At times I would shake and twitch. Had spells of falling down in the office and on the street.

"In the house I had to lie down or drop down; several times I believed that I was at death's door. I had been commander of three different G. A. R. Posts, and my comrades advised me to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I bought a bottle and when I had taken two thirds of it I began to improve.

"I kept on taking it, improving all the time. I now weigh 130 pounds and feel like my old self again. You can put it in your paper that I attribute my health to nothing but Dr. Greene's Nervura. I am perfectly satisfied that it saved my life. I am 75 years of age, but, as you can see for yourself, I am as active as a man of 40 and can do a good day's work, as people here well know. My friends in Boston, New York and other places are surprised at my recovery. Indeed, I am surprised to be so well, I advise anybody afflicted to buy and try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy at once.

Such an astonishing cure as this in so prominent a personage as Col. Silloways, the personal friend of the President of the United States, Secretary Stanton and Secretary Welles, of President Lincoln's Cabinet, is the highest and strongest recommendation which any remedy could possibly have.

It is a fact that this wonderful medicine is doing more good all over the land than any other known remedy. Everybody who has used it speaks in the highest terms of it. It is strengthening the weak, building up broken down constitutions and curing the sick and suffering everywhere.

SEC. STANTON.

Everybody requires a spring medicine and this is just what you need. Thousands of people while not exactly sick, are out of order, weak, nervous, run down or ailing in some way. Many people at this season do no sleep or eat well, wake mornings tired with bad taste in the mouth, dull feeling head and without strength and energy to take hold of their work. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will cure all this; it will make you well. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st, New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS

Another Period of Filibustering in the House.

Election Cases to Come Up To-morrow and Obstruction Tactics are Expected from the Minority—Tariff Bill Will Be Reported By Wednesday at the Latest, it is Believed.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Filibustering in the house and routine calendar business in the senate seem to be the probable congressional programme for the week. The house is likely to begin over again the struggle which became so familiar pending the passage of the Bland seigniorage bill, to secure a quorum which will submit to be counted on a roll call. An election contest will be the battle ground on this occasion. Charles Frederick Joy, republican, was returned elected at the last election for the eleventh Missouri (St. Louis) district by a plurality of sixty-seven votes over John J. O'Neill, the popular democrat who has for several terms previous represented that district in congress. Mr. Joy holds the seat, but on a contest by O'Neill the committee on elections, by a strict party vote, decided to report in O'Neill's favor. As soon as the pending sundry civil bill is disposed of, and Mr. Sayers, chairman of the committee on appropriations, thinks this can be done during today's session, it is the purpose to call up the O'Neill-Joy election case. This, it is understood, will be antagonized by the republicans, who will require the majority to secure the presence of a quorum of their own number to carry out the purpose of the committee. Until that quorum of democrats appear, the expectation is that no business will be transacted that does not meet unanimous approval. In the meantime the committee may report the English-Hilborne case, from California, where a similar conclusion has been reached—that the republican sitting member, Hilborne, must give way to English, the democratic contestant, and ask that the two cases, together with that of Williams vs. Settle, from North Carolina, be disposed of at once when the presence of a quorum is established and thus clear the calendar of this class of cases so far as the committee has prepared them for action by the house. In the North Carolina case the committee has decided to report in favor of Settle, the sitting republican, but Williams the unsuccessful democratic contestant is determined to carry the contest to the floor of the house. Delegate Joseph has announced his intention of asking the house early in the week to take up the bill pending for the admission of New Mexico to statehood. But this will meet the same obstacle interposed in the path of the reports in the contested election cases—republican non-action. This can be avoided, however, by the democrats consenting to an amendment which will admit Oklahoma. But at present there seems to be no prospect of this being done. After the election cases have been disposed of, the present intention of the leaders of the house is to return to the consideration of appropriation bills. There are now on the calendar the military academy bill, the postoffice bill and the diplomatic and consular bills. It is expected that before the week ends these will be increased by the addition of the river and harbor, naval, military and Indian appropriation bills, all of which it is understood are practically completed. Mr. Hatch has also stated that his anti-option bill will be reported before the end of the week.

The tariff bill will probably be reported to the senate to-morrow or Wednesday and then that question and the fruitful Hawaiian topic some remarks may be made. Mr. Vest will probably, sometime during the week, call up the much-discussed bill to provide a new site for the government printing office, which is the unfinished business. Should the president return the Bland seigniorage bill with a veto, a topic of bitter discussion and exciting interest will be thrown before both branches of the national legislature.

Did Miss Fuller Commit Suicide?

NEW YORK, March 19.—Deputy Coroner Donlin, who made an examination of Miss Fuller's body, the pretty young stenographer who is supposed to have been murdered in the law office of W. M. Mullen Saturday night, where she was at work alone with Joseph L. Magee, a clerk, is inclined to think that the wound was self inflicted. Notwithstanding the fact that the flesh was not powder burned, Dr. Donlin says that the muzzle of the weapon was held close to the left temple. The ball took a slight upward course and came out near the right temple, making a gash and leaving shattered bone sticking in the wound. Police officials still consider the case to be a suspicious one. They intend to hold Magee, the young law clerk, until a thorough investigation has been made;

Zella, Her Sister and Al in New York.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Mrs. Zella Nicolaus arrived here from the west last evening. She was accompanied by Al Ruhman and Mrs. Weatherbee, Zella's sister. They got into a cab and were driven down town. Lawyer Hummel denied that he knew his fair client had got into town. He said there was nothing new in regard to her suit against George Gould. "We intend to push it with as much vigor as we ever put into any suit," he declared.

Did Not Give His Wife a Bath Tub.

EATONTOWN, N. J., March 19.—Frederick Gebhard, who is spending his honeymoon at "The Locust," the old Lorillard farm here, wishes to deny the reports that he gave his wife a silver bath tub on their wedding day or at any other time. The bath tub was said to be worth $10,000. Mr. Gebhard is annoyed over reports which gave a detailed description of the silver tub and denies the entire entire story.

BRECKINRIDGE IS CONFIDENT

Expects to Win the Breach of Promise Case and Be Re-Elected.

WASHINGTON, March 19. — While Col. Breckinridge has declined to be interviewed for publication, respecting the future course of his trial, the United Press can state authoritatively from sources which are thoroughly reliable, that the plans and views of the defendant have been practically determined upon as outlined below. William E. Christian, of New York, having asked an intimate and well informed friend of the defendant what the probable effect of the trial would be on Col. Breckinridge's political future, was answered as follows:

"He is quite confident of re-election. He has about 35,000 voters in his district, of which he received about 20,000 the last election, a majority of some 6,000. His election three times has taken place during presidential years and twice in off-years. In the off-years he has had no opponents, the vote having been only some six or seven thousand all told. This being an off-year there will be no opposition except in his own party, and that only as to his renomination. Two gentlemen who are striving for the nomination are E. E. Settle and William C. Owens. Mr. Settle is from the celebrated county of Owen, representing 4,000 votes. Mr. Owens is from the county of Scott, representing some 1,800votes.

"Thus far there has been only one primary in which adherence to him could be tested. This was held on the sixth day of March at Frankfort, when three distinctly and personally Breckinridge men were nominated. Congressional nominations take place in August, and as it is the custom in his district to give the sitting member a chance for canvassing after the close of the session of congress, he will go back to Kentucky and speak in every precinct. It is firmly believed that he will be returned by his constituents."

"Do you object to stating to me in outline the plan of defense in the case now on trial?"

"I suppose not. In the first place, no man under any circumstances can be expected or required to marry a woman who is not chaste. Of course the defence will submit evidence to impeach the good character of the plaintiff. These facts will be used rather to bolster up the defence than as the main bulwark. This main bulwark will consist in the fact that defendant has never at any time intended or made a contract to marry Miss Pollard and that she knew at all times that he would never marry her.

"There is little doubt that Mr. Breckinridge will win the case."

M'KANE'S FOLLOWERS.

Some of the Indicted Men Missing, Others May Plead Guilty.

NEW YORK, March 18.—Justice Sutherland, of Gravesend, convicted of oppression in complicity with the McKane matter, who disappeared last week, forfeiting his bail, is believed to be in Montreal. It is now said that Constable Andrew Scott Jamison, who was indicted with John Y. McKane and others for frauds in connection with the election in Gravesend, has fled. Jamison's case is on the calender for trial to-day.

According to reports, Jamison's father, indignant over the indictment of his son, and at the alleged treachery of the leaders, threatened that if the son was convicted, he would tell a story that would send a number of persons to Sing Sing. In other words, that he would go before the proper officers and testify to events that have happened not only in the last election, but for years before, that he would prove of a sensational nature. In order to prevent such happening, it is said, Jamison was spirited away, and like Sutherland, he is now out of the jurisdiction of the courts of this country.

Jamison has not been seen since Monday last.

The bondsmen of the other odd score of men indicted in connection with the Gravesend election frauds are said to be getting uneasy, and it is expected that several of the indicted men will be surrendered.

It is believed that several of the indicted men will plead guilty and throw themselves on the mercy of the courts.

Numerous Errors Corrected.

WASHINGTON, March 19. — Assistant Secretary Hamlin, the official in charge of custom matters in the treasury department, and Commissioner Miller of the internal revenue bureau, have been devoting their entire time to a critical examination of the tariff bill as adopted by the democratic majority of the senate finance committee. Numerous errors have been discovered in the printed bill. In the administrative features especially some sections were not clear and the opinion of the general board of appraisers at New York was asked on them. Other sections repealed sections in the first pages of the bill, evidently against the intention of the original framers. The word "wholesome" in the revenue section was used to describe "wholesale" dealers in liquors, and other crudities occured in various sections. Most of these errors were originally made in the Wilson bill as it passed the house and had the bill passed in the exact form as it came from that body inextricable confusion in construction would have arisen.

Greenshields Joins Wiman's Counsel.

NEW YORK, March 19.—J. W. Greenshiels, Q. C., of Montreal, who has been retained by a group of wealthy friends of Erastus Wiman in Canada to assist Gen. Tracy and Mr. Boardman in the defence of that gentleman, is at the Murray Hill hotel. He will spend a couple of days on Staten Island in conference with Mr. Wiman's New York counsel and give them the benefit of his special experience in criminal and partnership law. Mr. Greenshields has had occasion to give a great deal of attention to the latter question, and as much in this case depends on the interpretations of the agreements and habitual practices of the firm of which both the prosecutors and the accused are members, the precedents and decisions will be important.

O'Donnell and Woods.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Steve O'Donnell is at present in Chicago, where he is preparing for his eight-round bout on March 27 with Billy Woods. O'Donnell wants a chance to meet Bob Fitzsimmons, but the present indications are that he will not be accommodated.

Six Fatalities Known to Have Occurred and Some of the Wounded Will Die—Buildings, Trees and Shrubbery Destroyed By Hailstones, Three of the Dead Still Unidentified.

LONGVIEW, Tex., March 19.—A terrible cyclone struck this place shortly after midnight causing great damage to property and loss of life. Six persons are known to have been killed and dozens are seriously wounded, several of whom will die. The storm was accompanied by rain and hail. Hailstones fell with such force as to destroy buildings, trees and shrubbery. Among the houses destroyed are those of C. E. Thornton, G. A. Miller, John Gamble, Henry Lester, John Buffets and Andrew Davis. The body of Lester was found in the ruins of his home and his son Arthur, aged 6 years, received injuries that will prove fatal. Willie Lester, another child, received severe injuries, but will probably recover. A colored woman named Lorella Jones was killed in Buffet's house, but all the members of the family escaped with severe injuries.

Reports from Emory, the county seat of Rains county, are to the effect that six people were killed outright and over fifty wounded. Among the dead are Miss Esther Alexander, Henry Brass, George Walker and a 4-year-old son of Henry Murray. Three bodies were found north of Emory which have not yet been identified.

The World's Wheat Crop.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The department of agriculture makes the total yield of the wheat crops of the world something less than the total of 1892, but about the same as the total of 1893. The wheat crop of North America is placed by this authority at 447,479,000 bushels against 574,131,000 bushels in 1892 and 684,501,000 bushels in 1891. The total yield of South America is 81,664,000 bushels against 51,292,000 bushels in 1892 and 50,-000,000 bushels in 1891. All Europe figures a total of 1,407,943,000 bushels, against 1,406,933,000 bushels last year and 1,308,-620,000 in 1891. The crop of Asia is reported at 345,890,000 bushels against 289,-494,000 bushels in the previous year and 344,611,000 bushels two years ago. The crop of Africa is placed at 35,514,000 bushels 34,464,000 in 1892 and 38,729,000 bushels in 1891. Australia raised a crop of 41,-161,000 bushels, against 35,963,000 bushels last year and 32,839,000 bushels two years ago. The grand aggregate is 2,359,636,000 bushels, against 2,359,636,000 bushels, last year and 2,259,294,000 bushels two years ago.

Murder and Suicide in a Church.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 19.—A murder and suicide occurred yesterday in the church of the Immaculate Conception at Oakland while the congregation was present. John Brady, a house painter, shot and killed his wife, Mary, while she was telling her beads in front of the altar. Then he turned the revolver on himself and put a bullet in his brain. The murdered woman had just been divorced from him because of his dissolute habits. Six children are left.

Probably the Steamer Apollo

NEW YORK, March 19.—The steamer reported from Halifax Saturday by Captain Donnelly of Cleddu Belle to have been seen foundering in mid-ocean, is believed in this city to have been the steamer Apollo, Captain Sykes, of the Wilson line, that left this port with a general cargo for Antwerp, on Feb. 11. Sanderson & Son, of this city, are the agents. The owners of the steamer in Antwerp gave her up for lost about a fortnight ago.

Fired at a Sacred Image.

CORDOVA, March 19.—A young man named Vasquez fired two shots at the sacred image in a religious street procession yesterday. He then threw down his revolver and ran off shouting: "Hurrah for Anarchy!" A crowd gave chase, captured him and were tearing off his clothes and beating him, when two policemen rescued him.

MARRIED TO HIS OWN CHILD.

Steiner Learns the Facts and Has Probably Committed Suicide.

LONDON, March 19.—The Standard's Budapest correspondent says: The Nemzet prints the following: "Felix Steiner divorced his wife in 1878. They had one child, a 1-year-old daughter. Her name was changed and she went to New York where she found a situation in an Hungarian family. She often was sent to a nearby shop which was owned by Steiner, whom she did not know. Eventually, after chatting and courting, they were married happily and had one child. They desired to return to Hungary and search out their relations. They returned to Miskolcz. Steiner made inquiries and was astounded by the discovery that his second wife was his own daughter. He wrote that his wife should return to New York with the child. Steiner has not been heard of since, and it is believed that he has committed suicide. His wife is en-route to America and does not know the facts. She believes her husband has been detained by business.

THE ROCKAWAY FLAG INCIDENT

Displacing of Old Glory for the Green Will Likely Cause Trouble.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The lowering of the United States flag and the hoisting of an Irish flag on the town hall of Far Rockaway, on St. Patrick's day, with the permission of the president of the village, is still causing considerable comment and will likely cause trouble for the participants in the affair.

The lowering of the stars and stripes was witnessed by a crowd of citizens, who demanded that the flag be replaced. The police were sent for, but when the leaders in the movement showed a written permit from President McTigue, it was decided that nothing could be done. Within an hour, however, "Old Glory" was floating, but not on the same staff. It had been carried to the top of the bell tower twenty feet higher than the town hall and raised on a pole there.

BATTLE WITH POLICE.

Many Italian Rioters in New York Clubbed and Arrested

NEW YORK, March 19.—A mob of Italians and a squad of police had a hand to hand fight just before dark last evening at the corner of First avenue and 113th street. Blood flowed freely and two of the policemen were pretty well used up, while two of the Italians are in the hospital and many others have bandaged heads. Sixty prisoners were captured and are now locked up in the East 104th street station house. The cause of the trouble was the crap shooting of a lot of Italian boys who infest the greater part of the up-town "Little Italy."

MRS. NORLE DEAD.

The Ex-Secretary's Wife Passes Away at the Dinner Table.

ST. LOUIS, March 19.—Mrs. Elizabeth Noble, wife of John W. Noble, secretary of the interior under President Harrison, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at the family residence on Pine street, this city. The family had just dined and Mrs Noble was seated in a chair at the table, when the sudden summons came. Mrs. Noble was 57 years old and childless. There had been no previous illness and heart failure was the probable cause of death.

To Christen a Great Gun.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Although the president has had to decline the invitation of Secretary Herbert to witness the christening of the new 13-inch rifle at Indian Head, next Wednesday, all the cabinet officers and many senators and representatives, as well as the leading officers of the army and navy, will take part in what promises to be a very notable celebration. The gun is the largest ever made in this country and very few have ever been present to see or hear the firing of such a great piece of ordnance.

Protestant Ministers Denounce A. P. A.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., March 19.—The Protestant ministers have caused considerable excitement here by a concerted attack upon the American Protective association. The association numbers about 2,000 votes here and controls the balance of power in the elections. The ministers denounce the association as wholly anti-American and urge their congregations to shun it.

No Hope for Commander Whiting.

NEW YORK, March 19.—The physicians and surgeons in attendance upon Commander William D. Whiting have no hope for his recovery. When he was run over by a cab about nine weeks ago, the shock incident to the accident aggravated an old kidney trouble from which he had been suffering and it developed into bright's disease.

GERMANY AND RUSSIA

Proof of the Complete Revival of the Entente.

Social-Democrats Possessed of Anti-Dynastic and anti-Monarchical Principles—Hypnotic Healers Sentenced—The Second Test of Tailor Dowe's Bullet-proof Cloth a Success.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

BERLIN, March 19.—Count Schouvaloff celebrated the ratification of the reciprocity treaty with a dinner at the Russian embassy Saturday evening. The list of his guests proves that, as Chancellor von Caprivi said in the reichstag, the ministers stood shoulder to shoulder behind him in the struggle against the agrarians. It includes the names of all the ministers who were supposed to be opposing the treaty and trying to precipitate a cabinet crisis on account of it. There were no speeches except the toasts to the emperor and the czar, which were demanded by form. Both toasts, however, were so notably cordial as to show the heartiness with which the entente had been concluded. Emperor William appeared in a Russian uniform at the dinner and spoke his toast to the czar's health in Russian. The Sunday newspapers say that these facts prove the complete revival of the entente between Germany and Russia.

The newspapers are filled with rumors of pending changes in the personnel of the government offices. Dr. von Boetticher, imperial secretary of the interior, is expected to retire in favor of Herr von Koeller, now under secretary for Alsace and Lorraine. Frieherr von Richthoffen, president of the Berlin police, is said to be on the point of resigning. The most likely candidates for his place are Koenigsdorff, president of the council in Cassel, or the emperor's favorite, Stauttenrauch. All these rumors are approximately correct.

A Social Democrat's "Audacity."

While the closing debates on the treaty were comparatively tame, the grant for the monument to Emperor William I. was discussed with great bitterness by the deputies. The social democrats and radicals surpassed themselves. They made the debate an anti-monarchical demonstration such as the reichstag had not witnessed before for many years. August Bebel, the social-democratic leader, had the audacity to declare that the social democrats as a party were animated by anti-dynastic and anti-monarchical principles and could never consent to vote for the erection of a monument to a man who represented all that was hostile to their sentiments.

Men interested in colonial affairs think that the foreign office was somewhat overreached in the convention with France as to the Cameroons hinterland. Petitions from German firms in the African trade are pouring into the foreign office. All beseech the government to defer the signing of the convention until after its publication. The French newspapers have published enough of the text to show that France would acquire the right from the Atlantic seaboard of her Congo possessions to the unlimited interior stretching to the southern Nile, while Germany would be limited from her Cameroons seaboard to a small portion of lake Tchad. French reports that the convention has been signed are not believed.

Hypnotic Doctors Sentenced.

A court trial which has excited much interest among medical men was concluded in Strassburg on Wednesday. The prisoner was a quack named Jost, better known as the Sleeper of Dorlisheim. Jost was originally a tailor in Dorlisheim, but he went to Paris two or three years ago and attended the Magnetic circle under Dr. Desjardins. There he was filled with ideas concerning the powers of hypnotism and when he returned to his home he began to practice hypnotic healing. He charged no regular fee, but was wont to get about forty marks as a "gratuity" from everybody who consulted him. With a woman assistant named Wolff and another named Grosse, he thus built up an income of 50,000 marks a year. He and his assistants were arrested as quacks. The trial turned on the crucial point of the ability of Jost and his associates as hypnotists. Prof. Naunyn and Prof. Fuistner and councillor Dr. Krieger, of Strassburg, thought all three were impostors. Gen. von Bergmann, governor of the Strassburg fortress, Dr. Langadorff and Prof. Bernheim, of Nancy, held that the three were honest and capable. The hypnotists got the disadvantages of the doubt and Jost was sentenced to serve fourteen months in prison and to pay a fine of 800 marks. Grosse was sentenced to seven months' imprisonment and Wolff to five months' imprisonment besides being fined 100 marks.

Dowe's Bullet-Proof Cloth.

The emperor has ordered that the glittering military helmet (pickelhaube) be abolished from the army as the introduction of smokeless powder has rendered it unfit for actual war. It will be replaced with a kepi, similar to the headgear worn by the Austrian infantry. The entire German uniform is to be changed so as to resemble closely that of the Austrian troops.

A MONSTER GATHERING

Trades' Union Demonstration in Hyde Park.

Tens of Thousands of Working People, and Paupers in Tatters, Listen to a Hundred Speakers Denounce the House of Lords—The Speaking Preceded By a Great Procession.

LONDON, March 19.—The trades unionists' demonstration in favor of the employers' liability bill and also against the house of lords, was in progress all Sunday afternoon. It transformed London between the Thames embankment and the further side of Hyde park into an indescribable bedlam. The whole district was filled with workingmen and paupers, brass bands, processions, banners and truckloads of spectators. A more sodden, beer-soaked lot could not be found in any great city of Europe. The men were but half clad in tattered, faded coats, occasionally contrasting strangely with brand new trousers which had been purchased for the gala day. The women came with babies in arms and small children clinging to their skirts. Family parties camped in little open spaces or in doorways and there consumed fruit or nuts or hot potatoes which were sold in enormous quantities along the walks. The London rabble loves a holiday, and despite their pitable poverty, the crowds indulged in much horseplay, dancing and general picnicing.

Thousands in Line.

The main procession formed on the embankment. Thousands took their places in the line and thousands more marched beside the regular parade or walked in the rear. The workingmen in the procession were in their working clothes, somewhat tidied for the occasion and embellished with bright neckties. Some had new waistcoats; a few new trousers; but the greater part of every man's suit betrayed extreme poverty. Mounted marshals, who grinned sheepishly at their friends along the route, led the line. Behind them came the unions and the societies marching four, eight or ten abreast. Many women walked with their husbands, some of them leading their little boys by the hand. Many more filled the vans and brakes which accompanied the parade from the embankment to the park. The rows of men in the procession were huddled together and they marched away with exceptional rapidity, yet the line required two hours to pass a given point just off the embankment.

The 400 banners in the procession represented all the trades. Many of them were 20 feet square and were constantly becoming entangled with the Irish flags, mounted mottoes and transparancies which had been jumbled together without sequence or system. Vulcans and Neptunes and blindfold justices, brooms and rods and little coffins were borne aloft on platforms or displayed from the tail boards of carts. One truck carried a coffin draped with the union jack surmounted with the sign: "The veto coffin of the house of lords." Before and after the truck came groups of signs such as "down with the lords," "no hereditary lawmakers," "the lords threw out the employers' liability bill; let us throw them out."

Bands Cause and Awful Din.

The most troublesome part of the procession was the bands, for there were more than a hundred of them in line and each insisted upon marching in front of certain unions. Sometimes four were playing within 200 feet of each other, raising such a discordant din as to confuse those in the parade and elicit jeers from the spectators. In several cases rival bands fell in side by side. Some of them came to blows, but most of them fought out the contest by playing bassdrums and trombones with all the force they could muster. The crowds along the route were good natured and applauded and cheered the contestants. This bedlam lasted from noon to 5 o'clock when those who had not gone to the park dispersed to their homes.

The meetings in the park were attended by tens of thousands. There were twelve platforms and more than a hundred speakers. The most notable addresses were made by Ben Tillett, the dockers' friend; John Burns, labor M. P. for Battersea; Joseph Arch, liberal M. P. for the northwest division of Norfolk, and James Rowlands, radical M. P. for the east division of Finsbury.

The Missing King Found.

BRUSSELS, March 19.—King Leopold's remarkable disappearance from his country house in the province of Namur some ten days ago is still the subject of much comment and surmise. Last evening his majesty was found in Geneva, Switzerland, and was informed that the ministers would await his return to Brussels before making an important declaration in parliament. The radical and socialist newspapers condemn the king without measure for absenting himself so mysteriously during a grave crisis in state affairs.

No Change in McKane's Treatment.

SING SING, N. Y., March 19.—Warden Durston says that the papers served on him Saturday for the production of McKane in the United States district court on habeas corpus proceedings will not affect McKane's treatment in prison whatever. He will continue to work in the clothing department as though no papers had been served.

MR. MARTINE REPLIES.

HE ACCUSES CONGRESSMAN DUNN OF UNFAIRNESS AND INGRATITUDE.

He Feels that His Service to the Party Is Entitled to More Consideration than are the Pleadings of a Paid Attorney, and Stamps Hetfield's Appointment As a Premium on Inactivity and a Reward to the Drones.

In the Elizabeth Daily Herald of last Thursday appeared the following:

The misunderstanding between Congressman Dunn and the Farmer Orator James E. Martine is peculiarly unfortunate, arising as it does when all differences in the party should be forgotten and all elements should cohere. Let there be no rift in the Democratic lute.

Replying to this, Mr. Martine writes as follows:

To The Elizabeth Daily Herald:

In your article speaking of the difference between John T. Dunn and myself regarding the Plainfield postmastership you say let there be no rift in the Democratic party.

Thank Heaven neither John T. Dunn nor myself constitutes the Democratic party; so our difference will not count for such. For myself my Democracy is laid broader, firmer and deeper than John T. Dunn; and his unfairness and ingratitude to me cannot alter my allegiance or fealty to the party or its principles, nor prevent my activity in proclaiming her doctrines.

To John T. Dunn I say it is no discharge of obligation to proffer me that which he knew that I would neither accept nor receive.

With all deference to William A. Coddington, I feel that as President of the Democratic Association for the past sixteen years, and resident of Plainfield for thirty years, I can better voice the sentiment of our party and our citizens than can possibly William A. Coddington, who has been a voter in our city but a few years.

I did and do feel that a service of twenty-five years always loyal, earnest and true, should count for more than the services of an attorney pleading for a client and working for a fee.

I do not desire to dictate, but do say that the appointment of Mr. Hetfield would be a premium on inactivity and a reward to the drones. This I say without the least of unkind feeling to Mr. Hetfield; I have no controversy with him, but feel that such appointments are a step backwards, and not calculated to win either votes or position. Fully ninety-five per cent. of our voters as a whole oppose this nomination, and are most outspoken in their disapproval. A postmaster for Plainfield is not for a party alone, but for sixteen thousand citizens, and I assert that this is not such an appointment as we are entitled to.

Mr. Dunn says I "have been ambitious for political position", and I say yes, I have an honorable ambition to represent my district; but I will not compromise my manhood, sacrifice my principles, nor pursue a course of ingratitude to satisy my ambition.

Mr. Dunn says "we repel Democrats". I would most cheerfully submit this question to the voters of Union county as to whether his course or mine in our political careers has tended to repel Democratic voters. I am proud of my history of devotion to the Democratic party, its principles, and its candidates.

J. E. MARTINE.

DISPOSAL OF MUSIC HALL.

This Stockholder Urges that it Be Given to the City for a Municipal Hall.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I notice in your issue of the 16th that the stockholders have decided to sell Music Hall. If such is their intention I trust they will advertise the property in the New York and Philadelphia papers, in which cities men can be found who not only know the value of such a place but would be able to manage it in a clean, business-like manner. Why not present the building and its belonging to the city of Plainfield to be used for municipal purposes?—as it would be quite a saving in the way of rents, etc., and more creditable to the city in which to hold their courts of justice, than tobacco shops twelve feet square, or private houses fumigated with tobacco and rum. However, it matters little financially to the shareholders which way the Music Hall is disposed of, as it will most likely be listed with the D B., B L. and W. I., the results of which will be long remembered. TEN SHARES.

Touching Scene at a Funeral.

The death of the young lad was particularly sad, especially so to his aged grandmother (his mother being dead). Mrs. Hurst, who is dangerously ill in the same house, with pneumonia, and who is in her 74th year. She was stricken down with the disease Saturday, the day after her favorite boy died; yesterday afternoon she was carried from her bed to the coffin to take her last look on earth at her loved one. The scene was heartrending to the friends and neighbors present, and the patient was so affected as to lessen the chance of her recovery. But as the dear old soul is a true disciple of Christ, she is ready for the great change whenever she shall be summoned.

—An auction sale of stock, crops, farming implements, household goods, etc., will take place tomorrow at 10:30 at the farm of L. W. Miller, one mile from Scotch Plains, on the county road leading to Springfield. H. Hand is auctioneer. The sale will be as advertised in today's Press.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

Successful Sale in Crescent Church Parlors For the Benefit of the Poor.

A cake, candy and apron sale was held in the Crescent Avvenue Church parlors Saturday afternoon by the bright and energetic young scholars of Miss Stewart's Sunday-school class, in order to help the suffering poor.

At 3, when the fair opened, the long well-filled tables presented a very tempting appearance, and fifteen eager young girls stood behind them looking exceedingly pretty, all flushed with expectation. Miss Helen Brainerd and Miss Emma Stirling presided over a well stocked table of aprons, useful and ornamental. Miss Frankie Demarest ruled alone at the candy table. Miss Stella Swain and Miss Maude Honeyman were assisted by Miss Bessie Valiant at the cake table. Miss Clara Long, and her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Long dispensed lemonade. Miss Fannie Demarest and Miss Ida Stewart vended fruit, and Miss Margie Sterling, Miss Gussie Long, Miss Edna Smith, Miss Nina Samson and Miss F. Burr had charge of the ice-cream.

Several times the supplies had to be replenished, so fast did the cakes and candies go; and at 8 in the evening when the successful little sale was over the tables looked empty indeed and the tired workers went home happy.

Special W. C. T. U. Services.

The W. C. T. U. rooms were well filled yesterday afternoon. Special services were being held all over the world under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in honor of the grand old prohibition pioneer of Maine. Rev. C. E. Herring was introduced as the speaker of the afternoon, and from the text found in I Cor. xvi: 13, summed up four prominent points: watch, steadfast, be men, be strong, each of which was so truly embodied in the character of Neal Dow that, in spite of opposition, he stands today as a man with a principle founded on the side of right, a leader and advocate for the protection of the home against the saloon.

Special services will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms next Sunday with floral decorations. Easter offering envelopes were distributed yesterday to be returned next Sunday, and it is hoped the amount realized from the contents will exceed the sum of $95, which was received last year.

SCOTCH PLAINS PUBLIC LIBRARY.

A Sketch of Its History, and a Lecture for Its Fund.

The lecture on "The Art of Conversation" by Mrs. David P. Hall of this city, for the benefit of the Scotch Plains Library Saturday evening in Assembly Hall, was a decided success in every way. An audience that could be justly described as good, both in number and quality, was present to welcome one who had been so long identified (as T. J. Nicholl well said in introducing the speaker) with every good work going on in the village.

Before introducing the lecturer, Mr. Nicholl called the attention of the audience to a few facts concerning the history and needs of the Library, as follows:

The Scotch Plains Public Library owes its existence, primarily, to a desire upon the part of a number of people of this village to provide for the youth of Scotch Plains a place sufficiently attractive to induce them to leave the dubious resorts which they had been accustomed to frequent and by degrees to awaken and strengthen in them a taste for occupations beneficial alike to their minds and morals.

In conformity with this idea, and principally through the efforts of Miss Mary N. Mead and David P. Hall, the sum of $1,000 was subscribed and on Nov. 15, 1888, a deed of trust was executed by Mrs. Margaret L. V. Shepard and others to a Board of Trustees for the purpose of a Public Library.

On Jan. 21, '89, the trustees leased the rooms of the Excelsior H. & L. Co., and two of them were set apart for the exclusive use of the boys as game-rooms. It was supposed at the time that the accommodation would be ample, but we were mistaken. The movement was a success from the beginning and but a few meetings were necessary to demonstrate the impracticability of long occupying our present quarters if we are to adequately meet the constantly increasing requirements. Not only are the rooms too small to accommodate the boys who now attend each session of the Library, but our books and papers, in answer to the literary demand of our patrons, have accumulated to such an extent as to make it a puzzling problem what to do with them.

Another serious drawback is the fact that the boys rooms are separated from the reading room by so slight a partition that the noise of the boys' voices is plainly heard through it, to the discomfort of those who are using it for reading purposes. It is idle to suppose that a boy can enjoy himself in silence, and if he is compelled to it, his pleasure being gone, the Library will lose all attraction for him and he will not attend.

It is, therefore, evident that not the least important requirement is room sufficient to allow for the entertainment of all our patrons in such a manner that all may enjoy themselves without in any way interfering with the enjoyment of others.

The trustees have pondered these difficulties *for a long time and have come to the conclu*sion that the only remedy is a building which can be devoted entirely to the purposes for which the Library was organized.

In furtherance of this object they have determined to enter upon a crusade having in view its accomplishment.

We have already established a fund for this purpose, and the object of this statement is to bring the matter to your attention in the hope that your interest in the success of the Library, which should be fully as great as that of the trustees, may induce you to lend us all the aid possible in the achievement of our design.

He then introduced Mrs. Hall, who began her address with a graceful allusion to her pleasure in speaking to so many old friends among whom had been spent many happy years. The lecture was listened to with close and appreciative attention and evident enjoyment, and was warmly applauded at the close.

Mrs. Walter Force of Fanwood then favored the audience with one of De-Koven's songs, "The Indian Love Song", which she rendered with great sweetness and taste.

Birthday Surprise.

Miss Laura Emmons was given a birthday surprise party by friends Saturday evening. Unlike most affairs of a like nature this was a genuine surprise. Dancing formed the principal amusement, and time slipped rapidly by until, as the clock struck 12, the final waltz was concluded. During the evening refreshments were served. Those present were: Miss Laura Emmons, Miss Alice Needham, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Norah Williams, Miss Helen Hasbrouck, Mr. and Mrs. Emmons, John McLoughlin, Edgar Serrell, Clarence Smith, Seymour Marsh, and Charles Angleman.

Grist of the City Court.

City Judge Coddington this morning suspended sentence on Michael Maher. Michael had been arrested for vagrancy and an attempt to better his condition by begging.

John Burns had been drunk and disorderly, but he promised to leave town, and so the Judge suspended sentence in his case also.

Wm. Frye pleaded guilty when asked about his connection with a Boulevard fight. The passing of his sentence was deferred.

Public Library Resources.

Quite a number of people took advantage of the opportunity to examine a special exhibition of books in the parlors of Library last Saturday. The books were displayed especially to show young people and teachers the resources of the library in books designed especially for them. Although comparatively few took advantage of this opportunity, those who did were amply repaid.

Soap.

The cleansing properties of soap are owing to the soda and potash which enter into its composition. Dirt requiring to be washed away, whether of the skin or clothing, is owing principally to dust particles and matters of a more or less greasy or fatty nature. If fats or oils are added to pure water, it is well known they do not mix or dissolve in that liquid, but if soap is present the fats and oils become readily dissolvable. The effect of soap, which is a combination of the alkalis of soda and potash and fatty acids, is therefore to unite with the greasy and fatty matters, rendering them soluble in water.

The alkalis of soda and potash which are contained in soap are more powerful cleansers when used alone, but in that case their action is too energetic, as they tend to destroy animal and vegetable fiber and hence are injurious to the skin and to fabrics. They therefore require to have their energies toned down, as it were, and this is accomplished by uniting them with fatty acids. When soap is dissolved in water, the soda or potash is set free to some extent and seizes the grease and dirt present, which thus become soluble and are washed away by the water.—Brooklyn Eagle.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

The Human Electrical Forces!

How They Control the Organs of the Body.

The electrical force of the human body, as the nerve fluid may be termed, is an especially attractive department of science, as it exerts so marked an influence on the health of the organs of the body. Nerve force is produced by the brain and conveyed by means of the nerves to the various organs of the body, thus supplying the latter with the vitality necessary to insure their health. The pneumogastric nerve, as shown here, may be said to be the most important of the entire nerve system, as it supplies the heart, lungs, stomach, bowels, etc., with the nerve force necessary to keep them active and healthy. As will be seen by the cut the long nerve descending from the base of the brain and terminating in the bowels is the pneumogastric, while the numerous little branches supply the heart, lungs and stomach with necessary vitality. When the brain becomes in any way disordered by irritability or exhaustion, the nerve force which it supplies is lessened, and the organs receiving the diminished supply are consequently weakened.

Physicians generally fail to recognize the importance of this fact, but treat the organ itself instead of the cause of the trouble. The noted specialist, Franklin Miles, M. D., LL. B., has given the greater part of his life to the study of this subject, and the principal discoveries concerning it are due to his efforts.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the unrivaled brain and nerve food, is prepared on the principle that all nervous and many other difficulties originate from disorders of the nerve centers. Its wonderful success in curing these disorders is testified to by thousands in every part of the land.

Restorative Nervine cures sleeplessness, nervous prostration, dizziness, hysteria, sexual debility, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy, etc. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs. It is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid.

CENTRAL AVE. AND SECOND STREET.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

THE TEN FOOT DRIVE.

By CHARLES LOTIN HILDRETH.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

At length she spoke to him, no longer in the cool, slightly sarcastic tone she had habitually adopted with him, but gently, almost respectfully:

"Why did you go among those men today, Ralph?" she asked.

"It had become necessary," he replied briefly.

"I knew how it would be," interposed Joyce from behind, "after their attempt yesterday to shoot the master from behind the hedge."

She caught Monckton convulsively by the sleeve. "What is this, Ralph?" she exclaimed. "What does he mean?"

"They were in dead earnest too," added Joyce. "You see the mark of the bullet over his eyebrow. Today you yourself saw what they did. Now this hat, my dear young lady"——

"And knowing the danger," she said in trembling tones, "you risked your life today! Oh, Ralph!"

"Well, why not?" he replied. "I had two objects in doing so. One was

"You risked your life today! Oh, Ralph!"

to establish my authority at the mines, and the other was—well, to satisfy myself whether I am a coward, or as courageous as most men."

She dropped her head. "You still remember those silly words of mine," she murmured. "You are unkind, Ralph."

"I do not wish to be," he answered gravely. "Indeed your words aroused me to a sense of position, and I thank you for them. Old evils need sharp cures."

"But you have not explained what has just happened."

"Simply that the cure came too late to be effectual," he replied, with a faint smile. He then gave her an outline of the events which have been related. He touched lightly upon his own share in them, but her woman's perception supplied the deficiency, and it was in an almost humble tone that she said:

"But now that you have done all that duty requires of you, you will have nothing more to do with these unreasonable men. You will take care of your own safety? You will go away till they come to their senses, Ralph?"

"No," he replied firmly. "My place is here. You forget, Imogene, that some of those poor fellows are willing and anxious to work. I must try to protect them."

"At least," she pleaded, "you will summon help? You will have a guard?"

Again he said: "No. That would be a confession of weakness."

"But," she insisted, with a sound of tears in her voice, "they may kill you."

"Well," he responded indifferently, "there are some distant relatives of mine who would be interested. No one else, I fancy."

He was not looking at her, or he would have seen how pale she was or the moisture that stood in her eyes. On her part she saw that he staggered slightly and caught him around the waist with her strong young arm.

"You are faint!" she cried. "Mr. Joyce, help!"

"It is nothing," he insisted, shaking off the weakness that possessed him.

By this time they were at the cross-road junction and but a short distance from the mine owner's dwelling. A groom had followed, leading Miss Duke's horse, and a gesture called him up to the group.

"Joyce," commanded his employer, "assist Miss Duke to mount. Where is your gallantry, man?"

As the overseer obeyed, the young lady leaned from the saddle, and with a glance which quite melted that worthy's heart said in a whisper:

"Watch over him, Mr. Joyce, will you not?"

"If the master had a wife," reflected Joyce, touching the battered fragment of the luckless hat as the girl rode away, "we might hope to manage him."

CHAPTER XVI.

NONRETALIATION.

For more than a fortnight Monckton was confined to his bed with the injuries he had received, which proved far more serious than he had been willing at first to admit. His youth and an excellent constitution prevailed, however, much to Joyce's delight. The overseer, narrow, pigheaded and obstinate while invested with the cloak of authority, when reduced to his proper condition of subservience developing some surprising traits, among them a devoted affection for his master, proved a most efficient nurse. Regularly every morning he brought into the sick-room a large bouquet of flowers, which he arranged in a vase on the table near the bed. "From Miss Duke, who has just asked after you most particularly, sir," he would say, observing the faint flush upon the invalid's cheek with much secret satisfaction.

"That is a most admirable young gentlewoman," he remarked on one of these occasions.

His patient gave his most emphatic assent.

"Just the wife for you, sir. A mine owner could not find a better mate."

"Joyce, you are a fool." The words were uttered with a smile, but followed by a sigh.

"Yes, sir. No doubt. Will you take your broth now, sir?"

Meantime there was no improvement in the state of affairs at the mines. Those of the men who had elected to return to their employment were not directly interfered with, but every obstacle was thrown in their way, and the improvements projected by the owner were rendered impossible by the opposition, led by Matthew North. The attempt to put up bulkheads in the perilous Ten Foot Drive was frustrated; the carpenters were driven away with blows, and the timbers already in place were torn down. Almost nightly depredations were committed in the owner's private grounds, culminating on a second and more successful attack upon the stables, in which the handsome and costly buildings were totally destroyed and the animals only saved by strenuous efforts on the part of the servants. Greatly to Joyce's disgust, Monckton steadily refused to invoke the aid of the law against the offenders, contenting himself with ordering a stricter watch to be kept upon the property.

"I think Matthew's got a screw loose."

"It is incredible," affirmed the overseer to Miss Duke, whom he met upon the road a short distance from the Monckton dwelling the day following the burning of the stables. "Would you believe it, ma'am, when I asked permission to have the rascals arrested, he looked at me in that strange way he has of late and said, 'We raised that devil ourselves, Joyce?' When I respectfully requested him to explain, he asked, 'Did you ever see your family starving about you while you were helpless to provide for them?' I replied that I was thankful my people had always been respectable. He only said, 'My poor Joyce!' Then he told me a story of how, when he first went to France, a mere boy, in some country place, the awkward, hobbling gait of the peasants made him laugh, and how an old man, pulling off his wooden shoes, showed his bare feet covered with sores, and said, 'My little gentleman, you have never worn sabots.' I shook my head and observed that I did not catch the point of the story. 'You have never worn sabots, Joyce,' he replied, 'and I have only just put them on.' I begged him not to excite himself," added the overseer, with a sigh, "for I saw that he was still wrong in the head."

Monckton's policy of nonretaliation was bearing better fruit than even he himself had anticipated. Though his persistent refusal to punish the wrongdoers was at first mistaken for intimidation, the fact that he refrained from calling upon the constabulary or the militia, either of which would have been promptly granted him by the state authorities, impressed the malcontents and insensibly weakened Matthew North's influence. Day by day deserters from his party joined the workers in the pits, and by the time the proprietor was sufficiently recovered to resume control of affairs fully 300 men had returned to duty. With the decline of his power North's enmity to Monckton increased in intensity. Fanatical as his opposition to the despotism of wealth had been while still honest and impersonal, now, fed by his despairing passion for Imogene Duke, it was nothing less than insanity. Indeed some of his former adherents had not hesitated to call him a madman to his face. At all hours of the day and night, with soiled and torn clothing, ghastly cheek and flaming eyes, he might be found wherever the men congregated in the village declaiming, arguing and threatening in tireless effort to keep together his disheartened forces and inspire them with some portion of the hatred he himself felt for the tyrant.

"Fact is," observed John Turner to his friend, Peter Lakey, one evening after listening to a violent address by North in the village tavern, "I think Matthew's got a screw loose about this thing."

"That's what education leads to," replied Peter sagely. "I hain't found no call to go foolin round with books and figgers. But Matthew, he always did feel hisself a peg higher'n the rest of us."

All that's Yellow is not Cottolene

COTTOLENE

Was bound to win, and to drive out lard from the kitchens of the world. When housekeepers wish to get rid of the unpleasant features and results of lard, they should get Cottolene, taking care that they are not given cheap imitations with vegetable names, spuriously compounded to sell in the place of Cottolene.

It's easy to avoid disappointment and ensure satisfaction. Insist on having Cottolene.

TO WED WEALTHY MEN

Miss Pollard Was One of a Party of Girl Conspirators.

So Declares a Report From Cincinnati—She is the Youngest and the Only One of the Party to Fail in Her Plans—The Secret of Where the Money to Conduct the Present Suit Comes From is Thus Explained. It is Said—The Facts Known and Will Be Brought Out by the Defense.

CINCINNATI, March 20.—A morning paper to-day publishes a story of Miss Madeline Pollard's life while a resident of this city, of which the following is the resume:

The Breckinridge case is simply the last chapter in a conspiracy, tactily formed and up to the beginning of the present litigation at Washington, tactily carried out. It was a conspiracy of girls brought together by circumstances in this city in 1883 and 1884. They were, in the language of a prominent gentleman here who is familiar with all of the circumstances, all bright, pretty, companionable girls, who had no means of support, and who resolved among themselves to marry, and marry well. Only those men who possessed such attributes as wealth and social standing were eligible. Madeline Pollard is the last of these to draw in her net. All of the others have been successful, but the last and youngest of the party has failed, at least, so far. Still, notwithstanding the fact that she has endangered the position of her sister conspirators, they are loyal to her.

The names of some of the conspirators are known, but are not given because of their standing here and the uselessness of exposure at present. Most of the facts are in the possession of Col. Breckinridge's attorneys, and some of them will be used in his defense.

The conspiracy was hatched by several young girl graduates of a medical college here. One of the ladies opened an office on Garfield place. In addition to this she kept a boarding house, which was used as the headquarters of the conspirators. It was a quiet, unostentatious place, and it was there that the ladies met the gentlemen of their choice.

One of these ladies was Josephine Hoimes, who was at the time quite well known here. She was private secretary to a well known and very wealthy physician. Later, when the physician died, she filled a situation of a similar character for E. L. Harper of the Fidelity bank. Shortly after the Fidelity failure, Josephine Holmes left for Washington, where through the influence of other fellow conspirators who had succeeded in marrying men of place and power, she secured a government situation. It was not long after she arrived in Washington that she became engaged to a capitalist of wide reputation. Subsequently she married him and is now in California.

It was just after the sensation in the medical college that Madeline Pollard made her appearance in this city. She had been acquainted with the lady who kept the house on Garfield place, and it was here that she was quartered during her stay in Cincinnati. Miss Pollard was young and ill. It was in this house that she was treated by those who had received diplomas from the medical college. It was in this city that she met the Mrs. Buchanan who is now in Washington with her. Mrs. Buchanan is conducting the patent medicine business of the prominent physician mentioned above, now deceased. She is conducting this business at the old location.

The gentleman who does not wish to have his name connected with the affair, mentioned at the head of the article, says he remembers Miss Pollard and her being here under the circumstances well. During this visit to the city she went under the name of Louise Wilson. She and Miss Holmes were friends at the time.

The daughter of the deceased doctor married in this city, and it is said that Mrs. Buchanan is conducting the patent medicine business referred to for her. It is a matter of record that over a million dollars has been made in this business. This, it is said, is the secret of the source of Miss Pollard's funds to carry on her case against Col. Breckinridge. It also accounts partially for the haste exhibited by Mrs. Buchanan in leaving Cincinnati at the first intimation of trouble and hurrying to Miss Pollard's side.

The other ladies are also married prominently. The gentleman who is the authority for this article was importuned several times by Col. Breckinridge's attorneys to come to Washington, but so far has refused. His deposition, setting forth some of these facts, is in the hands of those attorneys, however. The prominent attorney mentioned has several times, without the knowledge of what he was doing, given legal advice to the members of the conspiracy through his wife.

day was when Miss Pollard detailed a conversation with Sister Agnes at the foundling asylum where her first child was born. She had gone there last summer with her father to get evidence and the sister asked her why she wanted to ruin Col. Breckinridge in his old age. Telling her answers Miss Pollard cried out for justice. "He must bear his share," she said, "as I must bear mine. He ruined my life, and I will have justice."

The court room was crowded throughout the day, and Miss Pollard's bright answers brought frequent bursts of laughter until Judge Bradley administered a severe rebuke to the spectators. There was one conscious slip in her letters which she repeated in her oral testimony without correction, and which indicated that her literary studies had not made her text-perfect in biblical matters. She referred more than once to her early associates, of whom she said she was enamored, but who did not return her affection, as her "blind Barnabas," obviously meaning "blind Bartimeus, son of Timeus," who sat by the wayside begging, as record in St. Mark.

One thing to which Miss Pollard swore positively was that her relations with Mr. Breckinridge continued up to the 17th day of May, 1893. This date was nearly a month after Mr. Breckinridge's marriage to Mrs. Wing.

At one point when a letter with a black border was handed the witness by Mr. Butterworth and the question asked if she had written it, Miss Pollard, after carefully reading it, said in a clear and dramatic voice:

"I did not write that letter—I did not write it. However much it may look like my handwriting, I did not write it, and no one can tell it so well as the man who is sitting there. An expert has done this letter."

"Now, Miss Pollard don't talk that way," said Judge Wilson.

When questioned as to how long she remained in a certain house with Mr. Breckinridge in Cincinnati, the day after the night of the carriage ride when she alleges Mr. Breckinridge began to be affectionate, Miss Pollard turned to the defendant and asked:

"How long was it, Mr. Breckinridge?"

There was a buzz from the spectators, but Col. Breckinridge made no reply.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS.

Senate Considering Unimportant Work To-day.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Nothing of special public importance is before the senate to-day for consideration. The tariff bill is not expected from the committee before to-morrow at the earliest, and probably not before the last of the week. The only occurrence yesterday of general interest was the announcement by the vice-president that he had affixed his signature to the Bland seigniorage act. As it had previously been signed by the speaker of the house, the next formality in connection with it was the presentation of the enrolled bill to the president of the United States. Messages from the president transmitting the latest despatches from Minister Willis at Honolulu, in relation to affairs in Hawaii, and from Ambassador Bayard in London, in relation to the landing of British forces at Bluefields, Nicaragua, were presented to the senate and referred.

House of Representatives.

The election cases will not be reached to-day, in all probability, as the appropriation bills have not yet been disposed, so the expected period of filibustering is delayed. The entire session yesterday was spent in further consideration of the sundry civil bill. The amendment proposed to the paragraph relating to the Missouri river commission, directing the expenditure of certain sums of money at designated points, were all voted down. When the house adjourned at 5:30 the pending question was the point of order made by Mr. Black (dem., Ill.) against the changes in the method of management of the soldiers' home contained in the bill.

EASY RESTS THIS HEAD.

Leopold Doesn't Care if His Ministry Has Resigned.

BRUSSELS, March 20.—King Leopold has been notified by telegraph that the ministry have resigned. The king has replied that he will remain in Aix-les-Bains until to-morrow when he will return to Brussels. He intimates that he will have plenty of time during the Easter recess to deal with the cabinet crisis.

Will Not Employ Girls.

WOBURN, Mass., March 20.—George A. Simonds & Co., shoe stock manufacturers, are about trying the experiment of employing only male help in their various departments, where heretofore they have largely employed women. Lately the firm has been having some trouble with the girls, who refused a 10 per cent. reduction, and other girls were hired in their places, but were soon persuaded to go out. The firm then determined to engage males altogether, and 15 men went to work and will be taught the various departments of shoe stock making. More will be engaged immediately, the firm intending to employ some 75 men and boys. The dozen or more shoe stock factories in Woburn have always employed female help in the main.

PROGRESS OF THE CASE.

Miss Pollard Stands the Ordeal of Further Cross-examination.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—This is the seventh day of the now famous Pollard-Breckinridge case and the end is not yet in view. It is possible that Col. Breckinridge may take the stand to-morrow, and there is great interest as to what "this old fellow"—as one of his counsel called him—will have to say regarding his side of the case. It is now hinted that he has in store several big surprises for the jury and public, but nothing as to the nature of his coming testimony can be learned.

No matter what the colonel may say, Miss Pollard made a good impression even throughout the trying ordeal of cross examination. All day yesterday she was taken through the mazes of her life under the guidance of Major Butterworth. Sometimes she broke away from where he would lead her and would make a telling remark against the silver-haired defendant. She told how her alleged ruin was accomplished, how she gave herself up, heart, soul, body and mind to Col. Breckinridge, how she loved him, and how she acted the deceiver at his instigation, never once allowing a hint of their relations to fall from her lips during all the years preceding his marriage to Mrs. Wing. Miss Pollard was tearful at times, but at other periods her voice rose until it sounded loud above the protests of the attorneys. One of the most dramatic features of the very dramatic

CLEVELAND'S DILEMMA

Shall He Sign or Veto the Bland Bill?

Strongly Urged By Many Democratic Senators and Congressmen to Approve the Measure—Intimated That He May Do This to Put an End to Silver Legislation During His Term

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The president will have until the afternoon of March 29 to veto the Bland seigniorage bill, which is now in his possession, otherwise at that time it will become a law without his action. There is every reason to believe, however, that he will dispose of it one way or another without delay. Both he and Secretary Carlisle have been overrun with sensational and congressional callers urging the signing of the bill.

The full democratic majority of the coinage weights and measures committee of the house called on Secretary Carlisle at the treasury and urged him to advise the president to sign the bill, as a measure of financial relief and party expediency. Among those who called were many of the congressmen who last fall voted for the repeal of the Sherman law. They based their arguments on the ground that the democratic party in its national platform had promised financial relief to the people of the country; that the present measure was a step in that direction; that the bill if carried into a law, while not as much as the silver people desired, would at least afford some relief and show to their constituents that the democratic administration at Washington was not unfriendly to silver; and that in no way would the measure seriously or injuriously affect the financial prosperity of the country.

The president is giving to this question of silver the most careful and thorough investigation. He is now and has been for the past two or three days occupied most of his time in reading the speeches made in the house and in the senate in favor of the seigniorage silver bill; is obtaining also information from the treasury department as to the probable effect upon the finances of increasing the silver circulation of the country to the extent of $55,000,000; informing himself from the best writers on finances as to the relation of silver to gold; the condition of gold countries as compared to silver countries, and in a word is giving the whole subject as complete investigation as is possible for him to make.

It is stated, on semi-official authority, that the president will either sign or veto the coinage bill, and that he will not permit it to become a law by the lapse of time. His investigations have progressed so far that the assertion is made in administrative circles that if the president can be assured that the signing of the present seigniorage bill will put an end to silver legislation during his present term he will sign it, but unless such assurances are received he is inclined to veto it. Such assurances, it is said at the treasury department, have been made by prominent and influential members of the house committee on coinage, weights and measures.

Spread of the War on Slot Machines.

NEWARK, N. J., March 20.—Right in line with the action of the New York and Jersey City authorities comes the announcement of the Newark police commissioners that the nickel-in-the-slot machine must go, and the bars and cigar stores are closing them out rapidly. Just how many there are here, or how many varieties, it would be impossible to say, but there are enough to keep half the sporting population "half broke" all the time. But their days are numbered, as the new rule will probably be generally complied with.

Not Fugitive Sutherland.

PATERSON, N. J., March 20.—The cablegram from Nassau, N. P., purporting to connect the Mr. Sutherland who has arrived there with the missing police justice of Gravesend, is incorrect. The Mr. Sutherland referred to in the cablegram is of the firm of Sutherland & Edwards, yarn manufacturers, of this city, and the sentence: "Telephone to Mack," was meant for Mr. McCullough at Haledon. The Sutherland of this city is in no way related to the missing man.

Died From Fever in Brazil.

BOSTON, March 20.—Mr. L. S. Burnham, the owner of the steamer Santuit has received a cablegram from Capt. Doane, dated Bahia, Brazil, announcing the death from yellow fever of Chief Engineer Lorenzo Brown of the Santuit. He was 40 years of age, was a native of Maine and resided in Roxbury, Mass., where he leaves a wife.

Princeton College Magazine.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 20.—The following men have been elected editors of the College Literary Magazine: John H. Thatcher, Missouri, managing editor; Andrew C. Imbrie, New Jersey; Frank B. Morse, New York; Edwin M. Norris, Iowa; W. M. Urban, Pennsylvania, and Howard White, New Jersey.

Are Baseballists Laborers?

BUFFALO, March 20.—Immigration Inspector DeBarry has received a reply from Washington to his letter asking for instructions in the matter of Canadian ball players who are under contract with the Buffalo club. The department declines to render a decision in advance of an offence being committed, but the inspector is instructed to arrest and deport the players when they attempt to enter this country to carry out their contract. Then, if appealed to the department, it will pass upon the case.

COXEY'S GREAT ARMY

Arrangements for Departure Nearly Completed.

Rain or Shine it Will Move According to Programme—The California Contingent Makes Good Progress So Far—Ohio Officials Watching the Developments at Massilon.

MASSILON, O., March 20.—Arrangements for the departure of the "Commonweal" are being gradually completed, and by Thursday the entire programme will be completed. Tents for the organization meeting will be put up on the grounds of the gun club Saturday. Meetings are announced for every evening excepting Wednesday and on Sunday afternoon a monster demonstration will take place.

Commander Coxey does not care for weather changes and will move regardless of them. Lieutenant Brown has arranged at least a dozen songs on pertinent topics, set to popular airs, for the use of the army. They will be sung on the march and at meetings held on the way.

Inquiries from western points show greatly increased manifestations of interest. A Burlington, Ia., letter tells of 175 men of that city who have applied for railroad passes to the starting place. The influx of out-of-town sympathizers is not expected to begin until Thursday.

Ohio Officials Alert.

COLUMBUS, March 20.—"No orders have been sent to Col. Geyger, of the eighth regiment, at Massilon by Gov. McKinley regarding the Coxey 'Industrial Army,' as has been reported," said Adj.-Gen. J. C. Howe last night. "I have talked the matter over with the governor, however, and we are watching the developments at Massilon. I cannot see where a single recruit to his army will come from Ohio, yet some people are taking an interest in the scheme, as is proved by the enormous mail Coxey gets every day. He would be a bad man to lead a crowd of discontented people."

The California Contingent.

ONTARIO, Cal., March 20.—The "Industrial Army," numbering about 600 men, in four organized companies, arrived here Sunday night. Later in the evening they attempted to board a freight train, but it passed by without stopping. In the morning, members of the army climbed aboard a freight train bound for Colton, the trainmen making no resistance and even waiting until all could get on board.

COLTON, Cal., March 20.—The "Industrial Army" arrived from Ontario this morning. Citizens provided food. The men were orderly. The next stop will be Yuma, Arizona.

Death of the "Little Man."

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., March 20.—A person well known in Cape Cod, in Boston and vicinity, died here Sunday night. He was Isaiah H. Hatch, the "Little Man," aged 63 years. Deformed at birth, at his death he was but a little over three feet in height and weighed only eighty pounds. Possessed of some literary talent, his writings in both prose and verse often found their way into the local papers. He had been offered sums of money to exhibit at museums, but preferred to travel around the country selling photographs of himself and descriptive verses, by which he supported himself and accumulated a snug little sum which was deposited in a savings bank.

This Chinaman Has Citizen's Papers.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 20.—A Danbury Chinaman has a certificate of naturalization issued in 1888 making him a citizen of the United States. The question as to whether he is now required to register and obtain a certificate of residence or be deported under the provisions of the Geary Chinese exclusion act, is to be submitted by Collector Byxbee to the United States treasury department. Judge Shipman of the United States circuit court of appeals recently gave an opinion that a Chinaman cannot be made a citizen under the present laws.

Miners Accept a Wage Reduction.

PHILLIPSBURG, Pa., March 20.—At the miners' mass meeting in this place yesterday afternoon, which was attended by 3,000 miners, on the advice of the leaders of the organization, a resolution was adopted accepting the reduction offered by the operators. Notification was given the operators that the reduction was accepted under protest, and that a demand would be made for a restoration of the old scale of wages whenever other regions were brought in line to make a like demand.

Tillman at Washington.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Gov. Tillman, of South Carolina, is in Washington to confer with officials of the national government on liquor seizures in South Carolina by federal officials. A conflict of jurisdiction has arisen between United States internal revenue officials and Gov. Tillman's constables and it is to settle this question, which is a highly important one, that he has come here.

Confidence in Rosebery.

DUBLIN, March 20.—The Freeman's Journal says that Lord Rosebery's Edinburgh speech has confounded the prophecies of disaster to home rule and justified the confidence felt by his friends that he never at any time harbored the absurd doctrine ascribed to him by the London Times and John Redmond.

One and One-Fourth Pounds Baby.

MONTPELIER, Vt., March 20.—A daughter was born Sunday night to Calvin Townsend and wife, the weight of the child being one and one-fourth pounds. The child is apparently all right and doing well. The parents are normal sized people.

Will Sue the City for Mob Damages.

PATERSON, N. J., March 20.—The Barbour Bros., flax thread manufacturers, have served notice on Mayor Braun stating that they would bring suit against the city for damages done their mills on Spruce and Grand streets by the mobs recently.

Kansas Forest Fires.

CHARLESTON, Kas., March 20.—Twenty-five families have been reduced to destitution by forest fires on Connelton mountain which have been raging for several days. There are no signs of abatement in the conflagration.

BROCKWAY IS GUILTY

Charges of Brutality and Cruelty Most Amply Sustained.

Permitted, Sanctioned and Encouraged Needless and Inhuman Punishment on the Part of the Keepers By His Own Example—The Immediate Removal of the Board of Managers of Elmira Reformatory Strongly Recommended—A Number of Other Reforms Urged.

ALBANY, March 20.—The state board of charities has unanimously adopted the report of the special committee of the board which has spent several months in investigating the administration of affairs at the Elmira reformatory and the charges of cruelty against Superintendent Brockway. This report with the recommendations of the state board of charities based thereon, is a lengthy one, and was last night transmitted to both branches of the legislature.

Nearly every charge, with the exception of that permanent injuries resulted to inmates from the punishments received in the institution, are sustained by the report. The immediate removal of the board of managers of the institution is strongly recommended. The board abstains from making any recommendations as regards the removal of Superintendent Brockway inasmuch as he is an appointee of the board of managers and they therefore recommended the removal of the appointing power. The present system of management, it is recommended, should be continued, the board holding that the reformatory should not become a part of the state prison system and consequently come under the management of the superintendent of state prisons.

The report of the investigating committee was written by Commissioner Edward Littlefield, of Brooklyn, the only member of the committee who heard all of the testimony. Regarding the principal charge—that of cruelty—against Superintendent Brockway, Mr. Litchfield concludes in his report as follows:

"That the charges and the allegations against the general superintendent, Z. R. Brockway, of cruel, brutal, excessive, degrading and unusual punishment of the inmates" are proven and most amply sustained by the evidence and that he is guilty of the same. That the general superintendent in punishing convicts by blows across the face by the paddle, and the handle thereof, not because of any offense committed by them, but because they happen to turn their heads, often for the purpose of pleading for mercy, is guilty of needless cruelty and gross inhumanity. That the general superintendent permitted and encouraged officers and keepers to strike, kick beat and otherwise practice brutality upon the inmates, when within his presence in the bathroom and that therefore said officers and keepers were encouraged to exercise brutality upon the inmates elsewhere and when not in his presence. We therefore find the general superintendent guilty of the charge of "permitting, countenancing and encouraging brutality on the part of the officers and keepers."

The following are the recommendations of the state board of charities based on the report of its investigating committee:

That corporal punishment is practiced in the reformatory should be prohibited by law.

The appointment of one or more resident chaplains of the reformatory.

That an experienced and properly qualified physician should be required to reside in the reformatory.

That relatives of the managers be not appointed to positions in the reformatory. The physician of the institution now is the son of one of the managers.

That no person on parole be compelled to return until the court determines that the provisions of the parole have been violated.

Being satisfied that gross wrongs have been perpetrated under color of law through power given the board of managers to transfer prisoners to the state prisons, we recommend that no convict shall be transferred from the reformatory to a state prison until he shall have had a hearing before a court of record, which said court shall have full power to determine whether or not such convict shall be so transferred.

We recommend that the trial court shall determine and fix in the sentence the maximum term for which the prisoner may be imprisoned in the reformatory, or in the reformatory and state prison if subsequently transferred thereto, the retaining the privilege of earning his freedom in a less period, as under the present system.

We recommend that the law prohibiting corporal punishment in state prisons be amended so as to include state reformatories, or, that if the use of corporal punishment is to be continued in state male reformatories it shall only be administered upon the judgment of a majority of the board of managers after opportunity has been granted to the accused to be heard in his defense. That said judgment shall determine the character of the punishment to be administered and if by paddling the number of blows shall be stated.

That the punishment shall be administered by a subordinate officer of the institution who shall not be the general superintendent and that at least two members of the board shall be present to witness each case of punishment and that quarterly reports of such punishments be made to the state board of charities.

The board earnestly renews the recommendations heretofor repeatedly made against the further enlargement of the accommodations of the Elmira reformatory and as earnestly recommends the immediate establishment and organization of another reformatory for men to be located in the eastern part of the state where it will be convenient of access from the metropolitan district.

The licentiousness shown to have existed in the reformatory at Elmira and for which the system of "doubling up" is largely responsible, is so vile as to be almost incredible of belief.

The evidence shows grave abuses, and in consideration of these facts, the state board of charities holds the managers primarily and morally responsible for these various grave abuses and strongly recommends their immediate removal.

The report was laid on the table in both legislative branches and ordered printed.

PLAINFIELD PAREGORIC.

Dr. Simpson Says that "First Families" Take It as a Beverage.

(From Today's Sun.)

People in Jersey have queer ways of getting jags. The statement was printed recently that down in south Jersey, among the pines, the natives take turpentine straight. Over in the western part of the State, near Philadelphia, they frequently use kerosene oil as a beverage when they want to be real devilish. Then in the cities, and in the few no-license towns, it is n't uncommon to hear about perfumery becoming drunk. It remained for Plainfield to develop the paregoric jag.

In the popular mind paregoric and babies are intimately associated. Probably no mother ever thought of a real live drunk being concealed in the innocent-looking bottle. Dr. M. J. Simpson of Plainfield says, however, that he knows of several of the first families who use three eight-ounce bottles of paregoric a week, and maybe more.

"I assure you", said the Doctor to The Sun reporter yesterday, "this paregoric habit is more frequent than most people suppose. It is, indeed. It is a sort of combination drunk. Paregoric contains, among other things, about 48 per cent. of alcohol, which is about the same proportion of alcohol that there is in whiskey. Then it contains 2 per cent. of opium, so that the drinker gets the effect of both poisons at one dose, and for about the same price. Two per cent. of opium is about one-sixteenth of a grain to a tablespoonful. That would be about one grain to a drink the size of an ordinary drink of whiskey.

"Paregoric drinking, I think, is almost as frequent as laudanum drinking, and laudanum is used about as frequently for purposes of intoxication as is opium in other forms."

Surprised.

Mrs. William Chamberlin arranged a delightful surprise for her sister, Miss Dorothea Martin, last evening, which took place at Mrs. Chamberlin's home on New street. Crescent Church Semi-Centennial.

The fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Crescent Avenue church will be celebrated tomorrow evening by a service in the chapel at 8 and a reception in the parlors at 9. Addresses will be made by Rev. Theo. S. Brown of Chatham, N. Y., and Rev. John C. Bliss, D. D., of New York city, the two surviving former pastors. The first pastor, Rev. William Whittaker, died three years ago. Rev. Wm. R. Richards, D. D., the fourth and present pastor, will give an historical address Sunday evening at 7:30 in the church. All are cordially invited to be present at the services and the reception. Both Dr. and Mrs. Bliss are expected to be present Wednesday evening.

Epidemic of Runaways.

Three runaways made East Third street a dangerous thoroughfare at 11 this morning. Noah Terry's horse started the series by running away with a light wagon from E. J. Flannery's blacksmith shop. A collision with the wagon of the Armour Beef Company started their horse, and in a similar way a team owned by E. Kinsey, a Somerville butcher, was added to the runaways.

At the corner of Third and Richmond streets the two meat wagons stopped amid the crash of collision, the Somerville wagon being damaged the most. Mr. Terry's horse continued down Fifth street to his stables in Netherwood.

New Dry-Goods House.

It is understood that Charles W. DeGraw, head clerk, and Frank Putnam, buyer, employed in Edsall's dry-goods store, will form a partnership and start a similar establishment. They have rented the store in the Stillman Block now occupied by M. Goldman, and will take possession April 1.

BY THE WAY.

—French's watering-cart began to sprinkle the streets today.

—The High School has a new society, the Linnæan. The membership is limited to 25, and 17 already belong. The object is to study botany and entomology. Meetings will be held Monday afternoons. The teachers co-operating are Supt. Maxson, Mr. Holck, Miss Mills and Miss Whitney.

—Use the best paper first and take enough space to make the ad effective; use all you profitably can in that paper before you consider any other. One good ad beats two poor ones. Two short poles are not as good as one long one when you're after persimmons. The biggest circulation in Plainfield is that of The Press.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

The readers of our publications are requested to use Salvation Oil for any and all pains. It is a sure cure. 25c.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS.

Scotch Plains.

There is a movement on foot to enforce the Sunday-closing law in Scotch Plains.

A meeting of the Town Committee will be held in Excelsior Hall tomorrow night.

T. A. Gere, of the New York Tribune, spent Sunday with his son-in-law, T. M. Paff, Jr.

Charles Mosier is suffering from the effects of a fall Saturday night which resulted in a bruised head.

Dr. Charles Layton is once more able to be out again after an attack of rheumatism which last six weeks.

W. E. Purviance of Rahway has been taking excellent photographic views in the vicinity of the Plains during the past few days.

Philip Radin is suffering from a bruised bone in his hand. He has been to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment, but it is still very painful.

George Ball will retire from the grocery business April 1. He says he will devote his entire attention to base-ball, probably with the Elizabeths.

Buckley & Whitenack dissolved partnership yesterday. Wm. R. Buckley continues in the grocery business, while Thomas Whitenack returns to his old occupation, farming.

Town Committeeman L. W. Miller sold his stock and farming implements at auction today. He has rented his farm, a mile and a half north of this place, to Henry Schenck, of Metuchen.

Henry C. Meyer, of New York, has bought the Spencer property on the hill and is having it renovated preparatory to taking up his residence there. The location is one of the finest in the town.

Scotch Plains was without tonsorial conveniences yesterday. Barber Charles Mann, who moved to Plainfield last week but still continues business in his shop here, cut his hand Friday while caning chairs. He was able to work Saturday but gave up yesterday.

A queer colored character is "Boss" Drake. He celebrated a birthday last Thursday, going through the formality of cigars, but which birthday no one knows. Old inhabitants say he looked the same 50 years ago as he does now. There seems to be no doubt that he has lived a century.

Scotch Plains lost one of its best known citizens and celebrated fishermen in the death of Oliver Nester which occurred last Friday. He was 77 years old and leaves a wife and three sons. Elder B. W. Hand, of Plainfield, conducted services at the house Sunday, and the interment was made in Hillside Cemetery.

The Misses Hayes have sold their farm of 45 acres to Mr. Colgate who will soon move there from his present residence. The former owners have rented Mrs. West's house temporarily, but have bought a lot in Fanwood and will go there when they have completed the erection of a handsome new house upon it.

Dunellen and New Market.

John Newton Apgar is about to erect a house for himself next to his father's place.

Squire Huff has put up a stove in the room used for court, and otherwise improved it.

The several cases which the Central Railroad Company are pushing are not for coal stealing but for trespassing on the company's property.

John Apgar is building a substantial house for John Hunt which is to be ready for occupancy April 1. Huff Bros. are doing the painting.

At Stephen Brown's house an attempt at robbery was made last Friday night, but Mr. Brown happened to be home and scared the intruders away.

Officer Corsa was in Dunellen yesterday and had the pleasure of seeing a large number of young men go through on coal trains. The riders all saluted.

Michael Gallagher says that he will pay the fine and costs of his trial if the railroad company will drop all other cases. It seems now that the company wants those for whom warrants have been issued, to pay for the same, but Gallagher says he will not settle that way.

David Kuldoches, aged 10, was walking along Front street a day or two ago, pulling a small express wagon in which was some coal. Officer Corsa helped the boy draw his load home and then arrested him, without a warrant. There was no evidence to hold the boy, so Squire Huff very properly let him go.

A party of women, including Mrs. Bambrock, Mrs. Breaker, Mrs. Goeltz, Mrs. Webber, all of New York, had a most delightful time yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Winges, where they were entertained in a most hospitable manner. In the afternoon they all visited Taylor's bowling alleys and bowled a most creditable game. Mrs. W. Taylor, Mrs. C. D. Taylor and Miss M. Slade joined the party and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The average score made by each was 50.

WEST END NOTES.

Miss Genevelve Taylor, of Trenton, has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Pugh of West Fourth street.

John Cose is building a hennery to accommodate 200 chickens. He will not confine himself to raising one variety.

Someone is poisoning valuable dogs in the West End. D. Thompson and Jack Dixon have each lost a valuable bird dog.

An entertainment will be given in Hope Chapel Thursday evening, April 5. It will be in aid of the excursion fund of the Young Men's League.

WEST ENDER.

PETER WRIGHT OUT OF A JOB.

His Big Hotel Closed Because Its Lessee Could n't Pay the Rent.

The Hotel New Netherlands, Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, owned by William Waldorf Astor, leased by Gen. Ferdinand P. Earle, and managed by Peter B. Wright of Plainfield, will be closed Thursday.

There are at present about 225 lodgers in the hotel. The first intimation they had that they must leave was in the following notice, posted in the office yesterday forenoon:

The guests of the New Netherland are respectfully notified that, owing to the demands of the owners, which I am unable to meet, the hotel will be closed March 22.

FERDINAND P. EARLE.

Down in one corner of the notice was the name C. A. Farley, City Marshal.

Among those who have been making their homes in the hotel are many families. Apartments had been engaged for the entire season. Many of the families had brought to the hotel pianos, paintings, and furniture. The "quit" notice fairly astounded everybody about the house.

Indignant protests were heard on every side. Many of the lodgers declared that it would simply be impossible to make new living arrangements by Thursday.

Gen. Earle was notified of dispossess proceedings last February, but serving of the warrant was postponed until yesterday in order to give him an opportunity to make new arrangements. Since that time he has made every effort to effect a compromise by which he could get the hotel on more favorable terms and pay up the back rent.

Gen. Earle wrote to Mr. Astor stating on what term he thought he could take the hotel. Mr. Astor replied favorably. He then asked would he consent to have the back rent distributed over five years. Mr. Astor sent a cablegram in reply, dated March 10, "Proposal declined." Gen. Earle then sent the following cablegram:

To William Waldorf Astor, London:

Are your orders to forcibly eject my wife, four children, and myself unmercifully from the New Netherlands on the 19th instant?

EARLE.

To this Mr. Astor did not reply. Early yesterday City Marshal Farley served the dispossess warrant.

All the guests in the house gathered about Gen. Earle and offered expressions of sympathy. Gen. Earle summed up the situation, so far as he was concerned, in a very few words: "It leaves me without a dollar", he said.

Advertisers and the Coupon Schemes.

The stand taken by The National Advertiser in denouncing the coupon schemes has been endorsed by advertisers and publishers all over the country. A number of papers have reproduced the editorials which appeared in that paper bearing on this question, and advertisers generally have been very emphatic in condemning publishers that use their columns for such mercantile schemes and hence demoralize their advertising patronage.

One of the most intelligent advertisers of the country is Mr. Fletcher of Centaur Co., manufacturers of Castoria, who is a liberal user of The Press columns, the only paper in Plainfield he considers a paying medium. In a recent talk with a representative of The National Advertiser he said: "The National Advertiser hit the nail squarely on the head in its utterances on the coupon question, and I endorse all it said. Circulation gained by the use of the coupon scheme is practically of no use to the advertiser. People buy the papers for the coupons and never look at the advertisements.

"Some of the papers are running announcements two and three columns wide to sell their pictures, and the result is that small advertisements of legitimate firms are thrown in the shade and remain unnoticed. A number of these papers are furthering these schemes to enable their solicitors to come to me and other advertisers and claim a large circulation, when, as a matter of fact, the circulation gained in this manner is worthless.

"A newspaper, like any other business enterprise, has to be built up on solid ground and cannot be puffed out by schemes like these. Its circulation must be gained on its merits and not by catch-penny ideas."

Served on the Wrong Man.

Officer Mattox this morning under an execution issued by Justice Moore, levied upon property of Mrs. Anna M. Gwynette of Fanwood on account of a judgment entered on Saturday against her in favor of Wm. Garaghty.

It is rumored her counsel secured an appeal, but his clerk served the notice last night, not on the constable in the case, but on a man who is no constable and knew nothing about it.

Praise for a Plainfield Road.

Ex-Street Commissioner George M. Angleman is very proud of the piece of macadam road put down by him on Park avenue from the city line to the Holly farm. It has stood two winters wear without a fault, and is apparently as good as when put down. The county engineer of Middlesex county recently rode over it, and he tells Mr. Angleman it is one of the very best roads he ever saw.

A Catskill Hotel Man.

[From Catskill, N. Y., Recorder.]

Mr. Joseph McGiffert, one of our prominent hotel proprietors, has reason to extol the merits of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. In speaking of it to our reporter he said: "I was all run down from kidney and liver trouble; three physicians treated me after the old school methods, but I grew worse. One of our prominent bankers said to me, 'Why don't you take Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy? It cured me, and my trouble was quite similar to yours.' So without delay I began its use; the result was I gained daily and in a little while I was sound and well again. I suppose I have recommended it to a hundred or more of my summer boarders, and in every case it has done them good."

2,000 bottles of Dr. Whitford's Bronchial Syrup have been sold in this section. A letter from C. W. Saxon, Farina, Ills., says: "I consider your Bronchial Syrup one of the best cough remedies on the market. I have been in the drug business fourteen years and can say that I have never sold a remedy that gives such universal satisfaction." Sold by L. W. Randolph. Price 25 cents 12 23 y

FRAUDULENT BARGAIN SALES.

Schemes Concocted by Dishonest Dealers to Hoodwink the People.

In recent years the advertisements of "bankrupt" and "foreclosure" sales have become quite common. The pe chant among certain classes of people for taking advantage of the necessities of their fellow men to obtain something for less than its real value is utilized by the promoters of these schemes to dispose of second class goods at first class prices. Some of these sharks have an admirable system to better enable them to delude and hoodwink the public.

Instead of, as was formerly the custom, dropping down into a town, renting a room and at once advertising their great "bankrupt" sale, they pursue a different method. A stool pigeon is sent ahead, who rents a room in a city or town centrally located and puts in a stock of merchandise. He announces by handbills widely distributed and through the columns of the local papers that, like the country journalist, he has "come to stay." A week elapses, and another individual, representing himself as the agent of jobbers, puts in his appearance with a chattel mortgage on the stock, which he proceeds to foreclose.

The first man, quite crestfallen evidently, gets himself interviewed by the newspaper reporter, and, after a recital of his woes and misfortunes and a dissertation on the excellence and good qualities of the merchandise which has been wrested from him by the iron hand of the remorseless mortgagee, hies himself to some other town to repeat the operation. The conspirator who is left in charge, with a display of enterprise worthy of a better cause, floods the surrounding country and neighboring towns with lurid posters announcing a "mortgagee's sale," with some account of the wonderful sacrifices to be made in order to realize the mortgage indebtedness at the earliest practical moment, and cunningly worded "locals," reciting the same story, find their way into the columns of the local papers.

This is the bargain seeker's opportunity, and the way the "penny wise and pound foolish" population of town and country respond to the advertisement and load themselves down with shoddy goods, antiquated clothing or worthless jewelry is a caution. Persons who have been in debt to their home merchant since the mind of man runneth not back to the contrary bring their ready cash and plank it down to the mountebank in return for his doubtful wares. A few weeks' use fills the bosoms of the bargain seekers with vain regret as they contemplate the condition of their much vaunted bargains.

These specious "sales" seldom deceive the sensible man or woman. A moment's consideration should convince any one that if the merchandise offered was as represented, standard goods, before the local merchants and dealers would allow them to be disposed of in competition with their goods they would buy the entire stock and take it out of the market. The "agent," if the mortgage was bona fide, would be glad to dispose of the entire stock in this manner in order to save time and expense. But such is not the case. This class of goods is manufactured expressly for these irresponsible concerns and is never found on the counters of reputable dealers. The gudgeons who bite at the bait get hooked. Trade with established merchants is the only safe rule.

Taylor against Lee.

At Fanwood yesterday in Judge Moore's Court the case of W. B. S. Taylor, of New York, against Dr. Richard Lee, of Fanwood, on contract, was tried. Dr. Lee admitted his indebtedness and making a payment on account with agreement to liquidate in full at an early date. This was met by Mr. Taylor in an equally gentlemanly manner and the matter amicably adjusted without a witness being sworn.

The Court thanked both parties for the gentlemanly manner in which they conducted the case and drew a parallel between that and the one in which he sat as justice last Saturday wherein the witnesses acted in a very contemptuous manner.

The Court was in turn thanked by the parties in interest, one of whom remarked that he was surprised to find in a country justice such a perfect type of a gentleman.

The Eye.

The human eye seldom fulfills all the requirements of a perfect optical instrument. When, however, the error is slight it may be disregarded; but when sufficient to produce headache, pain in the eyes, or poor vision, it should be corrected at once by wearing properly adjusted glasses. If your eyes are causing you pain or anxiety call on Leech, Stiles & Co's eye specialist who will be at 7 East Front street, Thursday from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. Examination is free.

Good Friday Night.

Union Good Friday services will be conducted at 7:30 in the evening in Grace P. E. Church by the following clergymen: Rev. Dr. Yerkes, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Rev. Dr. Barnes, Rev. G. K. Newell, Rev. Dr. Lowry, Rev. Dr. Richards, Rev. C. E. Herring and Rev. C. Schenck.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH, if you're a suffering woman, demands Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. There's no other medicine like it, for women's peculiar ills. No matter how distressing your symptoms, it relieves your aches and pains, and if faithfully used will bring a permanent cure in every chronic weakness or derangement, in catarrhal inflammation, and in the displacements of women. West Liberty, O.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Dear Sir—I can cheerfully recommend your valuable medicine, the "Favorite Prescription," to suffering females. Three years ago my health became so poor that I was scarcely able to help with the household duties. I was persuaded to try your medicine, and I purchased six bottles. That, with the local treatment you advised, made me strong and well.

My sister has used it in the family with like results.

ORDERED AWAY FROM RIO

All the American Warships Will Leave at Once.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Secretary Herbert has ordered all the American warships away from Rio. The New York will go to St. Lucia, W. I., there to await further instructions by cable from the navy department. The Charleston will go to Montevideo to join the Newark.

These orders were dispatched on receipt of the following cablegram from Captain Philip, commanding the Charleston:

"Rio harbor is clear of foreign men-of-war, except the New York and Charleston. The Portuguese vessel was the last to leave. It is reported here that da Gama was a passenger on her. The fever is increasing and has reached the epidemic stage, so that the British steamers coming northward will not touch at Rio. It does not appear that there remains any further necessity for keeping an American man-of-war here as the insurrection has been put down and a longer stay of the vessels would be injudicious."

Platt Sticks to the New England.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Receiver Platt of the New York & New England says there is not the slightest foundation for the report that he is to retire from the company. He said the matter of a cash assessment larger than was first thought necessary was receiving the consideration of the reorganization committee. He could not talk upon that point. Any connection which he might have with the Cataract Construction company would not alter his relations with New England.

Chinese Boycott a Sunday School.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 20.—Twenty-five Chinamen have declared a boycott against the First M. E. church Sunday school. A week ago their opium dens were raided, 66 arrests made, and fan-tan paraphernalia in abundance confiscated. Mrs. Crocker, wife of Police Sergeant Crocker, teaches the Chinese Sunday school class, and they allege that she gave the police a hint of their gambling. They have, therefore, decided to boycott her and the Sunday school.

No Clue to the Peck Murderers.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 20.—Thomas Berry and Thomas Kilfoil, two Hartford young men arrested Sunday on suspicion of being the murderers of Robert S. Peck at West Hartford, have been discharged. Eleven men have been arrested on suspicion of being the murderers and discharged. The sheriff and all his deputies are still working on the case, but without any tangible clue.

Yale Footballists

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 20.—Capt. Hinkey, of the Yale football eleven, has issued a call for candidates for the eleven to form a practice squad immediately after the Easter vacation. Weekly contests in punting and drop kicking will be held and prizes offered for excellence in each event. Practice will be continued throughout the spring term.

British Museum.

LONDON, March 20.—For the purpose of extending the British museum the government has purchased five and a half acres of ground adjoining that institution. The property was purchased from the duke of Bedford and the price paid was $200,000. This will give the museum a total area of fourteen and one-half acres.

Captain of Yale Freshmen's Crew.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 20.—James H. Simpson of St. Paul, Minn., has been elected permanent captain of the Yale freshman crew.

Ratcliff Declared Not Guilty.

JACKSON, Miss., March 20.—The jury in the Ratcliff-Jackson killing case at Kosciusko brought in a verdict that Ratcliff is not guilty.

Relieved By Death.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 20.—Millionaire R. S. Ives, who recently became violently insane, is dead.

Liquor Legislation in Iowa.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 20.—It is believed that a compromise liquor bill will pass the legislature this week. The republicans are under great pressure from the advocates of a modification of the prohibitory law, and it looks very much as though some bill would pass both houses this week. A local option, high license bill is likely to be the outcome. Iowa has not had a law legalizing the sale of spirituous liquors in forty years, but prior to the enactment of the present prohibitory law the sale of ale, wine and beer was legalized.

The Cornell Banquet Tragedy.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 20.—The Tompkins county grand jury are now considering the evidence which the district-attorney has against the several students in the Cornell banquet poisoning case. Before the judge's charge it was considered almost certain that they would not hand in an indictment in the matter, but this charge and the cartooning and editorials which have followed it have had such an effect upon the grand jury that an indictment against at least one or more suspected students is believed to be inevitable.

Kossuth's Condition.

TURIN, March 20.—Louis Kossuth's fever went down somewhat Sunday evening, his mind became clear, and he sat up in bed. He talked with his nurse, as if he had been but slightly ill and eventually started to leave the bed to put on his clothes. He fell back after the first effort, and sank, half-fainting, on the pillows. When he regained full consciousness, he began speaking of his love for Hungary. It would grieve him, he said, to die outside his country.

One Point Against the Trolley.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 20.—Opponents of the trolley street car system have claimed that where it exists in the city electrolysis is destroying the iron water pipes. Several secret service pipes have been dug up eaten through in several places with the return electric current which escapes through the ground to the pipes which are buried five feet deep.

Princeton Birds the Winners.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 20.—The cocking main between Wilmington and Princeton birds near Wilmington, has resulted in a victory for Princeton by winning eleven straight battles. Sporting men from Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey were present, and over $2,000 changed hands on the result.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

CHAPTER XVII.

MOTHER AND SON.

North himself had seasons of bitter self communion when the truth arose before him like an accusing ghost and would not be laid. At such times his invalid mother would hear him pacing the floor of his chamber in the small but neat cottage which he had built with his savings, and she would listen, her heart yearning over this big, handsome fellow, her only son, divining, with a mother's love, something of his trouble. Once she had painfully toiled up stairs and found him with his head resting upon his arms on the table where he wrote or read at night. When he sat erect, startled at her entrance, she saw that his face was stained with tears which he vainly sought to conceal.

"Oh, Matthew, my boy!"

"Yes, mother. But why are you not in bed?"

"I could not sleep, Matthew. I heard you walking and walking."

"Heartless brute that I am to be thundering about in my clumsy boots at this hour." He placed her frail figure in his armchair and drew up a stool beside her.

"Matthew, what is it?" she said. "Can you not tell me your trouble?"

"Folly, mother, folly and its proper punishment. There is nothing more to tell."

"Can you not speak freely to your mother, my boy?" Her voice was wonderfully tender, and she took his large hard hand between both of her own and caressed it gently. "It will ease your heart to talk of it."

"Well," he laughed constrainedly, "I thought myself a great man, mother, a reformer, a benefactor of my kind, and I have found out that I am just a weak fool—a common, ignorant, vulgar demagogue, mother."

"Don't say that, Matthew. You have tried to do your duty, manful and honest"——

"No," he interrupted harshly, "there is where you are wrong, mother. I began all right, but—but I let other things come into my life, other cravings and hopes, which have corrupted my motives and destroyed my usefulness. I meant to do battle for the poor and the downtrodden against the rich and the powerful, keeping myself pure and clean. I have fought—yes, fought desperately—but personal hatred and jealousy were at the bottom of it all."

"Matthew!"

"Yes, mother, it is true. I have been blind, but I can sometimes see myself as I really am. I had dreams, mother—great, noble dreams. I had ambitions in which there was no spark of selfishness. I worked, studied, learned many things which men of my way of life seldom trouble themselves about, grew proud of my own strength and fell as the evil angel is said to have fallen."

"It was a sad day for us when she first came into this house."

"What do you mean, mother?" He drew back and looked at her frowningly.

"Do not try to deceive your mother, Matthew. It is love for her that has done all this. From the hour you first saw her you have been a changed man. There was a new look in your face, a new tone in your voice—more confident and yet more humble. And you were always restless and always pondering, pondering. And you groaned in your sleep. When I came to cover up your shoulders, lest you should take cold, I heard always one name you muttered in your dreams. It was"——

"Don't mother, don't," he interrupted in a husky whisper. "I can't bear it."

He rested his head on her knee, and for a long time neither spoke, the son breathing heavily, while his mother passed her thin hand caressingly among his curls with that touch which only mothers know and which they learn from God. With it they soothe, forgive and impart courage. They convey the utter sacrifice and self abnegation, the devotion and faith that neither shame nor crime nor neglect nor the whole world's condemnation can shake. Those of us who in these days preach the materialistic doctrine and demonstrate to our own satisfaction that the mother is only an animal among animals, and that her love is a mere animal instinct, have surely forgotten that touch.

He lifted his head at length, with a haggard smile upon his worn and emaciated face. "It only needed that," he said. "My mother has discovered my disgraceful secret! Well, yes, I confess the whole wretched truth. I hate that man; I am jealous of him; I have incited the hands against him; I—I would have been glad if they had killed him. Yes, mother, your son that you were so proud of is nothing better than a murderer at heart." He rested his head upon her knee again and groaned aloud. "She could not care for me," he went on in a smothered tone. "I am not her kind. I am only a common workman, after all. She is a lady."

"There are no differences in rank in America, Matthew," said his mother gently.

"I used to think so, mother," he responded sadly, "but it is not so. Wealth, a life of ease, education and refined associations, soft white hands, fine clothing—these are real things, mother, and there is no use in kicking against the truth."

"But he is a fop, an idler, a weak, womanish creature. You have told me so yourself, Matthew. Surely she could never care for such a man."

"We were all mistaken, mother," he said, "I more than any. He has shown himself strong, generous and full of courage, and it is love for her that has worked the change in him. It might have made something of me, too," he added gloomily, "only I knew there was no hope for me from the beginning, and that drove me wild and desperate."

"But if she is worth a thought, Matthew," insisted the mother, "it will make no difference to her that you are poor and work for your living. Let me speak to her, my boy. I will tell her how much you love her and how you have suffered, what a dear, faithful son you have been to me, and"——

"And she will give her consent, and you will join our hands and bless us, and the bells will ring for the marriage of the millionaire's beautiful daughter with Matthew North, the miner, and we will all be happy ever after! Oh, my poor little mother! It is a pretty story and such as they print in novels for sentimental schoolgirls, but it is not real life."

"But"——

"Say no more, mother. I have already spoken for myself. Yes, I was mad fool enough to do even that one day."

"And she?"

"She shed tears and pitied me and called me her friend."

"Give her time, Matthew, and she will come round. You were too sudden and rough with her."

"Mother, you will drive me crazy." He started to his feet and kicked the stool across the floor. "I tell you she never will care for me. Do you think I am utterly blind? She loves him. I saw it plainly that day, when he and I came together at the pits. Oh, mother, you should have witnessed that scene! You would have been proud of your worthy son when he was rolled into the dust by that man with the baby's face and woman's voice! She saw it all, mother. Think of it! 'I will stay,' she cried out, with her eyes shining and her head thrown back, 'and you shall kill me too!' To have her look like that 10 minutes for my sake, I would give up all the rest of my life and not count the cost too heavy, neither." He walked up and down the apartment once or twice; then, returning to his mother's side, he passed his arm about her and raised her up. "Now go to bed, dear," he said, kissing her upon the forehead. "Try not to feel too bad about this folly of mine. Time cures all ills, you know, and some day, when we are living together in a little home, far away from here, we will talk over all this quietly, you with your knitting on one side of the table, and I opposite with my books and papers, the storm beating on the window pane and a fire crackling on the hearth. Isn't it a pleasant picture, mother?" He spoke gayly and led her to the door with a smile and another kiss. But when she was gone the smile faded from his face; he threw himself into his chair, and resting his head upon his hand fell into a gloomy reverie.

The reaction from such moods as these invariably led North into new excesses of opposition to the hated mine owner. The day following the conversation above recorded a heavy dray lumbered into the village, laden with flour, sides of bacon, sacks of potatoes and other provisions. The driver, compelled to pull up his team before the drinking saloon by the crowd of idlers gathered there, mumbled in terror that "twarn't none o' his business." He had been ordered to "take the grub to them as needed it, and that was all he knowed about it."

"And who gave you your orders?" inquired the stern voice of Matthew North, who had just joined the group.

"The young master, in course," responded the driver. "D'ye think I runs a 'orspital or a outdoor poor'us?"

"There, mates," exclaimed North, facing the crowd, "this man has stated the case exactly. Do you want charity from the tyrant who denies our rights and insults us with his beggar's portions? If you do, there are your broken victuals; take them home and be humbly grateful."

There was a savage howl and a simultaneous rush for the wagon. The driver was kicked and cuffed unmercifully; the vehicle was overturned and its contents scattered about and trampled underfoot. After which virtuous act the perpetrators, looking rather foolish, retired to their several benches and barrels in the saloon, while a flock of lean women and starving children descended upon the debris and carried it off with much screeching and quarreling. Meantime North disappeared, as was his wont in such cases.

Bruised, limping and with clothing in tatters, the driver of the ill fated wagon returned to report the ignominious failure of his mission. The proprietor listened to the man's recital gravely and with no show of emotion except a slight compression of the lips.

EASILY TIRED.
Why Is It That So Many People Cannot Endure More?
There are thousands of people who find they cannot do as much work as they used to, their strength gives out and they are obliged to stop and rest. It shows they are overworked, and that their nerve power and strength is becoming exhausted.
One cannot conceive the great number of people, who, while not exactly sick, are yet complaining or ailing in some way. They do not feel well and strong, do not eat or sleep well, are nervous and have no ambition for work or pleasure. You need the great spring medicine, Dr Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will make you well.
Mrs. Eliza B. McFarland, of 1707 North 9th st., Philadelphia, Pa., says:
"I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration; indeed, the exhaustion of nerve power was so great I became quite helpless, even speechless at times; several doctors were consulted and many remedies tried, but without giving me any benefit.

MRS. ELIZA B. MCFARLAND.

"I was in a most terrible condition and almost despaired of ever getting well; I was in a constant state of anxiety, not being able to eat or sleep but very little; learning of the great good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I began its use. I commenced to improve from it almost immediately.
"At the end of three months my nerves were completely strengthened, I could sleep well and my appetite and digestion were good; I was, in fact, entirely cured of all my troubles and made like a new person, by that wonderful medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I cannot say enough in praise of it and advise everybody to use it."
People are taking this great medicine everywhere because they see persons who use it become strong and healthy; this proves it to be a positive and sure cure. Take it now in the spring when medicine always acts the best.
Whether you are sick or well the system demands a spring medicine and none equals Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy; it will make you well. It is the discovery of Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th st., New York City, the most successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases. He can be consulted free, personally or by letter.

SHE PAINTS HIM BLACK

Miss Pollard Does Not Spare the Colonel.

She Declares That He Has Been Unfaithful to His Present Wife and Maligned Her Character—Admits That She Threatened to Shoot Breckinridge—Tears in the Court.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—If Miss Pollard's lawyers ever entertained the slightest anxiety or apprehension as to the efforts of their client when placed on the stand in her own behalf that suspicion is entirely dispelled. She has without doubt greatly strengthened her case and proved the strongest witness for her claim of any who have yet been heard.

The cross-examination instead of tangling and leading her into contradictions has afforded her the opportunity of putting statements before the jury which they might not otherwise hear. All day Monday and Tuesday she went over and over again the story of her relations with Mr. Breckinridge, in reply to the questions of Mr. Butterworth, and the proceedings were replete with dramatic incidents. Miss Pollard breaking down only when mention was made of some incident that recalled a particularly sad thought, and to-day the plaintiff is still in the hands of the defendant's lawyers.

On several occasions Mr. Butterworth asked questions which led to statements by the witness which he probably would have preferred to avoid. One question was:

"Miss Pollard, you said yesterday that your relations with the defendant continued after his marriage?"

"After his secret marriage."

"Did you have any suspicions about that marriage?"

"No, but I knew that he had been with Mrs. Wing in New York and I asked him about it. He answered by telling me there was nothing between them, and then he maligned her. He spoke of her in language I cannot repeat and that it would be hard for any one to believe; and said that she was engaged to be married to Lieut. Chamberlain of the army, and this was all after his secret marriage."

"Miss Pollard, did you and Col. Breckinridge have some scenes about this time?"

"Oh, yes," she cried scornfully, "life with that man couldn't be all happiness to everybody."

"Did you go to New York about the time of this marriage?"

"Yes, sir, I went to New York on April 29 last and saw Col. Breckinridge on May 1, two days after his marriage."

"Did you register as his daughter at the Hoffman house?"

"Yes, sir, on May 17."

"Did you threaten to shoot him in his room there?"

"Yes, sir." This reply was made quietly and in a matter-of-fact tone.

"You got a room, did you not, opening into that of Mr. Breckinridge?"

"Yes, sir."

"And when he entered his room you advanced from your room with a pistol in your hand, intending to shoot him?"

"No, sir. I didn't have the pistol in my hand while he was there. I had it in my hand before that. When he came I told him that I had the pistol and he took it out of my traveling bag."

After some rapid interchange of remarks in which Miss Pollard made many interruptions trying to tell the story her own way she finally managed to tell it. Mr. Breckinridge, she said, had joined her the Sunday nights of his marriage at the Hoffman house and said he might have to go away. He said a big company had been formed with Mr. Whitney, Mr. Fairchild and other rich men with a capital of $30,000,000, and that they were going to commission him to go abroad and he wanted to know if I would marry him and go abroad with him. I said "Willie, I will go with you at a minute's notice."

The witness then told of how she had found his statements to be untrue by telephoning to Messrs. Whitney and Fairchild. She said she then began to fear him as he was acting strangely and she had seen him put a revolver in his pocket.

"I asked him if he intended to keep his solemn promise to marry me, and he said: 'Madeline, I never loved another woman as I love you, my darling; I have never thought of another woman—never a thought but of you has been in my mind.' I told him if he did not marry me I would kill both him and myself, and he swore he would marry me and removed my suspicions."

Miss Pollard went on rapidly to explain further scenes between the defendant and herself. Col. Breckinridge had sworn eternal love for her and maligned Mrs. Wing, his wife. One night in Washington she had gone to the house on Jefferson place where Mrs. Wing lived and Col. Breckinridge and Mrs. Wing ran when she entered. She saw them crouching down behind a curtain and she said: "Willie, come out of that—come with me," and he came, she added. "We walked to Dr. Lincoln's, and on the way he maligned Mrs. Wing, who was then his wife, although I did not suspect it, and said all sorts of horrid things about her."

Miss Pollard admitted frankly that she had bought a pistol to kill the defendant and herself. She had also bought a pistol in February, 1893, to kill herself alone. She had not believed all he told her; she begun to doubt him. She had begged him to marry her, and he said he would keep his solemn promise. All this was after he was married to Mrs. Wing. She had received anonymous letters about his relations with negro women after their engagement was announced, but she paid no attention to them.

The scene during this examination was tragic and exciting. Miss Pollard leaning forward in the witness box and looking squarely at Col. Breckinridge as she delivered her charges against him.

Recurring to the scene in the Hoffman house the night Col. Breckinridge said he might have to go to Europe, Miss Pollard said: "He told me all sorts of unusual lies for which there was no reason and when I found out that what he told me was untrue he denied that the stories were false.

Miss Pollard's voice rose and rose as she pronounced these words and her accusations rang out clear and strong. She looked straight at the defendant who sat apparently unmoved while men in the court room were visibly affected by the excitement of the scene.

Major Butterworth tried to interrupt Miss Pollard, but Col. Breckinridge remarked softly: "Butterworth, Butterworth; don't stop her," and she was allowed to go on. If Col. Breckinridge was pleased with what she said, so were Miss Pollard's attorneys, for Judge Wilson nodded approvingly and Mr. Carlisle smiled.

Miss Pollard kept up her story in a flow of rapid, feeling words. She gave more details of her visit to New York and her return. "On Tuesday he lunched with me at Mrs. Thomas's. I think his face showed that day more of genuine penitence than I ever had seen before or since, to this day, and I really think he had a conscience that day."

Miss Pollard's voice dropped to a tender chord as she said this and the court room became absolutely still.

"He was married then?" asked Major Butterworth.

"Yes, and very much so now," said Miss Pollard scornfully, and there was a laugh.

"How long did your friendly relations with Col. Breckinridge continue?" asked Major Butterworth.

Then occurred the most pathetic feature of the day.

"The last day was on the evening of May 17," continued Miss Pollard. "In every way that he could he made me believe him. We talked of our unborn child and how we should name it. This was on the 17th day of May, after the alleged secret marriage with Mrs. Wing."

"You were willing, Miss Pollard, then?" interrupted Major Butterworth, "to continue these relations because Mr. Breckinridge wanted you to?"

"It was more than being willing," the witness exclaimed passionately." I did as he said, I gave my babies away because he asked me. A woman can't do more than that—can't do more than that (with a voice trembling with feeling). I saw my last child laid in the dark grave because it needed a mother's care and because I could not give it."

The spectators saw a woman's head go down on her hands and there were tears in many eyes as she wept for her little ones.

"What ——" Major Butterworth started to say, and then "Oh, I beg your pardon." Miss Pollard's voice had dropped from a tone of intense accusation to a long drawn sob and she wept like one whose very heart was in danger of breaking. Major Butterworth whispered something to Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Carlisle rising said the defense could finish Miss Pollard's examination with greater rapidity if she would take the stand again in the morning, and they therefore asked an adjournment. This was granted.

Bright Outlook at Auburn.

AUBURN, N. Y., March 21.—There are evidences of the revival of trade in this city. A train of 30 cars drawn by two locomotives and loaded with farm machinery left here last night bound for the New England states. Three weeks ago a similar train of 31 loaded cars went east. It was the first train loaded entirely with farm implements which ever entered New England. This city, which has suffered depression, is thus encouraged, for every implement on the two trains had been sold before it left this city. Shops are in operation with a full force of men, and indications point to a prosperous season.

LOUIS KOSSUTH DEAD

His Last Moments Were Extremely Harrowing.

Passed Away Holding the Hand of Hungarian Deputy Karoly, and Surrounded By His Son, Sister and Other Relatives—To Be Buried at Genoa, Near His Daughter.

TURIN, March 21.—Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, died at 11 o'clock last night.

His son, sister and other relatives were present when he died. He passed away holding the hand of the Hungarian deputy, Karoly. The agony of his last moments was extremely harrowing.

The body of Kossuth will be interred in Genoa near that of his daughter. Edmond de Amicis, the Italian author, will deliver a funeral oration in the name of Italy. The obsequies will be imposing and will be attended by a great gathering of Hungarians.

Louis Kossuth was born on April 21, 1802, at Monok, Hungary, where his father was a small landowner of the noble class. He obtained his diploma as an advocate in 1826. At the age of 27 he sat in the national diet of Presburg as representative of a magnate. For publishing reports of the proceedings of the assembly against the government's wishes he was prosecuted for high treason and in 1839 was sentenced to four years' imprisonment, but was liberated under an act of amnesty after confinement for a year and a half. In 1841 he became chief editor of the Hirlap newspaper of Pesth. He went to Vienna in 1848 to urge the claims of his country, and returned to Presburg as minister of finance. Under his influence the international reforms he had advocated were carried out, the oppressive feudal system was swept away, and the peasants were declared free from all seignorial claims, the country undertaking to indemnify the landlords. The diet was dissolved and a new diet was summoned, which elected Kossuth governor of Hungary. This post he held during the civil war of 1848-'49. After the Hungarians had been crushed, Kossuth recired to Turkey. In 1851 he visited England and America, agitating in favor of Hungary. On returning from the United States he resided for some years in England, occupying himself chiefly in writing for newspapers and lecturing against the house of Hapsburg. In 1866 he issued an inflammatory address to the Hungarians, and after the close of the war of that year advised the Hungarians to reject the concessions offered by Emperor Francis Joseph. He was elected a deputy for Waitzen in 1867, but declined the office. Soon afterwards he went to Turin and had resided there ever since in strict privacy. In 1879 he lost his rights as a Hungarian citizen, the chamber of deputies having adopted a bill declaring that any native of the country who voluntarily resided abroad for an uninterrupted period of ten years should lose his civil status. The extreme left violently opposed the measure, accusing the government of levelling it directly against Kossuth, but it was finally carried, 141 votes to 43. His residing abroad was the subject of discussion in the Hungarian parliament in 1890 and again within the past two months.

TONS OF COIN TO COUNT.

Change of Superintendent at the Philadelphia Mint.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—Supt. O. C. Bosbyshell of the Philadelphia mint was yesterday directed by Mint Director Preston to turn over the institution to his successor, Dr. Eugene Townsend, on April 2. A thorough recount and reweighing would occupy a month or more, and the treasury department suggests that the counting of the 50,000,000 of silver dollars and weighing of 111,150 silver bars, which are now under seal in the vaults, be temporarily dispensed with. This arrangement has been accepted by Dr. Townsend. Col. Bosbyshell, however, will consult with his bondsmen before agreeing to the plan. The counting of between 600,000 and 700,000 silver dollars and 250,000 nickels and cents and the weighing of $16,000,000 of gold bullion was begun yesterday.

The Fuller Shooting Mystery.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The report of Dr. O'Hare and Dr. Charles Phelps, the expert in surgery, on the second autopsy they made on the body of Martha J. Fuller, showed that the bullet entered her right temple and passed through the brain and out at the left temple about half an inch higher than the point of entry. The wound in the right temple is of oblong shape, indicating unmistakably that the shot was fired at a distance from the woman's head. There were no signs of powder marks or scorching of the flesh. Magee, the young attorney locked up on suspicion of having shot the girl's, refuses to be interviewed.

Do Not Trust Rosebery.

LONDON, March 21.—The Irish National league of Great Britain has issued a manifesto to the Irish people concerning Lord Rosebery's explanation of his attitude toward home rule. The manifesto declares that the explanation is insufficient, and Irish members of parliament who accept it are tricklers, cowards and traitors.

Gen. Dow's 90th Birthday Fittingly Celebrated.

A Great Day in the City of His Home—A Constant Stream of Visitors to and from His Residence—Numerous Telegrams of Congratulation—Celebrated at Many Other Places.

PORTLAND, Me., March 21.—Yesterday was a great day for Gen. Neal Dow, the great temperance reformer. All day long there was a stream of visitors to and from the general's residence. The rooms were handsomely decorated with flowers and Gen. Dow was assisted in receiving by his son, Col. N. F. Dow, and his daughter, Miss Cornelia Dow. The reception was entirely informal. In the afternoon a delegation from the veteran firemen called, Gen. Dow being the oldest living ex-chief. A delegation from the city government called at the same hour to extend their congratulations to the general on his 90th birthday anniversary, he being the oldest ex-mayor of Portland. Gen. Dow received a large number of birthday presents and numerous telegrams and letters of congratulation.

Last night in city hall there was a great meeting. Addresses were made by Gen. Selden Connor, Rev. Matt S. Hughes, Mrs. Clara C. Hoffmann, of Missouri, with a response by Gen. Dow. Letters and telegrams were read and a presentation was made of a portrait of Gen. Dow for the state house. A poem written for the occasion was read by Caroline Dana Howe.

When Gen. Dow was presented he came forward with firm and elastic step and received a tremendous ovation. Despite the arduous duties of the day he showed few signs of fatigue. His voice was clear and his gestures animated. He began with the classic quotation, "I who am about to die salute you" and his remarks which followed were devoted to the prohibition cause and the evils of the rum traffic, being singularly impersonal in their thread.

DROVE OUT THE ALIENS

Altoona Workingmen Rise Against Pauper Labor.

Italians Driven from Railroad Track Work and from Other Places—Serious Riots Narrowly Averted—The Railroad Superintendent Promises to Employ Only American Labor.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 21.—All is now quiet in this city between the American and foreign elements.

Yesterday was a day of considerable excitement and some violence and also with a good prospect for a serious riot. Early in the morning over 200 men marched to what is known as the Red Bridge, about two miles below this city, and compelled the foreigners employed at 75 cents per day on the Bellwood extension of the Altoona & Logan Valley road to cease work and flee to the hills for their lives. Next the crowd, by this time strongly reinforced, proceeded to Elizabeth furnace where in two shanties about 60 Italians were found and bodily thrown out and compelled to leave, after which three different attempts were made to fire the buildings, the fire, however, being put out in each instance. During the trouble at this point one Italian was shot in the neck and badly beaten about the head with a stone.

The next point of attack was Bellwood where all foreigners found were driven out, and then the crowd, now fully 600 strong, returned to Altoona, proceeding at once to the Italian colony on Ninth avenue with the avowed intention of cleaning the entire neighborhood of both the foreigners and the shanties of which they are tenants. While the mob, now numbering fully 3,000 people, were hesitating about beginning the attack, General Superintendent F. L. Sheppard, of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, appeared upon the scene and forcing his way into the centre of the crowd demanded to be shown its leaders. Several of these being pointed out to him he asked them to have the crowd disperse, giving his assurance that none of the foreigners would be given further work, and that if they were given a little time they would all leave the city. He also promised that Americans would be given work by the Altoona & Logan Valley company and its contractors, and all would be well if violence were not resorted to. Sheriff Hughes and Mayor Hoyer also made their appearance shortly afterward, and, addressing the crowd in the same strain, the backbone of the proposed riot was broken and the crowd gradually dispersed.

The law-abiding people of this section greatly deplore the violence of the day, but it is very clear that the laboring classes will not tolerate the further importation of pauper labor into their midst, and in this stand they have the sympathy of all as long as no attempt is made to violate the law.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS.

Tariff Bill in Senate—House Takes Up Election Case.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The sudden completion of the tariff bill by the senate finance committee and its presentation to the senate yesterday was a little a surprise as it was generally understood that it would not be ready before to-day or to-morrow. Mr. Voorhees (dem., Ind.), who made the report, gave notice that he would ask the senate to begin the consideration of the bill on Monday, the second of April, and said that he would then be prepared to make a statement in relation to it. Mr. Morrill (rep., Vt.) stated that the republican members of the committee had not objected to the report, but that they were opposed to the income tax feature of the bill and to the change from specific to ad valorem duties. A democratic member of the committee, Mr. McPherson, of New Jersey, indicated also his opposition to the income tax and to the provision as to the mode of imposing duties on sugar, the bill leaving it optional with the customs officials whether the duties be fixed by the polariscope test or by the Dutch standard test. It is the general belief that the income feature is going to cause considerable trouble and may prove a dangerous rock for the whole measure.

House of Representatives.

After general debate the house passed the sundry civil appropriation bill. The provisions in the bill affecting the management of the soldiers' home, which were opposed by General Black, of Illinois, one of the board of managers, were ruled out on a point of order. The amendments agreed to increased the total of appropriations by the sum of $32,741, making the total $32,521,124. The contested election case of O'Neill vs. Jay, from the 11th district of Missouri, was then called up by Mr. Patterson, (dem., Tenn.) The republicans opposed consideration and refrained from voting on roll call, thereby showing the lack of a quorum. A resolution was passed revoking leaves of absence and directing the sergeant-at-arms to request the presence of absent members.

Will Not Leave Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, March 21.—The call to the pastorate of West Presbyterian church in New York city which was extended Rev. Maltbie D. Babcock, pastor of Brown Memorial church, Baltimore, has been declined by Mr. Babcock. The West church is one of the most influential and wealthy congregations of New York city. About a month ago Mr. Babcock declined a call to Philadelphia. He had, including the one just refused, three calls to New York and calls to Brooklyn, and St. Paul, Minn.

Pleads Guilty to a Double Murder.

DOYLESTOWN, Pa., March 21.—Wallace Burt, the Cherokee half breed, was brought into court yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty to the murder of Samuel M. Rightly and his aged wife Lena Rightly at their home in Northampton last September. At the last term of court Burt was tried for the murder but the jury disagreed after being out four days.

Storm Damage in the South.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 21.—The damage to property in the Mississippi valley by storms and floods during the past forty-eight hours is beyond calculation. Bridges have been washed away, houses wrecked and tracks displaced. The storm in Arkansas was accompanied by high winds and more damage was done in that state than in Tennessee.

HETFIELD IT SHALL BE.

So Declares Congressman Dunn, with Emphatic Positiveness.

(Washington Correspondence Trenton True American.)

Representative Dunn, who has been remarkably faithful in his attendance upon the House, has gone home for a few days. Before his departure he authorized the True American correspondent to again announce that under no circumstances would the recommendation of John M. Hetfield to be postmaster at Plainfield be withdrawn. It is not known whether Mr. Dunn will make any reply to the card of James E. Martine written by the latter in response to the interview with Mr. Dunn first published exclusively in these despatches.

THE TRENTON DECISION.

THE CLAIM OF THE DEMOCRATIC SENATORS UPSET.

The Senate Not a Continuous Body—Jurisdiction Accepted by the Court—President Rogers's Title Valid.

(Special to The Press)

TRENTON, March 21 — The Supreme Court of New Jersey rendered this morning the anxiously looked-for decision in regard to the status of the rival State Senates. The decision, which was written by Chief-Justice Beasley, is a long one.

The first important point set forth in it is that the court has jurisdiction and can grant the writ of quo warranto.

The second point decided is that the state Senate is not, as the Democrats have contended, a continuous body.

The opinion first explained the condition of affairs and then decided that the court has jurisdiction over the case. He said this was too well established to be seriously denied. The contention that the president of the Senate cannot be reached by the court by quo warranto was not good, as the court has cognizance over any violations of the provisions of the Constitution in order to determine who is the true and who the spurious claimant to the office.

Having disposed of the question of jurisdiction, the opinion said that the principal ground of controversy was the right of the Adrain (Democratic holdover) Senate to dominate when newly elected Senators are introduced to what is claimed to be a continuous Senate. The Constitution is not clear on the point, which left the question open to be construed by the Court. The Court holds that Adrain is not entitled to be president and that Rogers's (Rep) title is valid.

The chief justice took up the matter of the alleged continuous body and declared that such a doctrine was not in the Constitution but was only created by the construction of that instrument. The Constitution clearly did not define the life of the Senate.

The court held that the constitution did not provide for a continuance of the Senate itself, but by providing a continuous membership it imparted the potentiality of a continuous body. The clause of the constitution giving this idea went no further than to give the Senate the aptitude for a continuous existence.

The vivifying force in the United States Senate is given by the continuous presiding officer. But the national constitution could have but little effect in constructing that of New Jersey.

Great Scenes in "My Jack".

In the first act of "My Jack" in Music Hall to-morrow night is introduced the explosion of a lighthouse, which is realistic, and while the stone walls of the structure seem to be crumbling as they sink into the turbulent sea a rescue-boat riding the storm-tossed waves is seen behind the dark and gloomy mass. The desert, in the fourth act, in which are portrayed a blazing sun and burning sands, on which two men struggle for life, is a picture not often equaled on the stage.

He Ate the Shamrock.

John Goff, proprietor of the Fourth Ward Hotel, received a shipment of shamrocks from friends in Ireland last week. Of course John could n't wear all of them, so he placed them in a bowl at the end of the bar. As each of his customers came in he pointed, with a few patriotic remarks, to the dish of shamrocks, inviting the newcomer to wear one of the Irish symbols.

The Dutch barber, Will Classen, of the Boulevard, slipped in unnoticed with joyful anticipation of free lunch. He saw what he thought to be a bowl of watercresses and started his meal by enjoying them, although he found the new variety of cress had a peculiarly tough root.

An Irishman came in as the barber was finishing the last leaf, and John stepped forward to offer him a green ornament for his lapel, but the shamrocks were in "Dutch Billy".

John Leal's Tribute.

At the Dr. Pingry memorial services in Elizabeth Monday night John Leal of Plainfield, a former teacher in the school, read a tribute of honor in behalf of those who had been Dr. Pingry's assistants. He said that boys grew and men grew when in contact with Dr. Pingry. He trusted men entirely. He was loyal to their interest, and shared generously with them, striving to lift them on the same plane on which he walked, and supporting them by his own personality. Association with him was rich in helpfulness.

A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 137. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

GRAY HAIR has a beauty of its own, but a BALD PATE——that is different! Originated, made and sold only at REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, Park and North avenues.

The proprietors of Salvation Oil will pay a large reward, if any certificate published by them is not found genuine.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O.

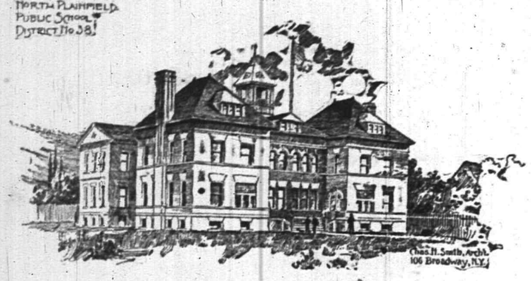
FORMAL ACTION OF THE BOROUGH EDUCATIONAL TRUSTEES.

S. B. Joseph Rewarded with Re-election in Reward for His Faithful Services—The Year's Work Reviewed—John Goodwin Wants Free Books for the Pupils.

The annual school meeting of District No. 38 of Somerset county was held in the basement of the North Plainfield school last evening. About 30 attended. Ex-Mayor Charles Place was made chairman and Horace J. Martin secretary.

In taking the chair Mr. Place said he had been interested in Borough school affairs for 30 years and referred with praise to the accomplishments of the last few years in advancing the cause of education. The improvements had brought many new residents to North Plainfield.



He hoped that the work would continue and that future boards would do as well as the one which had just finished the building of the addition.

District Clerk S. B. Joseph presented his report as follows:

S. B. JOSEPH, Clerk.

As President of the Board of Trustees S. St. J. McCutchen read the following:

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 38 FOR THE COUNTY OF SOMERSET, RENDERED TO THE DISTRICT AT THE ANNUAL MEETING, HELD MARCH 20, 1894:

The absorbing feature of school life during the past year has been the enlargement of the school building.

It will be remembered that at a special meeting of the district, regularly called and held May 11, 1893, the trustees were directed, by a resolution almost unanimously adopted, to erect and construct an addition to the present school building in accordance with plans then submitted, and were authorized to expend for the same and for heating, ventilating and furnishing, $16,000, and that to raise this sum they were authorized to issue the bonds of the District, to that amount; said bonds to be of the denomination of $500 each, and to bear interest at a rate not exceeding 5 per cent. per annum, and to be payable in 1903 and thereafter.

Acting under such directions from the District, the trustees proceeded with all reasonable dispatch to award the various contracts for the work called for by the specifications, as follows:

Mason work to Wm. C. Smith.

Carpenter work to Brokaw & Cain.

Plumbing and heating work to C. W. Krausse.

Painting work to Woolston & Buckle.

The trustees also prepared and offered for sale the bonds of the District, conforming in all things to the law and to the resolution which authorized them, to the amount of $16,000.

These bonds bear interest at the rate of five per cent.

The trustees recall their disappointment that they were unable to float this issue at a lower rate of interest. Certain financiers had led them to expect that the bonds could readily be placed at 4½.

Under ordinary conditions they could not have done this, but the financial distress of last summer made this simply impossible.

Under the advice of experienced business minds, we fixed the rate of interest in the bonds at five per cent, and notwithstanding the then prevailing disturbance in the general money market, we hoped to be able to sell them at such a premium as would make the average rate of interest less than that expressed in the bonds.

We advertised the sale of the bonds in the New York Tribune, The New York Financial Chronicle and The Evening Post, all of which have free access to investors all over the land; we advertised them in all the local daily papers, New Jersey school bonds of prosperous districts are favorite investments with the Savings Institutions of the State; (we know of no better investment security any where than these bonds).

We sent a full descriptive circular offering the bonds for sale to every Savings Institution in the State, and had personal correspondence and personal interviews with several; but such was the financial fright of organized capital, that not a bid did we get from any one of them.

We then addressed our efforts to private investors and among individuals, right here, in the Borough and in Plainfield. We succeeded in placing the whole issue at par, one citizen of the Borough subscribing for and taking as delivered $11,000 of the whole issue of $16,000.

With our larger subscribers, we also made the following favorable arrangement: that we should deliver bonds from time to time as we needed money, and they should pay (and have paid) to us the par value of the bonds delivered and in addition interest on them from the date of issue of the bonds up to the date of delivery.

This will explain that entry in the District Clerk's Building financial report which shows that we received from the sale of the bonds $244.65 more than their full par value.

After an annoying but unavoidable delay the work upon the extension was begun early in June, 1893, and has progressed until its completion in February last; by completion, we mean a practical completion, for there are yet some few items of outdoor work to be done, such as grading and flagging, which must await settled spring weather.

We need not report to you our disappointments and anxiety at delays in the work. These are the lot of all who build and they are now forgotten in our present satisfaction at a finished work.

It is our judgment that good work has been done by every contractor, and that the addition is creditable in all respects.

We take special satisfaction in a system of heating and ventilating which seems adequate and successful.

Probably no feature of school-house construction is of more importance than ventilation, and none in the past has been more neglected.

In the old building no provision for ventilation is made, except by opened windows, which are always attended with danger to pupils.

By the system adopted in the new extension the foul air is withdrawn through registers in the floor and conveyed by flues out of the roof.

Already we notice the superiority of the new system and on passing from one of the new class-rooms into one of the old, the difference in the condition of the air in the two rooms is very marked.

Realizing the importance to young and growing lungs of fresh air, we are not without hope that at some near day you will direct your trustees to introduce into the old building a proper system of ventilation.

In addition to the construction of this addition, we have fully renovated and cleaned the old building, and the entire building is now ready for such a season of prosperity as your generous interest in the cause of education in the district merits.

The addition gives eight fine, light, large class-rooms, and besides four smaller corner rooms which will be used, respectively, for office, library, teachers toilet room and store room.

The entire building contains twenty class-rooms, which, we believe, will furnish school facilities to the district for many years to come.

We sincerely hope that you, as you have opportunity, will visit and inspect the school while it is fresh and new.

Unavoidably the administration of the school has been embarrassed by the work of building.

The tearing down of the front wall of the old building to receive the addition, drove out five classes.

When the school convened in the Fall, to accommodate these dispossessed classes, we engaged the main room and one upper room in Saengerbund Hall (and there we placed three classes); also the basement of the German Church, in Craig place, where we placed two other classes.

This arrangement we found to be most unfavorable. In Saengerbund Hall, also in the German Church, were two classes in the same room separated only by muslin screens, eight feet high, which could not exclude the noise, and the conducting of the classes was attended with the greatest difficulty and confusion so that as soon as it could be done, we caused temporary partitions to be put up between the old and new parts of the building, and re-assembled under one roof again all the classes, except the tenth grade and for this class the south room in the second story of the addition was hurried to such a condition that it could be used and was occupied by Miss Cutter's class December 19, 1893.

We also, January 29, 1894, rescued from the dampness of its basement room Miss Kellogg's class (second grade) and installed them in a cheerful, bright and healthy room in the addition.

But the noise of the mechanics and the necessary confusion attending construction has seriously interfered with good class work, though the condition of the school in general is good when we consider the difficulties it has fought against.

It is but fair to say that during this trying period principal and teachers have been patient and earnest in their work.

Already the school shows increase. The total enrollment today is 699; while the entire enrollment for all last year up to graduation was 701. But last year of this number forty-eight were enrolled between the time of the district meeting in March and the end of the school year. So that apparently we are about fifty ahead of last year in enrollment, and the prospects are that the end of the year will show an even greater gain.

To meet the necessary increased expenses of the school, the trustees are compelled to ask for an increased appropriation.

To properly care for and instruct the large number of pupils we shall need one, and possibly two, additional teachers, and it is apparent that it will cost more in fuel, janitor's services and incidentals to maintain the enlarged building.

We therefore ask you to appropriate to these good uses, by special school tax, $5,000.

Respectfully submitted,

S. St. J. McCUTCHEN,
SAMUEL TOWNSEND,
S. B. JOSEPH,
Trustees.

The reports of the District Clerk and the Trustees were presented and adopted as read.

After the reading of his report Mr. McCutchen spoke in acknowledgment of the work of Trustee Joseph who had given much personal attention to matters connected with the construction of the school. On the part of the trustees he thanked the Electric Lighting Company for wiring the basement in which meetings are held at a small price and for furnishing light free.

An appropriation of $5,000, $3,000 for teachers salaries and the remainder for necessary expenses, was unanimously passed, after President McCutchen had explained why the Board needed $1,500 more than last year.

S. B. Joseph was unanimously elected to serve another term of three years as trustee.

John Goodwin abruptly brought up the question of furnishing free books to the children. He spoke of the benefits of the system in other places and thought that the $200 now wasted for incidentals would go a great way toward buying books.

After approval of the idea had been expressed by Secretary Martin, President McCutchen, Trustee Townsend and H. B. Lounsbury, a motion of Charles A. Reed that the meeting express its favorable opinion of the plan, was passed.

The Trustees will complement this action with a call for a special meeting to consider the subject.

The Board was empowered to purchase a requisite number of chairs for the use meetings in the basement.

The meeting was then adjourned for a year.

NOT 1 CENT FOR G. A. R.

BUT $100 EXTRA TO OUTSIDERS ON A HOSE BID.

Pert Remarks of a Taxpayer Concerning the Vagaries Doings of Plainfield Councilmen—The City Too Poor to Help the Old Soldiers Celebrate, and Too Peculiar to Boost Home Trade.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Why does the City Council refuse to put into the treasury enough money to allow the Grand Army to celebrate Decoration Day properly? The Chairman of the Finance Committee reported that the city had not enough money on hand, or in sight to spare, to permit the appropriation of $100 asked by the veterans for the purpose. Then Carney Brothers, plumbers, came forward and offered to provide a way to save the city the entire $100 desired by the old soldiers, so that this rich town would not be obliged to play the beggar May 30; and what happened? They were practically told to mind their own business, as the war was over.

The city says it needs 2,000 feet of new fire hose. The Council advertised for bids; without limiting the time for receiving them. Carney Brothers sent in the lowest bid, complying with every requirement of the law as to guarantees and so forth. The bid was not accepted, and the reasons given by a "city official" are that the bid was not in the hands of the City Clerk at a certain hour, and that the bid was 5 cents a foot below the manufacturers price.

As the call for proposals did not limit the time for bids, the first reason seems a little leaky, anent a hose question. And is n't it funny, anyhow, for a Republican Council, in these hard times, to refuse to save the taxpayers 5 cents a foot on 2,000 feet of hose, $100 in all, unless it can be done before dinner!

But the second reason is a caulker. Carney Brothers' bid must be rejected because it is 5 cents a foot, or $100, below the manufacturers price! Now Carney Brothers admit they expected to make a commission, and they offered the city part of it, amounting to 5 per cent., on the whole purchase, or $100 in all, as a gratuity, to obtain the contract. That would have enabled the Finance Committee to allow the G. A. R. to buy some flowers to place on the graves of dead comrades on Decoration Day, and perhaps also to make a small contribution towards erecting the proposed Soldiers monument designed for the little park under the dining-room windows of the splendid residence occupied by the committee's chairman. But to secure that $100 for the old soldiers the Council would have to buy hose below the manufacturers price, and that might not jibe with the idea of Protection entertained by some politicians. As Congressman Smart said, "The old soldier is good enough in his way; but as between him and the manufacturer, there is more money in the manufacturer."

Maybe the Carneys are Democrats. What business have Democrats meddling with public affairs to save money for old soldiers, anyway?

Of course, a really profound student of Plainfield public affairs might be able to imagine a councilman selfish enough to earn a commission for himself by securing for a hose manufacturer full price for hose. That would be protecting both the manufacturer and the field of politics against plumbing and other "unprotected industries". Or a man might imagine, if he tried hard, the Finance Committee, in a patriotic burst, endeavoring to coax $100 out of the Street Commissioner's meagre salary to help the veterans out on Decoration Day. But you can't expect the imagination to do too much. Could you expect it to be equal to the task of creating a Plainfield politician who would refuse a commission to obtain a full price for a manufacturer in opposition to a rival in the Democratic party endeavoring to break down that price in the interest of the taxpayer, the old soldier and Decoration Day?

"What business are you in now"—asked a friend of an ex-divekeeper in New York.

"Oh, I'm an Alderman now"—replied the other.

"And what salary do you get?"

"Oh, we don't get salaries, only commissions."

"Your chances must be good by the way you look?"

"Good! Well I should smile. They're ten to one against all outsiders."

Hence, it would appear that men go into public life for different reasons.

FRED WILCOX SCHOOL TRUSTEE.

Exciting Contest at the Annual Election in Dunellen.

The regular March meeting of school district No. 2, Dunellen, was held last evening in the Whittier school. Matters of great importance were to be discussed and voted on, and the attendance was very large.

District Clerk A. I. Martine called the meeting to order and asked those present to appoint a chairman. John Swackhamer was chosen for the position, and Elston M. Lowrie was elected clerk.

Mr. Martine then read the call of the meeting, which was to elect a trustee to fill Adam Dealaman's place, whose term expired; the question of increasing the appropriation from $2,700 to $3,000 and the advisability of employing another teacher. The financial report for the past year was read by Mr. Martine, and showed this department to be in excellent condition. After the report of the Auditing Committee, Frank Wyncoop, A. Gray and T. C. Bodine, which attested the above to be all right, and was received and adopted.

Mr. Martine, for the trustees, then read the report of the general work for the past year. It was a most excellent one and reflected credit on those in charge. It was received and ordered spread on the minutes.

Then came the election of a trustee.

On the blackboard were the words, "Keep thy lips with all diligence", very appropriate indeed, but it did not have the desired effect. After the usual noise in nominating, it was learned that Fred Wilcox, Frank Wyncoop and Thomas Todd, were the candidates.

The tellers were: Eugene Runyon Robert Giddis and David Campbell. The first ballot showed—Wilcox, 41; Wyncoop, 42; Todd, 14, and Dealaman, 2 It requiring a majority vote another ballot was necessary, and resulted in Wilcox, 50; Wyncoop, 46 The chairman announced Wilcox elected, amid much cheering by his friends, led by Michael Gallagher.

The subject of the appropriation then came up. The trustees asked for $3 000 but Mr Gallagher thought $2 700 enough and his friends acted on his decision.

Samuel Merrill rose to his feet and tried to explain, but cries of "sit down", "shut up" greeted him, and the hooting was so expressive he could not be heard. The vote decided that $2700 was enough in their judgment.

This was followed by the cry of "What's the matter with the coal pickers?" and again the demonstration was expressive.

Those who knew best thought another teacher was needed and asked those present to grant their request. Mr. Martine aptly illustrated the necessity of such action, saying $350 was the sum needed for such purpose. Here again Mr. Gallagher led the forces and completely buried the other faction by a vote of 38 to 23 against the employing of another teacher.

The present auditing committee was re-appointed and a vote of thanks was extended to the Board of Trustees. The meeting then adjourned.

Assaulted with a Bottle.

John Callahan reported to the police today an occurrence of last Thursday night. He says he called on Shoemaker John Sullivan, in his shop on Madison avenue. Beer was used to promote the happiness of the evening.

Without any warning of what was to happen the light went out. Sullivan was struck on the nose and forehead with what he supposes was a bottle. He thinks it was a heavily-built Scotchman who attacked him. After this he remained senseless for an unknown period, but finally reached his home. A small amount of change he had was gone.

Shoemaker Sullivan says he remembers nothing of the affair except that he had two cuts on his head after whatever happened was over.

"THIS DO IN REMEMBRANCE OF ME."

The citizen of Plainfield sojourning far from home and among strangers sometimes happens to hear his town mentioned as a place somewhat noted for the spirit of Christian unity—the spirit which brings together men and women of all denominations, not alone for practical work, but also for acts of worship and praise. Dull, indeed, and lacking in local pride, is such citizen if he feels no pleasure in hearing his town so mentioned. He cannot be aware how much is implied as to the favorable local conditions and the peculiar personal influences which have been silently educating our people away from sectarianism and toward unity.

If one were asked to mark the highest point attained in this community by the tide of aspiration for Christian unity one might well point to the union meetings held Good Friday night in the past few years. We have seen Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Dutch Reformed and others come together, with Episcopalians, in commemoration of the Divine Tragedy, and uniting in a devout and solemn service, sweet to all believing hearts.

Now, ever since the instituting of this union service, some of those most deeply touched thereby have been asking Why not another step forward: Why should not all these one day in the year sit together at the table of their Lord, remembering only what He has done for them and forgetting their differences?

One easily anticipates the replies of objectors. Differences will be magnified; difficulties dwelt upon; while, in the same breath, objectors will protest that they recognize the brotherhood of all Christians, the importance of unity. One cannot ignore the fact that the requirements for membership in some denominations are such as to preclude applicants from other (and even "orthodox") denominations seeking a church-home. But church membership and true discipleship are by no means synonymous terms, and we have lived to hear the invitation to the table of our Lord commonly extended to "All who love Him in sincerity and truth", instead of being limited to "Church members in good and regular standing".

Why, then, during the season which commemorates the Passion and Resurrection of their Lord, should not His followers of whatever name take occasion to come together at the table, there to learn—and to show to the world—how great are the things they hold in common, how little the things wherein they differ?

"And they all drank of it." H. P. R.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

CHAPTER XVIII.

"HE IS MY SON."

The same afternoon, despite the horrified protests of Mr. Joyce, Monckton rode out alone, for the first time since his recovery from the injuries received at the mines. On his return, when not far from home, a pathetic figure attracted his attention. It was that of a small, elderly woman, clad in poor, old fashioned, but exquisitely neat attire, laboring slowly along with the aid of a stick. As Monckton approached she raised her faded eyes, and perceiving a horseman within a few paces of her tottered back and seemed about to fall. The young man sprang from his saddle and hurried to her assistance.

"You are ill," he said solicitously, "too ill to be out alone." Observing a flat stone at the roadside, he supported her to it. "So, rest your head against the tree. Now you feel better, don't you?"

"Thank you kindly, young gentleman," sighed the woman. "I'm a poor afflicted body, sir, and the walk from the village has been too much for me. It is a weary half mile yet to the master's house."

"You are going to visit some one at Mr. Monckton's? I am riding that way myself, and if you will rest here meanwhile I will send the person to you."

"Thank you truly, sir, but my errand is with the young master himself if he will receive me."

"You wished to see me?" said the mine owner in surprise. "I am Mr. Monckton."

The woman started violently and feebly drew away from him. "The young master!" she ejaculated in a faint, cracked voice. "I humbly beg you to excuse me, sir, but my nerves are that bad. My son, Matthew, sir"——

"You are Mrs. North?" he said, with a disagreeable impression. "Did your son send you to me, madam?"

"Bless you, no," replied the woman, with a startled air. "If Matthew knew of my coming to you, he would be angry with me for the first time in his life, for, though Matthew is masterful and has a will of his own, he is the best of sons."

"No doubt," said Monckton curtly. "But you had something to say to me, madam. Speak freely."

"I beg you to excuse me, sir," she faltered, clasping and unclasping her fleshless fingers in a miserably agitated fashion. "I had it all in my mind, clear and plain, but now, some way"—she paused, rocking her body to and fro, murmuring inarticulately. "He used to be such a fine, bold, fresh colored lad, full of laugh and talk and projects. That was before you came, sir. Then, all on a sudden, he changed. He wouldn't eat, and he couldn't sleep. He's that wore away it would break your heart to see. And, oh!"—she burst into a sudden fit of weeping—"I want him back, my big, strong, merry boy!"

"And you think the change in your son is in some way due to my presence here?" asked the proprietor mildly.

"It is just that," she replied, with a sort of meek effrontery. "Oh, my good young gentleman, you are rich and handsome and consort with princes and the powers of earth—you have so much and he has nothing! Pray, pray be generous and go away."

"Is that all?" said Monckton in amazement. "Is there any other trifle you would care to ask?"

The woman hung her head, and a faint color, like the hue of a wintry sunset on a cloudy day, tinged her ashen cheek. "You are pleased to joke, sir," she quavered, "but it is life or death with us."

"But, my dear lady," expostulated Monckton, "what you ask is unreasonable. Can't you see that it is? Do you really expect me to give up the control of my property and abandon my home simply because your son has taken it into his head to hate me? It is true there were wrongs and mistakes on my part, and up to a certain point North was right. But I have already granted all that was demanded, and the respectable portion of the men are at work again. Many of those honest fellows are in danger of their lives at this moment because your son and his rabble refuse to allow me to provide for their safety. If anything happens to them, the blame will rest upon his shoulders."

"He is wrecking himself because he thinks she loves you."

The woman had made feeble attempts to interrupt him several times while he was speaking, and she now said: "But, my good gentleman, you don't understand. It is not the mines; it is her."

Monckton bit his lip. "Do you think we had better go into that?" he asked, with a constrained smile. "I hardly believe your son would approve."

"No, no," replied the woman in a frightened whisper; "he would be fit to kill, he is that wild about her. But I'm his mother, sir. I rocked him in his little cradle, and I can't sit quiet and see him dying by inches. He loves her"—in the extremity of her agitation she ventured to lay one shaking hand upon the young man's arm—"far dearer than he ever loved his own mother that brought him into the world; he does indeed, sir, and he is wrecking himself, body and soul, because he thinks she loves you."

"And suppose that he is right," he said, with a cold smile; "you ask me to go away and give up my one chance of lifelong happiness for the sake of a man who has always shown himself my bitter and uncompromising enemy?"

"He is my son," she replied, as if that were an all sufficient answer. She fixed her pale, watery eyes upon him appealingly. "Matthew is handsome and young; he has talent and will make his way in the world. You should see his drawings, and as for reading"—she straightened her slight figure proudly—"the largest books are nothing to Matthew. Sir, if you were to go away, she would forget you in time, and my son"——

"Enough of this," interrupted Monckton almost roughly. Then, seeing how the poor creature cowered and shivered under his glance, he added, "So far as I am concerned, you may set your mind at rest. The only relations subsisting between the young lady and myself are those of a very cool friendship. Like all jealous people, your son is torturing himself with an illusion, for I certainly have no such good fortune as he attributes to me. As for his health, which worries you, doubtless you could find in one of those same big books you mention this sentence: 'Men have died and worms have eaten them, but not for love.' Comforting, isn't it? For the rest, if your son has the good sense to return to regular hours and steady habits, he may, as you say, make his way in the world—even to becoming president of this great republic—or of a bank. All things considered, I advise the latter. There is more money in it."

"Thank you, my good young gentleman; you are very kind." The withered face was aglow with satisfaction. "And, sir," she added in a wheedling, confidential tone, "you think it may be Matthew she cares for, after all?"

"Why not indeed? But," he said, changing his tone abruptly, "we have discussed the subject sufficiently. Now I must ask you to excuse me." He went to his horse and remounted it. "Wait here a few minutes, and I will send a carriage to take you home."

CHAPTER XIX.

"I SHALL NEVER CONQUER MY LOVE."

There had been nearly a week of incessant rain. A dark pall of cloud, gloomy and changeless, overhung the earth like a vault of solid lead buttressed upon the mountains whose peaks were hidden from view. Cold, gray mists crawled along the heights, tangling themselves among the pines or lying low down in the valleys, level and motionless, presenting to the deluded eye the appearance of wide, calm lakes reflecting the hue of the sky above. The soil was sodden; the unwary foot treading upon the solid seeming turf sank deep in lurking pools of mud thickened water. The meadows were inundated, every hollow a pond, every trench and ditch a frothing brook. The single street of the village was a narrow river covered with refuse, among which paddled the ducks and geese of the community, snuffed at enviously by shivering dogs and moaned over by bedraggled, houseless cats.

Down all the hillsides roared foaming torrents. Gentle, dripping cascades, from whose mossy brinks the small birds learned to drink, were transformed into destructive floods bearing down from the fastnesses above splintered logs and uprooted trees. Those who had lived all their lives in that region confessed with ominous shakings of the head never to have seen such a storm before.

Up at the Monckton mansion the young proprietor sat at his library window, listening to the wail of the wind and the ceaseless sound of the rain, in a sorrowful mood, deepened and darkened by the funereal aspect of the weather. Never had life seemed so fruitless and flavorless as now. Never in his sternest self arraignment had he felt himself so unnecessary in the world, so objectless. During his residence in the French capital he had acquired the fashionable pseudo cynicism, but that philosophy comfortably allows you to despise all mankind excepting yourself. You are the solitary spectator of a masque of fools, and your privilege of sneering rests upon your own conscious emancipation from all shams, follies and faiths. It is a sort of sublimated conceit, affected by young people because it looks like experience, and natural to old people with bad tempers and worse digestions. With Ralph Monckton it had never been genuine, but donned first to conceal his boyish provincialism and the honesty and sincerity which he saw doubted or disdained by all about him it had become a second nature, hardened by his real loneliness in the midst of his gay associates, the light, the glitter and the hollow laughter, his enforced idleness and his father's ignorant pride.

Now as he sat gazing out at the driving storm it was simply savage self disgust that he felt, loathing of the past, weariness of the present and hopelessness of the future. It was a state of mind that had fallen upon him first on that wretched afternoon when he had offered himself to Imogene Duke and had spread and widened within him ever since. As he thought of his careless, foppish proposal—and he was always thinking of it now—he shuddered and felt sick. And beneath the shame of it was a hard, rending pain—a dry, cold agony—for he loved her, as he had known he loved her when she turned upon him that day. With her love, what could he not do? Majestic visions of great deeds, noble and glorious works, the splendid rising of a new dawn for mankind, crowded his brain. Oh, if she loved him!

His meditations were broken in upon by a sharp rap at the door, and Joyce entered, followed by a man clad in a dripping suit of miner's habiliments. Monckton recognized the latter as one of the superintendents, John Turner by name, formerly one of North's stoutest henchmen.

"He refused to submit a written report, sir," explained Joyce, with an injured air, "but insisted upon seeing you in person."

"Because," retorted the man, twisting his sodden hat round and round in his big fingers, "there ain't no time to write reports, even so be it as I had my copy book for the letters and my Webster's speller to get the words correck."

"Sit down, Turner," said Monckton, "and tell me what you want."

"I don't want nothin, myself," replied Turner, lumbering into the chair placed for him, "I'm out of it and don't propose for to risk my skin agin by going back, at no one's orders, meaning respeckful to you all the same, sir."

"What is it now?" inquired the proprietor. "Some new trouble at the mines?"

"No," was the response, "nothing new, insomuch as I reported the same to Mr. Joyce here weeks ago. I said then, I says, that wall in the Ten Foot Drive has water behind it, and, says I, that water is bound for to force its way out, and when it do, says I, there'll be

"Sit down, Turner," said Monckton, "and tell me what you want."

widders and orphins in this village, unless, says I, a timber bulkhead is put up agin that wall. But Mr. Joyce, in his judgment, seen fitten for to refuse, and now no bulkhead of no sort, sir, will prevent what is going to happen, dead sure, before the day is out."

People Who Weigh and Compare

Know and get the best. Cottolene, the new vegetable shortening, has won a wide and wonderful popularity. At its introduction it was submitted to expert chemists, prominent physicians and famous cooks. All of these pronounced a natural, healthful and acceptable food-product, better than lard for every cooking purpose.

Cottolene

The success of Cottolene is now a matter of history. Will you share in the better food and better health for which it stands, by using it in your home?

Avoid imitations—countless—worthless. Stick to COTTOLENE.

MANY HEADS WILL FALL

Jersey Legislature Will Get Down to Work To-day.

Scores of Democratic Officers to Go—Fully a Hundred Partisan Bills Will Be Repealed and Salaries Reduced Right and Left—Republicans Rejoicing Over Their Victory.

TRENTON, N. J., March 22.—There is great rejoicing among the republicans to-day over their victory in the supreme court. The senate will get down to work to-day and then the legislative mill will begin to grind in earnest and the grist will be scores of democratic heads. Fully a hundred democratic partisan bills will be repealed and salaries will be reduced right and left. The governor's compensation of $10,000 a year will probably be cut in half, not, the republicans declare, as an act of revenge for the stand he has taken against the republican senate, but in obedience to public sentiment on the question.

The senate chamber was thrown open to the public last night for the first time this winter. President Rogers was cheered by a great multitude of spectators when he made his appearance and again when he assumed the chair, but only seven of his republican colleagues were present and adjournment was taken till to-day, when it is expected the democratic senators will put in their appearance.

Decision of the Court.

Chief Justice Beasley read the decision of the state supreme court in the senatorial case. The first point in the controversy, whether the court had jurisdiction in the case, was decided in the affirmative. The chief justice said that the decision whether the regulations of the constitution have been violated rests exclusively with the judicial department of the state. The court next treated the legal aspects of the case, and, coming to the consideration of the question whether the senate is a continuous body, held that there was nothing in the constitution of New Jersey to define the life of the state senate. The contention of Attorney-General Stockton, that the senate is a continuous body, was brushed aside by the court. The construction put upon the clause in the federal constitution which makes the United States senate a perpetual organization did not apply to the clause in the New Jersey constitution.

The chief justice held further that the proposition that the contention that the minority could rule in a legislative body was antagonistic to the language and spirit of the constitution and in violation of the doctrine that the will of the majority shall be supreme. The constitution fixes a time for the annual meeting of the legislature. This would be a superfluous provision if the senate were an ever-living body. The provision in question speaks of the two houses of the legislature and clearly means the senate as well as the assembly. What has a perpetual body to do with specified times of meeting?

The chief justice next brushed aside the contention that the hold-over senators held the exclusive and absolute power to pass upon the credentials of the newly elected senators. This was the first time since the adoption of the constitution that such a claim had been made. It was novel, but groundless. The ancient and continued practice has been to reorganize the senate yearly, and the pretension that under color of the constitution or the law any senator holding credentials could be deprived of his seat, is an utter falacy. The term of the senate expires annually, the same as the house of assembly.

The court, in conclusion, held that the title of Robert Adrain, president of the democratic senate, was invalid, and that the title of Maurice A. Rogers, president of the republican senate, must be regarded as constitutional and valid. The organization of the republican senate was upheld.

All of the justices of the court except Justice Abbett concurred in the opinion of the chief justice. The latter announced that Justice Abbett held views of his own regarding the case and would formulate and file them later.

The decision is a complete republican victory, the court siding with the counsel of that party on every point in the case, except on the matter of jurisdiction.

Returns to Her Evil Ways.

BALLSTON, N. Y., March 22.—District Attorney Person has been informed from Gloversville that Mrs. Carrie Green, the alleged insane murderess who was let out on her own recognizance by Justice Russell at the January term of court held in this place, has relapsed into her former evil ways and has been sent by the recorder of that city to the Albany penitentiary for six months on a conviction of disorderly conduct. District Attorney Person had intended to move her trial next month.

Too Liberal With His Kisses.

PATERSON, N. J., March 22.—James Williams, a grocery clerk who claims a residence in Philadelphia, has been committed to the county jail here by Police Justice VanCleve, for kissing ladies of the Market street Methodist church. Williams stationed himself at the gate of the edifice and kissed more than a dozen ladies, who attended a prayer meeting, before he was caught by the police.

Fell Dead at Her Husband's Coffin.

READING, Pa., March 22.—While Mrs. Henry M. Hoffman of this city was viewing the remains of her husband who died suddenly on a locomotive near Davenport, Ia., she dropped dead by the side of the coffin of heart disease. The remains of Mr. Hoffman arrived here yesterday. He was an engineer on the Rock Island railroad.

FITZ'S SWEEPING OFFER.

Willing and Anxious to Meet Any Man in the World Except Jackson.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Bob Fitzsimmons, the middleweight champion of the world, and his backer called at a sporting newspaper office yesterday and expressed their desire to make a match with Dan Creedon at 158 pounds, the middleweight limit.

Fitzsimmons says it will not be necessary for Creedon and his backer to wait for some club to offer a big purse, as Fitz is willing to take him in a room with but five men a side and fight him with any size or style of glove that Creedon may feel inclined to select. Fitzsimmons says that Col. Hopkins, Creedon's backer, and James J. Corbett are both on record for saying they would back Creedon against him for $5,000. Now Fitzsimmons and his backers stand ready to accommodate both these gentlemen and will put up $10,000 at any minute they feel inclined to come to the front and make the match.

Fitzsimmons further stated that he stood ready to meet any two middleweights in the world in the same ring, the same night, to a finish or for a limited number of rounds, providing a separate purse was offered for each event. Furthermore, he stood ready to meet any heavyweight in the world, barring Peter Jackson, with James J. Corbett preferred.

Fitz feels confident that he can whip Corbett and is more than anxious to fight him, but he considers Peter Jackson the greatest fighter on earth and a man with whom he does not class.

COMPLICATIONS THREATENED.

Now Known That European Aid Was Given Brazilian Rebels.

RIO JANEIRO, March 22.—International complications which threaten to assume grave character have arisen from the revolution and the subsequent surrender of the insurgent war vessels and the escape of da Gama and his officers. The Portuguese warships on which da Gama and his officers took refuge were permitted to leave the harbor under the express stipulation imposed by the Brazilian government that da Gama and the officers with him were to remain on board those ships until the governments of Portugal and Brazil had settled the question as to their ultimate destination.

The action of the Portuguese naval officers who protected da Gama and his officers has raised a strong feeling of indignation in official as well as civil circles and it is known that President Peixoto is in possession of documents of the utmost importance as showing that aid was systematically given to the insurgents by the officers of other European vessels.

FERDINAND WARD MARRIED.

His Bride, Belle Storer, a Majestic Appearing Brunette.

GENESEO, N. Y., March 22.—The wedding of Ferdinand Ward, of New York city, and Miss Belle Storer, of Staten Island, took place in this village at 7 o'clock last evening, Rev. Dr. George Ward, of Danville, officiating. Only the most intimate friends of the parties were present. The bride is a comely brunette of majestic appearance, and looks like one who cared nothing for what the world might say about her husband and the vicissitudes of life through which he has passed.

In an interview, Mr. Ward said he had formulated no plans for the future further than to go to New York to settle up some business, then to return to Geneseo, occupy the old homestead, bring his 10 year old son here to live and educate him.

The bride is not reputed to be wealthy, but is said to have good prospects. Mr. Ward ignores the impression that he saved millions out of his crash. The couple will live here, keeping no expensive establishment.

LIVELY EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Senator Call Will Make War To-day on Certain Nominations.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—To-day's executive session of the senate gives promise of causing some rigorous argument behind closed doors. It will be held in accordance with Mr. Call's notice, it being his intention to make a fight against the appointments made for the state of Florida at large. These nominations are: George W. Wilson, collector of internal revenue for the district of Florida; Wm. H. Milton, jr., surveyor-general; Henry W. Long, register of the land office, and Newman D. Wainwright, receiver of public moneys.

All these nominations were made in opposition to Mr. Call's protests, and in the face of his recommendations of other applicants. It is said that Mr. Call takes this as a declaration of war, and has arrayed his forces for the contest in the senate. At all events, the battle is to be fought out to-day.

SAYS HE WAS BETRAYED

Breckinridge's Defense to Miss Pollard's Suit.

Submitted to Her Demands Through Intimidation and to Avoid Scandal—Proof of Her Intimacy With Other Men Promised—Says She Made Three Attempts to Kill Him.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—It is probable that the most dramatic incidents of the Pollard-Breckinridge case have been enacted, but interest in the proceedings does not wane. The expectation that the aged defendant might be put on the stand to-day brought the usual crowd to the court room. There has been no exciting scenes, either tragic or comic, since Miss Pollard left the stand. When Mr. Carlisle announced that they rested their case, interest at once centered in the disclosure of the line of defense to be pursued, which was found to be exactly as foreshadowed in these despatches several days ago.

The defendant's case was opened by Major Shelby, his law partner. He outlined the defense very fully, telling what Col. Breckinridge expected to prove and how he would prove it. Major Shelby made known that the principal point of the defense would be the production of proof that Col. Breckinridge submitted to the demands of the plaintiff through intimidation and to avoid scandal, and that it was under these circumstances he stated to Mrs. Blackburn that the plaintiff and himself were engaged to be married when there was no such agreement between them and because Miss Pollard had agreed, this being done, to go away and pass out of his life. Major Shelby acknowledged that Col. Breckinridge and Miss Pollard had maintained illicit relations, but he made the flat statement, which, he said, would be supported by testimony, that Miss Pollard made the advances and told the defendant that Rodes, her old lover, had been unduly intimate with her, thus placing her in the position of being the betrayer of Col. Breckinridge.

Defendant's counsel promised that the testimony would be produced to show that Madeline Pollard had maintained undue relations with other men, and Major Shelby asked the jury to take into consideration her character for purity when they were preparing to render a verdict.

The defense, it was said, would also claim that Miss Pollard made three attempts to kill Col. Breckinridge and would establish that he did not maintain illicit relations with her after the time he became engaged to Mrs. Wing, and certainly not after his marriage.

The defense will also aver that Miss Pollard took the defendant to Sarah Guess' house, and that he did not know of the existence of the house until that time. He will also claim that he never knew of the plaintiff giving birth to a living child, and that certainly he was not the father of one of the alleged babies, as he had not seen the plaintiff for more than a year previous.

SHEA HELD FOR MURDER.

Verdict of the Coroner's Jury in the Troy Election Tragedy.

TROY, N. Y., March 22.—The jury in the inquest relative to the death of Robert Ross, killed March 6 at a 13th ward polling place in this city, returned the following verdict:

"The jury finds that Robert Ross came to his death on the sixth day of March, at the third district of the 13th ward, Troy, from the effects of a gun-shot wound from a revolver in the hands of Bartholomew Shea."

When the verdict was announced a large crowd was in the court room, and there was long applause. Coroner Collins issued a commitment for the retention of Shea in jail on a charge of murder in the first degree.

Too Many Eggs.

NEW YORK, March 22.—Within the past two days 52,777 cases of eggs have been received by the produce merchants of this city. Each case contains 32 dozens, and thus there are 1,688,864 dozen, or 20,266,368 eggs on the market for Easter consumption. This is a remarkably large number for this season, and there is a glut in the market in consequence. The wholesale price has dropped from 17 1-2 cents to 12 cents a dozen for fine new western eggs, while southern eggs, which average smaller, are sold for 11 cents a dozen. Next month eggs are likely to be cheaper, as April is a great laying month.

Mandelbaum's Crooked Silk.

NEW YORK, March 22.—At the time the notorious Mme. Mandelbaum went to Canada, a fugitive from justice, ten years ago, there were 3,000 yards of silk found in her trunks at her famous "fence," which were ordered to be placed in the care of the American Safe Deposit company, to be disposed of after her trial. As the trial never took place, and the defendant is now dead, District-Attorney Fellows issued an order for the silk to be sold at auction, and the proceeds to be turned over to the police pension fund.

New Directors for New England.

BOSTON, March 22.—The annual meeting of the New York & New England railroad was called to order by Vice-President Odell. The following ticket was presented for directors and was elected: Gordon Abbott, Charles F. Adams, 2nd; A. S. Bigelow, Francis C. Lowell, A. C. Tower, S. M. Wald, John Kean, jr., John G. Moore, T. C. Platt, Samuel Thomas, Benjamin F. Tracey, John W. Doane, Spencer Erwin, Joseph F. Sinnott, Arthur Brock, M. J. Perry, B. F. Vaughan, D. S. Paine and Arthur Sewall.

COXEY'S LATEST PLAN

A Goddess of Peace to Lead His Army.

He Engages His 17-Year-Old Daughter for That Duty, But His Divorced Wife Puts a Damper on the Plan—The "Good Roads" Man Having a Good Time in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, March 22.—J. S. Coxey, president of the "Good Roads Association" and king of the "Coxey Common Weal Army of Peace," arrived in Pittsburg last night from Massillon, O., and placed his signature on the Hotel Anderson register and was assigned to a $3 a day room. Mr. Coxey went at once to a well known Fifth avenue cafe. He was soon joined at the bar by a large crowd of friends and others who assembled out of curiosity to see the man who was going to bring about the emancipation of the laboring people. Mr. Coxey clinked his glass with his numerous friends who wished him success in his coming march to Washington. He is still confident that he will leave Massillon on Easter Sunday with his army and will arrive at Washington with a half a million men.

When asked his business in this city, Mr. Coxey declined to answer.

"About the only new information I have to give out to-night" he said, "is that there will be one lady in the army."

"She will," he continued, "be robed in white and ride a white horse at the head of the army and will be known as the 'Goddess of Peace.'"

Mr. Coxey declined to give the young lady's name. A well known transfer company of this city has tendered Coxey a large band wagon for the use of his band while passing through this city.

MRS. COXEY OBJECTS.

Will Not Allow Her Daughter to Lead the "Industrial Army."

CANTON, O., March 22.—"Mrs. Caroline Coxey," was an entry on the Hurford house register to-day. She is the divorced wife of "Good Roads" Coxey. She has a 17-year-old daughter, of whom she was given the custody when divorced from her husband; J. S. Coxey.

"The father," said Mrs. Coxey, "had my child meet him at a hotel in Massillon, yesterday. Lieutenant Browne was with Coxey when the girl arrived. They proposed to dress her in the stars and stripes, mount her on a white horse and have her ride to Washington ahead of the army of peace. I have put a damper on that plan, however. I told them if the child was induced to go I would have both Coxey and Browne arrested for kidnapping."

Mrs. Coxey says her late husband is persistent, obstinate and stubborn, and when he once gets an idea, Heaven and earth cannot turn him from it. She thinks his present plan comes from a recent reading of Joan of Arc.

WORST IN TEN YEARS.

Storm and Floods Causing Great Damage in Arkansas.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 22.—Rain continued to fall all day yesterday making the fifth day and night it has poured almost without ceasing. The Ouachita river is sweeping away everything in its path. No trains have yet moved on the Hot Springs railroad, as the track is still under water. The ferryboats along the river have been swept away and all farms in the bottoms have been cleared of fencing and left barren.

ARKADULTHIA, March 22.—This locality has experienced a rain storm with thunder and lightning for forty-eight hours. The rain-fall for the last twenty-four hours was eight and one-half inches. Trains are all delayed. It is the worst storm for ten years.

Mystery About Ida Houston.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., March 22.—There is much mystery surrounding the life of Ida Houston, the young girl who a few days ago asked protection of the authorities, telling a story of having been confined in a roadhouse on the town line from which she escaped. The girl said she had been brought from Rochester, N. Y., by a procuress and placed in the road house and locked up. Investigations at Rochester prove that the girl does not belong in that city; that the people whose names the girl gave are not in that city, and that most of her story to the authorities has been found to be untrue. Who she is and where she came from is a puzzle. Miss Houston is bright and pretty. She still persists in saying she belongs in Rochester, N. Y.

Senate Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The business of the senate yesterday was confined almost exclusively to bills on the calendar unobjected to. Twenty-five of them were passed. They consumed no more time than was required to have them read in full by the clerk. None of them were of general importance or interest. At 2 o'clock, when the morning hour expired, the calendar was laid aside, and from that time until 3:30, when the senate adjourned, a discussion was kept up on a bill to simplify the form of deeds of conveyance, trust and releases of land in the District of Columbia. No action was taken on the bill, which still remains the unfinished business.

Against Coinage of Silver.

NEW YORK, March 22.—At a meeting of the Union Trust company resolutions were adopted that in the opinion of the New York subscribers to the new gold bonds the coinage of the silver seigniorage would endanger the financial stability of the government. A copy of the resolutions will be sent to the president.

FAITH CURE ADVOCATES

Argue for the Passage of the Ryder Bill.

Cures Not Due to Medicines, But to Christ Communicating With the Soul—Judge Daly Tells of A Case Where Doctors Failed and a Clairavoyant Was Then Successful.

ALBANY, March 22.—The hearing before the assembly committee on public health on Mr. E. L. Ryder's faith cure bill brought out some very interesting discussions, that were listened to by the committee and a big gathering of believers in the different cures with much concern. There was an unusual number of intelligent women and men present.

The bill provides that any person may freely contract for the services of whomsoever he considers competent to alleviate suffering, or prevent or heal disease, and that it shall be lawful for persons so employed to attend, treat, nurse and endeavor to heal the employing patient and receive compensation therefor, subject to the laws of the state relative to malpractice.

Thaddeus B. Wakeman, of New York, opened the hearing by stating that he represented the joint society for medical freedom of New York and Brooklyn. The question for the committee to decide was whether certain people should be accorded their liberty in alleviating suffering or whether certain schools of medicine should be exclusively licensed. People should be allowed to choose their doctor the same as they did their minister. The real cause of cure was the reflex action of the nervous system. Cure was not due to medicines. The whole secret of the cures made by Christ was that the Savior communicated with the soul and not to the bodily condition. Such must be the condition before great cures could be accomplished. Let the people who want faith cure have it, said Mr. Wakeman.

Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, pastor of First Church of Christ, scientist, of New York city spoke for the bill. She said she appeared before the committee in the name of Christian science and the Almighty God and asked for the passage of the bill. She said the time for Christian science had come. Jesus had marked out the way. Living witnesses were present to-day to prove that Christian science had cured diseases said to be incurable. She read a portion of the creed of the Christian scientist in order to give the committee what was contended by the scientist in curing.

Judge A. H. Daly, of Brooklyn, had nothing to say regarding Christian science. If it did not cure at least it did no injury. It was as unjust for the legislature to say how a man is to be cured as it was for a railway company to say that a man should travel on their road. Judge Daly then stated that one of his daughters had been cured by a clairavoyant who had diagnosed her case after a physician had failed. He mentioned another case of a daughter who had died because of an incompetent physician. He was in favor of the bill because of the freedom of practice which was accorded in the measure.

Mr. Norton then asked those in the chamber who had been cured by Christian science, after having been given up by a doctor, to rise, and fifty-seven stood up on their feet.

Mrs. Lathrop, of the New York Christian Science church, spoke upon her belief, relating marvelous cures she had made. It was the power of God working through her which brought about the cures.

The committee adjourned until next Wednesday when a further hearing will be heard on the bill.

May Cause a Big Sensation.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 22.—The death of John W. Atwood, the wealthy real estate dealer, promises a big sensation in the courts before long. Counsel has been retained by Charles Atwood, bother of John, and the allegation is made that the widow of the latter may set up a claim for the entire estate, amounting to about half a million. While the claim is made by Attorney Lonsdale that Mrs. Atwood is entitled to dower rights under the peculiar decree of the court in the divorce case, it may also be asserted that there is a posthumous child. This, under Rhode Island laws, would give the widow the entire estate. For the purpose of contesting these claims the Atwood family have begun proceedings in litigation.

Cataracts on Gladstone's Eyes.

LONDON, March 22.—Dr. Nothercliffe's examination of Mr. Gladstone's eyes confirmed the reports which have been in circulation of late that Mr. Gladstone had a cataract on each eye. The oculist informed the ex-premier that while the cataracts might have the effect to deprive him of his sight entirely before they were in condition to be operated upon it would not increase the danger attending their removal nor impair the chances of the full restoration of his sight. The operation will be performed in about three months.

Jersey City Officials Indicted.

JERSEY CITY, March 22.—The grand jury has indicted the street and water commissioners for malfeasance. There are five counts, the specific charges being fraud in the purchase of supplies, fraud in making contracts for plumbing and fraud in connection with the work and payments therefor on public school building No. 23. The indicted persons will be notified to appear and plead at once and then Judge Lippincott will name the date for the trials. He will also preside over the trials.

Mello Captures a Vessel.

LONDON, March 22.—A despatch from Buenos Ayres says: "It is reported that Admiral Mello captured off Paranagua a vessel loaded with arms for President Peixoto. The Desterro government is sending Senor Falcao, formerly a close friend of Admiral Mello, to Europe as a diplomatic agent.

Protest From Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, March 22.—The banks of the Clearing House association of Philadelphia have united in a request to the president to veto the seigniorage bill.

Nominations Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—The senate has confirmed the nominations of Isaac B. Stayton, to be postmaster at Alleghany and W. F. Conrad, at Tyrone, Pa.

THE DAILY PRESS.

A. L. FORCE, - - Publisher and Proprietor.
WALTER IRVING CLARKE, - Managing Editor.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

THE TRENTON VERDICT.

The decision of the Supreme Court in the Senate matter is in approval of the policy of this paper. The Daily Press of Friday, Jan. 12, 1894, said editorially:

As a believer in and upholder of the principles of the Democratic party, The Press deplores the action of the Democratic Senators in Trenton. The position they have assumed is not the course that would have been advised had the over-zealous Senators consulted such patriotic leaders as Governor Werts and Senator McPherson. The Governor in his message recognized the Republicanism of both houses of the Legislature, and his manly stand should have been accepted by all. If the Democratic party wishes to regain the majority which it lost last election, it must invite public confidence by showing a willingness to abide by the decision of the popular vote.

The Press is a newspaper, not an organ.

They Bow to the Result.

(From The Trenton True American.)

The Democrats of New Jersey selected, of their own will, the Supreme Court as the arbitrator of the legal and constitutional questions involved in the Senatorial situation, and they bow to that arbitrament.

Mr. Love is a manufacturer of designs and wallpaper prints, which fact gives him special advantages in the selection and purchase of wallpapers.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote acres and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

The above officials, together with Assessor J. H. Cooley and Commissioners of Appeal J. Clawson and Israel Stout, were sworn in by the clerk. The last three named are not obliged to give bonds.

The application of Charles A. Reed for township counsel was received and laid on the table. Applications from Dr. J. H. Carman and Dr. Mattison were received for township physician, and after due consideration Dr. Carman was appointed. The salary is $150.

A communication was received from John H. French, offering to take the large tract of land on Johnston Drive, owned by the Township, for the payment of taxes. The subject was debated, and it was decided to grant the request. Mr. French leases it for one year with a privilege of 20-years renewal.

Bills were presented and ordered paid. The Committee will meet again next Wednesday evening.

News From the Mission Field.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held in the First Baptist Church yesterday afternoon at 3. The attendance was not very large, on account of the weather.

Reports of the work done by this society during the year were read by Mrs. Walter McGee, Miss Edith Harold and Miss Grace Yerkes, and showed much improvement.

A very pleasing solo was rendered by Martin I. Cooley entitled, "Come Unto Me."

Those present had the pleasure of listening to Mrs. Bushnell, a missionary, returned from India, who told in a very interesting way of the important work to be done in the mission field, and urged all to do more for this cause.

The meeting was satisfactory and helpful.

As a presiding officer of the North Plainfield Township Committee, B. M. Fountain will carry out the dignity of the office in a commendable manner.

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Evans gave a dinner to ten guests last night. The table decorations were of white roses, violets and smilax. It was a pretty scene and a delightful event.

BY THE WAY.

—H. P. Reynolds has beautifully decorated his store with Easter lilies.

—Edward White, the West Front street merchant, now has The Magic City from No. 1 to No. 13

—A painter from Newark and a German from New York spent last night in the borough lockup.

—While Frank Dodge was jumping last night he slipped and injured his right foot. It is very painful today.

—Justice Nash today conducted an auction sale of the stock of groceries in the store of Benjamin S. Braider.

—Tickets for Choirmaster Cheeswright's musicale to take place next Thursday are for sale at Hulett's.

—Unity Lodge, K. of P., met last night and perfected arrangements for their anniversary sociable to be held this evening.

—"The Ten-Foot Drive", the story that has fascinated Press readers the past two weeks, will conclude in Saturday's Easter issue.

—Caleb Dickinson, the watchmaker and jeweler, will remove from Park avenue to 142 North avenue, next to Walker's Bakery.

—Services will be held in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue, Good Friday, commencing at 12 m. Evening service will be held at 8.

—Policeman Cooney was called to the house of W. A. Newcorn at 10.30 last night by the cries of a servant who thought a burglar was in the house.

—The jurors who will represent North Plainfield at the April term of Court, convening in Somerville, April 17, are Lewis M. Bird, William S. Campbell, Fred. N. Brown, Peter Brunson.

—The colored Y. M. C. A. will be opened with a concert tonight in Central Hall, North and Park avenues, by the colored Crescent Glee Club of Rahway, and the Moonlight Club of Plainfield.

—Another of Col. Julian Scott's Mequa-Indian pictures was placed on exhibition in J. Hervey Doane's show windows today. It represents a maiden of the Pueblo of Wol-pi, and is a companion picture to that of the young Indian of the same place.

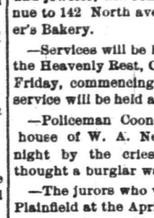
—The street lights were all out last night in the borough, because the safety valve of the large boiler blew out about starting-up time. The lights on the domestic circuit were all right, as the engineer used the small boiler for it. The sooner the company gets another boiler, the better it will be.

—The Ariel Cycle, of which Love is agent, at the corner of North and Watchung avenues, is the admiration of all. There are many good wheels, but the Ariel is a thing of beauty. It weighs but 25 pounds, and every pound of wheel will carry ten pounds of man. Mr. Love is agent also for the Remington. Riders of the fair sex who want a perfect wheel will find it in the Ariel or Remington.

—Chief Engineer Astfalk, of Elizabeth, and J. A. Benner, of Fanwood, defeated F. Batch and W. Bender, both of Elizabeth, by killing all their birds but one apiece in a shoot today.

CURES OTHERS

A TERRIBLE CASE OF DROPSY CURED.



JOHN MALLON, ESQ.

JNO. MALLON, Esq., No. 81 McLean St., Mt. Adams, Cincinnati, O., writes: "I took sick with dropsy, lost my appetite, could not sleep, became feverish; always thirsty, lost all strength, stomach became painful, breath short and had to give up work. The best physicians in Cincinnati, failed to help me. My limbs and body were swollen to enormous size, and I was suffering terrible agony. The doctors all said I could not get well again, that I was liable to drop dead at any moment. My wife sent for the priest, to prepare me for death. While waiting for death, I remembered reading of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and thought I would try it as a last hope. When I had taken three bottles I was almost well. The swelling entirely disappeared and I was soon able to resume work. My health is better now than it has been in twenty-five years."

LOOKING BACKWARD AND AHEAD.

CRESCENT AVENUE PRESBYTERIANS REFLECT AT THEIR 50TH MILESTONE.

Pastors of the Past Tell How Plainfield Was in Their Day, and Join in Hearty Congratulations to Preacher and People of the Present.

The Crescent Avenue Church was fifty years old yesterday. With three of the four pastors who have had charge of the church present, the congregation celebrated the anniversary last evening. The assemblage filled the chapel.

The services began with singing by the choir and the congregation. In a few introductory remarks the pastor, Rev. William R. Richards, said that although fifty years was not a long period in the history of a church, it was so extended a time in human life that most of those present had no recollections of what happened half a century ago. The first pastor of the church, Rev. William Whittaker, had died three years ago, but the second and the third were present. He introduced Rev. Theodore S. Brown, of Chatham, N. Y., who succeeded Mr. Whittaker, as one who had taken charge of a feeble church and left it a strong instrument for good.

Mr. Brown expressed his pleasure at being present at such an event in a church with which he had been connected for twelve and a half years. The recollections of his stay in Plainfield were most pleasant. His sketch of incidents he remembered, was, in short, as follows:

The Second Presbyterian Church of Plainfield consisted of a colony of 86 who withdrew from the First Church, of the old school, and formed one of their own, March 21, 1844, which favored the new school of Presbyterians. Mr. Whittaker was the minister for ten years.

Mr. Brown first came to the church in 1854, supplying the pulpit one Sunday at the request of Rev. Dr. Samuel Birchard, of New York. He was called to the church by a letter written December 10 of that year by Robert Anderson. Upon his arrival he found that the same number of members, 86, was on the roll as had been ten years before.

Plainfield was then a village of 2,500 or 3,000 people. The streets were laid out as far as where Eighth street now is. Somerset street was lined with houses, but on each side were farms, with no other streets except one leading to the Presbyterian Cemetery. All of the residences were plain structures with a few exception. East of Cherry street was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Miller, the homestead of the Widow VanDeventer, and the Berckman property. The residence of Thomas Stillman on Seventh street was of the better class.

On Main street every store except the one of Webster & Marsh and Dr. Henry R. Cannon's drug store were in private dwellings. A most successful business man was Ira Pruden, of whom Mr. Brown spoke at length. The most famous landmark was the hotel owned by John Laing. Opposite was the old Vail residence.

The churches of Mr. Brown's day included one of the Episcopalians', established by Rev. Mr. Cole, of Westfield, who saved expenses by doing his own janitor's work. A small old building was the First Presbyterian Church, which was cut in two and made into dwellings, and replaced by a new structure which in turn has been supplanted by another. The Second Presbyterian Church stood where is now the City National Bank. Next came the First Baptist Church with its shingled sides. The Second Baptist was on a side street. The Seventh-Day Baptist Church was considered good enough in its day, but the congregation has since built twice. Besides the churches there were two Friends meeting-houses, one of which still stands.

Rev. Lewis Bond was the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, but was succeeded, during Mr. Brown's term, by Rev. Dr. McLean, who was greatly interested in the culture of mulberry trees during the silkworm craze. In the First Baptist Church Rev. Simon J. Drake was pastor until he was succeeded by Rev. Dr. F. J. Yerkes, the present minister.

The signers to the call which brought Mr. Brown to Plainfield were Elias Kirkpatrick, Jeremiah R. VanDeventer, John Simpson, Daniel P. Martin, William McDowell Corlell, William B. Stewart, and Ephraim Corlell. Of these, William B. Stewart has joined the Dutch Reformed Church, Wm. McD. Corlell is still attending the Crescent Avenue Church. The others have died.

Public education was then fostered in a single school on Fourth street, the first free school in New Jersey. If the memory of any one who had accomplished good in in Plainfield were worthy of honor, surely that of Charles H. Stillman was. Mr. Brown thought a large memorial window should be placed in the proposed new high school in recognition of the services of the noble man whose influence in educational matters did much to make the schools what they are today. Another school was one conducted by Miss Hotchkiss.

Outside of the trade of the merchants the principal industry of Plainfield was hat making.

The trip from New York to Plainfield began in a boat from Pier 4, North River. At Elizabethport change was made to the Central Railroad. When there was no ice in the Kull the trip was usually made in an hour and a half. In 1854 the Central Railroad ran three trains a day to this city. No cut had yet be been made at Scotch Plains.

The climate and the pure water of Plainfield made its growth rapid. Many newcomers were from Brooklyn, the air here giving relief to those whose throats had been affected by the salt air. A coughing stranger was generally put down for a Long Islander.

Among the old real estate men was "Uncle" Stephen Vail, whose peculiar trait was the failure ever to give a direct reply. On a wager that he could get a straightforward answer from Mr. Vail, a man once scoosted him as he came from the post-office with the question "Has the mail arrived?" The old Quaker leaned forward and asked "Does thee expect anything?"

The first Atlantic cable was completed in the year when Mr. Brown came to Plainfield. He and Hon. E. W. Runyon made lengthy speeches at a mass meeting of celebration held in front of Laing's Hotel. Thereupon the cable stopped working.

When the Fulton street prayer meetings were started in New York, similar meetings, especially promoted by John Titsworth, of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, began to be held daily at noon in the different churches of Plainfield. These continued for months and were followed by a meeting each week.

The roll grew during Mr. Brown's pastorate. The church was enlarged but became crowded. Finally John Taylor Johnston and his family and the pastor's wife went up into the gallery and soon that was full. Preparations for building a new church were in progress when Pastor Brown left.

Although he never preached a political sermon, Mr. Brown did support the Government when the Civil War came. Only two families withdrew from attendance in consequence. In the campaign preceding Lincoln's election he was asked for his political views. After prayer meeting one night he went to a crowded wigwam and for an hour and a half defended his country. Although it was the first and last time he spoke thus. Mr. Brown was glad he had done it, for "He has lived for little end in life who has not sometime and somewhere had to stand up for his principles under adverse circumstances."

April 2, 1867, Mr. Brown went to the Memorial Presbyterian Church in Brooklyn. He left 221 members, who unanimously expressed their regret at his departure. The congregations of all the churches of Plainfield came to hear his farewell sermon. In it he had partially prophesied the growth of Plainfield and the laying out of Hillside cemetery.

"Blessed be the tie that binds" was sung and then Mr. Richards introduced Rev. John C. Bliss, of the Washington Heights Church, New York, as the man who had built the church which Mr. Brown had said was necessary.

The third pastor spoke from notes made in a carefully kept diary. On Sept. 7 he came to Plainfield through arrangements with Fred Jones of New York, to preach morning and evening in the "Second Presbyterian Church, new school". He was met at the station by John W. Norton and lodged in the cottage of a Mr. Hotchkiss.

Dr. Bliss was called by telegraph while on his way to attend the Presbytery of Carlisle, meeting in Gettysburg. On October 13 he preached in answer to the call and began at once his pastorate of 16 years. He spoke very pleasantly of the character of the people of Plainfield as he had seen them during his ministry.

An incident which he recalled was the visit of Mrs. Hayes, the wife of the President, to the church. Finally the President himself came and spoke to the Sunday-school at a Christmas celebration. With possibly a single exception this was the only time a President of the United States addressed a gathering of Sunday-school scholars. Dr. Bliss thought this a more honorable act than going duck-shooting on the Lord's Day.

The Doctor referred to the way in which the building of a new church was proposed in February, 1869, and a committee appointed January 16, 1870. A conference was held with the First Presbyterians in regard to which congregation should build their new church on their old location. It was decided that the Second church should move from the property on East Front street where the City National Bank is. The only other building on that block was Dr. Craig's office.

After the dedication of the present building in September, 1872, the work of reducing the debt went on until April, 1880, when with the aid of "Debt Destroyer" Kimball $38,000 was raised in one week.

Comparisons of the contributions of the church were presented in detail by Dr. Bliss. He concluded with words of commendation and encouragement and a short, earnest prayer.

A reception in the parlors of the church followed. The clergymen who had labored so successfully in their pastorates met their friends, old and new. Old members talked over the times referred to with one another and told the younger Plainfielders of what they did while the church was growing up.

He wanted to ride with the man who would take him the cheapest, but all charged the same price. LATEST DESPATCHES.

NEW JERSEY'S SENATE.

First Meeting of the United Body—Democrats All There.

(Special to The Press.)

TRENTON, N. J., March 22.—The Democratic Senators were all in their seats at the meeting of the Senate this morning, with the exception of Winton of Bergen, Miller of Cape May, and Martin of Hunterdon. They came into the chamber quietly, and dropped into their seats without any demonstration. All had a subdued appearance, but they accepted the result with all the grace possible.

There was a large crowd in the galleries and on the floor when President Rogers (Rep.) took his seat. They cheered loudly.

Prayer was offered, and then the Senate began the first business in which both Democrats and Republicans have participated. Senator Adrain was the first among them to arise and address Mr. Rogers as president. This was in reference to a bill which he wanted to examine before it was placed on the calendar.

A FATAL FIRE.

A Man Caught in a Burning Stable—Three Horses Killed.

(Special to The Press.)

JERSEY CITY, March 22.—A man lost his life and three horses were burned to death in a stable in Jersey City early this morning. At 2:35 o'clock, as Cornelius Vreeland was passing the corner of West-side and Virginia avenues, he discovered that a large barn owned and occupied by Wm. McLain King as a stable was on fire. Vreeland quickly sent in an alarm, and then ran to King's house and notified him. When King and Vreeland arrived at the stable the entire structure was in flames.

They heard the screams of a man crying for help, coming from the barn, and also the neighing of the horses that were trying to free themselves. Vreeland and King tried to break down the heavy barn-doors, but were unable to do so. When the fire department arrived, the flames had got beyond the control of the firemen, and soon the stable was burned to the ground. Three horses valued at $1,000 were burned to death.

After the fire had been put out the ruins were searched, and the charred body of a man was found burned beyond recognition. The body was that of Michael Farrell, 25 years old, Mr. King's coachman. It is supposed that Farrell had been smoking in his room over the stable and went to sleep, letting the sparks from his pipe drop, thus setting fire to the building.

Two years ago, at the close of his last term, he disappeared from that city, and later, on March 1, an examination of his books showed that $15,522.52 was missing.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia, radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 25c. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, druggist, Plainfield. 12 6 mm

WORTHY OF MODERN EMULATION.

Washington and the Presbyterians of New Jersey in 1777.

[From Barber's Historical Collections.]

While the army under Washington lay near Morristown it occurred that the service of communion (then observed only semi-annually) was to be administered in the Presbyterian church in that village. On a morning of the previous week the General visited the pastor, Rev. Dr. Jones, and thus accosted him: "Doctor, I understand that the Lord's Supper is to be celebrated with you next Sunday. I would learn if it accords with the canons of your church to admit communicants of another denomination". The Doctor replied: "Most certainly; ours is not the Presbyterian's table, general, but the Lord's; and hence we give the Lord's invitation to all his followers, of whatever name."

The general replied: "I am glad of it: That is as it ought to be and I propose to join with you on that occasion. Though a member of the Church of England I have no exclusive partialities."

The doctor assured him of a cordial welcome and the general was among the communicants the next Sabbath. R.

THE TEN FOOT DRIVE

BY CHARLES LOTIN HILDRETH.

Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association]

"You remember, Turner," said Monckton quietly, "that I attempted to put up that bulkhead and that your friend North prevented me from doing so."

"With due respeck, sir," replied Turner, "Matthew North has ceased to be my friend, being pigheaded and obstinate beyond reason, and cursing"—the red face flamed redder with indignation—"yes, sir, cursing, incredible, at older and more experienced men than himself for offered advice. Since that eventful day me and Matthew is out."

"But about the Ten Foot Drive, Turner," interposed the proprietor.

"Well, sir, as I said, there has always been water behind that wall. No man with my ears," touching one of those large, flabby members with his finger, "could mistake the sound. Boom! boom! gurgle! gurgle! Now, it's been raining hard the best part of a week, and as I came across the bridge at the bend this morning I noticed that the creek had broke over the bank, and a good sized river was pouring into the old Hill shaft, a quarter of a mile above the present works. Do you know where all that water is going? It ain't being drunk up by the bowels of the earth, which know when they have got enough—the same not being true of some men. No, sir, it's making straight for the Ten Foot Drive and is thundering and groaning behind that wall like a thousand mad bulls. And I tell you, sir, something is going to happen there before night, sure."

Monckton arose to his feet. "The men are at work there?" he asked sharply.

"Certain. Twenty-three, all told."

"And you warned them of the danger?"

"Certain. And they knowed it themselves. But miners gets careless. They live in danger constant, and they're used to it."

"Mr. Turner," said the proprietor in the same sharp tone, "you will hurry back to the works and get the men out at once. You will say that such are my orders. Lose no time. Joyce, have them saddle my horse. I will go down to the mines myself."

Turner seemed inclined to offer some additional opinions from the rich stores of his wisdom and experience, but was ignominiously bundled out of the room by the inappreciative Joyce and took his way to the village with the deliberate step appropriate to his years and dignity, stopping twice or thrice on the road to look in upon a friend and discuss the situation over a philosophic pipe.

Monckton had meantime mounted his horse and started in the same direction. He had not requested the company of the overseer on this occasion, but that worthy, grimly providing himself with a huge revolver, mounted his own sturdy cob and followed his employer sufficiently close to keep an eye over his safety. The apparently interminable rain had now ceased. The clouds were lifting off the mountain peaks and the mists driving down the valleys before the freshening wind, while a keen silver radiance, the forerunner of the coming sunlight, glittered in meadow and tree top.

Ralph Monckton, proceeding at an easy canter, pulled up his horse sharply. A girl, also on horseback, turned into the road a few paces beyond him. He recognized her with a sudden tightening at the heart, and at the same moment she saw him, bowed and blushed beautifully. Monckton had not seen her since the day of the riot at the mines, and it seemed to him that there was a new sweetness and seriousness in her face, something more gentle and less willful in her manner.

She spoke first. "The storm has kept me in the house so long that I seized the first moment to get out." Then she looked at him anxiously. "You are pale, Ralph. They told me you had entirely recovered."

"Thanks," he said indifferently, "I am well enough. But it is not for the sake of my health that I am out." Then he told her of Turner's visit and what the man had reported.

"But you are not going down among those men again after the way they treated you when you went there last? Oh, Ralph!" She uttered his name with a slight gasp and turned pale. She checked her horse and compelled him to do the same. "Why are you doing this?" she asked gravely. "Is it foolish bravado, Ralph? Are you never going to forgive me because I was cruel and conceited?"

He answered her look with one of surprise. "You cruel and conceited? There was no such thought in my mind, I assure you. I was not thinking of you when I started, except—except as I always do now—that is, I wish to act in everything as I believe you would have me act—no," he said quickly, perceiving that she averted her face, "do not fear that I am going to presume upon your kindness to me. That is all over now." He sighed deeply. "I have seen how utterly unworthy I am. I am not trying to touch your heart, Imogene, with the hypocritical cant of repentance, which is worse than any other kind of cant. Indeed I don't know whether a man can repent of being a fool or not, and I was not much worse than that. Anyway, during the long days while I lay in bed I had an opportunity of going back over my life and examining myself impartially. Well," he laughed bitterly, "the results have been edifying, but not agreeable. There," he exclaimed, impatiently shaking his head, "that sounds like wounded vanity, but it isn't. What I mean, Imogene, is just this—honestly and sincerely, I know that I am not fit to be the husband of such a girl as you are. I shall never conquer my love for you, and I do not wish to. It will remain with me always as my better angel and keep me from ever again falling into that old way of life which I now look back upon with detestation. But I shall never speak of it after today, and if you will let me see you sometimes as a friend you need not fear the lurking suitor in me, or that I will pass as a suffering martyr. Will you believe me, Imogene? Will you take me at my word?"

"Ralph," there was moisture in the eyes she raised to his, "forgive me."

"Freely and fully. But for what?"

"For my hardness and self sufficiency. I wanted to wake you up. It was right and best for you, but I could have done it more kindly. I spoke in a spirit of pride and intolerance. I could have led you gradually to it."

"No, I think not," he replied. "I was too sound asleep, too besotted. It needed the shock. Don't reproach yourself, Imogene, for in my heart and soul I owe you nothing but gratitude."

"And you will come to see me as before, Ralph?"

"It will not be the same man, Imogene, but I will gladly come."

CHAPTER XX.

THE TOLLING OF THE BELL.

At this point the conversation was interrupted by the appearance of a third person. With his head hanging, his shoulders bent, his clothing sodden with wet and splashed with mud, unkempt and unclean, a man approached them with a slow, slouching gait, as if wearied with miles of travel. It was Matthew North.

"Is that you, Matthew?" said Miss Duke constrainedly.

"You may well ask if it is I," replied the miner in a hoarse voice, lifting his hollow, red rimmed eyes to her face. "Sometimes I can't believe it myself. Yes, I am he that was Matthew North, once respectable, decently clad and fit company for men, now a vagabond, a tramp, a beast, unfit to live or die."

"Poor Matthew!" murmured the girl involuntarily.

"If you utter a word of pity for me," he burst out furiously, "I shall do hell's work on somebody."

"Be careful, North," interjected Monckton sternly.

"Take notice," retorted the miner in a sinister tone, more menacing than his previous fury. "Only the strength of a thread holds me back from murder. It's at my heart, I tell you. I had my hand on your throat once. If I put it there again, I'll strangle you like a dog."

"Don't bluster in the presence of a woman, North," replied Monckton coldly.

Again the eyes of these two men met in silent struggle for mastery, those of the proprietor calm, clear and fearless, the other's with the unsettled glare of insanity. The girl, sitting powerless in her saddle, held her breath in fearful suspense. At length North turned away and stood a moment with bent head as if lost in some strange revery. Suddenly he thrust his hand into his breast and drew forth a small soiled and crumpled glove.

"Do you recognize it?" he asked, holding it up before the girl. "It is your glove. You dropped it, and I found and kept it. I have carried it about with me night and day. I have covered it with kisses. See! It is stained with my lips. There are tears on it too. Strange that a man should weep over a woman's glove! I would sooner have parted with life than that glove. Now"—he kissed it once more violently, then flung it down and trampled it into the mud with the heel of his boot—"there's an end of it. I have other work to do than crying over a bit of senseless leather—man's work, devil's work—but sometimes I forget, and my thoughts go wandering—wandering. Oh," he groaned, "if I could only crush this terrible love out of my heart and brain as easily! It burns like fire from that lake where the wicked howl forever and are never consumed—where I shall howl, too, soon."

"Down, down, you first and me after you!"

Any enmity which Monckton may have felt toward the miner passed away as he sat gazing at this strange scene. In a tone which he meant to be at once mild and firm, he addressed him:

"Come, North, compose yourself and go quietly home."

His voice appeared to reawaken the partially allayed frenzy of the unfortunate man. He whirled round upon him with a savage snarl.

"That's the work I had to do," he shouted. "That's the deed I promised the devil—to kill you and drag you down to hell with me. Ha! ha! how you will writhe and scream and pray and how I will laugh and mock you, though I shall be tortured too!"

Before Monckton comprehended his intention or could lift a hand in self defense North had sprung at his horse, caught the bits in an iron grip and borne the animal backward upon his haunches, crying, "Down, down, you first and me after you!"

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

Those living at a distance can consult the Doctor by letter.

There's nothing so GOOD as Cottolene

The new vegetable shortening.
Wherever introduced, it drives lard from the kitchen, and indigestion from the household.
It has been tried by every test, and has met every requirement.
It is as much superior to lard as the electric light is to the tallow-dip.
The only question now is, will you give your family the benefits which its use bestows?

There's nothing LIKE Cottolene

In composition, in healthfulness, in flavor, or in economy.
Its success has called out a lot of imitations and counterfeits made for the sole purpose of selling in the place and on the merits of Cottolene.
Avoid them all. They are made to sell and they are a sell.

PEIXOTO WANTS BLOOD

All Who Aided in the Insurrection May Be Shot Without Trial.

Foreigners Equally Liable With the Natives to the Summary Treatment—In View of the Number of State Prisoners the Possibilities are Tremendous—Imperial Decrees of 1839 and 1851 Revived By Peixoto.

(Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

RIO DE JANEIRO, March 17, via Montevideo, March 23.—President Peixoto has revived the imperial decrees of 1839 and 1851. These decrees authorize the execution, without formal trial, of all persons who have taken up arms against the government, as well as those who have aided or abetted, directly or indirectly, the cause of an insurrection.

The person coming within the scope of the provisions in question are not necessarily Brazilians.

All foreigners who have in any way supported or co-operated with the insurgents are liable equally with the natives to the summary treatment contemplated by the decrees.

To what extent the power of execution without trial is to be carried is not yet known.

In view of the present number of state prisoners, the possibilities are tremendous.

The Montevideo division of President Peixoto's fleet has been ordered to Rio Grande do Sul so as to convey from Matto Grosso the reinforcements needed by Governor Castilho.

HE WILL NOT DIE TO-DAY.

Prendergast Respited Until April 6 By Unprecedented Methods.

CHICAGO, March 23.—Patrick Eugene Prendergast, the slayer of Mayor Harrison, will not die to-day on the gallows. At midnight last night Judge Chetlain granted a respite until April 6. While one half of Prendergast's counsel was at Springfield endeavoring to secure the intervention of Lieut.-Gov. Gill in behalf of the condemned man, their colleagues in Chicago were resorting to measures unprecedented in the criminal annals of Illinois to stave off the execution set for to-day. It is provided by the revised statutes that a court may at any time empanel a jury to hold a hearing to determine the sanity or insanity of a defendant, at any time before execution and after sentence. In the event of the convicted man being found insane by the jury the law provides that execution shall be stayed until the person recovers his reason. Under this law Attorneys Gregory and Harlan procured from John Prendergast, the prisoner's brother, an affidavit, based upon a conversation with the condemned man a few hours before, which declared him insane. After a canvass of the judges, Judge Chetlain was selected to hear the motion. A special court was opened at 4 o'clock and after listening to arguments by counsel for the condemned man and the prosecution, at midnight the respite was granted.

Prendergast was brought into the court room at 8:30 o'clock escorted by six deputies. He had been shaved a little while before and his hair was clipped close to the skull. The effect was to give his face a ghastly appearance. "He has the death pallor already," said one of the doctors as the man came into full view under the electric lights. Prendergast paid close attention to the proceedings, and at one stage asked one of the deputy sheriffs for a pencil and some paper. The request, however, was not complied with. A deputy sheriff stood before him so that he might be shielded from his mother's sight, and a possible scene was thus prevented.

Acting Governor Gill denied the application presented to him for a respite.

Reduction in Prices of Rubber Shoes.

NEW YORK, March 22.—The United States Rubber company, which manufactures 90 per cent. of the rubber boots and shoes of this country, has decided, as the result of economies obtained by the centralization of the management, that the list price of rubber boots shall be reduced 25 cents per pair and that there shall also be a reduction made in the prices of certain grades of rubber shoes. The company also decided to give a special concession of five per cent. on goods delivered prior to September 1, 1894.

Declared Obscene.

BOSTON, March 23.—A Suffolk county jury has passed upon Bocaccio's Decameron. It decides that the classic is obscene and manifestly intended to corrupt public morals. The book received this judicial criticism in the superior criminal court before Judge Richardson yesterday, at the trial of Alexander McCance. The defendant after an interesting trial was convicted of selling a copy of this book.

NO SNOBOCRACY TITLES

Coxey Wants No Generals in His Army.

A Civic Demonstration and No One Should Feel Big Over His Authority—"Good Roads" Discovers Traces in His Spirit of the Reincarnated Soul of "Old Hickory" Jackson.

MASSILON, O., March 24.—General Coxey's order No. 1 has been promulgated. The first camp of the "Common Weal" will be struck Saturday, March 24, on the range of the Massilon Gun club. All groups are ordered to report to Marshal Browne at headquarters tent. All officers will refrain from the use of titles used by snobocracy, such as "General," "Colonel," etc. This is a civic demonstration, the order continues, and we are all citizens, and the necessary authority should not cause any of us to feel lording over our fellows. We have sufficient food promised us and hunger is not to be feared as much as a state militia regiment of bankers, clerks and other scions of dudedom. Your daughters are in no danger, and your silver and gold is as dross to those who believe in legal tender money of paper. A meeting will be held Saturday at 1 p. m., and while the speaking is going on those who wish to contribute to our commissary wagons can do so.

Concerning his visit to Pittsburg Mr. Coxey said that, while it was entirely on private business matters, he had while there received the most encouraging information favorable to the success of his "Army of Peace."

"I was informed," he said, "that 75 prominent business men of that city intended to join our army and give it their support. My informant was Mr. Henry B. Rea, one of Pittsburg's most influential men. Pittsburg approaches nearer to the general idea of a city of brotherly love than any city in this country."

Mr. Coxey said yesterday for the first time that he had discovered traces in his spirit of the reincarnated soul of Andrew Jackson. "Old Hickory," whose memory is so dear to the democracy of to-day. He did not talk at much length on this point.

The Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling and Lake Erie will run excursions from various points to the places on their lines where the Coxey army will cross.

Notwithstanding the impression given by some of the "war" correspondents that Coxey has 5,000 recruits camped just outside of the city limits, at present the army consists of Oklahoma Sam, the cowboy who takes care of Coxey's horses, two colored musicians and Coxey and Browne.

Call on Gov. Pattison for Tents.

HAZLETON, Pa., March 23.—W. Astor Evans, of this city, who claims to have been commissioned by Gen. Coxey to organize the Pennsylvania detachment of the "Commonweal Army," and has been working industriously to that end during the past week, sent the following telegram to Coxey: "Have 300 men ready at Cranberry; 150 more under direction of William Cassidy at Tomhicken. Wire instructions."

To Gov. Pattison another telegram was addressed asking for 200 tents for use of citizens at Washington. As yet no reply has been received to either communication.

Coxey, who lived at Danville one time, is well known here and it is said Evans is a relative of Coxey's wife. Evans has plenty of money and claims to have all necessary capital to carry out the project, as far as his battalion is concerned.

The Rumor Again Revived, But is Generally Discredited.

LONDON, March 23.—The rumor of Lord Rosebery's approaching marriage to Princess Maud of Wales has been revived with considerable positiveness in the last two days. It has been discussed at the clubs, but as yet the newspapers have refrained from handling it. The rumor can not be corroborated and the general opinion is that it is without foundation in fact.

TOOK PART IN THE WAR

Therefore the Grace Chilian Claims Disallowed.

The Thorndyke Claim and That of the Widow of John A. Murphy Also Dismissed By the Commission—Only Two Decisions Rendered So Far in the Claimants' Favor.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The Chilian claims commission has handed down several important decisions, all of them except one being against the United States claimants.

The most important were the claims of William R. Grace & Co., and Grace Brothers & Co., for damages aggregating about two and a half million dollars for property destroyed by the Chilians in their war with Peru. The commission sustained the motion of the Chilian representatives to dismiss the cases on the ground that the two firms had given aid and comfort to the enemies of Chili. By the terms of the treaty establishing the commission, no claims made by persons who had assisted the enemies of either country were to be considered.

The commission also dismissed the claim of John L. Thorndyke amounting to $140,000 (silver) for the destruction of a portion of the railway which was from Mendello, on the coast of Peru, to Lake Titicaca in Bolivia. This is the most important road in South America. Thorndyke's interest in it was limited to its construction only. The grounds given by the majority of the commission for its action was that the evidence produced in the affidavits submitted was not sufficient to justify an action against the Chilian government.

The claim of the widow of John A. Murphy for $19,000 on account of the loss of household goods and personal property in the Peruvian war was dismissed for similar reasons.

John Good, the United States member, dissented from each of these decisions.

The commission awarded $3,086 in gold to Dr. Winfield Scott Sprigley, an American dentist in Chili, for the destruction of his household effects at a watering place near Valparaiso by Balmaceda's troops during the revolution. This was only the second decision favorable to the claimants of either country made since the commission was organized, the other being in favor of Wells, Fargo & Co. for about $29,000.

Arguments have been completed in the Du Bois claim against Chili for $2,000,000, and it is thought likely the United States claimant in this case may recover at least a portion of the amount.

HOUSE STILL IN DEADLOCK.

Senate Passes Resolutions of Regret at the Death of Kossuth.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The recent death of the great Hungarian leader in the revolutionary period of 1848 was the subject of a resolution adopted in the senate yesterday on the motion of Mr. Hoar, of Massachusetts, expressing deep regret at the death of "Louis Kossuth, the illustrious patriot and lover of liberty, formerly the guest of the American people."

The newspaper reports of the extent to which the illegal coining of silver dollars is being carried on in Omaha was the foundation for a resolution offered by Mr. Sherman (rep., O.) directing an inquiry by the judiciary committee as to whether existing statutes against counterfeiting were applicable to the case of simulated coins of equal weight and fineness to those issued out of the government mints. The resolution went over without action on objection of Mr. Stewart (rep., Nev.).

The bill for a site for the government printing office was discussed, and an amendment for the acquisition of the Mahone lot was adopted—27 to 25.

A motion to reconsider that vote was made and is pending. The bill appropriating a million dollars for the extermination of the Russian thistle was discussed and went over without action. The senate at 4 p. m. adjourned until Monday.

House of Representatives.

The house spent five hours yesterday in unavailing efforts to secure the vote of a quorum upon the motion to take up the O'Neil-Joy contested election case. Near the close of the session, Mr. Livingston, (dem., Ga.) renewed the effort he made while filibustering was in progress over the Bland seigniorage bill, to enforce the rule requiring members to vote. But the chairman, (Mr. Bailey, dem., Tex.), declined to entertain a motion for that purpose. The house refused to adjourn over Good Friday, and the contest on the election cases goes on to-day.

RIOTS AT BUDAPEST

Students Compel Respect of Kossuth's Memory.

Audiences Driven from Several Play Houses and Flags of Mourning Hoisted—Stones Hurled Through Windows of Concert Halls—Repeated Encounters With the Police.

BUDAPEST, March, 23.—The National theatre tried to give a performance last evening, despite the general mourning for Kossuth and the closing of the other places of public entertainment. The students had warned the manager against opening the doors, but he obtained a double force of police to protect him and had the house opened. The first act of the play was but half done when about 200 students attacked the police at the door, drove them off after a short struggle, and demanded that the curtain be lowered and the black flag be raised over the theatre. The actors were too much confused to proceed with their parts. Many of the audience threatened to make a fight against the interference of the students. Some women left the house and three fainted. To avoid a riot in the theatre the manager hurriedly complied with the demands of the students. He hoisted the mourning flag and suspended the performance.

The students' mob left the National theatre at about 8 o'clock. They moved slowly up the Karoly street to the barracks, where a group of students from the Royal opera house informed them that, despite all reports to the contrary, the opera was being give as usual. All started at once for the opera house, shouting that the performance must be stopped and the doors closed. An extra force of police had been stationed at the opera house, and as the students turned down Andrassy street the captain drew up his men in the small open space before the entrance. The students charged the police and beat them back, but were unable to break through the ranks to the theatre doors. They shouted and hooted so loudly that the performance was hardly audible in the opera house, and after a few minutes was suspended completely.

Police reserves were called up. They forced the mob back and down Andrassy street until most of the students left the neighborhood.

Half an hour later the students had reassembled with reinforcements. They returned to the attack, drove back the police after a sharp struggle and ran jeering and groaning into the opera house. They shouted that the performance must close at once. The manager promised to stop it if they would leave the house, but they refused to go. During the confusion the curtain fell. The singers hurried from the place and the audience dispersed panic stricken. The students hoisted mourning rags over the building after everybody else had left.

Upon leaving the opera house the rioters learned that several small music halls had remained open. They went through the streets where the entertainments were in progress, threw stones through the windows and handled roughly all persons whom they found at the entrances to the halls. A strong force of police eventually overtook them. About fifteen men were wounded in the fight and several were arrested. The rest were dispersed.

American Masons to Be Represented.

TURIN, March 23.—Both American and Italian lodges of Freemasons will be represented at the Kossuth funeral services here and in Budapest. Kossuth had been a mason for 49 years. He was received by the Boston, Mass., masons with a demonstration, which he never forgot, when he was visiting the United States in 1853. A deputation of the municipal authorities of Turin will accompany the body to the Hungarian border.

MISS POLLARD'S SUIT.

Yesterday a Day of Uninteresting Proceedings—No Court To-day.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—On account of to-day being Good Friday Judge Bradley's court is not in session, thus affording the lawyers and others interested in the Pollard-Breckinridge case a day of needed rest.

The dreary reading of documentary evidence, the noting and arguing of objections and the taking of exceptions, made yesterday the most uninteresting day of the trial since it began two weeks ago. A number of depositions taken by the defense were read to the jury and a great deal of the evidence in them was objected to by the plaintiff's counsel. So many were the objections and exceptions noted that at the request of Mr. Carlisle Judge Bradley set Saturday for hearing arguments on their admissability.

The depositions read were all taken in Cincinnatti and in Kentucky, and they related to Miss Pollard's claims that she had given birth to a child in St. Joseph's Foundling asylum near Cincinnati in 1884; to her school life and the first visit of Col. Breckinridge to her, and to her age. Two sisters and others connected with St. Joseph's asylum made depositions that they did not recognize Miss Pollard as an inmate of the asylum at any time, and several persons who knew Miss Pollard in childhood and girlhood testified that she was apparently in the neighborhood of 20 or 22 years in 1884, when she met Col. Breckinridge and when she claims her age was 17.

The physician who attended her mother at the birth of a daughter named Rosalind in October or November, 1885, deposed that another daughter called "Mattie" was then running about the house and looked two or three years old.

Lightning's Favorite Mark.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., March 23.—The house of Rev. William C. Chastin, a retired missionary who spent most of his life among the Indians of the north Pacific coast, was struck by lightning during a thunder storm Wednesday night and nearly demolished. Of its seven occupants four were stunned but have since recovered. Within a radius of a few hundred yards of where this house stands lightning has struck nine times in the last few years, and the houses on either side of it have both been hit.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

FRED TAYLOR IN JAIL.

A PLAINFIELD STUDENT AT CORNELL FINDS SILENCE TROUBLESOME.

He Is Committed for Declining to Give Evidence in the Chlorine Poisoning Case Before the Grand Jury—Taylor Was Room-mate of Dingens, Who Is Suspected of Having Prepared the Deadly Chemical.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 22.—Ithaca is again stirred up in the Cornell chlorine poisoning matter by the commitment to jail, late last evening by Judge Forbes, of F. L. Taylor, a Cornell sophomore, who was a room-mate of C. L. Dingens who is suspected of being the guilty chlorine mixer.

Taylor resides in Plainfield, N. J.

He was sent to jail for contempt of court in refusing to answer questions put to him in the grand jury room. Taylor was brought before the judge Wednesday for refusal to answer questions and after giving him some advice, the judge instructed the district attorney to take him back to the jury room. This was the last of the matter until the opening of court yesterday, when the district attorney and Taylor again appeared. This time the judge gave some kindly advice to the witness and mixed with it the law and his duty. Taylor was then returned to the grand jury room. He still refused to answer questions and was again brought into court. These proceedings were repeated several times until the judge's patience was exhausted.

Taylor's attorney made a long argument in his client's behalf. He said that as Taylor was by common rumor suspected of complicity in the affair, the court could not compel him to answer questions which might have a tendency to mix him up in the affair.

Here the district attorney interrupted the lawyer and informed the court that Taylor had denied any connection or knowledge of the matter.

Hearing this the judge was more determined than ever to compel Taylor to testify. Without further ado he ordered the clerk to enter the judgment of the court that F. L. Taylor be committed to jail for contempt of court and there to remain until purged of said contempt.

Habeas corpus proceedings will be instituted to-day.

Judge Forbes stated that he was tired of all this delay, and was convinced that this was a deliberate attempt on the part of Taylor to shield some one. He did not believe Taylor was one of the guilty parties, but he did believe that he had certain knowledge of the affair, which should be in the possession of the Grand Jury. He said further, that, from the start, the court had intended to have this matter sifted to the bottom, and he was still as determined as ever to assist the Grand Jury to unravel the case as far as was consistent with his judicial powers. He said that it must be understood that the court must not be trifled with any longer. This was not a prosecution of Taylor, but an honest effort to assist justice.

TRICKY JOHN BULL.

Suspicious Proceeding in the Behring Sea Matter.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—Secretary Gresham, of the state department, appeared before the house foreign affairs committee, with reference to the legislation connected with the Behring seal fisheries. Several weeks ago Mr. McCreary, chairman of the committee, introduced a bill, which was drawn pursuant to the suggestion of the regulations made by the Behring sea arbitrators.

It is learned that Secretary Gresham informed the committee that as yet Great Britain has taken no action looking to the introduction of a bill in the British parliament with intent similar to that of the McCreary bill. Secretary Gresham informed the committee that a bill had been drafted by the British foreign office, and a copy of this draft has evidently been furnished to him by the British minister, Sir Julian Pauncefote, for its principal provisions were recited to the committee by the secretary. The British draft is a longer and more complicated document than the McCreary bill, and it is obviously drawn to make the punishment for its violation as light as possible upon the poachers.

It provides, for example, a punishment not exceeding £100 for any master of a vessel who may be caught sealing unlawfully while the court may, if it choose, impose a penalty of not more than £1. The British government has assured Secretary Gresham, through its minister here, that this bill, unsatisfactory as it manifestly is to Secretary Gresham and to the members of the [illegible] committee, will be passed in [illegible] lament in time to [illegible] sealing season [illegible].

DYNAMITE WORKS BLOWN UP.

Five Persons Killed—Damage a Mile from the Scene of the Explosion.

(Special to The Press)

PITTSBURGH, March 23.—The dynamite works of the Acme Powder Company, at Black's Run, a mile and a half above Hulton, on the Allegheny Valley Railroad, were destroyed by an explosion at 7 this morning. Five persons were killed and one badly injured. The works were blown to pieces and buildings in the vicinity were wrecked and windows broken. Of the persons killed, two were men and three women. The names of the dead are:

Mary Ramely.
Nellie Ramely.
Sarah Ramely.
William Arthur.
Samuel Ramely.

Mrs. William Arthur was badly injured.

The five persons killed were at work in the packing house. Mrs. Arthur, who was injured, was in a dwelling near the works. The dwelling was literally blown to pieces, and Mrs. Arthur was found among the wreckage.

The bodies of Mary Ramely and William Arthur have not been found. The bodies of Nellie, Sarah and Samuel Ramely were terribly mutilated, and the remains were gathered up in a box. So far as now known, the five persons killed were all who were in the works. All the victims boarded in the house where Mrs. Arthur was injured.

The works are owned by E. B. McAbee & Co., of 808 Duquesne Way, this city. The explosion caused great excitement in the vicinity of the works. At Logan's Ferry, a mile away, a brick block was badly damaged, and at Hutton, Oakmont, and Verona, houses were shaken.

MOTHERS

and those soon to become mothers, should know that Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its tortures, terrors and dangers to both mother and child, by aiding nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

MRS. DORA A. GUTHRIE, of Oakley, Overton Co., Tenn., writes: "When I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription,' I was not able to stand on my feet without suffering almost death. Now I do all my housework, washing, cooking, sewing and everything for my family of eight. I am stouter now than I have been in six years. Your 'Favorite Prescription' is the best to take before confinement, or at least it proved so with me. I never suffered as little with any of my children as I did with my last, and she is the healthiest we've got. Have induced several to try 'Favorite Prescription,' and it has proved good for them."

It is a fair competition, and some one of this city must receive the gift. T. H. BENTON, Manager.

MARY V. STICKLE OF PLAINFIELD WANTS BALM FOR HER BROKEN ENGAGEMENT.

She Advertised to Meet a Gentleman, and Thought She Had Secured a Husband Till He Went Back on Her—His Name Is Dennis.

(From The New York Sun.)

POUGHKEEPSIE, March 22—Four years ago Miss Mary V. Stickle, a trained nurse and massage operator, inserted the following advertisement in a New York newspaper:

PERSONAL—A country woman desires the acquaintance of a gentleman.
MARY STICKLE, Plainfield, N. J.

The advertisement was answered by Dennis F. Johnston, at that time an agent for electrical supplies in New York, but who for a year past has been the electrician for the New York Central Railroad Company, with headquarters in Poughkeepsie. At Miss Stickle's request Mr. Johnston paid several visits to her at Plainfield, and Miss Stickle claims that he promised to marry her, and has brought suit to recover damages for breach of promise, and in addition $1,600 for loss of wages during the time she was preparing for their marriage.

Miss Stickle tells a pathetic story of her treatment by Johnston. She says that he passed as a single man, and after winning her confidence borrowed about $400 from her for use in his electrical business in New York. She heard that he had gone out of business, and on coming to New York to investigate was stunned by the intelligence that he was a married man and had a wife living and a daughter 12 years old.

Johnston denies that Miss Stickle loaned him as much as $400. He says that after several visits to Plainfield he told her that he could not afford to go there so often, and she gave him a commuter's ticket. Some time after that he told her what business he was in, and that he needed money to carry it on, and she loaned him $231, which he promised to repay in monthly installments of $10 each. As to the promise of marriage, Johnston says that Miss Stickle did not know how to account to her mother for his visits, and that at her suggestion he wrote a formal proposal of marriage, on which letter she bases her suit for breach of promise. After writing that letter Johnston thought he was treading on dangerous ground, and decided to sacrifice Miss Stickle's acquaintanceship. Miss Stickle, however, refused to be sacrificed, and visited Johnston's wife and told the whole story to her. After that Johnston says he paid all but $96 of his indebtedness to Miss Stickle, and offered the balance to her lawyer, but he refused to receive it until he had seen his client.

Johnston accounts for Miss Stickle's suit by alleging that she has learned that he has disposed of some patents and wants him to pay more than he owes her. He says that he has received threatening letters from her, that she has tried to have him indicted, and that she has told her story to Supt. McCoy, of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad. Mr. Johnston finally disposes of the suit by saying that it is blackmail, and that when he is wanted Miss Stickle will know where to find him.

The papers in the case have been served. Leavitt & Leavitt of New York are Miss Stickle's attorneys, and Frank Gibbons, also of New York, represents Mr. Johnston.

Colored Y. M. C. A.

The opening of the new colored Y. M. C. A. was marked by a concert in the headquarters, Central Hall, last evening. The colored Crescent Glee Club of Rahway, trained by Mrs. R. A. Thomas, and the Moonlight Club of this city, sang. Mrs. Thomas was the pianist of the evening. Mrs. C. Langford, Miss Susie Reid and Miss Emma Robtnson aided in carrying out the plans of Rev. H. P. Thomas.

New members announced were: John Taylor, W. H. Wilson, Walter Carter, Joseph Randall, Oscar Wilson, James Mann, Albert Henry, James Morris, William Perry, Peter Cuff, William Connett, Israel Jones, Charles Mann, W. Fisher, William Burton, James Saunders, Carl Bonner and John Perkins. The Board of Directors included John Reid, Nathan Pollard, William Cheecks and Spencer Conway.

The gift of 45 hymn books was gratefully received from the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Congregational Church. The sale of refreshments aided in swelling the proceeds.

Mr. Thomas is confident that much good will result from the presence of such an association in Plainfield and is now encouraged to push on with the work of organizing the young men thoroughly.

ANOTHER WILL BROKEN

AND CRAIG A. MARSH IS AGAIN THE WINING LAWYER.

A Technical Point of Counsel for Caveators Wins for Mr. Laing's Daughters Their Full Share of His Estate After They Had Been Cut Off By the Will With $10 Apiece.

The Joseph Laing will contest has become a famous case notwithstanding the fact that the estate will probably not exceed $7,000. The will was declared void on the single point made by Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the caveators, that he had shown by cross-examination of the subscribing witnesses that they had not seen the testator make his signature and that the declaration made to them by the testator that it was his last will and testament was not such an acknowledgment of the signature as is required by the statute.

Nelson Runyon argued against this position that the acknowledgment that it was the testator's last will and testament carried with it by necessary implication an acknowledgement of the signature, since there could be no will without testator's signature. The Court at first seemed to favor Judge Runyon's view, but later adopted the view of Mr. Marsh and sustained him in an opinion of twenty-nine closely type-written pages.

The result is that the will is set aside, and the real estate will go to the caveators subject to the widow's dower, and one-third of the personal property will go to the widow and two-thirds to the caveators, who were children of Mr. Laing by his first wife.

The Court in its decision made these points: "In New Jersey four things are requisite in the execution of a will: 1. It shall be in writing. 2. It shall be signed by the testator. 3. The signature shall be made by him in the presence of two witnesses, or the making thereof acknowledged by him in their presence. 4. It shall be declared by him in their presence to be his last will and testament. Each and every one of these requisites must be proved to have been complied with. They are not in the alternative. The third requisite contains an alternative, but one of these must be proved to exist in connection with the other requisite names. None of them can be dispensed with.

"In the present case the subscribing witnesses had no knowledge whether or not the signature attached to the paper offered for probate was that of the testator, not having seen him sign it or heard him acknowledge it to be his signature, or even being familiar with his signature. In New York cases in which a different rule is heard from that adopted by our courts in the construction of their statute which is somewhat similar to ours, the witnesses, or at least one of them, had seen the testator sign his name to the will, and this seems to be the ground on which those decisions are rendered."

Why Not in Plainfield?

A movement is on foot to establish a widows and orphans home by the National Council of the J. O. U. A. M., which numbers about two hundred thousand members. The committee which was appointed at the annual session at Detroit, Michigan, two years ago, has approved the plans of the building and the contract will be awarded as soon as the location is decided upon. The main building will be 56x138 feet, with two wings, 44x60 feet, six stories high. It will contain 200 rooms, which will include elevators, laundry, storage, bath, school and chapel. It will be built of either stone or brick, and it will cost about $100,000. To raise the amount an assessment of fifty cents on each member will be levied, which sum covers the cost of the building. Five cents per quarter per member will pay the running expenses. The building is to be located on a farm containing one hundred and fifty acres. One sixth of the entire membership of the order live in New Jersey.

NORTH PLAINFIELD DEVELOPMENT.

MUCH OF ITS FUTURE DEPENDS ON ANOTHER HIGHWAY.

Ever Since '73 the Obstructionists Have Successfully Prevented the Opening of a Central Avenue to Wed City and Borough—Death of Linfield Avenue, and Struggle of Watchung—Decision of the Courts Expected at Any Time.

Early in 1873 it was proposed to open a street from North avenue, opposite the railroad station, Netherwood, to the mountain. It was found that because Plainfield's city charter provided a different method of opening streets than the general law and because the proposed street would extend from Union County into Somerset, State legislation was necessary.

A bill was introduced in February, 1873, and its enactment procured, providing for the laying out of streets of this kind. It was a special law passed for the particular locality and applied only to Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Under it an attempt was made to lay out and open the proposed street, which was to be known as Linfield avenue. Considerable expense was incurred, but finally on account of irregularities in the proceedings and the death of some of the commissioners in charge, the project was abandoned.

Two or three years ago certain persons on both sides of the brook again agitated the subject of such a street and proposed the extending of Peace street from Front street to Grand. The latter is a street extending from Grandview avenue for a considerable distance northward, parallel with Somerset street. Public meetings were held and the proposition met with great favor. A committee was appointed to push the matter.

They consulted counsel and were informed that there had never been any construction by any court of the law of 1873 under which the opening of the street was proposed; that it was an untried law and there was some question as to whether or not it was constitutional; that if proceedings were taken under it and were resisted so that the matter should get into the courts it was impossible to tell what the result would be.

The persons who wanted the street, however, were confident that there would be no opposition. Everybody was desirous of having the street extended, and it was believed the matter would go through without opposition.

In November, 1891, applications signed by persons owning a majority of the land fronting on the proposed street were presented to the Common Council of Plainfield and the Township Committee of North Plainfield. They advertised for two weeks that they would act at a certain time and that any persons objecting should appear before them. No one appearing in opposition the law compelled the Council and the Township Committee each to appoint three persons to form a board of six Commissioners to assess the damages and benefits to be suffered and derived from the laying out of the new srteet.

Among the six were such men as William O. Ayres, Augustus J. Winckler, Jeremiah Manning, Lewis E. Barkalew and William M. Sandford, than whom no better judges of real estate and street improvements are to be found. They assessed to the owners of land taken damages, and charged the property in the neighborhood with benefits to the amount such property would be benefited, and the balance of the damages they assessed to the city and the township.

Then the trouble began. The persons who had been anxious for the street and who were charged with benefits at once changed front and began to find fault. They thought the city and township at large should pay the damages.

Most of them could not deny that their property would be benefited more than it was assessed. One man who had a number of vacant lots, and who held them for sale at $400 apiece before the street was proposed, raised his price $100 per lot in anticipation of the opening of the street. The commissioners assessed him for benefits only $50 per lot, but he was loud in his complaint that it ought not to be charged to him at all but that the people at large should pay the expense.

The plan had been also to extend Grand street by a separate proceeding to meet Somerset street at the Notch, but it was not considered wise to do this until it should be determined that the street from Plainfield to Grand street would be opened.

This also was objected to and the result was that the whole proceedings were taken by certiorari to the Supreme Court, where the matter was argued last November. The question of the validity of the law was so intricate that the Court has not yet reached a decision but one is expected at any time. It is conceded that the Court will not change the assessment, but that it will either be affirmed or the whole law declared invalid and therefore no street will be laid.

Some few people have blamed the Common Council and the Township Committee and the lawyers, but they are persons who do not understand the situation. No great improvement of this kind can be made without a great deal of time, work and expense, particularly in such a case. This fact was fully understood before the proceedings were instituted. The street would be a great improvement and open up a large section which would be greatly enhanced in value by it and it is hoped that it will ultimately be opened.

The lawyers are Craig A. Marsh and Charles A. Reed, representing the city and the township, and E. V. Lindabury and William A Coddington, opposing the extension of the street.

COMMON COMMUNISM.

This Correspondent Does n't Think It Possible in Plainfield.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—In your Wednesday's issue H. P. R. desires to have Baptists, Methodists, Reformed, Presbyterians and Episcopalians "sit together at the table of their Lord" to show the spirit of unity that exists in Plainfield. All very good, and we would personally be very glad to witness such a scene, but let H. P. R. go to one of our Episcopal rectors and make the suggestion, and ask him to invite the pastors of the above-named churches to assist in distributing the elements, and how quickly he would hear the words: "These minsters are not ordained and our church does not alow them to administer the sacrament." What then? How can a rector, however much he may favor unity, violate the rules of his church? Or let H. P. R. ask one of the rectors to exchange pulpits on Sunday with one of these brother ministers, and see if he would not again hear that the Episcopal Rubric virtually forbade it.

H. P. R's statement that their Good Friday services are "sweet to all believing hearts" hardly accords with the facts, for we know devout Christians here who who will not attend them at all, because they believe that they savor too much of papacy, and when they want that sort of a thing they will go to organized source, and not take it second-handed. The Protestant Church has always objected to everything that led to ritualism, and has ever believed that the more we observed forms and ceremonies the less we had regard to spirituality. The English Presbyterian Church recently introduced resolutions against this very thing and declared that it was leading to spiritual declension, and a neglect of the weightier matters of the law. They declare that their experience in England clearly teaches them that the inevitable tendency of rites, etc., is to destroy true religion, and substitute therefor that which can neither support nor comfort in times of need. Does not history confirm their statements? Paul also gives a solemn warning in Galatians when he says: "Ye observe days, and months, and times and years. I am afraid of you, lest I have bestowed upon you labor in vain." If Paul was "afraid" of those who insisted on observing days and months, and times and years", it might be well for us to stop and think a little before we give them our unqualified approval. It is barely possible that Paul knew what would be the outcome of such observances, and that he felt they would lead to bondage to form rather than to Gospel liberty.

ANNUAL BOROUGH MEETING, AND OTHER HAPPENINGS.

J. Moyhan, J. Apgar and F. Wyncoop Nominated for Commissioners—School Election Appealed—Easter in the Churches.

DUNELLEN, March 23.

The annual borough meeting to nominate three commissioners, to fill the expired terms of Messrs. Ising, John Moyhan and John Apgar, and to decide on the appropriations for next year, was held in the W. C. T. U. Hall last night. The citizens were out in full force, being somewhat incensed at the proceedings Tuesday evening at the school meeting. Dr. Brakeley, president, called the meeting to order, and asked for the report of the Auditing Committee, of the finances. By vote it was received as read. A motion to adjourn was made and carried, so as to allow the other business to be taken up. Dr. Brakely was chosen chairman of the new meeting, and Charles Coriell clerk. Nominations were made for Commissioners as follows: Fred. Wilcox, John Apgar. John Moyhan, Frank Wyncoop, Jacob Fisher. The Chair then appointed Elston Lowrie and Harry Gaskill as tellers. The result was: J. Apgar, 72; J. Moyhan, 99; Fred. Wilcox, 41; Frank Wyncoop, 71; J. Fisher, 52. The three receiving the highest votes are the nominees. The appropriation wanted for next year was $1,000; $700 for lights and $300 for borough purposes. This was carried with but one dissenting vote. The borough election will be held Tuesday, April 3, from 2 to 7 p. m.

The Ladies Aid society of the Methodist Church gave a pleasing entertainment in the church last evening, which was well attended in spite of the disagreeable weather. Interest centred on a handsome buffet which was being voted for. The contest closed with the following result: Miss Edna Vail, 403; Mrs. Bowlsby, 186; Miss Jessie Bennett, 105. An excellent programme was rendered as follows:

Vocal Duet....Rev. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kinsey
Recitation.....Miss Lillie VanMiddlesworth

Tableau—Ignorance is Bliss.
Dialogue—In Want of a Servant.

Special Easter services will be held in the Methodist Church, Sunday, in the interest of missions. Rev. Mr. Kinsey will preach an appropriate sermon in the morning. Exercises by children of the Sunday-school will be an interesting feature of the evening service.

A musical and literary entertainment will be given in the Methodist Church Thursday evening, March 29, under the auspices of the Epworth League. An unique souvenir, an Easter egg, will be given to each one attending.

Rev. Mr. Kinsey is about finishing up his third year as pastor of the Methodist Church, and will no doubt remain with this church another year. During the year $2,200 has been expended for improvements.

Some people of Dunellen are not satisfied with the results of the school election Tuesday evening, and have submitted the case to the County Superintendent of Schools.

Lawyer James P. Powers, of the firm of Hance & Powers, Plainfield, was in town yesterday.

After the above was concluded ice-cream and cake were served to all.

A team from Plainfield will bowl the Dunellen at Taylor's this evening.

Majority Should Rule.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

UNWORTHY OF PUBLIC SUPPORT.

The Investigating Committee's Report on "Rev." Robertson's Juvenile Guardian Society.

The special committtee appointed by the State Board of Charities to investigate the New York Juvenile Guardian Society, which is run by "Rev." David F. Robertson, of 330 East Second street, Plainfield, has submitted a report reflecting seriously upon the utility of the society as a benevolent and charitable organization. The report says that only a small proportion of the funds contributed to the society is devoted to charitable purposes, the larger part being spent in salaries and other necessarily large expenses, and that the society is insolvent, badly managed and unworthy of public support. The report concludes with the recommendation that the Board ask the Attorney-General to take steps to dissolve the New York Juvenile Society or to revoke the charter.

A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."
—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1892.

These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. They positively contain neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

THE TEN FOOT DRIVE

BY CHARLES LOTIN HILDRETH.

Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association]

In another instant, in spite of the girl's pleading words and Monckton's struggles to free himself, horse and rider would have been dashed into the deep, stony ditch at the roadside, when far off and muffled the solemn tolling of a bell came laboring up from the valley against the brisk wind. The sound seemed to paralyze the frantic man's strength. He dropped the bits and stood listening with features that gradually grew calmer, while a shade of nameless dread crept over them. The other two listened with him, for they, too, knew full well what the tolling of that bell portended.

"What—what is it?" muttered North, looking around him with vague inquiry. "Why are they tolling that bell?"

"I will tell you why," answered Monckton, his face deathly white. "The water has broken into the Ten Foot Drive, and if a single life is lost there you are to blame for it. Now stand aside!"

With a terrible cry, a cry of horror and remorse, North sped like a deer down the road leading to the village.

"Where are you going, Ralph?" asked the girl anxiously as she saw Monckton gather up the reins and settle himself in the saddle.

"To the mine," he answered, "though I fear there is little hope. I have not heard the tolling of that bell since boyhood, but I have not forgotten its dreadful significance. Fool that I was," he exclaimed in bitter self denunciation, "to be baffled by a madman and his rabble!"

"Remember, Ralph," she said soothingly, "you did your best to protect those poor miners and nearly lost your life in the attempt."

"Better if I had," he replied gloomily; "my enemies would have been satisfied, and there would have been no widowed and fatherless to accuse me today. Goodby, Imogene."

"I am going with you, Ralph."

"Come, then."

Giving rein to their horses, they rode toward the village at a rapid gallop.

As they drew near the works evidences of a sudden and tremendous calamity increased every moment. The single street leading to the main shaft of the mines was crowded with men, women and children, running distractedly to and fro, cursing, weeping and praying. There were endless shakings of clinched fists in the air as if to invoke the vengeance of the Creator, wringing of hands, upliftings of streaming eyes and quiverings of pale lips.

Here and there gangs of laborers, with picks, crowbars and safety lamps, pushed their way sternly through throngs that sought to stay them with questions. Philosophic idlers at the door of the village tavern wagged sodden skulls with funereal satisfaction of prophecies fulfilled. And through all this nightmare chaos a human current flowed steadily on toward that dreadful spot, where, far down the black and gaping shaft, in the bowels of the earth, a score of men were already dead or preparing to die in the embrace of the pitiless flood, while overhead in the tower tolled their funeral bell.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE TEN FOOT DRIVE.

Panting, wild eyed, with a face before which the boldest of his associates shrank back dismayed, Matthew North tore a passage through the crowd collected about the main shaft.

"What has happened?" he demanded huskily.

"The water has burst into the Ten Foot Drive."

"Twenty-two men caught there. Jack Morton was the only one who escaped."

"Drowned like rats in a tub."

"All dead by now, poor fellows! If the bulkhead had been put up, this couldn't have happened."

"What does Matthew North say to that? It was him as edged us on."

"The master wanted to build the bulkhead. Matthew North wouldn't have it."

"The lives of 22 good men are at his door."

"Curse Matthew North!"

"Down with Matthew North! Him and his fine speeches has lost me a brother this day."

"Send him to join the others! Throw him down the shaft!"

There was a rush of infuriated men, among whom the quondam leader recognized some who but a week before had been his most ardent supporters. A dozen brawny hands seized him; he was pushed and dragged to and fro, with infinite insult and derision. His clothing was torn; blood streamed from a dozen cuts and bruises. Yet he uttered no word of protest; he made no attempt to defend himself. With dull eye and haggard cheek he submitted passively to their will. Though his nonresistance was the effect of his own remorse and despair—for at that moment he would gladly have welcomed death as an expiation and an escape from the tortures of conscience—it was the means of saving his life. No man, except one utterly given over to the fiend, can do murder on a victim who voluntarily stretches out his neck to receive the blow. Therefore the mob hesitated, and it is more than probable that the greater number of the would be executioners felt a sense of relief as Ralph Monckton, followed by Miss Duke, rode up, and throwing himself from his horse made his way hastily to the spot.

"What are you doing here?" he said in abrupt, commanding tones. "Release that man and fall back—fall back, I say!"

He was promptly obeyed. There was something in his voice and manner, evoked by the terrible exigency of the hour, that quelled the most turbulent.

Matthew North remained where he had been dragged, with drooping head, hands hanging at his side, apparently taking no heed of what was passing around him.

"Call hither the engineer and the superintendents," said Monckton. "Let no more time be lost."

The subordinates gathered around their principal, and a hurried council was held. The miner Morton, the only one of those in the inundated section who had escaped, told the story of the disaster in a few agitated words. The men, he said, were fully aware of the danger which threatened them, but with the recklessness which becomes a second nature with miners they ignored it. The positive order to abandon the cutting sent them through John Turner was never delivered, owing to that person's delay in returning to the village. A moment before the rupture of the wall Morton noticed a new seam in the breast from which the water was flowing. He gave the alarm and started for the shaft, but he had not taken 10 steps before there was a dull report, and the water was boiling about his feet. He had been at work near the entrance, while the remainder of the men were at the farther end, and it was only after a desperate struggle that he himself had escaped.

The scene of the catastrophe, called by the miners the Ten Foot Drive, was in one of the lowermost levels of the works. It was one of a number of tunnels ramifying from the main chamber at the bottom of the shaft. Out of this tunnel other smaller cuttings, galleries and pits opened, following the various seams and deposits of coal. At the farthermost end of the Ten Foot Drive was the wall or breast which had given way to the flood—a mass of slate and shale where the supply of coal had ended, and where, in consequence, the excavation had ceased. As we have seen, months before some of the more experienced men had detected the existence of a subterranean stream behind this barrier, which from its friable nature could not be supposed to withstand the action of water for any considerable period. With its fall must occur one of the most dreaded of mine disasters and the almost certain destruction of those at work in that section. The recent heavy rains and the overflow of the creek into the old shaft, farther up the hill, had increased the volume of the underground stream and brought about the fulfillment of at least a part of John Turner's prediction, sooner even than he had looked for it. Had the rest come to pass as well? Were there widows and orphans in the village—the widows and orphans of the 22 men at the bottom of the Ten Foot Drive?

There was a hope—a poor, pale shadow, but still a hope! And it was Matthew North who suggested it.

"They are not dead!" he cried, waking out of his despairing trance and breaking his way into the group about the proprietor. "I am sure they are not dead," he repeated.

"What reason have you for thinking so?" asked Monckton.

"Just opposite where Morton tells us they were when he saw them last," replied the miner, speaking with feverish rapidity, "a gallery runs up to the next level at a steep incline. At the end of it is a small chamber. If they reached that chamber, sir, I believe they escaped the water and are alive at this moment."

"I think Matthew may be right, sir," interjected one of the superintendents. "I remember the gallery and the chamber he speaks of, and if the poor fellows are there I do not believe the water has yet reached or will reach them."

"Pray God you are right," ejaculated the proprietor. "But if they are in that chamber how shall we get to them? Is there any other outlet?"

"None," replied one of the group in a despondent tone. "It will take days to pump out the water in order to reach them from below. Long before that they will all have perished."

There was a mournful silence. Monckton's eye ran in anxious inquiry from one downcast face to another, until it rested upon that of Matthew North. The miner seemed to be reflecting deeply. As he met the proprietor's gaze he spoke again.

"If they are in that chamber," he said, "I believe we can make our way to them in a few hours."

"How? How?"

"Speak, North."

"Just above that chamber," replied the miner, as if consulting his memory—"yes, it must be just over it—there is an old, disused gallery which has not been worked in many years. By cutting through"——

"How thick?"

"Ten or fifteen feet at the thinnest part. But the material is schist, mixed with shale and coal, and"——

"To work! to work! Thank you, North. I believe there is a chance for those poor fellows, after all." There was an energetic, almost assured ring in the young proprietor's voice. In an instant the crowd, which had remained mute and motionless, awaiting the result of the conference, was in motion. There was a babel of shouts, cries, directions, entreaties. But the young mine owner was seen to raise his hand, and there was expectant silence. "There must be order here," he was heard to say, "or we shall accomplish nothing. Form yourselves into gangs of 10 men each—no more can work to advantage at a time—each gang will work for half an hour and be relieved by the next. I am going down to inspect the scene of action."

"I believe we can make our way to them in a few hours."

CHAPTER XXII.

THE RESCUE.

The effect of his words was magical; the chaos resolved itself into discipline. They had been taught to hate or despise that pale, slender man as their natural enemy and oppressor. But now, in the hour of dire need, he was proving himself the wisest, coolest and strongest of all. Even Matthew North, whom they had once blindly followed, had never in the days of his absolute power seemed like this—so calm, so confident, so self forgetful.

And there was one present to whom he seemed more, far more than all this. As she stood beside her horse, a little withdrawn from the forefront of the throng, gazing upon him where, poised upon an elevation overlooking the scene, he issued his orders and directed the movements of his men with the indescribable magnetism of voice and mien which marks the born leader, a thrill of pride swelled the girl's heart and flushed her cheek—pride and more than pride—love! With the frankness which was a part of her nature she confessed the truth, put it into words and spoke them under her breath—how sweet they were! —"I love him, I love him!"

UNITED MINE WORKERS

Planning for a Great National Movement.

May Result in the Total Suspension of Work By Miners Throughout America, Thus Throwing 100,000 Men Out of Employment—To Follow the English Union's Course.

PITTSBURG, March 24.—President John McBride, of the United Mine Workers of America, has issued a circular call for the fifth annual convention of the organization, to be held at Columbus, commencing April 10. The convention will be the most important yet held, for "a national movement" will be considered. This means the total suspension of work by miners throughout America from Colorado to eastern Pennsylvania. If adopted and a date set, the greatest strike in the history of the miners of America will be inaugurated. There are in America fully 100,000 miners who are attached to the United Mine Workers organization.

Preparations for this national movement have been in progress several months. Meetings are being held nightly, conventions called and no means left undone to arouse enthusiasm among the coal diggers for the national movement. The same applies to the Ohio, Tennessee, West Virginia, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri coal fields.

In explanation, the call sets forth that sectional or local strikes have been unequal to the task of protecting or advancing wages; that miners striking locally cannot hope to win without co-operation of those at work, and this is not secured; that success altogether depends upon concerted action on the part of the mine workers.

President McBride in his official call for a convention sends a programme for independent labor politics to be discussed and acted upon at the meeting. The proposed political action is based upon the course pursued by the trades unionists of Great Britain.

Strange Case of Blindness.

NEW YORK, March 24.—James Caulfield, 23 years of age, while standing in front of the Brooklyn Citizen, on which he is employed as a reporter, was suddenly stricken with blindness. Several trolley cars were passing at the time, and simultaneously there were two or three brilliant electric flashes. Young Caulfield seemed to be suddenly shocked, and exclaiming, "Oh, my eyes!" reeled back and fell into the arms of a companion. Finding that his sight failed to return, his friends led him to the eye and ear infirmary in Livingston street. The doctors could afford no relief, and the young man was removed to his home.

Riotous Paterson Strikers.

PATERSON, N. J., March 24.—Seven of the striking dyers of the Central Dye works at Little Falls are under arrest for rioting. They attacked the dye house but were held at bay by the superintendent at the point of a revolver. The strikers were after two of the men who had agitated the strike and then returned to work. Filled with liquor the strikers have caused terror all the week in Little Falls. All the men arrested are Huns.

Not a Trace of Pathick Left.

HAZLETON, Pa., March 24.—A Hungarian named Pathick entered the pumphouse at No. 5 Strippings with a lighted lamp on his head. A cotton bag containing twenty sticks of dynamite hung on the wall. The bag, it is supposed, became ignited from the lamp and the dynamite dropped to the floor. A terrific explosion followed. The pump house is a wreck. Not a trace of Pathick has been found.

Tried to Exterminate His Children.

JERSEY CITY, March 24.—Thomas Costello, better known as the "rat exterminator," has been sent to the county jail for starving two of his children who had been locked up in separate rooms for over 24 hours. Costello's wife died six months ago leaving him six children. Of the other four the whereabouts of one cannot be learned.

Cyclone Damage at Bridgeton.

BRIDGETON, N. J., March 24.—The damage caused by yesterday's cyclone will run into the thousands. A large brick car shop which had just been finished for the South Jersey Traction company was completely wrecked. All of the company's cars were in the building and were demolished. Other property throughout the town was badly damaged.

THE FULLER MYSTERY.

Police Said to Have a Complete Chain of Evidence to Submit Monday.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Although Dr. Conway at the first autopsy made an examination to ascertain if Miss Fuller had been assaulted, Assistant District attorney Hartman says that he does not believe Dr. O'Hare made any effort in this direction at the second autopsy, but confined his examination exclusively to the head of the dead girl. The question is such a vital one in determining a motive for the shooting to support either the theory of suicide or murder, that it is probable the body will be exhumed in order to satisfactorily settle the question in the interests alike of the prosecution and the defense.

Mr. Hartman examined a number of witnesses in the case this morning. He said that the police now had a very complete chain of evidence to submit to the coroner's jury on Monday.

Made the First American Watch.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., March 24.—Oliver B. Marsh, a leading jeweller of this city, is dead, aged 70 years. When the Howard Watch company was established at Roxbury, Mass., Mr. Marsh, who was one of its most trusted employes, made the first American watch, which is still in the possession of a son of the deceased, Frank Marsh, of Waltham, Mass.

Wholesale Arrests for Malpractice.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Central office detectives under the personal supervision of Superintendent Byrnes, last night raided the office of sixteen physicians, men and women, and arrested the doctors. In one office the bodies of two new born babes were found. The prisoners were locked up. Many shocking disclosures were disclosed.

Exciting Robbery.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., March 24.—Perry Brown, one of the most prominent citizens of this place, took the Santa Fe train for some point in Texas, having with him considerable money. Just outside the city Mr. Brown started from the smoking car to the sleeper, and on the platform was assaulted by four men, who searched his pocket and then threw him headforemost between the cars and jumped off themselves. The skirt of Mr. Brown's overcoat caught on the step and prevented him from being killed, but his right arm, below the elbow, was cut off. When Mr. Brown recovered he walked back to town.

Killing Yellowstone Park Game.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 24.—Word just received from a winter photographing party now in Yellowstone national park is to the effect that hunters have started in to kill game. There is no law protecting the game in the park. The herd of buffalo in the park was increasing rapidly, and there are thousands of elk within its boundaries. Unless congress protects them it will be almost impossible to prevent their destruction.

Against Cigarettes.

NEW YORK, March 24.—Business men in this city, who employ some 20,000 boys, have determined to give preference to boys who do not smoke cigarettes. This movement is the latest development of the anti-cigarette league, which was organized in the public schools a few weeks ago by Charles B. Hubbel of the board of education.

MAY ESCAPE THE NOOSE

Believed That Prendergast Will Never Hang.

His Attorneys Will, if the Insanity Dodge Fails, Deny Judge Chetlain's Authority to Stay the Execution and Apply for Habeas Corpus Because the Original Date Has Passed.

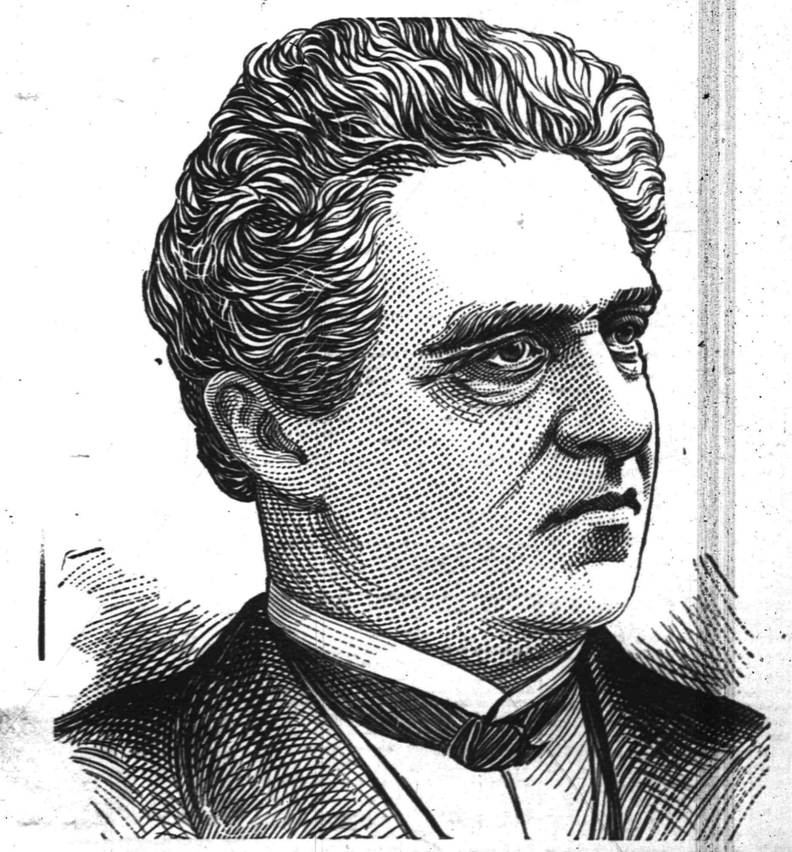
CHICAGO, March 24.—The state's attorney will not be a willing party to the investigation of Prendergast's present mental condition, which begins to-day before Judge Chetlain, but will be ready, with medical testimony to prove that the condemned murderer is as sane as he was. It is not expected that much time will be occupied in getting a jury. The suggestion was made by the attorneys for Prendergast to-day that the jury be composed entirely of physicians, but the state's attorney has not given his consent. He maintains that Judge Chetlain had no authority to interfere with the execution and in doing so changed the governor's writ. On the other hand, the opinions of eminent lawyers of this city is almost unanimous that Judge Chetlain only obeyed a mandatory law and did what was right when there was not reasonable time to try the sanity of the assassin before the hour of his execution arrived. In case the jury finds the murderer of sound mind, however, it is argued by the friends of the defense and lawyers well versed in criminal jurisprudence, that there may be complications in the way of the execution of the sentence. It is not improbable, in that event, that Prendergast's lawyers will go into another court and, denying the power of Judge Chetlain to order a stay of execution, apply for a writ of habeas corpus because the original time set for the execution has passed. If Prendergast should be released on that technicality Sheriff Gilbert would be responsible to the law for the miscarriage of justice. It is on account of this legal aspect of the case that the state's attorney formally protested against last night's proceedings. Many people believe that Prendergast will never be hanged now.

To Start Up on Full Time.

WARE, Mass., March 24.—Charles A. Stevens & Co.'s woolen mill in this town, employing 250 hands, will start up on full time April 2. This mill has been shut down over seven months.

HONOR TO DARTMOUTH.

Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., Whose Giant Intellect Discovered Paine's Celery Compound.



The giants among men—the greatest statesman and the greatest physician that America has produced—Daniel Webster and Edward E. Phelps—have both done honor to Dartmouth college, one as a student, the other as an instructor.

To Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., LL. D., the world today owes longer life and more freedom from sickness than to any other physician.

Every Dartmouth alumnus of more than a dozen years's standing remembers the awe in which he held the deen observer whose name appeared in the college catalogue next to that of the president as professor of materia medica; and every graduate has admired the complete museum of medical botany which Dr. Phelps gave to the college.

But it was the world-famed discovery of Prof Phelps of an infallible cure for those fearful ills that result from an impaired nervous system and impure blood which has endeared the great doctor to the world and made his life an era in the practice of medicine.

Prof. Phelps was born in Connecticut and graduated from the military school at Norwich, Vt. He studied medicine with Prof. Nathan Smith of New Haven, Conn., and graduated in medicine at Yale.

His unusual talent soon brought him reputation and prominence among his professional brethren. In 1835 he was elected to the professorship of anatomy and surgery in the Vermont university. In 1841 he was appointed lecturer on materia medica and medical botany in Dartmouth college. The next year he was chosen professor of the chair then vacated by Prof. Bobby, and occupied the chair, the most important one in the country, until a few years before his death in 1880.

He had for years forseen the dangers of the American way of living. He went about to find a scientific, common sense remedy to cure the common evils that, under one name and another, result from an unhealthful state of the nervous system, and within a score of years have seemed to sweeping over the country like an epidemic.

He gave to the medical profession a celebrated remedy, which has since come to be known the world over as Paine's celery compound.

It was Dr. Phelps' prescription which ever since has been freely used and prescribed by the most eminent of the profession. The formula was furnished to all reputable physicians; they found the wonderful remedy to be exactly what was claimed for it, a great nerve and brain strengthener and restorer. It was demonstrated beyond doubt that Paine's celery compound would cure nervous debility and exhaustion, neuralgia, sleeplessness, dyspepsia and all blood diseases.

It was as harmless as it was good, and it was the universal advice of the medical profession that the compound be placed where the general public could secure it, and thousands of people have every year proven the wisdom of this good advice.

The recent advice of Commodore Howell to use this compound, which the commodore publicly said had saved his own life, and the published testimonials of Mayor McShane of Montreal, the poet-ten, and within a score of years have author Hardy, George Wright, Marie Tempest, Councilor Morse, Mabel Jenness and other men and women of national reputation, has brought the compound into special notice.

As a well known physician in this city says: "Paine's celery compound is not a patent medicine; it is not a sarsaparilla; it is not a mere tonic; it is not an ordinary nervine—it is as far beyond them all as the diamond is superior to cheap glass."

Sister Gertrude,

BOLD CRIME IN BROOKLYN.

A Trust Company's Collector Chloroformed and Shot by a Desperate Burglar.

(Special to The Press)

BROOKLYN, March 24.—An unidentified burglar, that broke into the house of William H. Dorris, 57 years old, the collector for the Kings County Trust Company, living at 507 Sixth avenue, Brooklyn, this morning, having failed to chloroform the inmates of the house, pounded Mr. Dorris over the head with his pistol, shot him, and then made good his escape by the rear.

He left his burglar's tools behind in his hurried flight, and, in escaping, must have walked directly between and in plain sight of Policemen Ansart and Knight, who responded to the cries of "Police!" Yet neither is able to describe him, and the probability is he will never be caught.

The physicians in attendance on Mr. Dorrs, while admitting that his injuries are of a serious nature, think that they will not prove fatal.

UNSETTLED AS EVER.

The British Still Exercising Police Supervision at Bluefields.

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—The condition of affairs in Bluefields, Nicaragua, is as unsettled as ever. The English are still in control of the police protection of the city, and are in fact in practical control of the entire reservation. Lacayo remains at Bluefields and refuses to vacate, but his position is not recognized, and the Americans continue to ignore his demand upon them for payment of the shipping dues. The steamship William G. Hewes, of the Southern Pacific line, arrived from the southern seaport town with the latest news. The committee of three Nicaraguans and two natives of New Orleans, which was appointed to arrange some provisional government, had held several meetings, but having come to no agreement, disbanded. There now seems to be no attempt whatever to bring about a peaceful government. The commander of the Cleopatra, besides being commander of the police protection of the city, has assumed control of the government to a certain extent, and this is all the government there is in the city. Commissioner Lacayo remains in the city and refuses to go out of the boundaries of the reservation. The Cleopatra still rides at anchor off the Bluefields, but is expected to leave very shortly. On Friday last the British battleship Blake came in sight of the bluffs off Bluefields, and during the afternoon came to anchor near the Cleopatra. This vessel is expected to remain at her present anchorage and the Cleopatra will travel for the northern seas. The arrival of the Blake was expected, or rather it was known that a vessel would relieve the Cleopatra, but it was thought that the relief boat would be a small one, and not the flagship of the British squadron.

EASTER LILIES.

BY EDITH SESSIONS TUPPER.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"I declare," said Miss Susan, bending her thin face close to the tall, stately green stalk she was carefully watering. "I declare if 'tain't budded. It'll be out in time for Easter."

A smile which transfigured the plain, angular features and made Miss Susan look almost lovable lit up her face, and setting down her watering pot she touched the leaves of the plant reverently and with subdued joy. She had guarded it so faithfully and tenderly for months, and now it was about to reward her for all her devotion.

Her flowers were all Miss Susan had in life to love. Upon them she lavished the affection of her lonely, desolate old heart. She was the last of her name. The rest all lay out in the family burying ground on the hill yonder, in the shadow of the whispering pine woods. Miss Susan lived alone in the big, red farmhouse with old Tilly, her faithful servant. The farm was worked on shares by Giles Mason, and Giles, and the minister, and one or two old neighbors were Miss Susan's only visitors. Through the long, drowsy, sweet summer days and the dreary winter hours, Miss Susan lived her monotonous, uneventful life, reading her few books and papers and caring for her flowers.

SHE TOUCHED THE LEAVES REVERENTLY.

Those flowers were wonderful! I can see that old fashioned garden now, a little to the side of the farmhouse. There is the brook tumbling down to the ravine, and here the old stone wall, roughly built, falling down in places, but a thing of beauty with its climbing roses and wild grapevines. And then those beds of roses—the cabbage, velvet, Lancaster and moss! The honeysuckles, sweet williams, petunias, portulacas, hollyhocks and morning glories, all growing together in a deliciously tangled maze! There never was a garden like Miss Susan's, as we children knew, nor ever such great fragrant nosegays as we bore away when we went to see her.

For Miss Susan was prodigal with her flowers. She took great pride in them and liked to have people admire them. When it was said to her, "There hain't no such garding as yourn in the hull township," Miss Susan's pale face would flush and glow with gentle triumph. Her roses always took first premium at the county fair, and in summer it was her delight to supply the pulpit of the village church with a mass of fragrance and beauty.

And now her lilies—the experiment of a hard, cold winter—were budded and would bloom in time for Easter. Miss Susan had been sitting up nights to keep those lilies properly warmed; she had coddled and tended them as she would a baby. Well, she was rewarded. With a sigh of content, she saw herself carrying the jar of tall, stately, odorous annunciation lilies up the center aisle of the church. She heard the murmured "ohs" and "ahs" of admiration. She knew that somewhere in the sermon would be a delicate reference to her offering and an explanation of the mystic symbolism of the lovely flower.

Tilly came in as Miss Susan was bending in delight over the lily stalk. Tilly wanted to know whether Miss Susan would like some corned beef for dinner. Miss Susan came out of the region of mysticism and fragrance and beauty back to earth once more. But all day long as she busied herself about her various household occupations the verse of a poem she had read somewhere kept ringing in her ears:

> In the beauty of the lilies
> Christ was born across the sea.

The lilies grew and thrived. Easter was at hand. One day Miss Susan received a call from her clergyman.

He was a good young man, earnest and sincere. His respect for Miss Susan was great. She was devout and God fearing, charitable, a faithful worker in the Lord's vineyard. What more natural than for him to turn to her for assistance and advice?

"Miss Susan," he said, after the customary greetings had been exchanged, "I have come to consult you about a very poor family which has just moved into the village, a mother and child—a boy of about 10, for you to go and see them. Women's eyes take in more than men's. The poor mother must be made comfortable at once, as her days are numbered."

"I'll go this afternoon. Where is it?" asked Miss Susan.

"They're living in that miserable hut on Dr. Jackson's place. By the way," added the minister as he took his hat to go, "possibly you may have known the mother. She told me she lived in these parts when she was a girl and that she wanted to come back to die near her old home. It was very sad." His hand was on the door knob. "Her maiden name, she said, was Amy Ransom. She married a man of the name of Bowers. I believe she said he was also a native of this town. Well, good morning, Miss Susan. I am so glad you can go this afternoon."

He drove away, and cold and rigid Miss Susan sat looking after him, trying to think.

"Amy Ransom—married a man of the name of Bowers—no, no, it could not be—yes, it must."

All the torrent of years pent up in that lonely, withered old breast burst forth. Rage and revenge rose and shook denunciatory hands at the past. In that plain, homely room, an humble setting for a tragedy, a story of intense human suffering was enacted by this sad faced spinster, who had been trying for years to forget. She saw herself a young girl once more, joyous, confident, expectant. Again she walked through the old fashioned garden with the man she loved. She smelled the lilacs—she heard the robins in the spring. She was no longer old, ugly, desolate. Life and love were in her hands.

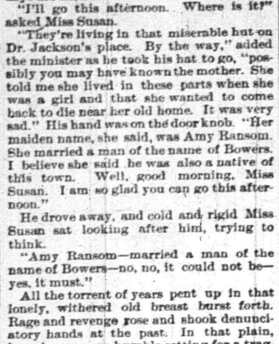
Poor Miss Susan! When the storm had passed and she realized that the woman who had years ago stolen the man she loved from her was near her, poverty stricken and dying, she said aloud in bitter tones: "Serves her right! Let her die! Let her suffer! I have suffered for years and could not die."

Go near her—touch the hand of the woman who had ruined her life? Never! Her religion did not help her now. She had not the grace to do it. Still, fearing the speech of people, she wrote her minister that, finding it was not possible for her to visit the sick woman, she sent some money to be used for her benefit on the condition that Mrs. Bowers—how her pen faltered over the name!—should never know who was the donor.

"Good soul," murmured the clergyman, "good, strong, modest soul! That's just like her. Always taking care that the left hand shall not know what the right hand doeth." And so Amy Bowers' last days were made very comfortable by Miss Susan's generous contribution.

But what of Miss Susan? She shut herself up in the farmhouse and gave way to despair. Her gentle, peaceful face grew hard and imbittered. It was so dreadful, after all the years of repression and crowding form of phantoms, to have these ghosts rise and flaunt themselves in her very face. She suffered anew—suffered as only women who live those narrow lives, with no resources to distract their tortured minds, can suffer. All the comfort she found was in her Bible and her lilies.

Slowly, day by day, they unfolded, and when, on the morning before Easter, they burst into the full glory of their waxen beauty poor Miss Susan, who for days had sat dry eyed and heartbroken, felt a blessed rain of tears start to her eyes.



"WHAT IS THE MATTER, LITTLE BOY?"

Those tears were a great relief to Miss Susan. Possibly they saved her reason. At all events they softened and chastened her, and when Tilly, bringing in the breakfast, told her that Giles had brought word that Mrs. Bowers had died in the night Miss Susan looked deeply in her heart and felt a throb of pity for her rival, now passed forever beyond the judgment of mortals and the standards of earth.

It was a balmy April morning. There were soft hints in the air of the coming spring. Resinous odors from the woods were wafted down to the open door of the great Kitchen. Miss Susan suddenly felt hope revive and quicken. A peace unknown for days visited her. A thought of her flowers and especially the beauty of her lilies shot across her mind. She was lifted out of her trials for the moment. Glancing out the door across the meadow up the hillside, she saw the tombstones in the burying ground gleaming marble white against the background of the dark pine woods.

Miss Susan hesitated a moment and then took down her bonnet and shawl from its peg.

"Where you goin?" asked Tilly, with the wonted familiarity of an old servant.

"Up to mother's grave," was the gentle answer.

When Miss Susan felt the need of consolation and spiritual help, she was accustomed to take her way to "mother's grave." Up there, away from everybody, she felt she had the companionship and remembrance of those gone before. And her mother seemed always very near her there. It was almost as if the whispering of the pines and the murmuring of the wind among the long grasses growing over the grave translated the words of admonition and love she so longed to hear.

There are some things too sacred to dwell upon, and Miss Susan's short stay by "mother's grave" is not to be described here, but when she turned to leave the lonely graveyard she heard a sound which caused her to stop abruptly and listen. Yes, there was no mistake. There was some one near her in the woods yonder.

Miss Susan was never a coward, and so gathering her skirts about her she picked her way along until she entered the edge of the forest. Peering sharply down one dim vaulted avenue, she saw a boy sitting on a log, his back toward her, rubbing his eyes with his jacket sleeve and crying bitterly.

Next to flowers, Miss Susan loved children. She possessed the divine instinct of maternity so inherent to most women in a marked degree. The sight of that child moved her strangely, and as drawing nearer she heard him moan, "Oh, mother, mother!" it seemed an echo to a voiceless cry in her own heart.

Miss Susan spoke to the boy, and he turned, showing a face flushed from weeping and eyes overflowing with hot tears. He was neatly though plainly dressed and in one hand held a cluster of teaberries, some vines and one or two wild flowers.

"What is the matter, little boy?" asked Miss Susan kindly.

"My mother is dead," said the boy, with a fresh burst of grief.

"Your mother?" faltered Miss Susan.

"Yes, she died last night."

For one instant Miss Susan felt like running away, but controlling herself by a mighty effort she asked, "Was Mrs. Bowers your mother?"

"Yes'm," sobbed the boy.

"And why are you here?"

"I wanted to see if I could find a few flowers to put in her hand," said the boy. "She loved flowers, so I thought I'd like to put a few in the coffin with her," and then again he pressed his sleeve across his eyes and wailed forth that most terrible of sorrow—the grief of the motherless.

When Miss Susan re-entered her sitting room, the first thing her eyes rested on was that slender spire of lilies. Its perfume filled the room, and it seemed almost alive—an embodiment of purity, a symbol of everlasting life.

"Oh, my lilies, how beautiful you are," cried Miss Susan, going over to them, "and how I love you!"

Suddenly she stopped, and her eyes sought the floor. In the mirror of her imagination Miss Susan saw a miserable room, a dead woman lying robed for the grave, and on her pulseless breast the thin hands held a poor little cluster of teaberries and vines.

Many other pictures glided across that mirror, and when at last Miss Susan raised her head there was a look of sublime resolution upon her face, a glimmer of the light that never was on sea or land.

* * * * * * *

She softly pushed open the door of the hut in which Amy Bowers had died and went in. Two or three women had completed the office of caring for the dead and sat in the outer room conversing in subdued tones. Miss Susan went on into the bedroom. The boy sat by the bed, his head resting against his dead mother's arm. His pathetic little offering was clasped in her cold hands.

Very gently Miss Susan laid across the sleeper's breast a long stalk of waxen, perfumed lilies—her Easter lilies. And as the child started up with a cry of gratitude she held out her arms to him. He hesitated a moment, then buried his head upon her shoulder, understanding without one question, one word, through the mysterious language of the heart, that he was no longer motherless.

And the dead woman, lying there in the beauty of the lilies, knew, too, for the Easter morning had already dawned for her.

THE RESURRECTION.

Cardinal Gibbons Says Nature Suggests Its Reality.

Nature itself suggests the reality of a resurrection. The winter and the spring are a lively figure of our death and resurrection. We have observed during the past winter how the rivers were frozen and motionless; the branches of the trees became sapless and leafless; the flowers of the field were withered; the birds of the air had ceased to cheer us with their song. All nature was silent beneath her pall of snow. But now, in the spring, the sun's heat quickens all things—the river glides once more free in its channel, fresh buds and leaves clothe the lifeless branches, the faded grass puts on a fresher, tenderer green; flowers bloom again, and birds come forth from their winter hiding places to chant again their matin and evening song to their Creator.

In all this what a striking figure we have of death and resurrection! Christ Jesus, who is called the Sun of Justice, will exercise upon our bodies the same influence which the material sun exerts on visible and created objects. When he shall come in dread majesty to judge the world, he will raise to life all that were dead. The blood frozen within us by the icy hand of death will again flow in our veins by the vivifying influence of the Son of God. Those bones upon which the rains and snows of centuries shall have fallen will stand erect and be clothed with flesh, even as the trees of the forest with leaves, and that voice which was hushed in silence will again find utterance and believer afterward engaged in singing the praises of the Almighty. It matters not whether our bodies were buried in consecrated ground or cast into the ocean to become the food of fishes, or whether our bones are left to bleach in the desert, or whether our flesh was reduced to ashes and cast to the four winds of heaven; those scattered parts will again be gathered together by the Omnipotent, for he who created us out of nothing can form us again. "It is easier," says Tertullian, "to remake from old material than to create anew."

It Signifies a New Bonnet.

To five-eighths of the feminine world Easter time means bonnets. Out of the stormy days of March, back of the ashen pallor of Lent, between the garlands of floral profusion that bedeck the brightness of the day, starts into life the peerless conception of a new bonnet, to "dazzle when the sun is down and rob the world of rest." A woman may forget to pray, but she will not forget to plan for a new bonnet all through Lent. And when Easter morning dawns it is not by the devoutness of her mood nor the sanctity of her mind that you may mark her from afar, but by the newness and the freshness of her bonnet. As she sits in her pew on the glorified and blessed day it is not her gentle air of piety nor the downcast glance of her pensive eye that attracts your attention so much as the sumptuous satisfaction that rewards the glance that acknowledges the peerless perfection of her bonnet.

Easter Weddings.

A number of choir boys singing an epithalamium walking up the aisle before the bride is a new and very beautiful Easter fashion. A favorite entertainment for Easter is a christening. Christening parties are becoming very important functions in the art of entertaining. Roman Catholics are many of them so anxious for the salvation of the little new soul that they have their children baptized as soon as possible, but others put off this important ceremony until mamma can go to church, when little master is 5 weeks old. Then friends are invited to the ceremony very much in this fashion:

"Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton request the pleasure of your company at the baptism of their infant daughter at the cathedral Monday, March 30, at 12 o'clock. At home after the ceremony, 14 West Ellicott square."

Easter.

Look up, dear heart, look heavenward. See!
The Easter sun has risen for thee!
Look up, dear heart, unto the hills,
Whose thorny steeps his glory fills!

Along his path across the tide,
See how life's cares and clouds divide
And flee! The doubting spirit's night
Is banished now in that blest light!

The smiling earth puts by her gray
And blooms in green for Easter day.
The flowers, so timid all of late,
Take heart of grace and dare their fate!

The rivers sparkle to the sun;
The sky beams down a benison;
There is a chime in all the air
As of joy bells that echo there!

The Date of Easter.

The date of Easter is determined by the ecclesiastical calendar of the Catholic church. It is a very complicated and elaborate affair invented by Lilius, a Neapolitan astronomer and sage, under Pope Gregory XIII, at the close of the sixteenth century. It would be preposterous to tax the brains of modern readers with the abstruse calculations by which the date of Easter is determined, but a few general rules might be given for their enlightment.

The regulations of the council of Nice are four: First, Easter must be celebrated on a Sunday; second, this Sunday must follow the fourteenth of the paschal moon; third, the paschal moon is that moon whose fourteenth day falls on or next follows the day of the vernal equinox; fourth, the equinox is fixed invariably in the calendar on the 21st day of March.

This calendar moon, it should be remembered, is not the moon of the heavens, nor yet the moon of the astronomers, but it is an imaginary moon created for ecclesiastical convenience. From these conditions it follows that Easter Sunday cannot happen earlier than the 22d of March or later than the 25th of April.

Where the Bad Eggs Go.

Considerably over 1,000,000 dozen decayed and pungent eggs reach New York city every year. What becomes of them? If you ask an egg man, he will smile and say that he does not know, but that nothing is wasted. That is true. All the bad eggs are sold. Some go to the tanneries to help put an extra polish on leather. A larger number of them are sold to the great coffee roasting establishments. There the odoriferous contents are used to put an oily gloss on the roasted coffee bean. Thus eventually the egg that is cast out by the exchange jobber finds its way to the stomach of the consumer. Probably the unsuspecting consumer, judging by its looks, congratulates himself on getting a pound of coffee of extra strength and richness of aroma and flavor. Probably he has.

A WHITE EASTER.

BY MARGARET MANTON MERRILL.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

So you want me to tell you the story of the White Easter, do you? Well, bring me my knittin an shut that winder, for the nights ain't none too warm, even here in California.

I dunno's I ever told you that your gran'father, Lijah Vaux, was a sea capt'n once, but he was. He never said nothin 'bout it, though, an when you've heerd the story you won't be s'prised that he didn't.

Your great-gran'father, ole Colonel Vaux, was a hard man's ever I see. I reckon he had the worst temper of any man on earth when he got started. You see, he was born down in Virginny, an his father, ole Pierre Vaux, was a Frenchman. He'd fit with Napoleon, an he used to say that Bonypart was the only general the world ever saw, an he was ready to knock anybody's head off that thought or said different.

So, you see, your great-gran'father come honest enough by his hot temper. He married a Virginny girl, an the Lord knows how he ever come to get her, for she was just about as much like him as a canary bird's like a buzzard. She never had much comfort, an she didn't live very long.

Lijah—that's your gran'father—wa'n't but 3 years ole when she died, an I remember 's well 's can be hearin my mother tell how Colonel Vaux shook the child 'cause he cried at the funeral.

After his wife died the old colonel grew crustier an more overbearin than ever, an poor little Lijah had a hard time of it, for he had a gentle disposition, like his mother. There didn't 'pear to be a mite o' Vaux blood in him, an seem's if that made the ole colonel hate him. But he managed to live through it, an grew up a straight, han'some feller's ever you see. I alwa's believed the colonel was kinder proud of him. But he wouldn't let on—not he.

It just seems if he got colder an harder toward the boy every year. He wanted him to be a lawyer, an Lijah was willin to be one an studied hard for it. I s'pose everything would 'a' gone all right, an they wouldn't 'a' been no story to tell if Lijah hadn't 'a' fell in love. But he did, an o' course it was with the wrong girl.

Hand me that ole degarrytype on the top shelf of the whatnot. There! Wait till I wipe the dust off—beats all how dusty things do get! Now you can see it. That was your gran'mother. Pretty? Well, I guess she was pretty. They wa'n't no girl anywheres round that could hold a candle to her for looks. An she had a spirit of her own too. Why, what do you think she done? You see, she was of Irish descent. Her maiden name was Nora McHenry. But she didn't like Nora, and so she called herself Ora.

Well, ole Colonel Vaux used to sneer at her every chance he got, an one day he said in her hearin that folks who hadn't no respectability o' their own was anxious to borrow some from their neighbors. Everybody know'd just who he meant, an he spoke loud on purpose, so's Ora could hear.

She looked at him a minute, an then she walked straight up to him an says she, "You'll be safe, Colonel Vaux, for a man that'll make such a speech as you did jus' now hain't no respectability to lend." After that the ole man forbid his son speakin to Ora.

Lijah had alwa's been willin to do anything his father wanted him to; but, you see, he'd never been in love before, so this was a different matter, and when his father said, "I expect you to obey me, sir," Lijah answered: "I can't obey you in this, because it's a matter that concerns only me an Ora. I love her, an she's promised to marry me. I'm sorry to displease you, but my mind's made up."

Well, the ole colonel nearly had a fit, he was so mad. He ordered him out of the house an told him to go to his lowborn Irish girl and starve. He needn't look for anything more from him.

"Very well, sir," said Lijah, an he went. Some folks said he was glad to go. His life at home hadn't been none too pleasant. He went straight to Ora an tol her what had happened.

"I've got to go away," says he. "There's no chance for me to do anything here. Will you marry me, Ora, an wait for me to come back? I'll come," says he, "as soon's I'm able to take care o' you."

"I will, Lijah," says Ora, "an I'm sure you'll succeed very soon."

You see, they was both young, an success always looks easy to young folks, 'specially when they're in love. So they was married very quietly at the little church, an Lijah went to Boston to a man he knew would help him, an 'twa'n't long before Ora heard that he was going to sea. He'd got a place as supercargo, an he wrote that he was goin to have good pay, an he'd be back before many months, an when he went again he'd take her with him. So she was quite happy an was makin all sorts of plans about the future.

"I'VE GOT TO GO AWAY."

They was married on Easter Sunday, an the night before there was two inches o' snow fell. A white Easter was somethin that hadn't been seen in Virginny for a good many years. It was still snowin when your gran'father went to the church with his bride.

But when they come out the sun was shining an everything was glistenin as if the earth was covered with diamonds.

"It's a good sign," says Ora. "The world's put on a weddin dress in my honor."

Well, the months went by, an not a word come from Lijah. You see, in them days, ships didn't go flyin across the ocean's if they was towed by lightnin, an they wa'n't no cables nor even telegraphs. So 'twa'n't so strange after all. But when the Easter day come round agin, your gran'mother felt rather sad an lonesome, though she wa'n't alone. A baby boy had come to her for a Christmas gift. That was your father. Gettin int'rested, ain't you? Well, you ought to be. This story comes pretty close to you.

Ora didn't want for nothin, 'cause her father was well to do, an she lived at home. Ole Colonel Vaux never paid no attention to her nor her baby. He'd got so cross an snappy that nobody dared go a-nigh him.

At last one day, about two years after Lijah'd went, he got in a rage with somebody an bust a blood vessel. He only lived a few hours an never spoke but once. Then he asked for his will. They gave it to him, an he tore it all up an motioned for 'em to throw the pieces in the fire. Nobody knowed what was in the will, but it's likely he'd left his son out of it. There must 'a' been a soft spot in the ole man somewheres, 'cause he knowed if he died without a will the property'd all go to his son.

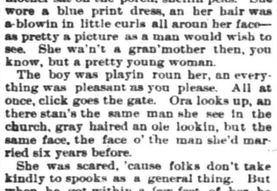
But nobody knowed anything 'bout Lijah. The ship he'd sailed in was an old one, an it wa'n't allowed to make the trip back on 'count o' being unseaworthy. Your gran'mother never heerd a word for nearly four year. Then there come a man who'd sailed with Lijah, an he tol her that when they got to Gibraltar her husban was very sick an had to go ashore.

An a few months later when the man went back he tried to find him an learned that poor Lijah had died an been buried out there all alone.

'Twas an awful blow to Ora, 'cause she'd kep' hopin after everybody else had give him up. Of course then all the Vaux property went to the boy—your father—and Ora took him an went to live in the old house.

Well, time went on jus' 's it always does, an your father was 6 years old, the dead image o' his father. But he wa'n't named for him, 'cause Ora didn't like the name o' Lijah. You know your father was always called Henry, but he was christened McHenry, after his mother's folks. Your gran'mother didn't sit down an grieve an cry like some women would 'a' done. She went out among folks an was thought a great deal of, an bein a pretty woman an young—she wa'n't but 17 when she was married—an more'n that, bein pretty well off, o' course she had considerable 'tention paid her.

They was one in particular, Capt'n Lee—fine man he was too. He was head over ears in love with Ora, an she liked him. She used to say it was 'cause he was so fond o' the boy, but I reckon 'twas a good deal on his own 'count too. You see it's kind o' lonesome livin alone, an after all she'd hardly knowed what it was to have a husban. So, at last, she promised to marry the capt'n—all on 'count o' the boy, she said, an maybe it was so.



THERE STANDS THE SAME MAN.

They was to be married on her birthday, the 11th o' April. Easter was early that year, the second Sunday in March, an, strange enough, it was a white Easter, jus' such a day as it had been six years before. Ora said that she got up that mornin feelin queer. "Seemed's if she was in 'nother world," she said. But, laws! she was alwa's havin queer notions. She kep' a-thinkin o' Lijah all the time, an at last she made up her mind she'd go to church—the same church where she was married.

They wa'n't many folks out 'count the stormy day, an the light was kind o' dim. All at once she noticed somebody standin at the altar, a man with white hair. But they was somethin familiar about him. She kep' a-lookin, an the man turned an looked straight at her. Then he came toward her, an she recognized her husban.

He looked thin an old, but she knowed him. He came an sot down by her in the pew. She couldn't speak. She jus' looked. Then she held out her hand. He didn't move. She tried to touch him. But they wa'n't nothin there, and when she looked again she couldn't see nothin!

Well, you can imagine she felt kind o' shivery an queer. She turned an spoke to the woman behind her. "Did you see anybody come into my pew?" says she. "Why, no," says the woman. "They ain't been nobody there but you."

That afternoon she told some of the village gossips that she thought the Widow Vaux was gettin queer in her head. An when they heerd, as they did soon after, that she'd broke her engagement with Capt'n Lee an wouldn't give no reason for it they was ready to believe she was queer.

Poor Lee was a'most crazy. But he wouldn't let nobody say a word against her. She had a right to do as she liked, he said. He went away, an I never heard o' his comin back.

April went by, an May come along, smilin, as she always does. One day your gran'mother sat on the porch, shellin peas. She wore a blue print dress, an her hair was a-blowin in little curls all aroun her face—as pretty a picture as a man would wish to see. She wa'n't a gran'mother then, you know, but a pretty young woman.

The boy was playin roun her, an everything was pleasant as you please. All at once, click goes the gate. Ora looks up, an there stan's the same man she see in the church, gray haired an ole lookin, but the same face, the face o' the man she'd married six years before.

She was scared, 'cause folks don't take kindly to spooks as a general thing. But when he got within a few feet of her he stopped an spoke.

"Don't you know me, dear?" says he. 'Twas Lijah in real flesh an blood this time, an what a story he had to tell!

He'd been sick in Gibraltar, just as the man'd said, an when he got up there was somethin wrong with his head. He couldn't remember who he was, nor where he come from, nor nothin. Otherwise he was all right, an he'd been travelin on the sea ever since. He'd been all roun the world, an in them days a man who'd been all roun the world was a wonder. At last he'd brought up in Scotland. Strange enough, there'd been a white Easter there that year.

Seein the snow on the ground seemed to bring back somethin to him. He'd gone to church, he said, an he must 'a' fell asleep, for he found himself back in the old church at home, standin at the altar, an he'd seen her settin in the pew an sot down beside her. Then he woke up, an all the past come back to him.

Well, Lijah took passage for home by the first ship. In them days it took six weeks to cross the Atlantic.

After he'd tol his story an nearly hugged the boy to death—you see, he didn't know nothin 'bout him till he see him that day—he says to Ora: "An you was true to me all these years, dear. There's not many women like you. You've never even thought o' anybody else, have you?" An your gran'mother blushed an said nothin, an Lijah was satisfied. Beats all what faith some men has. But there, I s'pose 'twas just as well.

HOW BERTHA USED HER TALENT.

BY M. G. M.

Bertha Landreth had been a Christian only a month, but that one month had changed everything for her. During a series of evangelistic services, she, hitherto thoughtless and indifferent, had given herself, soul and body, to the Saviour. She had just completed a course at a college of oratory, and in consecrating herself she had thought much about this chief talent of hers. "I don't know just what I am going to do with it, for Him", she said to herself, "but if I get an opportunity to use it in His service, I will."

And now, this bright afternoon, she sat alone in her room, pretending to read, but in reality trying to solve a problem. Before her conversion, she had been invited to give a recitation at a very elegant musicale, that was now but a week ahead. "Something sweet and solemn, my dear", Mrs. Burton had said, "that suits your style best." So she had intended to give Whittier's "Marguerite." But now, for some reason, this did n't satisfy her. The text of the pastor's last Sunday's sermon rang through her brain continually—"Whatsoever you do, in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Her conscience said, "You can't recite that poem in His name; you know you can't, though it is a beautiful thing. All the glory will belong to Bertha Landreth, and not to Him. That is the truth and you can't get around it." "But my goodness!" cried the other side of Bertha, a semi-religious poem, like 'The Last Hymn', would have the same effect; it would n't leave any religious impression at all." "Well," returned conscience, "recite something that will, then." "But what? I can't go around there and recite 'True-hearted, wholehearted', or 'What a friend we have in Jesus.'" Just then little Helen Landreth came through the hall, singing in her clear, child voice, "Tell me the old, old story." "That's just what I want to do, at Mrs. Burton's", thought Bertha, if I only knew some nice, sweet poem to do it with." "Why" as a thought struck her, "I wonder if Mrs. Burton would take off my head if I recited the answer to what Helen was singing. I learned it at the college, and I know how to make it much more effective, now that I have learned how true it all is, and how sweet. It's a lovely thing, with quite enough dramatic effect to it. I'll do it, anyway, whether Mrs. Burton likes it or not. My Saviour will be pleased, at any rate; but I'm glad He knows how hard it is to do such an awful unconventional thing."

Mrs. Landreth, a fashionable society woman, who had not been over-pleased to have Bertha calmly give up worldly ideas and amusements, as she had done, lifted her eyebrows when Bertha told her what she was going to recite. But Bertha had made up her mind, and her mother knew she would not change it, so she attempted no argument as to the unusualness of such topics at a social gathering.

Well, the evening of the musicale soon arrived, and Bertha found herself at Mrs. Burton's, arrayed in the gown of pale green India silk that so perfectly set off her fair hair and pink-and-white complexion.

When, after an elaborate piano solo by some well-known musician, a recitation, "The Old, Old Story", was announced, everyone expected a love-tale, into which the "old, old story" of an entirely different sort, should enter. So, when, rather pale and nervous, and inwardly asking for strength, Bertha began,

> "You ask me for 'the story
> Of unseen things above,'
> Of Jesus and His glory,
> Of Jesus and His love;"

a look of astonishment went around the room. Mrs. Burton's aristocratic brows drew themselves up into a small, but unmistakable frown. But everyone listened as they had listened to no preceding number. The room was so intensely still that Bertha thought they could all hear her heart beat. Her voice quivered a little at the words,

> "God help both you and me,
> And make 'the old, old story,'
> His message unto thee!"

Then she went steadily on, through the beautiful, matchlessly beautiful tale. Her rendering of it was perfect, and it was so evident that she felt it all, that it was all the more impressive. More than one elegant lady had tears in her eyes, as she came to the sad part of it—that most awful tragedy ever enacted; and as she said,

> 'Look! look! if you can bear it—
> Look at your dying Lord;
> Stand near the cross and watch Him;
> 'Behold the Lamb of God!'"

there was not an eye in the room but followed where her outstretched arm pointed. Her face grew bright with a happy light, as she told the glorious ending of the story, then slowly said, looking into the faces around her,

> "This is the old, old story
> Say, do you take it in?"—

The pointed, personal questions,

> "Do you at heart believe it?
> Do you believe it true,
> And meant for every sinner,
> And therefore meant for YOU?"

were asked with an emphasis that brought them to her hearers' hearts with an irresistable force. Then followed the injunction to tell the story to others, and with a happy ring in her voice, from which all tremulousness had long since departed, she finished with the triumphant assurance—

> "Soon, soon our eyes shall see Him,
> And in our home above
> We'll sing 'the old, old story
> Of Jesus and His love.'"

Then, with a graceful bow, she went to her seat.

There was a moment of hushed silence, then hearty applause. But Bertha was not to be brought out, and presently Miss Lawrence came forward to sing "A Gondolier's Love Song."

But after the programme was finished, and conversation and supper were the order of the day, Bertha had a surprise. Nearly everyone who spoke to her had some kindly word to say about her recitation; they had enjoyed it more than any other part of the programme, several said. One grave gentleman thanked her for her choice of a recitation, saying he hoped to live better in the future, for the words he had heard that night from her. A sweet-faced old lady said to her, "My dear, you have done us all good tonight. It was worth the trouble of coming here, just to hear that sweet old story. May our dear Lord bless you, my child, and help you to witness for Him all your life, as bravely as you have done tonight!" But the sweetest thing of all to Bertha was this: A young girl whom she knew slightly as a lively little thing, fond of gayety, and never stopping to think of the sober realities of life, came rushing up to her, with a new light in her fair face. "Oh, Bertha!" she cried, "I want to thank you! I little thought, when I came here tonight, that I would hear what I did. Oh, I have been halting between two opinions for ever so long. I got waked up during those evangelistic meetings but some way I did not do anything about myself. I have been awfully good-for-nothing all my life I know, but I really made up my mind during those meetings, that I wanted to be of some use, and that presently I would begin to serve Jesus. But I just did n't begin. But now, tonight, while you were telling all about Him, I just said, 'Lord Jesus, I want to belong to Thee, and serve Thee, forever, and will you please accept me as your child, now, this minute?' And Bertha, I am sure He did, for you know He said He would. I am going to try to do more for other people, now, and live as He would like to have me. You'll remember me in your prayers, won't you?"

And Mrs. Burton never said one word against Bertha's choice of a recitation; she thanked her very cordially, and said everyone seemed to have enjoyed it.

As that bright company, separated, that evening, perhaps some carried away a thought of Him whom they had been too busy, or too gay, or too worldly, to serve, which should make a difference in their life in the days to come.

And a very happy Bertha fell asleep that night with the words ringing in her ears: "Whosoever, therefore, shall confess Me before men, him will I confess before My Father which is in heaven."

Dunellen and New Market.

Miss Waldron of Plainfield is visiting relatives in Dunellen.

Miss Kate Coriell of New Market visited Plainfield friends yesterday.

Mrs. George Voehl of Plainfield was entertained by Dunellen friends yesterday.

Eugene Runyon has a house in course of construction, which he will make his home when completed.

The J. O. U. A. M. take a deep interest in matters pertaining to the borough, as was shown Thursday evening.

Officer Corse went to New York yesterday to interview Lawyer Barkalow in reference to several coal-picking cases.

Several poor and deserving people are now deprived of the privilege of picking waste coal near the round-house, in consequence of the recent coal-picking troubles.

A few of those present at the borough meeting Thursday evening were not satisfied with the nominations, and it is reported that they will run an independent ticket with Fred Wilcox at the head of it. His friends claim they can elect him.

Since the organization of the Dunellen Building Loan Association, seven years ago, fully one-third of the homes in the Borough have been erected. Nearly $1,400 comes into the treasury monthly, and the association is growing rapidly.

The trouble with the coal pickers has proved to be serious in more ways than one. Peter Mohan and Thomas Costello, employes of the Central Railroad, were witnesses in the trial recently held, and, acting on the advice of some friends, refused to give testimony unless they received their fees of 50 cents each. The company, it is said, never pay fees to employes, but instead pay for the time lost on such occasions. Yesterday both were discharged from the company's service. Mohan had been employed by the Central twenty-five years.

Scotch Plains.

An illustrated lecture on the World's Fair will be given in the Baptist Church of Scotch Plains, Thursday evening, March 29, by Rev. C. L. Rhoades, of Stamford, Conn., under the auspices of the young people's societies of the Methodist and Baptist churches. Mr. Rhoades has been in the lecture field several years, and is a brilliant and entertaining speaker. He will use the best stereopticon, and show over 150 views of the White City, its buildings, grounds and exhibits. The lecture has been given in Stamford and other cities before crowded houses. The young people feeling sure that they are giving the community an opportunity to hear a really first-class lecture, such as is seldom heard outside of cities and large towns, look for a full house.

The Always Busy People.

Small stature, small store, big nerve, big business, are characteristics of the owners of a page of today's Press.

Little men are lively; they hustle; they scoot around and make things hum. Just like honey bees—that's VanEmburgh & Son.

Size of a store is n't what talks; but size of cash box Saturday nights. VanEmburgh & Son's grows heavy, because the people know they spend there at a saving, and they swarm for the bargains.

Big nerve is what makes successful advertising. Some merchants are afraid to invest too heavily in printer's ink. VanEmburgh & Son know by experience that big ads of big bargains bring big business.

Walk up near the bank tonight and you'll see a crowd in the store powerful enough to lift the building right up and walk off with it.

They won't walk off with the bank—not quite that; but they'll walk off with bargains such as drive the delighted feminine heart to distraction, and the money saved on the purchases would start a new bank if the thrifty housewives did n't hold fast to it awaiting fresh bargains at VanEmburgh's next week.

PLAINFIELD CHRISTIANS CONSOLIDATE ON THE CRUCIFIXION.

Denominational Differences Forgotten in the Common Grief for the Saviour's Sufferings, the Common Acceptance of His Expiation.

Plainfield churches united again last night in their annual observance of Good Friday. Grace P. E. Church had not pews enough to accommodate the attendance, and camp chairs were brought into requisition.

The theme of the service was the passage from Matthew, XXVII:45—"Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land, until the ninth hour"—and the programme was as follows:

Hymn 89—
"Oh come and mourn with me awhile."
Lesson—John XIX.....Rev. C. L. Goodrich

Benediction.....Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman
Hymn—"All hail the power of Jesus' name."

The sweet, solemn truths of the crucifixion were deeply impressed on the worshipers. The singing by the white-robed choir and the meditations of the pastors brought every heart devoutly near to the cross.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes dwelt on the thought that Christ was not only King of the Jews but also King for us all. Since that day of gloom and agony, His kingdom had spread from the little country to the full breadth of the earth, and its ever-expanding influence was as vast as the nations.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich spoke of the sublimity of Christ in thinking of and praying for others, in the midst of his own personal anguish. He was the gift of God, the revealer of God, and no further proof of his divinity was needed than his "Father, forgive them!"

Rev. Dr. Rodman, who spoke in the absence of Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes, who was ill, made personal application of the passage, and pointed out the surety of reward in answer to prayer of true penitence.

Rev. Mr. Newell pointed out the humanity of Christ, that his feelings were the same as ours, that he understood our bodily relationships and wants.

Rev. Dr. Lowry said that in his forty years in the ministry he had never dared to preach on the passage assigned to him. In its depths of heart-stirring sublimity it was itself as powerful a soul-awakener as any elaborate discourse of man could ever be. Dr. Lowry felt peculiarly touched with the sense of the personal Saviour—that Christ had taken the cruel place on the cross for him, for each erring son of man.

Dr. Richards told of our personal needs, sufferings and thirsts, and depicted the glorious reward in store for such as gave drink to the thirsty soul.

Rev. Mr. Herring spoke of the Godward side of Christ. Through His expiation and declaration, everything for our salvation had been accomplished, if we would only accept.

Rev. Mr. Schenck dwelt on the endearing term Father, the confidence of the Son, the graciousness of that Father in whom He trusted. The passage was indicative of supreme security, of triumph over the fear of death, of victory complete over sin.

NOTES OF THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Seymour Marsh, '95, leaves for Brooklyn Wednesday. He will be greatly missed by the whole school.

The next meeting of the Delta Phi will be Tuesday, April 3, for which occasion a debate and other interesting features have been prepared.

The base-ball team is being organized by Manager Riley. Members of the P. H. S. A. A. wishing to join are invited to give their names to him.

The High School Lyceum held a debate, yesterday afternoon, on the subject "Is the character of Napoleon to be admired?" N. Probasco, '94, and C. M. Smith, '95, spoke for the affirmative; and N. Lane, '94, and F. W. Goddard, '94, for the negative. The debate was won by the negative side.

The High School Lyceum, whose career for the past three years since its organization has been very successful, came yesterday to a disruption which may result in a breaking up of the society. For some time there has been a feeling on the part of the older members that the society was not what it should be. It was claimed that the younger element did not appreciate its aim. Disorder prevailed in an alarming degree, and the more sage and decorous Juniors and Seniors were powerless to redeem the former high character of the institution. About a dozen of these members recently organized a new society similar in purpose and method to the old. Yesterday afternoon, at the regular weekly meeting of the Lyceum, they handed in their resignations. This occasioned much excitement and merriment, but no bitterness of feeling. After a deal of wrangling over questions of the legality of the proceedings, the resignations were accepted, and now the High School supports two distinct societies. The new one is to go by the name of the Kappa Delta Phi—three Greek letters which stand for a Greek phrase, which may be freely translated "Founded in a love of discussion and learning". The old one intends to continue if possible. May success attend them both!

Surprised on His Birthday.

A surprise birthday party was given to C. W. Lines at his residence, 118 Liberty street, last evening. The invited guests gathered at the residence of Charles Sturtevant, Orchard place, and thence went to the home of Mr. Lines. He was taken by surprise. Friends were present from Elizabeth, Somerville and Glen Gardner. A bountiful repast was spread at 12. Music for dancing was furnished by Sam Frazee until 3 this morning, when all went home wishing their host many happy returns of the day.

Those present included: Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Lines, Mr. and Mrs. J. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. A. Sturtevant, Mr. and Mrs. C. Sturtevant, Mr. and Mrs. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. H. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. C. Steiner, Mrs. C. L. Dennick, Mrs. F. Manchester, Mrs. E. Waters, Miss L. Dennick, Miss Maggie McLean, Miss Steiner, the Misses Painter, S. Dennick, J. Dennick, W. Sutton, F. Bowden, S. Emmons, E. Farrason, L. DeCamp, H. Meyer, W. Campbell, Miss Campbell and H. Dejean.

Defended Friends from Infamy.

George Stevens and Thomas King of the West End were arrested last night by Constable W. B. Mattox. The warrants were issued by Justice Mosher on the complaint of young Henry Withers, of Clinton avenue, Evona.

Withers claims that he was beaten about the head and threatened with death by King, assisted by Stevens. It is charged the assault was because of remarks made by Withers concerning members of King's family and friends whom the accused young men felt called on to protect.

Justice Mosher allowed the men to go last evening without bail for their appearance in his court at 8 tonight.

Mr. Stevens shows that he took no part in any assault, but that he merely happened to stand in a doorway which Withers tried to enter in fleeing from King. King claims that he was merely defending relatives from the infamous slanders of Withers.

The accused feel that they will be exonerated and commended as the facts become known and that Withers will be denounced for his outrageous conduct.

Nominees of the Hillside Club.

The nominating committee, composed of Mr. Opdyke, Mr. Anthony and Mr. Lord, appointed at a recent meeting of the Hillside Tennis Club, have prepared the following regular ticket to be voted on at the annual meeting of the club, Wednesday, April 4:

For President—James P. Murray.
For Vice-president—Charles S. Foote.
For Treasurer—Josiah Brown.
For Secretary—Fred W. Walz.
For Members of Governing Committee (to serve two years)—Chas. P. Bull, F. S. Martin, J. E. Morse.

We are not surprised that people will not take a new cough remedy, when they know the value of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

OUR VERY GOOD HEALTH

GRATIFYING REPORTS FOR PLAINFIELD AND VICINITY.

Local Boards of Health Congratulate the Town on Its Condition and Plan More Perfect Ventilation and Drainage—Praying for Sewers, Also.

The annual report of the State Board of Health, just published, shows the Plainfield death-rate to be 19 per 1,000 inhabitants, a most favorable showing compared with other cities. The deaths for the year numbered 243, the births 258, the marriages 116.

In North Plainfield 59 deaths are recorded, 82 births, 22 marriages.

George W. Rockfellow, president, and Oliver B. Leonard, secretary, report as follows for the Plainfield Board of Health:

"The sanitary work performed the past year under the authority of the Board of Health has been similar to that of recent years. Precautionary measures have been persistently maintained by the Health Inspector, and vigilant attention given by him to the investigation of all unwholesome localities. During the twelve months he made 656 inspections from house to house, and in cases of pressing emergency has served 68 peremptory notices for the abatement of detrimental nuisances.

"In connection with this precautionary oversight of the sanitary condition of the city, there have been permits issued for emptying 594 cesspools, and cleaning out and disinfecting 376 privy vaults.

"For the further care of the general health, this Board is considering the adoption of a plumbing ordinance, regulating and controlling ventilation and drainage of buildings as well.

"The Muhlenberg Hospital is a valuable institution, greatly appreciated by the community, and sustained mostly by voluntary contributions. It is managed by a competent board of advisers, and supplied with experienced nurses. First-class medical attendance is rendered gratuitously by the physicians of the city. The last annual report showed 167 persons treated, only seven of whom died. No contagious cases are provided for.

"The Common Council very generously made an appropriation the past year for the purchase of suitable grounds and the erection thereon of a quarantine hospital for use in extreme cases. But it has not been possible, thus far, for our Board to secure a proper location within the city limits.

"The doctors have promptly reported to us all contagious diseases. No epidemic has prevailed, and not an unusual amount of sickness has required their professional services. While there has been no special sickness that might be said to be prevalent, there has been a larger mortality among the children than usual, though not traceable to any local causes. In all contagious cases the premises are quarantined, and on the recovery or death of the patient, thorough fumigation is attended to.

"The principal causes of death among adults were diseases of the lungs, heart and brain. With little children the mortality was chiefly attributable to cholera infantum, diphtheria and scarlet fever."

Dr. J. H. Carman for North Plainfield reports:

"North Plainfield has enjoyed a very healthy year, there being no epidemics of any kind. A house-to-house inspection is made twice a year, and the borough is kept in a good sanitary condition. Have discovered several sewer connections with Green brook during the year, and caused some to be cut off. We are anxiously looking forward to the time when the city of Plainfield will adopt some sewerage system with which we hope to connect. Have adopted an ordinance regulating the collection of kitchen garbage the past year, and now have that important sanitary feature under our control."

For Fanwood, Secretary F. W. Westcott says:

"We have nothing new to report for the past year. Health of the township has been very good. No contagious disease. The Board have regular meetings to hear complaints, if any, and all cases reported receive prompt attention. We have no trouble with cases reported, as all seem anxious and willing to abate and remove whatever may tend to injure health."

Dr. M. J. Whitford of Piscataway writes:

"One nuisance, occasioned by dumpage of garbage from Plainfield over the line into our township, has been abated. There has been no other cause for action in this respect.

"Malarial diseases have been especially present, but from climatic causes rather than from local conditions of an unsanitary nature.

"There have been no diseases of an epidemic nature."

WHAT WILL DO IT.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

ADVANCE GUARD ARRIVE

Coxey's Recruits at Massillon Now Number Two.

Weary and Worn They Spend Last Night in an Abandoned Freight Car—Numerous Small Contributions of Money Recived by the "Commonweal Army's" General.

MASSILLON, O., March 24—At dusk last evening two weary travellers with bundles swung across their shoulders arrived here overland from Twinsburg, O., and took up their quarters in an abandoned freight car on the outskirts of the town. They constitute the advance guard of Coxey's great "commonweal army" and this morning are all there is to it.

General Coxey and Chief Marshal Browne were flying about all day yesterday and this morning making speeches from the tops of nail kegs, submitting to interviews and indulging in calculations for the march that is to be begun Sunday.

Coxey received nearly a bushel of letters this morning from all parts of the country, several of them containing money in amounts ranging from a two cent postage stamp to a dollar bill. There were two checks for a $1,000 each and several for smaller amounts. These pieces of paper are closely guarded by Coxey, but it is the opinion that they are not worth any more than the ink with which they were written.

Coxey has received assurance that over 20,000 men will reach Massillon before noon Sunday, the time set for beginning the long march. Most of the letters today containing these assurances bear "take car marks" but Coxey and Browne take them in sober earnest and are now positive that there will be the greatest event since the war. Just now the "commonweal army" exists on paper only.

Coxey as a Horseman.

FORT WAYNE, Ind., March 23.—The commonweal army leader, J. S. Coxey, is a well-known character to many Fort Wayne horsemen. For many years he has been more or less prominent as a breeder and for two or three years has campaigned a string of trotters with indifferent success. The fast erratic gray pacer, Crearley P., which won a heat and nearly broke the bookmakers in the 2:15 pace here last fall, was a member of Coxey's stable. As a breeder Coxey was decidedly erratic. His purchase of Acolyte, a stallion of notested merit, for $40,000, gave him a great deal of notoriety.

Lieutenant Evans' Efforts.

HAZLETON, Pa., March 24.—Despite denunciatory criticisms of the morning papers, W. Astor Evans, lieutenant of the "commonweal army," is forging ahead with his work. His mail has increased to immense proportions and offers of aid are pouring in. The people of the town manifest small interest, but there are hundreds of idle miners on the outskirts who anxiously await developments.

The Texas Contingent.

EL PASO, Tex., March 24.—The industrial army, en route east, was well behaved here. They were invited to the Methodist church's special service, but the mayor prohibited their attending. They were given rations here.

Six Young Women Perish.

PARIS, March 24.—A building occupied by Sisters of Charity as a school for young women at Laon, in the department of Aisne, was burned to the ground at midnight. Besides the sisters there were a number of pupils in the building and all were asleep. Those on the lower floors were awakened by the flames and narrowly escaped with their lives. The young women who occupied the upper floors were unable to reach the stairway, and many of them were seriously injured by jumping out of the windows. When the flames had burned themselves out the charred bodies of six young women who slept on the top floors were found in the ruins. Many of those who escaped were severely burned.

"I OWE MY LIFE TO YOU."

A Wilton, N. J., Girl's Experience With a Noted Massachusetts Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Life is never more precious than in the heyday of youth, when every dream is a promise, and every thought an inspiration.

It is natural that Miss Gertrude Sickler, a young lady who lives at Wilton, N. J., is grateful for the great boon of life.

She suffered terribly with suppressed and painful menstruations. The doctors could only prevent her from having fits each month by dosing her with morphine.

At last, when she was completely prostrated, her father got her a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which at once gave her relief.

That did what the doctors could not do. It cured her. She has no trouble now, and no dread of the coming month. "I owe my life to you," she writes to Mrs. Pinkham. "Oh, if other suffering women could try your valuable medicine they would bless you as I do."

THE BLACK RUN EXPLOSIONS.

Terrible Scenes at the Acme Dynamite Works—List of the Dead.

PITTSBURG, March 24.—The scenes of the double explosion of dynamite at the Acme Powder company's works at Black Run presents this morning a terrible picture of devastation. The boarding house with splintered timbers, furniture, torn bedding and clothes lying about, the house being razed so completely that in no place does the ruins lie above the ground more than a foot. The mixing house was blown to pieces, and the packing house was badly wrecked, while other buildings in the vicinity were partly demolished.

Five people lost their lives, four of them being blown to atoms, the fifth having been crushed in the ruins of the boarding house. Portions of the bodies were found a mile distant, but most of the remains were scattered within the radius of a hundred yards.

The correct list of the dead are: Chas. Robbin, aged 20, of Allegheny City; Nellie Remaley, aged 23; Sadie Remaley, aged 30; William Arthurs, aged 28; Belle Arthurs, aged 19, wife of William Arthur.

Superintendent Mooney, of the works, was badly injured by a flying splinter. Simeon Bradley, a workman, escaped uninjured.

Mr. Brush Stricken With Apoplexy.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 24.—A. A. Brush, ex-warden of Sing Sing prison, was stricken with apoplexy at his home, at Hopewell Junction, this county, yesterday afternoon. His condition is serious.

FITCHBURG AND WEST SHORE.

Engineer Huston of the West Shore and E. A. Palmer of the Fitchburg Railroads Advise Their Overworked Brethren.

There is no body of men who labor more hours continually than railroad men. So constant and tiring are their responsible duties that there are few who do not suffer from overwork and nervous troubles, and it does not take long before the strongest constitution gives way to the ravages of disease. Dyspepsia, rheumatism, urinary and kidney troubles have incapacitated many a man that could have been saved if the proper precaution had been taken.

Engineer Wm. Huston, of the West Shore railroad, in speaking to a reporter of the disposition of the people to neglect their physical condition, said: "For years I suffered from kidney trouble and dyspepsia; at times I was in so much pain, I thought I would have to give up my engine. I had been under the treatment of various physicians, but derived no benefit. Finally, one day Conductor Frazer, of our road, said to me, 'Huston, get a bottle of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; it will do you more good than all the doctors in existence.' I followed this advice, and in a few days I began to feel better and I have been well ever since."

E. A. Palmer, of the Fitchburg Railroad's freight department at Troy, N. Y., in speaking of the great good he had received from using Favorite Remedy, said: "I was troubled with urinary difficulty for a long time. My attention was called to Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy; I began its use, and in a few weeks was cured of the trouble. I have since used it as a family medicine with splendid results, especially in cases of constipation and stomach difficulty."

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is a natural antidote for diseases arising from uric acid in the blood; in cases of scrofula, sleeplessness or nervousness, it cures where all else fails.

THE TEN FOOT DRIVE

BY CHARLES LOTIN HILDRETH.

Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association

The first gang of rescuers, armed with the necessary tools and implements, were now ready to descend, and Monckton prepared to join them. He was staid by a soft touch upon the arm, and a pair of beautiful eyes were raised in anxious questioning to his.

"Must you go, Ralph?"

"I must go, Imogene."

"There is danger, Ralph—danger of poisonous gas in the old tunnel, of water rising and engulfing you too. I heard them speaking of it in the crowd. Can you not let some one go in your place, Ralph?"

"What, shirk my duty, Imogene, because there may be a little danger? Surely you cannot counsel me to do that."

She hung her head a moment. "Go then," she said in a low voice, and with an accent that made his heart leap, "but be careful, Ralph—for my sake!"

He pressed the hand which she gave him and turned to enter the cage after his men, when he was confronted by Matthew North.

"I have no right to ask a favor from any man," said the miner, "you least of all. But I am to blame for this, heaven help me, and I want to do what little I can to undo my wrong. Let me go down with you, sir."

"Come."

The old gallery fortunately proved to be free from gas, and with North's help a spot immediately over the chamber, where it was hoped that the imperiled miners might have taken refuge, was located. At the end of the first half hour good progress had been made. The men worked as only men can work to save human life, but none among them toiled as did Matthew North. He seemed to possess the strength of two and never to require rest. Gang after gang came and went, but he refused to yield the pick which he plied with giant strokes. Monckton, too, remained at his post, directing the movements of the laborers and frequently handling the shovel with a vigor which his slender figure belied. He also felt that he had something to expiate, a wrong to undo.

From time to time a halt was called for the purpose of listening for any possible signals which might be made from below. The excavation was now seven feet deep, and as yet no sound of life had encouraged the workers. North's face was growing paler with a terrible dread, and at Monckton's heart the same fear was beginning to knock, when during one of the pauses there came, faint, far off, yet distinctly audible, three dull blows. One of the men signaled in response with his heavy crowbar—and, yes, there could be no doubt now; the three blows were repeated! With a loud cry, North fell upon his knees in the loose soil of the pit, and raising his clasped hands above his head exclaimed:

With a loud cry, North fell upon his knees.

"Almighty Father, I thank thee that I am spared at least this one sin."

Meanwhile the great throng waited and watched above. The silence of deep awe had fallen upon them.

Imogene Duke had found a seat near the mouth of the mine, where she could see the cage as it came up into the flare of the lamps. Hour after hour passed heavily by; gang after gang of exhausted workers came up, and still he tarried, while her heart grew faint in her bosom and a cold deathly chill crept over her limbs. Oh, if anything should happen to him now! If now, when he had proved himself the noblest, bravest and best of men, she should lose him! The thought sickened her; it seemed that she must go to him, must see him and hear his voice to assure herself that he was not swallowed up and buried away from her forever in that horrible abysm hundreds of feet below. And if he were to die there she would be to blame for it, for it was her words that had awakened his energies, aroused the good that was dormant in him and shamed him of his apathy, his idleness and his frivolity. But that far she had done right; so much, at least, she could never regret, for the vapid, indifferent cynic to whom she had spoken those stinging words was not the Ralph Monckton at that moment waging splendid, knightly battle in behalf of his fellow beings—the Ralph she loved, her Ralph.

Still the cage rose and sank; still the gangs of workers came and went; still the crowd, exhausted and haggard, waited and watched. The night grew apace, and Joyce, who had established himself as her guardian and protector, was snoring in fitful discord and nodding fearfully on his barrel at a little distance. The suspense and the terror were growing intolerable; she felt that her senses were fast slipping from her, when —what was it? A deep hoarse murmur ran along the crowd, swelling into a shout, a roar that shook the very earth. Hundreds—men, women and children—were leaping, dancing, embracing, singing and weeping, as if all the world had suddenly gone stark mad.

She rose to her feet, tottering; her head swam, and there was a mist before her eyes. But she saw! oh, blessed heaven! she saw it all! There where the light shone full upon them a pale, dazed, disheveled crew, surrounded by frantic men and sobbing women, were the 23 rescued miners. In their midst, as worn and pale as they, stood Matthew North and Ralph Monckton—her Ralph! She murmured the words again, and now there was no pain in them, only sweetness and delicious joy and thankfulness. Soiled with toil and drooping with weariness, yet how noble, how grand, how proud he looked! Ah, it was little wonder that the women should crowd about him to kiss his hand, or that the men should cheer again and again. But he was going to speak.

"My friends," she heard him say, "do not give all the credit to me. Here is one," pointing to Matthew North, "who has a far better claim to your gratitude than I. He did more than any of us."

North's haggard face grew yet more pale. He essayed to reply, but his voice broke, and he turned abruptly away without a word, while the crowd shouted—some of the very men who had attempted to take his life but a few hours before louder than any.

As if the magnetism in the girl's intense gaze warned him of her presence there, Monckton raised his eyes, met hers and smiled—a rare, beautiful smile that set her heart throbbing violently and sent the warm blood to her cheek. He made his way rapidly toward her.

"You here yet, Imogene?" he said. "You must be very tired. It is after midnight."

"I could not go until I knew you were safe," she replied softly. "But what is this?" she exclaimed, looking at the hand he had pressed. "It is blood. You are wounded, Ralph!"

"No," he said, showing her his lacerated palms. "I am unused to manual labor, and my skin has made rough acquaintances with the pick and shovel."

She drew close to him with a caressing movement. "You have nothing more to do here?" she asked. "Then take me home."

CHAPTER XXIII.

"I LOVE YOU, RALPH."

Joyce, sonorously slumbering upon his barrel, was aroused and the horses brought from their temporary stables in the village. The first portion of the homeward ride was performed in silence. The reaction from the intense mental and physical strain which Monckton had undergone for so many hours left him depressed and a little morose. Imogene, on the contrary, was busy with sweet thoughts. She possessed a knowledge the want of which made him unhappy—she knew she loved him, while he, with the blindness which affects the cleverest men where women are concerned, particularly if they are in love, never suspected the truth. He believed that he had won her respect. He would almost have preferred her hatred. That would at least have been something positive, something to put him on his mettle and sting his pride awake. But respect! You may go to the funeral of a man you respect and talk stocks or politics in the carriage, lift your hat at the grave and return home with the sense of a disagreeable duty performed. You respect good, worthy, uninteresting people, virtuous bores and fine old gentlemen who have lost all their hearing and part of their wits because you do not know what else to do with them. But such is not our feeling for the one whose feet make sacred ground where they pass, and whose name is delicious music.

"I have come to bid you adieu."

With ideas like these running in his brain, it is not astonishing that Ralph Monckton held his head down, silent and disinclined to speak. But Imogene, riding beside him, smiled mysteriously from time to time and gazed at him with eyes whose sweet confession was hidden by the darkness. At length, however, her happiness overflowed at her lips.

"Ralph," she said, "are you not proud?"

"Proud!" he repeated, coming out of his reverie with a start. "Proud of what?"

"Of being a hero," she replied, "for you are a hero, you know, Ralph."

"You are either exaggerating or laughing at me," he said, shrugging his shoulders—a French trick of which she meant to cure him when—well, when he understood! And how dull he was not to understand! "If the former, I suppose I must thank you. If the latter, no doubt I have given you reason enough."

There were tears in her eyes. "I think you have done a grand, noble, beautiful thing, Ralph. And, oh, Ralph, what should I have done if you had not come back to me from that horrible mine!"

"Take care, Imogene! You are making me hope."

They had halted before the gate to her dwelling. "Help me down, Ralph."

For a moment, as he lifted her from the saddle, he held her in his embrace. She did not free herself; on the contrary, she put her arms about his neck and drew his lips down to meet her own. "I love you, Ralph," she murmured. "Oh, my dear! could you not see?"

Ralph Monckton and his affianced wife were walking in the garden of the mansion of which she was soon to be the mistress. In the features and manner of both happiness was clearly expressed, though in a different way. With him it was proud confidence, blended with tender protectiveness. With her it was a sweet humility and that gentle yielding up of personality which is, after all, a woman's real strength. She hung upon his arm as if she feared he might melt away and be lost to her. She watched his lips as he spoke, sometimes thinking of his words, and as often thinking how handsome he was. At such times she laid her cheek upon his coat sleeve—where women get such charming tricks I can't imagine. And once or twice as he talked she took his hand and brushed her lips across it, an act of delicious homage which caused him—perhaps it was meant to do so—to draw her close to him and kiss her.

It was at such a moment that a third person suddenly appeared before them in the path. It was Matthew North, pale and wan, as one recovering from a long illness, but with calm eye and composed manner, and neatly attired, as if for a journey.

"Mr. Joyce told me I should find you here," he said. "I have come to bid you adieu."

"You are going to leave us, Matthew?" asked the girl.

"Yes," he replied; "I have an offer as assistant engineer at Alleghany."

"Can you not make up your mind to stay here, North?" said Monckton. "We have both made mistakes and have misunderstood each other. I need the assistance of a man like you, North. Can we not work together in future?"

"No," responded the miner, with something of his old imperious manner. "The men here no longer look upon me with respect, and though I have been all wrong in my dealings with you, and I freely admit it, yet I cannot submit to sink into the position of an underling. I must lead; I cannot follow. Here there is nothing more for me to do. I foresee that your rule will be wise, just and firm. I must go where men are suffering and oppressed and fulfill my mission. And now," his eye rested upon Imogene long and earnestly, as though he wished to imprint her features indelibly upon his memory, "farewell. May you both be happy."

Without waiting for answer or remonstrance he turned and walked steadily away.

"I once thought you cared for him, Imogene," said Monckton.

"Poor Matthew!" replied the girl, looking after the stalwart figure of the young miner until it disappeared behind the distant hedgerow. "You owe him something, Ralph. He taught me to love you."

CHAPTER I.

And yet, believe me, good as well as ill,
Woman's at best a contradiction still.
—Pope.

"Well, Mr. Grierson, I am glad to see you," greeted Miss Huntingdon as she entered her drawing room. "Won't you be seated?" waving her hand toward a chair. Taking a seat herself, she began drawing on a pair of long white gloves. "I believe your call is one of business," she continued, smoothing her fingers into the left hand glove, "at least I inferred so from your note. You will pardon me if I seem abrupt, but as I am about to leave in a few moments for the opera we must come to the point at once." And Miss Huntingdon smiled apologetically at Mr. Grierson.

"Just so," assented he suavely. "I called to see you in regard to the Carlotta mine."

"Oh, perhaps you wish to know my opinion concerning stocks," interposed the young woman, with a quizzical look at her vis-a-vis.

"Well, hardly that," was the reply, with some hesitation. Then, quickly and bluntly; "Miss Huntingdon, can't I induce you to sell me your interest in Carlotta? You have some 5,000 shares, I believe."

An arching of the eyebrows indicated mild surprise. "I do not know that I care to sell," answered she. "Carlotta was quoted at 110 at the close of the market today, was it not?"

"You are correct, Miss Huntingdon. However, I stand ready to give you that figure in return for your stock. There is much in it for me," he went on tentatively, "and little for you—that is,

"Miss Huntingdon, can't I induce you to sell me your interest in Carlotta?"

now that you have made such a paying investment you can afford to sell out high. The truth of the matter is that I want a controlling interest in this mine, which, as more or less of an operator yourself, you will readily appreciate."

Miss Huntingdon nodded. "Well?" she interrogated.

"When you invested in Carlotta, the stock was at 70. You have made a neat sum out of it, and the dividends are paying handsomely, yet," he concluded, attentively regarding the young woman's face, "in return for your holdings I can offer you such properties as will accrue immensely to your benefit, infinitely more so than Carlotta shares."

As Miss Huntingdon listened to the banker's words a curious expression passed over her face and was gone the next moment. Reflectively she traced with the tiny point of her slipper the figures in the rug at her feet. Bending toward the financier in a confidential way, she spoke:

"Really, Mr. Grierson, I have every confidence in your dealing liberally and justly with me. Still," raising her dark eyes to the inscrutable orbs of the banker and tapping the arm of her chair with her forefinger, "I want a controlling interest in Carlotta myself."

The man of the street opened his eyes suddenly; then the lids dropped over them again, and they were as inscrutable as before. "Really, my dear Miss Huntingdon," and he laughed a soft little laugh, "I fear that cannot be—with your 5,000 shares of the stock and none to be bought."

Miss Huntingdon was impatiently tapping the floor with her foot. "Oh, no, not impossible" returned she. "For instance," and she raised her finger to insure Grierson's close attention, "my 5,000 shares, together with your, say, 10,000, would enable me to bear Carlotta, to—er—slump things, as it were," she finished, with a smile.

"Am I to understand, then, that you wish to purchase my interest?" asked Grierson, with a wicked grin, for he thought she was making game of him.

"Well, no, not at present," answered the fair operator in stocks, leaning back and calmly surveying him, "but you must not be surprised at receiving an offer from me at any time."

Perplexed to know what she was aiming for, the banker rubbed his chin with his chubby hand. "Then you will not sell, even in the light of my liberal proposal?"

"Listen, Mr. Grierson," edging forward again in her chair and speaking very earnestly. "We may both secure what we desire. Let me propose something to you. Suppose we mass our forces, under the condition which I shall name, and you shall have control of the Carlotta mine. I will sell if"——

"If"——

"You will consent to bear the market, run Carlotta down so that a certain operator, whose interest is something more than mine is now, shall go under, be forced out of the street and lose all he has."

"Then this is your condition—that the man you refer to shall be ruined. Ruined is a hard word, Miss Huntingdon."

"It is."

"You will pardon me, Miss Huntingdon, but I must know exactly the why and the wherefore of this thing," said the banker, astonished at the feeling she displayed. "That I am a man of the street in the accepted sense of the phrase I will not deny. I am regarded by the world as unscrupulous, selfish, unmerciful to those standing in the way of my fortune, but I can truthfully say that I have never gone out of my path to crush any man. If, as I have said, he were an obstacle in my way, I might wreck him if necessary to save myself. But in revenge for a fancied or even a real wrong sweep him into bankruptcy—that I would not do. Is your scheme one of retaliation?"

"You are right—my motive is one of vengeance. Mr. Grierson, I might spend an hour in telling you how this man most unworthily, most cruelly violated an old man's confidence; how, seeing a chance to enrich himself, he inflicted disgrace and death upon his benefactor, the man who had extended the hand of friendship and assistance. He ruined my father—my father, you understand," she added, her voice rising in anger as the bitter memories of those days crowded back upon her. "But it must suffice to say that as Silas Huntingdon lay upon his deathbed, gasping out his life, I swore to him that I would do all in my power to repay the score." She sank back into a chair, overcome by her sudden outburst of passion. When she spoke again, it was in a softer voice.

"Nearly all that we had was swept into the rapacious pocket of this rascal. The world knew very little of that deal—only this, that my father lost all on a turn of the market. Deprived of my remaining parent, I, scarcely out of school, was forced to seek a means of livelihood. You remember how I entered the street. An old friend of my father's obtained employment for me. I became private secretary to Dent of Wall street. It was there I learned to keep my ears and eyes open and became hardened to the sternness of life.

"With some surprise and much amusement the denizens of the Exchange perceived the clerk become the operator. I scraped together all I had, the proceeds of the sale of a small house, the pitiful legacy of a once wealthy father, and awaited an opportunity to make my first plunge.

"It came in this way," Miss Huntingdon continued, beginning again to draw on the gloves she had torn off in her nervousness: "One day the king of the street came into the office. Quite accidentally I overheard that which made my fortune. I learned from the conversation that Southern Union was sure to drop several points by the close of the market, and the next day jump to 10 points higher than what it had been the previous day. Well, I cleared $15,000 by that operation.

"So much for my first venture. With few exceptions I have been phenomenally successful ever since. I am now worth not a small sum in stocks as well as quite a fortune in real estate."

Mr. Grierson bowed for her to proceed. "Yet I am not satisfied. I want something more, and I shall not rest until I have obtained it. My revenge shall be to pull this man down to the depths of poverty and despair to which he consigned my father. No quarter to him!"

"I accept your condition," said the financier.

"Then it is agreed?" cried the young speculator impulsively.

"Still," went on Mr. Grierson hesitatingly, "you have not yet told me the name of this person. I should not like to injure a friend," he added, with a touch of regret in his voice. "Who is he?"

A faint tinkle of the doorbell was heard. Drawing nearer the banker, as if fearful of being overheard, Miss Huntingdon whispered in his ear, "James Delafield."

And just then the butler announced a caller—"Mr. Delafield."

"Humph!" muttered Grierson.

Darting a meaning glance at him, the young lady rose, her whole expression changing instantly. With smiling face and outstretched hand she greeted the new arrival.

"Mr. Delafield," she said winningly, "I am glad you have come early—you know Mr. Grierson?" The two men clasped hands as they murmured that they had had the honor. "Aunt Cavanaugh will be down in a moment," she continued easily, "and we shall be ready to go with you."

"The opera, I presume," observed Grierson to Delafield.

"Yes," replied the young man, "both Miss Huntingdon and I are lovers of music."

Mrs. Cavanaugh, the relative who was to complete the party, now made her appearance. As the ladies were entering their carriage, the man of money said to Miss Huntingdon, "We will arrange that matter in the morning—good night."

"Business, I suppose?" ventured Mr. Delafield as the carriage rattled down the street.

"Yes," laugned Miss Huntingdon, "business—always business."

CHAPTER II.

The opening of November saw a remarkable change in the condition and the working of the Carlotta silver mine at Jason City, Colo. During the two months after the sealing of the compact between Banker Grierson and Miss Huntingdon the Wall street man had been working like a beaver. Slowly, surely, he was preparing for a coup. Only a few days after, a new election had taken place, and by virtue of his acquisition of Miss Huntingdon's entire share of Carlotta he easily had become possessed of a majority of the votes in the directory. And so all this time he had been quietly manipulating the affairs of the mine until the value of its output, to an outsider, would have seemed materially decreased.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

In order to get rid of a pest of English sparrows a Pennsylvania man put arc lamps under his piazzas. When the birds had gone to sleep, he started the lights, which sent them flying about, and he then shut off the current. In the darkness they flew against the house and killed themselves.

No sooner has the wonderful merit of this new vegetable shortening, so much better than lard, created for it a remarkable sale and popularity, than the business wrens are ready to move upon the market with many worthless counterfeits. THE WEEK IN CONGRESS

The Senate Almost Without a Programme.

Veto of the Seignorage Bill May Precipitate Various Silver Propositions and Unlimited Opposition to Tariff Reform — Appropriation Bills to Follow Election Cases in House.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—According to the rules to-day is District of Columbia day in the house and under ordinary conditions the committee in charge of affairs relating to the district would have undisputed right of way for the consideration of measures called up by it. But when the house adjourned Saturday the postal appropriation bill was pending and the consideration of that measure was continued when the house met to-day. When district measures are taken up, the bill to authorize the Metropolitan Street Railway company to change its motive power is the unfinished business. The O'Neil-Joy contested election case from the eleventh district of Missouri will be called up to-morrow. It is the understanding that the republicans will not further oppose the consideration of the resolution declaring O'Neil, (dem.), entitled to the seat now held by Joy (rep.), but they will require the democrats to produce a quorum of their own number to pass the resolutions when the time comes to vote on them. The decision of this case may occupy several days. After that case has been disposed of the committee on elections may proceed with the English-Hilborn case from the third California district, in which the majority have reported in favor of seating English, the democratic contestant. The contested election cases out of the way, the consideration of the general appropriation bills will be resumed, and, according to the opinion of Speaker Crisp, there will be no interruption of the programme until all shall have been passed. Of course, this does not mean that bills may not be disposed of by unanimous consent, and doubtless a number of these, against which no objection lies, will be sent to the senate every day.

Senate.

The week in the senate depends more upon the unexpected than upon anything fixed and determined. Should the president send into message to the house vetoing the Bland seignorage bill the senate may find itself plunged into an irregular financial debate on various silver propositions now before it, and a tariff twist will certainly be given to this discussion of silver. Senators who now threaten that a veto of the seignorage bill means illimitable opposition to tariff reform, know what they are speaking of if they have their forces as well in hand as they say they have. Another week remains before the tariff bill can be taken up in the regular order of business, but the silver men are threatening that this week may be spread into months of discussion if the seignorage bill should be vetoed.

ELOPED WITH A NEGRO.

A New Jersey Farmer's Wife Deserts Her Husband and Babe.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., March 26.—Mrs. Calvin Brady, wife of a young farmer of Ringoes, near here, has eloped with Henry Williamson, a negro, rough, ignorant and black as night. Williamson has been having his washing done on Brady's farm and made such frequent visits to the place that he was warned to stay away.

Wednesday night Brady, who had been at work all day preparing for his spring planting, retired soon after eating his supper. Not long after he had gone up stairs his wife entered and took their baby from the bed. She left the room and was gone but a few minutes when she returned and threw the child upon the bed. Without speaking to her husband she again hurried from the room. Brady knew something was wrong and called after his wife, but she did not answer. He hastily dressed and went down stairs. His wife could not be found, and after searching for a time he found a note. It read:

"I am going to leave you. I wish you and your children good health. I never expect to see you again."

Brady tried to pursue his wife, but she had escaped. The elopers were last heard from at Hopewell station, where they took a west bound train. It is thought they are in Philadelphia.

Nebraska's Great Blizzard.

BUFFALO, Wyo., March 26.—The wires are just up after the late storm, which commenced last Monday evening and continued a terrible blizzard for over 76 hours without abating. The temperature averaged zero and blinding snow obscured the sky by clouds of dust. Reports from stockmen show that the loss of stock is terrible. The storm has never been approached in severity in this county and the tremendous snowfall insures wonderful grazing next season, sufficient to feed thousands of head of stock which will be driven into the country this spring.

Aeronaut Wilton Drowned at Sea.

CANNES, March 26.—Capt. Wilton, an aeronaut, went up in a balloon Sunday from a spot near the seashore. After ascending about 300 feet the balloon was caught in a strong wind and was blown seaward. Wilton opened the valve, and the balloon dropped like a shot into the sea. After a brief struggle to extricate himself from the car, Wilton sank back and went under. His dead body was picked up a little later. The accident was witnessed by a large crowd that had gathered to see the ascension.

Will Fight in America Only.

LOUISVILLE, March 24.—James J. Corbett, the world's champion, while here with his theatrical company, was tendered a banquet by Fred Pfeffer. Corbett said: "There seems to be a mistaken idea in regard to where my fight with Jackson will take place. The articles of agreement state that it will be fought in the United States. In this country it will be fought or nowhere."

Fears for an Overdue Steamer.

NEW YORK, March 26.—Fears are entertained for the steamer State of Georgia, which left Aberdeen for New York 22 days ago. She has not been seen since, though she should have arrived here a week ago.

DEFENDS HIS FATHER.

Young McKane Believes Gravesend is Indebted to His Sire.

NEW YORK, March 26.—George N. McKane, John Y. McKane's son, has issued this statement concerning his father's financial accounts with the town of Gravesend:

"While proper statements will in due time be rendered to the officials who are entitled to receive them, I may be pardoned for briefly referring to some points relating to financial matters with which my father was connected officially and which have been freely discussed in the newspapers by parties who have had little or no opportunity to ascertain facts upon which to base their statements.

"In 1893, John Y. McKane, as treasurer of the board of police commissioners of the town of Gravesend, expended for police purposes as allowed by law, $30,000.52. He received for this account from the county treasurer, $14,500 and from hack licenses, etc., $3,455, making a total of $17,955. The balance due my father appears to be $12,045.52.

"He received from the commissioner of investment to be applied to the payment of electric light plant, Coney Island police headquarters, police and fire alarm telegraph, town hall and other public improvements $251,489, less commissions deducted by John L. Voorhees, said commissioner of investment, for counsel and commissioner's fees $12,574.45, leaving net $238,914.55.

"This has all been expended for the purposes for which it was appropriated, and proper vouchers with a report will be placed in the hands of the town auditors on Tuesday next.

"Relating to the matter of bonds issued for street improvements and about which so many contradictory statements have appeared, the simple facts are as follows: The supervisor received proceeds from the sale of $137,000 worth of street improvement bonds, and disbursed a part of these proceeds to the contractors. These payments have been duly receipted for, and the vouchers with the unexpended balance will be turned over to the incoming supervisor. The issue of $148,000 street improvement bonds was sold to a banking firm in New York city and is to be paid for in instalments, the first of which is now past due and ready to be paid over to the same official.

"Regarding the $80,000 sewer bonds which were issued in the summer of 1893, the depressed state of the money market which affected the sale of all securities at that time, prevented the disposal of them at a satisfactory figure. The contractors having the work in charge agreed to accept them in lieu of cash, and the proper receipts and vouchers therefor will be delivered at the proper time to my father's successor.

"He received from the tax collector $13,451.79 and from the treasurer of the board of excise commissioners $6,510. These amounts collectively were to be applied to the payment of audited town bills for 1893. This report and the vouchers connected therewith will also be in the hands of the town auditors on Tuesday next.

"During the year 1892 when extreme precautionary measures were necessary to prevent a threatened epidemic of cholera, the board of health passed a resolution empowering the supervisor to employ a corps of shore cleaners. This he did and his expenditures under the appropriation have been in excess of the amount which he has received for this purpose. A report to the board of health in this connection will be duly rendered hereafter.

"My father as a master of fact disbursed large sums of money from his private resources for public purposes, particularly in the matter of the police. Up to a year or two ago past, the amount allowed for police was totally inadequate. Frequently fifty to sixty thousand people visited Coney Island in one day. More officers were actually needed to care for this large throng than the appropriation would provide for, and the men were paid from my father's own pocket, he trusting some day to be reimbursed. This matter is not taken up in his police report, and at any rate is a subject for after consideration. I feel satisfied that eventually the fact will be demonstrated that there is a considerable balance due John Y. McKane from the town of Gravesend."

SIX DARING ROBBERS

Rifle the Bens Creek, Pa., Postoffice.

The Sleeping Family Startled By a Volley Fired Into Their Bedroom—The Window Then Smashed and the Burglars Enter and Run Things Their Own Way—No Clew as Yet.

ALTOONA, Pa., March 26.—A daring and successful robbery was committed at Bens Creek station, on the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad, in Cambria county, by six masked men about 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

W. S. Confer conducts a general store at that place and is besides postmaster and Adams Express agent, all three departments being conducted in the same building, in which he and his family reside. At the hour mentioned the robbers got upon a back roof immediately under the window of the room occupied by Mr. Confer, his wife and some of his children, and began firing revolvers through the window into the room.

Mr. Confer being thus rudely awakened got his revolver and fired the only two shots that were in it, and at that instant the window was kicked in and in less time than it takes to tell it the gang were inside and his person covered with their revolvers. He thought his time had come and pleaded for his life and those of his family.

The robbers then told him to keep quiet, and while four of the party remained upstairs the two remaining ones marched him to the lower part of the house, compelling him to open the safe, from which they took $350 and a gold watch, the latter valued at $60 and a present from his wife. They then left without their identity having been learned and after warning the inmates to remain in the house and make no alarm.

Of the money taken $80 belonged to the postoffice funds, $15 to the Adams Express company and the remainder to Mr. Confer himself.

The first one of the robbers to jump in the window landed squarely in a cradle in which a little baby was sleeping and with an oath the obstruction was kicked out of the way, but fortunately the little one was not injured. Mrs. Confer has been sick for some time and because of the fright received she is completely prostrated and in a dangerous condition at present.

CLAD A LA LADY GODIVA.

Mrs. Honore Burns Creates a Sensation in West Manchester, N. H.

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 26.—There was a great sensation in West Manchester when Mrs. Honore Burns ran shrieking through the streets in a nude condition and took refuge in St. Raphael's church, where she was found kneeling before the altar.

The unfortunate woman's relatives, who were following close behind her with her clothing, secured her there, and after a brief struggle succeeded in clothing her.

Mrs. Burns, who is about 35 years of age, has been afflicted, it is said, with fits of temporary insanity.

A BEAUTIFUL STATUE.

Cut Out of a Solid 18-Ton Block of Westerly Granite.

QUINCY, Mass., March 26.—A beautiful piece of statuary has been completed at the works of F. Barnicoat at South Quincy, and will be shipped in a few days to St. Louis. The statue was cut from a solid block of Westerly granite weighing 18 tons, and has required the constant work of three men six months to complete it. It represents an angel standing out in relief with outstretched wings resting on the arms of a massive cross 9 feet high and 6 feet wide. The carving of the statue is something remarkable, and it is said to be the best piece of work ever executed in this city.

COXEY'S HUGE JOKE

Tramp of the Commonweal Towards Washington.

One-third of the Seventy-five Stragglers Composing the Army Desert During the First Eight Miles—Browne, on a White Horse, Heads the Procession—Coxey's Wife Going.

CANTON, O., March 26.—Coxey's army of commonweal moved out of Massillon on schedule time, there being perhaps seventy-five stragglers in line at the start and twenty-five less when Canton was reached, eight miles away. Carl Browne, chief marshal, headed the procession. He was mounted on a white horse and was followed by half a dozen aides all mounted on horses belonging to Coxey, who rode in a carriage drawn by a pair of spirited steeds.

The procession consisted of the marshals, Coxey, his wife and sister, a bugler, four covered wagons containing camping outfits, baled straw and several quarters of beef, a brass band that played all kinds of music at once and the soldiers of the commonweal on foot. They marched single file and two abreast, as pleased their fancy.

With very few exceptions they were hard-looking citizens. This they claimed was not their fault, but the fault of our system of government.

The weather was pleasant when the start was made, but the procession was soon overtaken by a severe snowstorm. This had a depressing tendency and a number of desertions were reported before Reeduburn, the first stop, was reached. After a brief stay at Reeduburn the army resumed its onward march and reached Canton shortly after 4 o'clock, where Camp Lexington was pitched.

Coxey is enthusiastic and claims the movement thus far exceeds his most sanguine expectations, but this is hardly in keeping with his former declarations. Canton and Massillon were both crowded with people who had come in from surrounding towns and cities to see the sight.

On the march from Massillon to Canton the army was followed by a mob of nearly a thousand people in carriages, on horseback and afoot. They made the welkin ring with their cheers and kept Coxey busy bowing and lifting his hat. On reaching Canton the army was greeted by fully 10,000 people, who were crowded on the sidewalks, in windows and on balconies along the street. Everyone regarded the affair as a huge joke and good humor prevailed on all sides. Camp Lexington was pitched on a vacant lot near the work house and the tramps, constituting the army of commonweal, at once began building bon-fires, scattering straw upon the ground and making other preparations to keep comfortable during the night.

The army had to start on its march without a goddess of peace, as no maiden could be found to assume that role. Instead, however, a burly negro has been enlisted to carry the banner, thus giving the African race representation in the movement.

One group of five soldiers deserted in a body before Canton was reached. Their marshal thought the celestial powers were not exercising proper discretion in sending a snowstorm upon the advancing hosts and advised his men to break for passing freight trains. They heeded his advice, and have not been heard from since. It is feared by some of Coxey's lieutenants that there will be more desertions unless the weather moderates, owing to the prevalence of comfortable haymows in these parts.

Coxey's life insurance policy, it has been learned, has been revoked, the officials of the company fearing he may meet with a violent end before finishing his present enterprise.

TROOPS TO MEET COXEY.

Reported That His Army Will Be Stopped at the Pennsylvania Line.

PITTSBURG, March 26.—A newspaper here announced that it is in possession of information, which while not yet official, is yet regarded as credible and trustworthy, that Governor Pattison has given orders to certain officers of troops in this section of the state which is equivalent to holding them in readiness for the receipt of marching orders in case Coxey's army holds together. Adjt.-Gen. Greenland, who was here Friday, is understood to have been sent here to confer with local officers as to the situation and the possible arrangements. As a result it has been decided to meet Coxey's army at the borders of this state and Ohio by Pennsylvania troops and be there checked in their venturesome career. They are now expected to mobilize at Beaver next Saturday if the Coxey movement progresses.

Coxey Has a Rival.

DENVER, Col., March 26.—Bert Hamilton, civil engineer and actor, is organizing an army similar to Coxey's to go to Washington and demand the free coinage of silver, the construction of a new railroad from the Ohio river to the Pacific coast and other legislation in the interest of the Western portion of the country. Meetings will be held throughout the week to promote the movement. The start will be next Sunday and Mr. Hamilton expects to leave Colorado with at least 50,000 men and take recruits all along the line. The army will demand free transportation of the railroads.

Troops Not Held in Readiness.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 26.—There is no truth in the story sent out from Pittsburg that Governor Pattison has issued orders to certain organizations of the National Guards to hold themselves in readiness to repel the invasion of the state by Coxey's army. Governor Pattison thinks the Pittsburg police force is abundantly able to handle the invaders.

Coxey's Financial Trouble.

MASSILLON, O., March 26.—James E. Pepper, of Kentucky, has had an execution for $24,000 issued against Coxey and attached the latter's $40,000 stallion, Acolyte. Coxey bought the horse from Pepper, but only paid $16,000 on him. It is understood that all of Coxey's property is heavily mortgaged.

Treasury Gold Decreasing.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The gold in the treasury is nearly $3,000,000 less than on March 1.

EASTER IN BALTIMORE

The Cathedral the Mecca of Roman Catholics.

Archbishop Satolli and Cardinal Gibbons in Attendance, the Latter Preaching an Easterday Sermon—Washington and Columbus Eulogized—Services at Other Churches.

BALTIMORE, March 26.—The cathedral was yesterday the mecca of Roman Catholics, and the imposing edifice was crowded at the several masses and other services. The ceremonies were of more than usual interest. Most Rev. Archbishop Satolli, papal ablegate to the United States, said the pontifical mass, and Cardinal Gibbons preached an Easterday sermon at the 11 o'clock service. Not a foot of space within the massive structure was unoccupied, hundreds being unable to get as far as the steps.

The cardinal took for his text the third chapter of the Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Colossians. He spoke for little more than half an hour. His eminence said in part:

"It is related in the gospel that Jesus raised to life the son of a widowed mother as he was borne to his last resting place. We may well imagine the joy which filled the heart of this loving mother when she saw her son rise from his bier. With what delight she embraced him; and, returning home she cast aside her emblem of mourning and put on her garments of joy. * * * *

"Such is the joy which fills the heart of our mother church this day at the resurrection of her spouse; a resurrection not followed by death, like that of the widow's son, or of Lazarus; for Christ, risen from the dead, dieth no more. The church has laid aside her habiliments of mourning and is clothed with the festive garments of joy.

"It is a law of human glory, shaped indelibly upon the page of history, that few men have ever attained to posthumous renown who had not in life endured many trials and hardships and sufferings. Washington had to pass through many dark and dreary days; he passed through the memorable scenes of Trenton, Valley Forge and Yorktown before he was honored by his countrymen with the beautiful title 'Father of His Country.' Columbus would not have received the honors recently paid to him by both hemispheres if he had not risked his reputation and his life by sailing over an unknown ocean in quest of a new world. And if such is the law of fame on earth, how can we expect to attain to heavenly glory without self-sacrifice and self-denial?

"Christ has discovered for us a new earth and a new heaven. He beckons us to follow him, and says: 'Fear not storms from without nor passions within. Look up to me, the author and finisher of your faith.'"

Easter services in the churches of all denominations were well attended.

Runaway Accident to a Party of New Converts at Hollidaysburg.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., March 26.—Twenty-eight converts to the Church of God were immersed in the Juniata river Sunday afternoon.

While the converts were returning to town in an omnibus the horses ran away, upsetting the vehicle. Miss Elsie McManamy and Mrs. Westley Elliott were fatally injured, and four others badly bruised.

Called to the Kingdom.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., March 26.—Prince Bewlow, the African prince, who is a member of the class of '97 in Williams college, has received a call from his people in Africa to return to his native land and take possession of the kingdom, which heretofore has been under the power of an uncle. It was not the intention of the young prince to return so soon unless it was in response to a call, as he was informed that his uncle would make a desperate fight to hold the kingdom and keep him away from his just rights.

John Brown, the well known Presbyterian minister of this city and a prominent organizer of the local weavers' union, has presented his letter of resignation, to take effect June 1st. NEW YORK, March 26.—Yu Ihan, a repulsive looking little Chinaman, is locked up in Jefferson Market prison, and although the officers in charge are reticent about the matter, from their actions it is believed that the Chinaman is being held for the murder of little Susie Martin, whose mutilated body was found in the coal cellar of a tenement house in West 30th street.

Emperor William's Journey.

ABBAZIA, March 26.—Emperor William left his 3,000,000 franc special train at Fiume to take the Christabel for Abbazia. The train was side-tracked at the Fiume station. A passenger train was shunted carelessly on the same track and it smashed part of the foremost imperial carriage. One other carriage was somewhat damaged and some contents of the train were broken. The total damage, however, will not exceed 15,000 francs.

A Priest's Life Threatened.

PITTSBURG, March 26.—The trustees of St. Peters Catholic church, on the south side, have taken precautions for the protection of their pastor, Rev. Father May, who has received a number of mysterious letters containing threats of personal violence. The letters, it is said, bear the signature "Conrad Smith." A member of the congregation is under surveillance.

Killed By His Daughter.

HOMER, Ga., March 26.—J. F. Willis was killed last week by his fifteen-year-old daughter, Lillian, and his wife. The girl claims that she killed her father to keep him from choking her mother to death. She was given a preliminary trial, the jury rendering a verdict in accordance with the girl's version of the affair.

OBITUARY.

John K. Van Arsdale.

The death of John K. Van Arsdale, aged 49 years, occurred at 5:30 this morning, at his late residence, 120 Grove street. He was a son of P. P. Van-Arsdale of 301 East Front street, and leaves a wife and three daughters. Human skill was of no avail, however, and the patient passed peacefully away, conscious almost to the last.

Decedent was a most devout Christian, a thoroughly good man whose loss is a personal one to all who knew him.

CRESCENT CHURCH SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

Historical Sermon by Rev. Dr. Richards.

The fiftieth anniversary of the Crescent Avenue Church having been celebrated last Wednesday, Rev. William R. Richards took for his subject last evening the history of the church. His text was John xvii: 18, "As Thou has sent me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world". He defined the mission of a church as the saving of the world through Christ.

The main facts brought out in his sermon by Mr. Richards are as follows:

Eighty-six persons met in a house where is now 229 East Front street, March 21, 1843. Their organization was called the Second Presbyterian Church, and the same as that in existence, the name having been changed to the Crescent Avenue Church when the new and the old schools of Presbyterianism were united.

The next year the church was able to build and chose as a place for their frame house of worship the lot on East Front street at present occupied by the City National Bank. This building remained in use for 27 years.

Rev. William Whittaker was the first pastor, having charge of the church for its first decade. He was followed, in 1854, by Rev. Teeodore S. Brown. His pastorate extended until 1867, during which time the membership increased from 96 to 226. From 1867 to 1883 the pastor was Rev. John C. Bliss. The present church building was erected at the beginning of his pastorate, the dedicatory services being held in September, 1872. The present minister, Rev. William R. Richards, came to the charge July 8, 1884.

The systematic organization of the women workers of the church dates from the year in which Mr. Richards came. In 1890 H. B. Newhall was succeeded by W. D. Murray as superintendent of the Sunday-school.

A fire, which occurred November 23, 1888, destroyed a part of the chapel. Ground was broken for the building of an enlarged chapel June 4, the following year, and the new work was dedicated February 26, 1890. Voluntary subscriptions paid for the rebuilding. May 12, 1889, $12,339 was contributed, and April 12, 1891, $12,803.

The membership of the church has increased steadily, additions almost invariably being made at each communion. Thirty-two persons made confession of faith June 27, 1886, and 65 January 4, 1891. During the past decade 271 have joined the home church on confession of faith and 266 by letter from other churches, making the membership 802. Counting in the chapels there are 1,060 persons in the church.

Especially worthy of note is the cordial fellowship which has been manifested in the relations of the Crescent Avenue with the other churches of Plainfield. Especially was this shown by the offers of accommodations received after the fire in the chapel, the Sunday services conducted in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, and the prayer meeting in Grace Church. The first and second of the union Good Friday services, which began in 1890, were held in the Crescent Avenue Church.

The church has taken an active part in aiding the local charitable agencies, and supported the union evangelistic meetings held by Major Whittle and Mr. Moody in 1886 and by B. Fay Mills in 1890.

A great portion of the development of the church during the past ten years has been through the agency of the chapels.

Bethel Chapel was instituted Nov. 30, 1884, on the corner of Washington and Fifth streets, with S. A. Ginna, Superintendent. The building now in use was dedicated Dec. 18, 1887. W. A. Alexander was called to the pastorate in November, 1890. Forty-eight members have been admitted on confession of faith, and 32 by letter. The Sunday-school numbers 216 scholars.

The old Bethel building was moved to the West End, and New Year's Day, 1888, Superintendent H. C. Squires held the first session in "Hope Chapel". Seven times additions have been made to the building and another is contemplated. In the Sunday-school are 550 scholars, 152 converts have been taken into the church, and 29 have joined by certificate.

At their request Warren Mission was adopted in 1893, no acceptance having been made by other churches in the community. Pastor J. W. McKelvey was then called and I. N. Lovell appointed Superintendent. The membership of the Sunday-school is 350. Twelve persons on confession and seven from other churches were received at the last communion.

In the last ten years $53,501 has been given for different home missions, $29,318 for foreign missions, $37,656 for other benevolent causes, and $145,000 for congregational expenses.

Under the organization of the Crescent Avenue Church are four houses of worship, the same number of clergymen, seven elders, three deacons, and four Sunday-schools and their officers. There are 1,060 church members and 1,549 Sunday-school scholars in all.

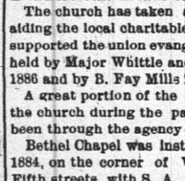
WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present to their easy-going doctor, separate diseases, for which he prescribes, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse, by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have promptly cured the disease.



Mrs. HARRY TAPPAN, of Reynolds, Jefferson Co., Neb., writes: "For two years I was a sufferer. A part of this time had to be carried from my bed. Was racked with pain, had hysteria, was very nervous, no appetite and completely discouraged. A few bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' effected a perfect cure." Sold by all dealers in medicines.

A 50c ticket secures a diamond ring; a 35c. ticket a watch; a 25c. ticket a barrel of flour. Diamond ring and watch can be seen at Leggett's, where reserved seats are sold.

MANNER OF DISTRIBUTING GIFTS—Everyone buying a ticket receives a check with number—duplicate of same is placed in box. Between the 2d and 3d acts of the drama the boxes are brought before the audience and handed to some resident, who in turn selects some citizen to draw one ticket from each box. The first ticket deawn from the first box calls for diamond ring—the one holding corresponding number in the audience receives same; and the same plan is followed with each gift. The public will kindly remember that Mr. Benton or any of his company will not take any part in distributing of the gifts. It will be some citizen known to all. It is a fair competition, and some one of this city must receive the gift. T. H. BENTON, Manager.

EASTER IN THE CHURCHES.

Grace P. E. Church.

From two texts, Luke 23: 1 and 2, "And the whole multitude of them arose and led him unto Pilate. And they began to accuse him, saying, 'We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Cesar, saying that he himself is Christ a king'"; and Romans 1: 4, "And declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the Spirit of holiness, by the resurrection from the dead", Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman preached in the morning.

The rendition of the musical programme was unexceptional. The solo in the sanctum, sung by Elmer E. Runyon, was very beautiful. The choristers were as follows:

Trebles—John B. Dumont, Jr., Walter Bartindale, Fred Smith, Stanton Smith, Eddie Brown, Willie Jeffrey, George Irwin, Charles Shepherd, Frank Venino, Howard Mason, Walter Sampson, Harry Messerschmidt, Willard Martin, Thomas DeMera, Harold Chandor, Alfred Egan.

Altos—Alfred Forbury, Horace J. Martin, Emil Knust.

Tenors—W. R. Cock, Stanton M. Smith, Laurens VanBuren, S. Marsh, Clarence Sutphen, W. Trimmis, C. Angleman, Harry Yaeger.

Bassos—Arthur F. Freeman, Fred R. Pope, Fred H. Freeman, Thomas Smith, John Brower.

Mrs. William A. Freeman was the efficient organist and instructor.

The Sunday-school services in the evening were in charge of Superintendent Gunnell. Dr. Rodman made an address in favor of the early Scriptural education of children. Mr. Gunnell told of the thoughts represented by the ladder of flowers which formed part of the decorations. The sides, he said, were faith and love, and the steps repentance, good thoughts, good deeds, self denial and worship. The ladder of Lent led up to the joys of Easter.

Much skill and care had been expended in the decorating of the church. The ladder was of pinks, carnations and pansies on a framework of evergreen. Azaelias, mignonette, daisies, roses and smilax were placed about the chancel. The reredos was banked with Easter lilies with large callas at each side. The memorial designs of flowers was very handsome. A cross of lilies, smilax and mignonette was in memory of Miss Agnes Rodman. A bell of smilax and lilies was from Mrs. H. A. Crulkshank. Mrs. E. L. Finch gave a wreath of lilies and smilax in memory of her son. The lectern was decked with smilax and lilies by Benjamin W. Arnold for his wife's memory.

Church of the Holy Cross.

Hundreds of beautiful Easter lilies, graceful nodding palms, snowy-petaled daisies, and soft, swaying grasses yesterday transformed the pretty Church of the Holy Cross into such a bower of floral loveliness as it has never been before. Overflowing congregations attended both services, and while the white-robed choristers chanted from the altar steps the holy story of the Resurrection, the bright gowns and happy faces in the pews told the worldly tale of joyous Eastertide. At the morning service, Rev. T. Logan Murphy preached an eloquent and appropriate sermon from the text: "Why seek ye the living among the dead". The choir sang most excellently the programme as already given in The Press, being perfectly accompanied at the organ by the choirmaster, F. H. Cheeswright, whose tuneful arrangement of Hymn 108 was a pleasing feature of the choral service. The offertory, much larger than that of last year, was one of the most generous ever given in the history of the church.

At the children's Easter festival in the afternoon the church was again crowded. The Sunday-school, preceded by the choir, marched into the flower-studded nave to the music of a glad carol, and went through the usual exercises of the day. An address was made by the rector, who also presented to the following choir boys handsome books as prizes awarded for especial merit and exemplary conduct during the Lenten season: Ernest Fellows, Langdon Howard, Charley Turrill and Douglas Drake. After the singing of many bright carols the school passed out before the choir and Holy Cross's best Easter came to a joyful end. The countless pearly, drooping lilies which made a floral paradise of the cozy church, were brought all the way from Bermuda expressly for this purpose, and were most tastefully and artistically disposed.

The annual parish meeting for election of wardens and vestrymen for the ensuing year will be held in the church this evening.

Church of The Heavenly Rest.

At the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Evona, yesterday, special services were held. The attendance was large. Easter music by the choir was a marked feature. Dr. Page officiated, both morning and evening. In the evening two societies were formed, one for the men and one for the women, to do more aggressive work. A large number of choice flowers formed the decorations.

First Baptist Church.

The Easter services in the First Baptist Church yesterday were very interesting. Special music rendered by the choir of seventeen voices was an attractive feature of the programme. In the afternoon Milton H. Gruett, violinist, and Frank Drake, pianist, of Newark, assisted in the rendition of the music.

The beautiful flowers used around the platform were from the conservatories of C. W. McCutchen and L. W. Serrell, and were the finest ever shown in the church. Seven scholars from the Sunday-school were baptized at the afternoon services, the baptism being witnessed by a very large number of people.

The choir was composed of the following:

Sopranos—Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Miss F. May Grant, Miss May Clawson, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Retta Hetfield, Miss Swain.

Altos—Miss Gussie Runyon, Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Florence Kline, Miss Bertha Needham.

Bassos—B. T. Barnes, William Holmes, Stacy Raynolds.

Tenors—C. W. McCutchen, Edward Ryder, Carl Rudolph.

Park Avenue Baptist Church.

Two beautiful Easter services were given in the Park Avenue Baptist Church yesterday. Both morning and evening the church was crowded, every seat being occupied. The decorations were in charge of Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson and Edward Day, and a most pleasing arrangement of flowers was the result.

A programme of Scripture lessons, responsive readings and anthems was rendered in the morning, and the pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, preached an appropriate sermon. A large choir under the direction of A. S. Roe, gave a select programme of music. Mrs. Maxson was the organist, and in the evening W. E. MacClymont assisted.

In the evening the Amphion Orchestra of fifteen pieces gave "Largo" by Handel, and "Nazareth" by Gounod. It was a sublime production of these sacred selections. The contralto solo, "The Resurrection", by Miss Haines; bass solo, "Calvary", by C. E. Bond; and "The King of Love My Shepherd Is", by A. S. Roe, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Mrs. Ryder and C. E. Bond, were especially commendable. The audience joined heartily in the services.

Crescent Avenue Church.

The text of Rev. William R. Richards in the morning was Revelations 1: 18, "I am He that liveth and was dead; and behold I am alive forevermore".

An elaborate musical programme was rendered in the morning and the evening by the following choir:

Sopranos—Miss Holmes, Mrs. Kenney, Miss Green, Mrs. J. Irving Brown, Mrs. J. K. Myers.

Alto—Miss Jessie Smillie, Miss Ethel Holmes, Mrs. Abbott.

Tenors—Elmer E. Runyon, G. W. Schoonmaker.

Bassos—Fred Walz, Andrew J. Gavett, C. A. Baynon, A. W. Duxbury, F. B. Newman.

Organist—Miss Jessie Utter.

Leader—I. C. Pierson.

The Sunday-school had their Easter services in the afternoon.

The floral decorations consisted of a large mass of Easter lilies, palms and other plants of green foliage. At one side was a splendid pot of callas mounted upon a pedestal. Mrs. J. K. Myers and Mrs. H. B. Newhall loaned a number of plants.

St. Mary's Church.

High mass was celebrated at 10:30 in the morning. Rev. Father Smyth delivered a sermon on the Easter story. Special music was rendered by:

Sopranos—Misses M. Flanagan, S. Carney, Kate Higgins and L. Burns.

Altos—Misses J. Day and L. McIntyre.

Tenors—J. C. Traynor and T. J. Comerford.

Baritones—Thomas Roddy, William O'Connors, David Sheehan and M. Cashin.

Organist—Miss St. Leger.

The morning programme was as follows:

Vidi Agnam.....Mozart
Mass in B Flat—Kyrie Gloria.....Millard
Regina Coeli.....Mozart

The evening:

Grand Vespers.....Fisk
O Salutaris.....Rossi
Tantum Ergo.....L. Berge

Rows of calla and Easter lilies were displayed on the altar, the cross above the tabernacle was illuminated, and over all, a sentence formed by gas lights, were the words: "He is Risen, Halleujah".

St. Joseph's Church.

Rev. Father Miller delivered a sermon on the resurrection at the morning service at 10:30. The Pascal candle, representing the victory of Christ, was lighted, to be kept burning every Sunday until the Feast of the Ascension. The altar was elaborately decked with flowers loaned by parishoners.

Director Bailey led a choir of ten voices in the singing of the following:

Kyrie Eleison.....LaHache
Gloria in Excelsis.....Millard
Credo.....Millard
Regina Coelie.....Giorza
Sanctus.....LaHache
Agnus Dei.....Millard

Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

At the Easter services in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Saturday morning Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis preached upon the glory of faith in the risen Christ.

Appropriate music was rendered by a quartette consisting of Mrs. David E. Titsworth, Miss Nancy Randolph, Arthur Titsworth and Dr. Frank Clawson. Pretty floral decorations of palms and lilies were arranged by Miss Bessie Titsworth and Miss Mabel Potter.

The young people's services took the form of a praise meeting, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth being the soloist in the special music.

Salvation Army.

Captain Mimms being ill, the three Easter services were conducted by Lieutenant Banker with the aid of Captain Marsh from the Department Headquarters in New York. Nearly 1,500 persons in all attended and much interest was manifested.

Congregational Church.

The cause of the joy of Easter-tide was explained at the service held in the morning by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, who read from Mark XVI. The text of his sermon was I Corinthians XV: 57, "But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ".

Easter music was rendered by a double quartette composed of:

Sopranos—Misses Edith Beckman and Minnie Morse.

Altos—Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux and Miss Glenck.

Tenors—Precentor Horace J. Martin and William Jessup.

Bassos—William Runyon and John Whiting.

William Runyon sang a solo entitled "Come, Children, Join".

Mrs. W. H. Brower and Miss Mary Chase arranged a most beautiful and artistic scheme of decoration. With palms and cut flowers the platform was transformed. The flowers used were Easter lilies, hyacinths, narcissus, jonquils, marguerite, and roses. The Sunday-school studied an Easter lesson in the afternoon. Three instrumental trios were effectively given by the following:

Organist—Mrs. B. T. Barnes.
Pianist—Mrs. M. E. Dwight.
Violinist—P. Ludwig Conde.

First Methodist Church.

Rev. Charles R. Barnes read, as the morning's Scripture lesson, from Psalm 17. He described the resurrection as explained in I Corinthians, 15. Mr. Barnes's text was the fifteenth verse of that chapter, "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept". His story of the resurrection was based on that told in Luke 24.

Miss Kate Mitchell, of Philadelphia, formerly a member of the church here, sang two solos, "Easter Song" by Denis, and "The Angel Gabriel" by Howell. Lewis Bond sang "The Resurrection" by Shelley. The organ was played by Daniel Davis. Decorations furnished by the Ladies' Aid Society consisted of a large group of calla lilies placed in front of the pulpit and surrounded by palms and other foliage plants, together with a large bunch of roses.

The last chapter of St. Mark was used by the pastor in the evening to illustrate the nearness of the spiritual world to us, and lessons were drawn from the acts of the women who visited the sepulchre of Christ.

During the Sunday-school exercises in the afternoon Rev. Mr. Randolph, pastor of Grace M. E. Church, delivered a stirring address. In the evening Miss Mitchell sang "Fear Not Ye O Israel".

First Presbyterian Church.

The morning text of Rev. Charles E. Herring was Matthew XXVIII: 8, "And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word". The Scripture lesson was found in I Corinthians XV.

The singing by the double quartette was excellent. Those in the choir were:

First Soprano—Miss Susan S. Boice.
Second Soprano—Miss Lucie M. Boice.
First Alto—Miss Anna Blair.
Tenors—Clarence Teel and Mr. Crouch.
Bassos—Harry Williams and Mr. Camp.
Director—T. H. Camp.
Organist—W. H. Clarke.
Pianist—Mrs. Josephine Petrie.

The decorations were simple, but effective. A superb basket of Easter lilies was furnished by Mrs. Charles Hyde. Other lilies, smilax and roses made up the rest of the flowers.

The inscription on the cross formed the subject for the discourse at the evening service. The two kings of the Jews, Christ and Herod, were discussed.

Warren Chapel.

The resurrection was treated by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey in a morning sermon from the text Acts 26: 8, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"

The platform was decorated with flowers, and the sentence "Christ is risen" was on the wall above in golden letters.

In the afternoon the children observed the day with singing, recitations, and responsive readings. Charles Wheeler was the organist. A number of the jugs which had been distributed for the special Easter collection were broken, $20.80 being received by this means. Addresses were made to the Sunday-school by the pastor, and Rev. William R. Richards, of the home church.

The sermon delivered by the pastor at night was from the text, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock".

All Saints Church.

Fanwood celebrated Easter by three services conducted by the rector, Rev. Dr. True.

The church was beautifully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants suitable for the festival.

Over one hundred attended the morning services, and fifty-four partook of Communion. As there are but eighty-six communicants the percentage of participants is most gratifying.

The children's service in the afternoon was also largely attended, the service being beautifully rendered. Collections from the mite boxes of the Sunday-school amounted to $17.99.

First Church of Christ.

Elder Benjamin Hand preached in the morning from Mark 28: 6, "He is not here; for he is risen, as he said".

Pulpit decorations were of potted plants, prominent among them being pansies in clusters.

The Elder's evening sermon was on "The Coming Lord". His text was John XIV: 3, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also".

Trinity Reformed Church.

The attendances in Trinity Reformed Church were very large. The music of Organist Titsworth was greatly enjoyed, as was also the singing of the following choir:

Tenor—Robert Clark.
Bass—A. J. Moore.
Soprano—Miss E. Krymer.
Alto—Miss F. Mattison.

The morning text of Rev. Cornelius Schenck, pastor, was from I Cor., 15:57, and in the evening the Sunday-school gave "The Immortal Dawn". This included recitations by Evelyn Berg, Jennie Thorn, Gertie Tier, Minnie Wyman, and Carrie Fritts. A solo by Frank Dencklau was highly appreciated. Nearly $200 was given by the congregation as an Easter offering to the church.

The beautiful display of flowers was the result of much labor by the committee, Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Mrs. J. Krymer and Miss Anna Searing. Ascension lilies, callas, and the ever-graceful palms were in great profusion. Brass tables with baskets of cut flowers, and jardiniers of palms were grouped about the front. The pulpit, artistically festooned with white and green, was banked with potted plants. To the right was an easel holding a large bunch of lilies, with a star above suggesting the Saviour's birth; to the left, a cross, emblematic of His death; while above and between these two symbols were the crown and the words "He is Risen".

Grace M. E. Church.

The morning's sermon by Rev. Herbert F. Randolph was based on I Corinthians XV, 17: "And if Christ be not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins". He read from John XX.

The special Easter music was rendered by the regular chorus choir, composed of:

Mrs. S. E. Winckler, the Misses Belle Lunger, Clara Stiner, Nellie Schuck, Carrie Tingley, Grace Carroll, Agnes Tingley, Mrs. Charles Hummer, W. H. Griffen, William H. Lunger, John Stiner, E. E. Winckler, L. A. and Charles Hummer.

Director—Ezra Loomis.

The anthem "Lift your glad voices in triumph on high" was rendered.

Miss Alice Carroll presided at the organ and also sang a solo entitled "There is a green hill far away".

White lilies, geraniums and smilax, arranged by Mrs. W. H. Griffen, and furnished in part by Mrs. Abby Chase, presented a beautiful appearance in the cheerful audience room. They were grouped within the chancel rail, about the pulpit.

The celebration by the children began at 2:30 in the afternoon. The programme including singing by the school was as follows:

Address.....Dr. H. K. Carroll
Recitation—"Guess God won't be angry wis wees".....Alice Demott
Recitation—"Little Pilgrim".....Mabel Stevens
Violin Solo—"Spring Song".....Mendelssohn
Dyckman Winckler.
Recitation—"It is finished".....Mabel Loomis
Solo—"The Resurrection".
Miss Alice J. Carroll
Recitation—"They did n't think",
Grace and Charles Powell
Recitation—"The Countersign",
Emma Stevens

The sermon in the evening was on "Shamgar and the ox-goad", from the text Judges III: 31. The choir sang the anthem, "Oh, clap your hands".

German Reformed Church.

Rev. Frederick Koechli preached from St. John 14: 19, "Because I live ye shall live also". Easter hymns were sung by the congregation. The church was decorated with Easter and calla lilies and other flowers.

The pastor conducted services in Somerville in the afternoon. At night he preached in his own church again, taking for his text Romans 4: 25, "Who was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification".

Monroe Avenue Chapel.

The members of the Monroe Avenue Chapel observed Easter Sunday very appropriately. In the morning a service of Scripture reading, prayer and special music was rendered. A most interesting report of the Sunday-school was read by James McGee. The direction at present is 210, with an average attendance of 150. Under the efficient management of Superintendent Walter McGee, together with five officers and fifteen teachers, the school is carefully managed. During the past year $280.87 have been received, and the same amount expended. The school has contributed $50 for foreign missions. Eleven persons have been received to membership, and there are four more to join.

The presentation of collection plates by several classes in the school was a welcome feature. All departments of work have improved during the year and the outlook is excellent.

In the afternoon and evening special exercises were held, which were very interesting. The floral display was attractive and was arranged by Miss Charlotte Aldrich, Miss May Palmer, and Miss Kittie Ackerman.

All Souls Church.

Taking for a text I Corinthians XV: 20, "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept", Rev. Hobart Clark delivered an able sermon in the morning. Pausing on the anniversary of Christ's resurrection, he reviewed the evidence relating to immortality.

The tastefully arranged decorations were made up of palms, lilies and roses.

The Sunda-school held their special Easter services in the afternoon.

German Lutheran Church.

Rev. Edward Klonka preached to congregation that was gratifyingly large, on the text "Christ is risen indeed"—Luke XXIV:35.

Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The proposed corner-stone laying of Emmanuel Baptist Church on Fillmore avenue between North avenue and Third street was postponed because of the storm of yesterday till April 8.

Rev. J. W. Mitchell preached to his congregation in Reform Hall in the morning, and in the evening Rev. Mr. Porter, of Elizabeth, conducted the service.

PLAINFIELD AND THE JUDGESHIP.

Levi Hetfield the Only Openly-Avowed Candidate.

In the selection for the office of lay judge for Union County, a vacancy caused by the death of Judge Wylie, Plainfield is entitled to the office, as the other lay judge lives in Rahway and the law judge lives in Elizabeth. The office was held in Plainfield for several years by Judge Harper, until his death, when, there being no candidate from Plainfield, Judge Wylie of Elizabeth was appointed. The only candidate from here who has made application for the position is Levi Hetfield, a life-long Democrat, a large real-estate owner, and a man deeply interested in the affairs of city and county. He has been twice elected to the Plainfield Common Council and is a director of the Dime Savings Institution, Plainfield Street Railway, and American Mutual Insurance Company. He is a man of good judgment, having been honored frequently by appointment of the Orphans Court and by the Chancellor, to positions of responsibility and trust. Mr. Hetfield's petition is endorsed by every lawyer of Plainfield, with one exception.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

A Decided Bear Movement

By W. O. HIBBS and EDWIN TARISSE.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

Mr. Grierson was very well pleased with himself as he rang the bell of Miss Huntingdon's house the same evening that the directors of the Carlotta Mining company were to hold a meeting. Since the transfer books had closed he had quietly floated, through his various agents, 7,500 shares of the stock in small lots, and as Carlotta was just then quoted at 108¾ the chance for investment had been eagerly seized by a goodly number.

When Miss Huntingdon appeared in the drawing room in response to his card, he shook hands with his fair fellow conspirator with an effusiveness that rather surprised her. Had that young woman known what was revolving in the banker's mind as a part of this deal not yet revealed to her she would have been astounded.

"Well," the arch schemer said when his greetings were over, "everything is working as smoothly as could be desired. There will be quite a stir in the morning, to say the least. Can't stop to tell you any more now—watch the papers." And Mr. Grierson bowed himself out.

Miss Huntingdon dropped on a divan in front of the fireplace. She leaned forward and gazed into the fire. The coals glowed and splintered as if in sympathy with the excitement the breezy announcement of the banker had stirred in her breast. So it was coming, she thought, with an unwonted light in her eyes—this thing she had dreamed of so long. So she was going to be in this as she had been in every move she had made since she began to gather her fortune—successful. That the banker had come with his proposition at the time he had—was it not proof that she was born under a lucky star?

"Father, dear father," she murmured pensively, "you shall have your will."

She took from her pocket a cardcase, and from it drew a scrap of paper, yellow and creased. It seemed to rouse her. "I have sworn to crush this man, James Delafield," nervously clinching her hand, "and I am ready to do it." Again she looked at the paper long and earnestly. "That is my talisman!" she exclaimed.

"But my poor father did not know to what he condemned me. He did not know that I would come into such contact with men whose only ambition in life is to get money—anyway, anyhow—but to get it. He did not know that to fulfill the vow he demanded of me he was subjecting me to an existence that is fast crushing out of me the sensibility, the goodness of heart—yes, the very womanliness—that so endeared my mother to him—an existence distasteful to me and suffered only for the sake of my promise. But it will soon end; then my life will be my own. In this deal I shall ruin James Delafield to the last dollar in his pocket. I cannot fail."

Miss Huntingdon rose and thoughtfully paced the floor. "Why does the man seek me so? I have not encouraged him. Sometimes I feel contemptible. Perhaps I ought to have sent him away long ago. And yet the whole affair came about so naturally, and the acquaintance has progressed in such a way that to dismiss him would have been out of the question. As much as I might wish to, I cannot hate him. Really, I must admit it, I rather like him personally. He seems so great hearted, so frank, so—no, no, no—I am his enemy! I must not think of"——

"Mr. Delafield!" gravely announced the servant at this juncture. Miss Huntingdon turned quickly. With a graceful, swinging movement she put out her hand toward the man who had entered, but feeling almost Judaslike. Had she attempted to analyze the situation at that moment she would have been confronted by a sequence of perplexing questions such as would have ached her pretty head to answer. However, she was quite composed outwardly and ejaculated: "Why, I did not expect to see you this evening! I supposed you would attend the directors' meeting."

"I thank you for thinking of me," replied Delafield gently as he released her hand. Flushing a little, Miss Huntingdon sat down. Delafield leaned against the mantel and crossed his hands behind him. He looked very manly, Miss Huntingdon thought, in this careless attitude. It had never struck her so forcibly before how broad his shoulders were, what strength there was in his figure. She noted the firm lines of his face, and how the whole expression of that face in repose was softened by his kindly eyes. Presently his rich voice roused her.

"No," he was saying, "I did not go to the meeting because I—well, I preferred very much to be with you tonight."

"Then he won't know until tomorrow," flashed through her head. "I am sure I am glad to have you come," she said. "I"— She stopped, disconcerted at the young man's steady gaze—that look in his eyes that she had noticed so often of late.

"Miss Huntingdon," he began, "I said I came here tonight because I preferred to be with you. I came for more than that—I came because—I—I—love you. I loved you that day of the yacht race." He was bending over her now. "Is the remembrance of that day as sweet to you as it is to me?" very tenderly.

"I came for more than that—I came because—I—I—love you."

Miss Huntingdon's heart, whose pulsations hitherto had been increased mainly by the rise or the fall of the stock market, beat very fast now with a far different emotion. Why should she be so moved at the sound of this man's voice, at the warmth of his regard, when her heart should have been filled with hatred for him? Perversely her thoughts ran back to that day in the glorious summer time—the excitement of the great race and the gay party aboard the little vessel that followed the contesting white wings far down the bay. She remembered how she had met him and—whither was she letting herself drift? No, no, this would not do. She must answer him now. There could be only the one thing to say, of course, and he was waiting.

"Mr. Delafield," she said, turning very white, "you have pained me—but not in the way you think," she added quickly, seeing him shrink back. "I—I—oh, no, I can never say what you want me to say. The thing is impossible, impossible. I think, Mr. Delafield, I think—oh, go, I beg of you, go. You don't know—Mr. Delafield, go. I can't say any more." She was all unnerved. She had not calculated on this, and the sight of this man standing there with that hurt look in his eyes was too much for her to bear.

Delafield bent his head, and it was some moments before he spoke. Then he raised himself proudly and steadily regarded her. In a low voice he said:

"I am very sorry, Miss Huntingdon. I do not understand, but perhaps I have no right to an explanation. Good night," and the young man turned and left her.

CHAPTER III.

When James Delafield sat down to an unusually late breakfast the next morning, after passing a wretched night, he was, as might be expected, in a very bad humor. In this frame of mind it was but natural that the insignificant fact of Albert's having neglected to place the morning paper at his plate nettled him. He was about to tap the bell summoning that worthy, upon whom he might vent his spleen, when the man appeared with a paper in his hand.

"'Ere's a hextra, sir. Something herbout the Carlotta mine, sir."

"What's that?" asked Delafield as he grasped the sheet. Its glaring headlines fixed his eye. "Great God!" he exclaimed. This was what he saw:

"Carlotta Drops! The Great Mining Stock Falling Fast. Passed the Dividend. Shareholders Crazy to Unload Their Holdings. Almost a Panic. Unexpected Result of the Directors' Meeting."

Delafield called for his hat and coat, rushed out of the house, ran three blocks to the elevated station, and as he sped down town he anxiously read the story the paper told.

"Wall street is wild. The stock of the Carlotta Mining company is on the jump downward. At the time of going to press it is at 92, but it will not stop there. At the close of the market yesterday Carlotta was quoted at 108¾, so it is easy to see what has caused the excitement. The street is being flooded with Carlotta shares, for their holders are moving as one man, eager to get rid of what is dangerous to hold. Carlotta is going down, down, down. To tide it over is out of the question. Not one of the directors of the concern can be found, and Mr. Grierson, the president, refuses to say anything."

A lot more followed in the same strain. And then the account went on to tell how at the directors' meeting the condition of the mine had been revealed, what a stormy time there had been, and how the board had passed the dividend, the meeting breaking up in confusion. Considerable space was devoted to speculations as to "certain irregularities in the management of the mine" and comments upon the probable effect of this break upon stocks in general.

The first move of Delafield upon leaving the elevated train was to reach his broker. The excitement that filled his breast seemed as well to permeate the very air of the street. Men hurried to and fro or were gathered in restless groups earnestly discussing the situation.

Pushing his way through the crowd, Delafield entered the office of Gryce & Griffin and glanced anxiously at the ticker. Carlotta 87. Turning he saw Mr. Gryce at his elbow. "Come in here!" exclaimed Delafield, grasping his broker by the arm and dragging him into the private office. "Now, look here," began Gryce, "there"— The door closed behind them, and the crowd in the room heard no more.

There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Elmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

Mrs. Abby A. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

PARTIAL TO OLD MEN

Three Engagements Contracted by Miss Pollard.

And Not Counting the Alleged Engagement to Breckinridge—Statements Brought Out By the Defense. That Secret Marriage to Julian, Miss Pollard's "Blind Barnabas."

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The trial of the Pollard-Breckinridge case drags wearily along. The proceedings so far this week have been taken up with the reading of depositions, mostly intended to establish an alibi on behalf of the defendant as to certain dates testified to by the plaintiff.

Uninteresting as the depositions were as a rule there was one new point brought out and that was that Miss Pollard had been engaged to another man not previously mentioned in the case. This makes the third engagement contracted by her that has been brought to light, excepting the alleged one with Col. Breckinridge, and Miss Pollard's partiality to elderly men when she was a young girl was shown in the testimony of the man in the case, who was 42 years old at the time the engagement was contracted. Another deposition read was that of Aleck Julian, Miss Pollard's "Blind Barnabas," in reference to the mock marriage between Miss Pollard and himself in 1882. Those in the court room who looked for sensationalism in this deposition were disappointed and on the whole, with the qualifying remarks of Julian, in cross examination, it was not very unfavorable to the plaintiff.

There was a stir in the court room as Mr. Stoll said: "I will read the deposition of Mr. Aleck Julian. The deponent said he was 42 years old, lived near Bridgeport, Ky., and had known Miss Pollard about 15 years. Mr. Julian is blind, and Miss Pollard has referred to him as "my blind sweetheart, my modern Barnabas." He was not blind when he met Miss Pollard, about 1879. The night of Dec. 24, 1882, Christmas eve, four months after he became blind, he had spent at the house of Squire Tinsley. Miss Pollard was there too. The next morning Miss Pollard and the rest of the company drank egg-nogg. Then they went to the parlor and began talking about matrimony and some one proposed that he and "Mattie" should marry. Squire Tinsley came in just then, very hilarious, and Miss Mattie said: 'Here is a man who will marry me,' and the squire performed a mock ceremony for them. Julian and Miss Mattie sat in the parlor alone for a while after this and Miss Pollard, who had been drinking too much, proposed that as they were married they should go to bed. They went up-stairs and Julian sat down on on the side of the bed, and just then somebody asked for them from down stairs and Squire Tinsley's daughter came running up to the room.

Julian testified that once he had kissed Miss Pollard, but otherwise he had never been forward with her. She was then about sixteen years old.

A question as to whether Julian had ever gone riding with Mr. Roach brought the first specific objection from the plaintiff's counsel on the ground of irrelevancy, but Judge Bradley allowed it to stand. He had gone to Lexington, the deponent said, in 1893, with Mr. Roach, and had been invited by Miss Pollard, in a note sent him, to call on her at the house of her aunt, Mrs. Kean, but he had not done so. Miss Pollard had written him a note just after this. Julian was asked what its contents were, but Mr. Carlisle objected to the answer being read, as Julian was blind and could not know of his own knowledge what the note contained. The objection was sustained.

Julian was compelled to tell how he lost his sight. He had gone to the Shelbyville fair, carrying a revolver belonging to a friend who did not want it because his girl was with him. He got to the fair, after drinking two pints of whiskey and several gills more. He had tried to have some fun with a negro by pulling the pistol on him, and when the negro begged him not to shoot he said, "Well, I'll shoot myself," and put the pistol in front of his face. He thought there was nothing in the chamber on which the trigger fell, but there was, and that was how he became blind.

Julian said in cross-examination that Miss Pollard was "as nice a girl as there was in the country, so far as virtue was concerned," and he had never seen her do or heard of her doing anything that was not modest, with the exception of the mock-marriage, and the incident that followed was a result of her intoxication. He had kissed Miss Pollard but once. That was on a bridge and the deponent said he didn't know whether he put his arms about her or not. "I just kissed her," he said, "and I kissed her right." (Laughter.) This concluded the reading of the deposition.

The time when Col. Breckinridge takes the stand if he does so at all, appears still somewhat remote. He is not likely to be called on to testify in his own behalf before Wednesday afternoon.

Governor Matthews, of Indiana, and his staff, and members of the Princeton baseball team were interested listeners at the trial during the afternoon.

ALL THE MONEY GONE

Absconder Zell Returns and Surrenders.

Confesses to New York's Police Superintendent That He Embezzled Nearly $100,000 of the Lehigh Coal Company's Money—Everything Was Lost on the Races.

NEW YORK, March 27.—William T. Zell, the former treasurer of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal company and the New York Athletic club, an embezzler from the former corporation to the extent of nearly $100,000, who has been a fugitive from justice since Jan. 19 last, surrendered himself to Superintendent Byrnes and is now locked up at police headquarters.

Zell's disappearance was one of the sensations of the winter. He was known all over the city as a high liver and was lavish in the expenditure of money, with which he always seemed well supplied. But it was known that his salary as treasurer of the coal company was a generous one and as he had other financial interests, no comment was made upon the way in which he dispensed ready cash when occasion required. He lived handsomly with his wife in apartments at the Rutland.

It was his official connection with the New York Athletic club, however, which made him widely known. He had been a member of the club from its infancy and was very popular with his associates.

Zell's disappearance and embezzlement were reported to the police immediately after his departure. No trace of him could be found after diligent search and the matter had been well-nigh forgotten when Superintendent Byrnes received word that the fugitive was at his home, ready to surrender himself. Detective Sergeant McCluskey was sent to his apartments and the defendant accompanied him to the central office. There, it was said, he confessed to stealing $93,000 within two and a half years. The money he claimed, was lost on the races for the most part. He said that he had travelled continuously since leaving New York, having been to Montreal, Chicago, St. Louis and Denver. He said that he returned home five days ago, but made another journey to Buffalo, coming back to New York on Sunday. Of the money he had taken not a cent remains, he told the superintendent.

Zell had been in the employ of the coal company for twenty years and had the full confidence of his superiors.

TAYLOR UP ON HABEAS CORPUS.

Generally Believed That He Will Get Out of Jail.

WATKINS, N. Y., March 27.—F. L. Taylor, the Cornell student who refused to testify before the grand jury at Ithica in the chlorine gas case and was sent to jail for contempt, was before Judge Smith of the supreme court here yesterday afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus. The application for his discharge was ably argued by his counsel and is equally ably opposed by the district attorney for Tomkins county. The prisoner was remanded to the custody of Schuyler's sheriff until a decision by the judge. The opinion prevails generally that Taylor will be discharged.

Race Track Repeal Bill Vetoed.

TRENTON, N. J., March 27.—Gov. Werts has returned to the house bill No. 106 with his objections thereto. The bill repeals what is known as the Guttenburg race track justice of the peace law, which gives persons arrested anywhere in a county the right to a hearing before the nearest magistrate, and was framed and enacted for the benefit of law violators at the Guttenburg track. Gov. Werts says in his veto message that while this may be true, it affords no good reason why the law should be repealed. It is a good law, notwithstanding it may have been thus abused. All persons arrested for alleged violation of law are entitled to a speedy hearing. It will be considered to-day.

DAVIS WANTS TO KNOW

What We Propose to Do About Hawaii.

In Washington Now to Find Out and, Incidentally, to Speak a Few Words in Behalf of the Queen and Against the Provisional Government — Royalty Still Hopeful.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Theophilus H. Davis, the guardian of Princess Kaiulani, and of the chief representatives of royalty in Hawaii, is here, and has spent several hours in trying to gain an audience with Secretary Gresham, who at each call of Davies was so busy that he was obliged to excuse himself.

Mr. Davis says he is here to find out what the United States proposes to do about Hawaii and, incidentally, to speak a few words in behalf of the queen and against the provisional government. He says a reign of terror exists in Hawaii, and that not even a small proportion of the people favor annexation to the United States. He places no faith in the idea that the provisional government intends to establish a permanent republican form of government, as that would give the citizens a voice which would result in overturning all annexation assertions.

He thinks the provisional government is at the mercy of its army of aliens and spies, while the people of the country continue to have faith that the United States will give them justice in accordance with the recommendations of the president, in other words that the queen will be restored or his ward, the Princess Kaiulani, raised to the throne. Mr. Davies expects to remain here several days.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS.

Senator Colquitt's Death Causes Short Sessions in Both Branches.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The death of Senator Colquitt, of Georgia, made yesterday's session of the senate a very brief one. The opening prayer was made by the Rev. Mr. Cauer of the M. E. church, of which the dead senator had been a member. The announcement of the death was made by Mr. Colquitt's colleague, Mr. Gordon, who referred briefly to the life-long friendship between them, in peace and in war, and who offered the usual resolutions of regret. A committee of nine was appointed, who arranged for the funeral, which took place from the senate chamber at 9 o'clock this morning.

House.

The answer of Secretary Herbert to the resolution asking for information respecting the imposition of a fine against the Carnegie-Phipp company for failure to furnish armor-plate in accordance with the terms of their contract, was laid before the house and referred to the committee on naval affairs. Several bills of minor importance were passed, and one giving 60 acres of land of the abandoned Fort Douglass reservation in Salt Lake City to the territory of Utah for university purposes. At 1 o'clock the senate resolutions announcing the death of Senator Colquitt were received and agreed to and the house adjourned.

Victory for the Sugar Trust.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—The decision of the United States circuit court in favor of the sugar trust in the proceedings brought by the government to have the trust declared void was affirmed in the United States court of appeals. The court decided that the case as presented does not show interference with interstate or foreign commerce. The case will be appealed by the government to the United States supreme court.

Herbert on the Carnegie Case.

WASHINGTON, March 27. — Secretary Herbert sent to Speaker Crisp a full statement of the discoveries which led to the imposition of a fine on the Carnegie Steel company for imperfect armor furnished for use on naval vessels under contract. The letter which was accompanied by a large number of documents was in accordance with Secretary Herbert's statement of the matter already published.

The Susie Martin Mystery.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Tu Shan, the Chinaman who was arrested on suspicion of having been implicated in the murder of 11-year-old Susie Martin, was taken to the Jefferson Market police court and was discharged on the request of the detectives. Sufficient evidence to hold him had not been found.

BIGGER AND DIRTIER

Changes in Coxey's Army Since Leaving Massillon.

Warm Weather Will Probably Swell the Ranks—Coxey Issues a Statement—Alliance Citizens Fear Trouble—The Rank and File Groaning Under Too Much Discipline.

LOUISVILLE, O., March 27.—Coxey's commonweal army spent the night here, where they pitched Camp Peffer. All was quiet at the camp.

A scheme to furnish the army with 15 or 20 gallons of bad whiskey has been set on foot in hopes that the soldiers may get drunk and break up the expedition before it gets beyond Alliance. Whether this scheme is carried out or not there is good prospect that trouble will be had within the next day or two. Many of the commonweal soldiers are murmuring against Marshal Smith, "the great unknown," who has shown an arrogant spirit in governing them. They threaten to turn on him and "kick all kinds of stuffing out of him."

The army is bigger and dirtier than it was when it left Massillon. Three or four days of warm weather would certainly swell it to large proportions. A bitter cold wind swept down the hills last night and the crusaders were lying like peas in a pod in the big tent, while outside were miserable looking wretches with blue and unshaven faces performing the duty of sentinels.

Commander Coxey has given out his reply to the letter written to him by Senator Stewart. He writes in part:

"I have seen your letter in the newspapers addressed 'General' Coxey. Allow me to inform you that I am not a general. I am simply the president of the J. S. Coxey Good Roads association of the United States, and ex-officio of the commonweal of Christ. The warfare of the silver men against gold and bonds under your leadership in the United States senate was magnificent.

"Morning dispatches state that even the president of the United States is engaged in a deal with Wall street to veto the Bland seigniorage bill in the sole interest of gold. So the die is cast. We shall march on peaceably and depend upon the outpouring of a peaceful public to defend us from Pinkertons, either as policemen, militiamen, United States soldiers or petty party politicians. This is a non-partisan movement, and he who is not with us is against us. There is no neutral ground, and a house divided against itself cannot stand is as true today as when originally uttered and used in the dark days of the civil war by Abraham Lincoln, the father of the legal tender. Following in his footsteps we seek to dethrone gold as our forefathers did King George in 1776 and once more have legal tender money, such as we would be if the two Coxey bills passed."

Fear Trouble at Alliance.

ALLIANCE, O., March 27.—The announcement that Coxey will leave his army here and go to Chicago on business causes considerable apprehension. It is feared that when the head of the movement departs the army may become unmanageable under Chief Marshal Brown, start a riot and loot the city. A large number of extra police will be sworn in. A mysterious woman has arrived. She says she will join the army. It is generally believed that she is the wife of "The Unknown."

Governor Pattison Losing No Sleep.

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 27.—The movements of Coxey's army does not cause Governor Pattison any loss of sleep. The affair is hardly given a thought.

He declares that he has evidence strong enough to send this lawmaker to Joliet, and that he will stare him on the road there this week.

Reduced to Assault and Battery.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Joseph Schultz, of Union Hill, N. J., was placed on trial recently in the Hudson county court on the charge of killing Frank Kreiger, secretary of a North Hudson socialistic club. The jury failed to agree. Schultz has been allowed to plead guilty to a charge of assault and battery, and was fined $50 and costs.

A Burly Negro's Revenge.

SALAMANCA, N. Y., March 27.—Paris green was placed in the food of the cows of Milkman H. L. Green, of this place, the other night by a burly negro who had formerly worked for Green, but was kicked off the place for insulting a member of the family. Twenty of the cows are dead and a posse is hunting for the miscreant.

Good Floor, Good Music, Good Supper, But Little Fun for the Dancers.

Sackcloth and ashes were thrown to the four winds last night, and the last of the assemblies was danced through with a certain show of spirit by those who had been eager for the close of the penitential season. It became painfully evident, however, early in the evening, that the elements of success, or at least some of them, were lacking. Last night's assembly was an excellent illustration of the undeniable fact that it takes something more than a good floor, good music and good supper to make a dance go off well and those who had come in moderately good spirits went away grumbling at the stupid time they had had.

Only one of the patronesses was present to receive the guests. The other five were kept away either by being in mourning or on account of illness in the family. Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, the sole social survivor of the six, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. William L. Saunders and Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, who were invited to help fill the vacancies of the absent patronesses. Mrs. Corlies was also asked to receive but was unable to do so on account of a death in her family.

Everything that could be done by the patronesses and Mr. Brooks, their willing helper, was done to make the affair a success. The purchase of many tickets by the youths who are spending their vacations from school and college in Plainfield made it possible to add materially to the menu of the supper which was excellent and whose dishes were well selected. These same youths did not seem to enjoy the dance very much for as far as anyone could see they did little else than sit in a row near the door and look extremely dejected. They cheered up a little about supper time however and did ample justice to the salads and ices.

The patronesses' end of the dancing room was fairly comfortable as there was some little attempt at fixing up some chairs and rugs and pillows that made the one bright spot in the room. There was no decoration or preparation of any kind in the reception room beyond placing a few stiff-backed chairs around the wall which presented an entirely dreary appearance. Perhaps one of the best criterions of the success of the dance was the constant apology that one heard on every hand from subscribers and their guests The usual form was something like this: "You must n't judge our dances by this one, you know: this is dreadfully stupid. I don't know why." Nobody did know but the fact remained.

There were many strange faces seen on the floor and many familiar ones missed from their accustomed places. And possibly the admixture of the strangers and the absence of the regular set had something to do with the dreariness of the occasion. The men and boys outnumbered the women two to one, so there was no lack of partners for the girls—and many had opportunities of dancing that are not accorded them every day.

One unpleasant feature of the evening was the freedom with which everyone interfered with the music. Elliott, although one of the best natured of men, acceded to requests as often as he could, but the demands were so various and persistent that it was entirely impossible to play what was asked for.

The effect of all this will be that those in the high places will have a written order of dance for the musicians who will be requested to play nothing but the original programme.

Taken altogether last night's dance was by far the stupidest one that has been given since last Summer, and everyone will join in saying: Let there be no more such solemn occasions as that of March 26.

Among those present were: Major and Mrs. Robert S. Burnett, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. George Evans, Mr. and Mrs. McQuaide, Mrs. Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Scott, the Misses Holly, Miss Erickson, Miss Whiton, John M. Whiton, Miss Gussie Murray, Miss Kathryn Yates, Miss Margaret Yates, Fred. Yates, Miss Walz, Frederic Walz, Miss Huntington, Howard Huntington, Miss Annie Murphy, Miss Maud Van Boskerck, Miss Lizzie Van Boskerck, George Van Boskerck, Thomas Van Boskerck, Edward Bloodgood, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brown, Mrs. Stewart, Walter Stewart, Percy Stewart, O. T. Waring, L. E. Waring, Mr. Patten, A. L. C. Marsh, Roger Erickson, Jules Erickson, H. C. Munger, John Pier Munn, E. F. Field, Dr. Ard, J. N. Moore, Edward Van Buren, Laurens Van Buren, James Stowell Anthony, Clifford McGee, Augustus Wadsworth, Mr. Adams of New York and Charles Spencer of Bergen Point.

THE MICROSCOPE.

A careful microscopical examination and chemical analysis of the urine, is a valuable aid in determining the nature of many chronic diseases, particularly those of the nervous system, blood, liver, kidneys, and bladder. These aids make it possible to treat such diseases successfully at a distance, without personal examination of the patient. Thus Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Inflammation of the Bladder, Gravel, and other Diseases of the Urinary Organs are successfully treated; Nervous Debility, Exhaustion, Dropsy, Liver Disease, and many other Chronic Maladies are cured without seeing the patient. Write for question blanks, treatise, and other information, describing case, and inclose 10 cents, in stamps, to pay postage.

FIRE RATES INCREASED.

And They May Go Higher, If the Department Horses Are Kept at Work Away from Headquarters.

Fire insurance rates on certain classes of property have been raised in Plainfield by the issuing of a rate card for Union and Bergen counties from the Underwriters' Association of the Middle Department

On frame dwellings the rate is to be 60 cents per hundred for three years instead of 40 cents. The contents of such buildings were formerly insured for the same price as the houses, but five cents more is now demanded, making the total increase 25 cents.

Brick dwellings have been raised from 35 to 40 cents, and brick churches from 75 cents to $1.20. Private brick houses are now 80 cents and frame barns $1.

The 80 per cent. co-insurance clause will hereafter be attached to all policies for business risks.

The Press has warned Plainfield property-owners that rates would be increased if the abuse of the department horses were continued, and it is quite likely that the present increase will be followed by another if this defect in the system is not speedily remedied.

A 50c ticket secures a diamond ring; a 35c. ticket a watch; a 25c. ticket a barrel of flour. Diamond ring and watch can be seen at Leggett's, where reserved seats are sold.

MANNER OF DISTRIBUTING GIFTS—Everyone buying a ticket receives a check with number—duplicate of same is placed in box. Between the 2d and 3d acts of the drama the boxes are brought before the audience and handed to some resident, who in turn selects some citizen to draw one ticket from each box. The first ticket deawn from the first box calls for diamond ring—the one holding corresponding number in the audience receives same; and the same plan is followed with each gift. The public will kindly remember that Mr. Benton or any of his company will not take any part in distributing of the gifts. It will be some citizen known to all. It is a fair competition, and some one of this city must receive the gift. T. H. BENTON, Manager.

THE EVILS OF SUNDAY CYCLING.

How the Man Thought it Was High Time to Get Out the Wheel, and How the Wheel Seemed to Think It Was Not.

The man told his wife Saturday night that in his opinion the backbone of Winter was broken, that we would have no more of snow and that the necessity of heavy overcoats and thick flannels was at an end. Not that there was anything novel or extraordinary about these conclusions, but just to show the trend of his thoughts which were further exploited in the statement that he must soon redeem his latent bicycle from the attic wherein it had hibernated throughout the length and breadth of snow and ice. Accordingly, Sunday afternoon, he climbed up to the lofty garret and hunted out the bicycle. The first sight of it was a sad one. Months had fled away since he had seen it last and its picture had strangely faded from his matter-of-fact eye and gone to his more imaginative brain there to be idealized and exalted beyond reason or compare.

Fancy had conceived a thing of faultless beauty, forgetting that the spokes were bent, the enamel chipped, the handlebars rusted and the brake broken. And it all came back in one cruel blow. The man yanked the wheel unkindly about and kicked at the pedals. They stuck and grated.

"Dust in the bearings"—he muttered. He twisted the handles to the accompaniment of a heart-rending squeak.

"Needs oil"—growled the man. Then, opening the little leather box, he pulled out the air-pump and got his fingers smeared all over with grease. The non-leaking patent oil-can had leaked on everything in the box and an old rag had to be found and the outfit dried. Then the air-pump was attached to the valve on the rear wheel and an attempt made to lure the outer ether into the rubber tire. The bicyclist pumped and pumped, and perspired and thought things but the tube remained deflated and but one conclusion was possible.

"Confounded tire's busted!"—mused the man. He tackled the front wheel with more encouragement. The tire puffed up and became hard and all the world seemed gay until the man removed the pump. Then followed a hissing rush of air like the sigh of a sad simoon and the listener choked down a whole vocabulary of appropriate sentiment and merely observed:

"Valve's gone, too."

He trundled the machine to the head of the garret stair, however, and, passing before it, lifted it gracefully under one arm and began the descent. First the front wheel flopped around and stuck in the banister and a stop was made to remove it thence. Then one of the pedals, turning, caught the happy man behind the knee and he clutched the banister for support. The machine was watching its chance and no sooner did it feel the man's hold relax than it coquettishly started downward on its own hook. The man made a wild grab for the departing property, lost his grip on the railing and the whole procession rolled in an indiscriminate heap into the hall below, and great was the drop thereof.

The family heard the clamor from afar and hastened to the scene, led on by the impassioned observations of the man under the wheel, which observations although both diverting and apropos must not be here repeated lest the circulation of the paper be imperiled.

Monday, when the attache appeared who comes around to attend the furnace, plant flower seeds, cut grass or burn leaves according to season, he was requested to convey the wheel down the rest of the way and take it to town to be manicured. The doctor says the man is doing as well as can be expected.

Republican Possibilities.

In conversation a day or two since, a prominent Republican suggested as a wise allotment of officers to be appointed by the incoming Board of Freeholders the following:

Director from Plainfield.
Attorney " "
Collector " Elizabeth.
Clerk " Rahway.
Engineer " Fanwood.
Road Inspector from Roselle.

"This, it seems to me"—he said—"would be a fair and just disposition of the offices, and would meet with general approval by our citizens and voters. As a citizen of Plainfield I naturally would prefer a larger portion for our city—though in justice to all I feel that the townships are entitled to some consideration."

OLD ONE-HORN ON DECK.

The Famous Relic Is to Be Awarded to Some G. A. R. Post.

The fair of Engine Company No. 2 began last evening in Central Hall. The preparations made by the many workers insure an Easter week of pleasure and profit to the firemen. The company has n't held a fair before since the fire department was organized, but the members know how to manage one just as well as if they had been in practice all that time. No music for dancing could be obtained last evening, but this feature of the fair is promised nightly for the rest of the week.

The decorations were of flags, fire lanterns and old pictures of firemen. Beneath the sign of welcome were a hat and two trumpets crossed with large flags on each side.

The donations from business men included: A. Saltzman, silver cake basket, gold lined; Fred W. Dunn, canned goods; Capt. William Hand, box of oranges; Vincent L. Frazee, barrel of flour; William J. Tunison, bale of hay and a bag of feed; Ulrich & Blatz, a ham; John M. Hetfield, ½ ton of coal; Charles H. Rugg, a ton; E. H. Holmes, a ton; Davis & Stevens, a ton; John Thickstun, ½ ton. A large and valuable Japanese vase was the gift of the Fitzgibbon & Crisp Company, of Trenton, the makers of the company's hose wagon.

The famous old one-horn cannon was there. It had been brought from the cellar of the engine house to the hall and gilded and lettered. The contest for it will be between the G. A. R. posts.

Theodore Smith sold 525 tickets of admission and thereby won a prize rubber coat and boots. Misses Carrie Drake, Gussie Newman and Laura Radin are contesting for a silver watch; and Misses Lottie Chamberlin, Mabel Benner and Mabel Smith for a gold ring with diamond setting. Frank Randolph and David Allen both want a single rubber suit. A regulation uniform is offered to the most popular of the six drivers in the city and borough.

The fair was directed by the following:

Commitee of Arrangements—Frank Hand, chairman; Bernard Rogers, treasurer; William Chamberlin, secretary; and W. S. Marsh, H. Connett, Charles Smith, Charles Newman, A. T. Marsh, Adolph Kahrman, James Dawe and Frank Schuck.

Those who had charge of the tables were:

Fancy Table—Mrs. W. C. Chamberlin, Mrs C. J. Newman and Miss Freda Sutherland.
Candy Table—Miss Spitznagel.
Musical Goods Table—Garrett Dreier.
Refreshment Table—Harry Connett and Aaron T. Marsh.

The present officers of the company are:

Foreman—R. B. Rogers.
First Assistant Foreman—C. W. Smith.
Second Assistant Foreman—Frank Hand.
Engineer—Frank Schuck.
First Assistant Engineer and Treasurer—C. J. Newman.
Secand Assistant Engineer and Secretary—Adolph Kahrman.

Not to the Lowest Bidder.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Your paper of the 22d inst. says: "Applications from Dr. J. H. Carman and Dr. Mattison were received for township physician, and after due consideration Dr. Carman was appointed. The salary is $150."

But, Mr. Editor, you failed to state, for the benefit of the people, that the proposal of Dr. Mattison was the lowest by $25, and that after "due consideration" they could have been actuated only from partisan motives or a desire to spend all of the people's money they could for the same returns. The difference in amount is not so large, but the percentage is considerable. Why the contract was awarded to the highest bidder instead of the lowest, those who pay the doctor must judge.

FAIR PLAY.

In Honor of the Daughters.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Schroder, who are to change their residence this week from Grove street to Washington avenue, last night entertained a number of their friends in honor of their daughters, Miss Jennie and Miss Zulie, in a most pleasing way. Guests were present from this city, Brooklyn and Rahway. Among them were Miss Adams from Brooklyn and Miss Roy from Rahway. Dancing was the principal feature of the evening. After a bountiful supper, in the early morning hours all regretfully bade their hostess goodnight, hoping for a speedy repetition of the event.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

—The Pough-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe of Red Men will be organized in Perseverance Lodge rooms tomorrow night at 8.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

THANK GOD FOR THE PAPISTS!

That Is, If the Union of Denominations at Communism Is Papacy.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—It is rather late in the day to carry on the discussion of "Common Communism", and it was not my intention to in any way intrude on your space to air my, perhaps by now wornout, views in regard to the suggestion made by "H. P. R." in your issue of Wednesday last. All who have really at heart the true progress of Christ's doctrine, "Brotherly Love", can do naught but bestow on "H. P. R" unstinted thanks for his attempt to, once a year, draw together all who profess membership in the one "Grand Brotherhood", in the most sacred of Christian duties—Holy Communion. But what Christians will think of the writer, using the nom de plume of "Truth", is hard for me to tell. Why she should so earnestly throw cold water on a suggestion—she thinks—laudable, is beyond my comprehension; neither can I appreciate the argument "That this union of the forces of the churches at the Lord's Table savors of Papacy." It is very difficult for me to comprehend how that should be. Rather, to me, it savors of sheer nonsense to talk in so stupid a strain. If the congregating of the various Christian denominations at the Lord's Supper, is Papacy, then thank God for the Papists. As to the numerous avowed Christians that would stay away on that pretence, I say, God forbid that I ever reach that stage of Christianity. But I do not think it is hard to see that "Truth" has not used your columns so much to protest against the Papacy (?) of "H. P. R." as to make a covert attack on the Episcopal Church. But "Truth" might have been truer, had she first learned whereof she was going. The warning of the English Presbyterian Church may have been timely, and it may not; of that, there is neither time nor space to talk about, neither is there, to discuss, as to whether the conclusions arrived at by Truth, in regard to 'St. Paul" is the only one for men to arrive at. But I do venture most humbly to remind Truth, that though we respect St. Paul and the English Presbyterian Church, in a manner becoming a Christian—if I may use the term—body, we must and do acknowledge the truisms of Christ before either. And we have direct from those precious lips, His sanction for our fast days. Our Ritual, it was used in the Temple, wherein Christ preached and taught daily, and never once does He utter one protest. So Truth will forgive if I ask, what right has "Truth" or any body of men to judge, where Christ never judged? In conclusion I would point out that Episcopal clergyman have exchanged pulpits, and preached in churches, other than of their own denomination, moreover it is generally admitted that we are most broad in our views, and our Communion table more free, even than the Presbyterian. But I 'm afraid it was not H. P. R's project that Truth wished to attack, but the P. E. Church, because how much better of mark would have been our Baptist and Plymouth Brethren, with their close Communion, than the Episcopal with its broad views and free table? I sincerely hope and trust that this question will come forward again next year, for we must recognize, that Christ says, "If he preach in my name, he is not against me, but with me". We have one common enemy to fight, one common standard to rally round, let us; as suggested by H. P. R. forget our differences, and show to the devil a united front and the victory is ours.

Amherst in Town.

An announcement was made some days ago of the entertainment to be given by the Amherst Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs in the Casino next week Thursday, April 5. More attention is given at Amherst than at most colleges to the cultivation of fine musical clubs. The result of this year's training has been such that Miss Ellen Terry's brother has engaged to take them on a trip abroad during this summer's vacation through England and Scotland, something entirely new for American college clubs. Their concert at the Casino is among the last of their Eastern trip in this country. After the concert a number of people will remain for the supper and dance which will begin as soon as the chairs can be cleared from the hall. Elliot of New York will furnish the music as for the Assemblies.

The tickets for the dance are in the hands of the patronesses. Concert tickets are on sale at Reynolds's and Leggett's Pharmacies, Martin's bicycle headquarters, and at the club. The general interest taken in the entertainment promises to make it one of the pleasantest successes of the Easter holidays, for which the committee may well thank the patronesses who have been so energetic in their efforts and at whose houses the clubs will be entertained while in town.

WHAT ARE THE "BLUES"?

Woman's Color is an Unfailing Thermometer.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

A woman's thermometer is her color. She is red with embarrassment or some deep emotion; she is white with fright; she is supposed to be green with envy; but when she is blue it means that she is sick.

It is not the fault of the woman if she has the blues and that "want-to-be-let-alone" feeling. It is the fault of her condition which makes happiness impossible.

No woman can be happy and light-hearted when painful female complaints crush out her life.

If she is melancholy, excitable, nervous, dizzy, or troubled with sleeplessness or fainting spells, they are symptoms of serious female weakness.

A leaf out of the experience of Mrs. Anna Miller, who lives at Duhring, Pa., shows that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure that terrible weakness and bearing-down pain in the abdomen, the dizziness in the head, the feeling of irritability, and loss of appetite.

"I can highly recommend your Vegetable Compound," she writes, "for all female complaints. It's my greatest friend."

EASTER.

Brightly breaks the morning
O'er the earth so fair.
Birds their sweet songs singing,
Flowers are everywhere.

Hark, the angel voices,
In the choirs on high,
Singing Alleluia—
Let earth to Heaven reply.

Alleluia, honor,
To Him all glory be,
Who came to earth so meekly
And shed His blood for me.

Let the round world be joyful,
Let mortals sweetly sing,
For Christ the Lord is risen,
And reigns at last as King.

REAL-ESTATE MARKET.

Hand & McIntyre have sold to Wm. S. Crook two lots on South avenue, on which Mr. Crook will erect a fine house.

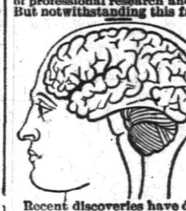
MYSTERIES!

The Nervous System the Seat of Life and Mind. Recent Wonderful Discoveries.

No mystery has ever compared with that of human life. It has been the leading subject of professional research and study in all ages. But notwithstanding this fact it is not generally known that the seat of life is located in the upper part of the spinal cord, near the base of the brain, and so sensitive is this portion of the nervous system that even the prick of a needle will cause instant death.



Recent discoveries have demonstrated that all the organs of the body are under the control of the nerve centers, located in or near the base of the brain, and that when these are deranged the organs which they supply with nerve fluid are also deranged. When it is remembered that a serious injury to the spinal cord will cause paralysis of the body below the injured point, because the nerve force is prevented by the injury from reaching the paralyzed portion, it will be understood how the derangement of the nerve centers will cause the derangement of the various organs which they supply with nerve force

Two-thirds of chronic diseases are due to the imperfect action of the nerve centers at the base of the brain, not from a derangement primarily originating in the organ itself. The great mistake of physicians in treating these diseases is that they treat the organ rather than the nerve centers which are the cause of the trouble.

DR. FRANKLIN MILES, the celebrated specialist, has profoundly studied this subject for over 20 years, and has made many important discoveries in connection with it, chief among them being the facts contained in the above statement, and that the ordinary methods of treatment are wrong. All headache, dizziness, dullness, confusion, pressure, blues, mania, melancholy, insanity, epilepsy, St. Vitus' dance, etc., are nervous diseases no matter how caused. The wonderful success of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is due to the fact that it is based on the foregoing principle.

DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE NERVINE is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by DR. MILES MEDICAL CO., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It contains neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

A Decided Bear Movement

CHAPTER IV.

It was but a few moments after this that the tall figure of Miss Huntingdon tripped up the steps of the Empire bank into the office of Grierson & Co., bankers and brokers. Not finding the senior partner in, she was ushered into his private room to wait for him.

Miss Huntingdon, too, knew how the market was falling. Carlotta was now at 84. She heard a man in the outer office say, "There will be nothing left of Carlotta by night." Miss Huntingdon drummed nervously on the desk with her fingers and bit her lip. Her face, far from expressing the satisfaction Grierson would expect to see there, was pale and anxious. All night long she had fought her battle. Wavering between her purpose and the feeling she experienced for Delafield—for the truth had been forced upon her that she loved him—she had worn the long night through. The woman in her had triumphed—love had gained the fight.

But what now did love avail? The blow was struck. She read the news in the later papers with a sick heart. Grierson was doing his work. Delafield would be ruined. Ruined? Was there no way to save him, even now? She must see Grierson!

And now she was waiting, oh, so anxiously. If there were any way to save Delafield, she was determined that no effort on her part should be spared, but the utter hopelessness of inducing Grierson to see matters in any other light maddened her. Why should he change when now everything was going his way? What if——

Grierson came in.

"Ah, Miss Huntingdon, you are the identical person I want to see. Been waiting long? Carlotta is now at 80, and you will have your wish fulfilled in a very short time. Delafield is on the ragged edge. His loans have been called, and he has been given until 2 o'clock to meet the advances on his stock. What little money he has outside of his Carlotta shares is tied up, and even that would not suffice him. We caught him just at the right time. All the morning I have been forcing the stock down by floating the shares in small lots at a time. Just as quietly I have been buying them back. Delafield can't help himself, he can't get any money now, and he will go down. By tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock he will not have enough money to buy half a dozen shares of Carlotta if he wanted them, for Carlotta will be on its feet again, and the work will be done.

"And now, Miss Huntingdon," continued the man of stocks, lowering his voice and speaking more slowly, "I have something to say to you on a very important subject—to me. You will, I am sure, pardon the time and place, for what I am going to say must be said now. In short, my dear Miss Huntingdon, I wish to make you an offer of marriage. I have long admired you, and I feel confident that you would make me a charming wife. We have much the same tastes and have always pulled together famously. Your attitude toward me has been such as to embolden me to ask you to become my wife. I am a practical man of business, and I may not propose in the conventional lover's fashion, but I am sincere. I offer you a handsome fortune, position and an honest love."

"I am a practical man of business."

The banker stopped, and leaning forward looked eagerly down into the young woman's face. What he saw there did not please him, for her expression of astonishment was succeeded by one of impatience.

"Mr. Grierson, I cannot," said she, quickly rising and facing him.

"Why not?" he asked, for a moment disconcerted, but thinking only that he had been too abrupt, too confident.

"For the simplest of all reasons, Mr. Grierson," she returned petulantly, "I do not love you. Really, I am surprised that you should take this time to speak of such a thing. I did not come down here to listen to proposals of marriage. I came to"—— "Go on," quietly urged Grierson, a cunning light creeping to his beady eyes.

"I regret that you have broached this subject, Mr. Grierson." Miss Huntingdon replaced her wrap about her shoulders and began moving toward the door. Grierson saw her bite her lip in vexation and fancied he detected a suspicious moisture in her eyes. "It is of no use," she was thinking; "he would never forego the deal now."

"One moment, Miss Huntingdon," said the banker, with what struck her as a tantalizing inflection in his voice, "I have a word to add. I have been thinking of the ruin you propose to bring upon Mr. Delafield. Mr. Delafield has never injured me."

Miss Huntingdon started. A singular light came into the eyes partly hidden by the long lashes.

"Do you mean to say that you decline to carry out that part of the contract?" she asked.

"I fear I shall have to decline."

"You will save him?"

"I think so."

"How?"

"By furnishing him the means with which to pull through."

It was plain to Miss Huntingdon that Mr. Grierson's act was one of petty spite. He did not say to her in words, "You will not marry me, and I will not do your bidding," but the cause of his refusal to carry out that part of their agreement was as evident to her as if he had spoken it in words. Concealing her pleasure at the unexpected turn of affairs, she cast a glance at him in which she concentrated all that would still further irritate his wounded pride.

"It is no more than I might have expected from such as you," she said, "but you dare not do what you threaten."

"You shall see," said the banker quietly.

"And you shall see," she replied defiantly. Turning upon him another contemptuous glance, she swept out of the room.

"H'm!" muttered Mr. Grierson. "A clear case. She loves that man, and doubtless he has jilted her. Nothing but his ruin will satisfy her. Ten to one before this time tomorrow she will have dropped the principal part of her fortune."

CHAPTER V.

At 9 o'clock that evening, when Mr. James Delafield entered his carriage, with a few words to the driver, he was in a very different frame of mind from that in which we last saw him. At the close of the market that day Carlotta was moving upward again, almost as readily as it had fallen. At the very moment when he had given up everything for lost he had received, to his great astonishment, a note from Mr. Grierson, insisting on his immediate presence at the Empire bank if he wanted help. Once in Grierson's sanctum, an immense sum of money had been pressed upon the young man, despite his protestations. It made him able to meet his loans, make good all his obligations, hold on to his stock, and thus save his fortune. Grierson controlled the market and knew that at 3 o'clock the next day Delafield, safe from harm, would be again in his office to repay that loan. The man of stocks had kept his word.

Mr. Delafield had gone through so much during the last few hours that he was somewhat dazed and had not even stopped to reason about the matter when he received an urgent note from Miss Huntingdon requesting him to come at once to the house on Sixty-first street. He found Miss Huntingdon waiting for him in the drawing room, and he perceived that her manner was hesitant and nervous as she bade him be seated.

"No doubt, Mr. Delafield," she began, "you are surprised at so summary a request to come here tonight."

"None the less at your service, however, Miss Huntingdon."

The young woman bowed. Delafield was a little taken aback at the abruptness of the question, "Have you a brother, Mr. Delafield?"

"I had a brother," he replied, with a slight frown, as if the recollection were not altogether pleasant. "He is dead."

"Was that his name?" she queried, holding a yellow and creased paper before him.

Delafield looked carefully at the words written on it. He took the paper from her hand and moved nearer the light. "Why, yes, that was his name—Junius Delafield."

Miss Huntingdon caught her breath quickly and eagerly asked, "Are you sure that the name is not 'James Delafield,' your name?"

"Quite sure. The name was evidently written by one whose hand trembled, for the 'u' is almost closed, resembling an 'a,' and the 'i' not being dotted and the last two letters slurred gives the name the appearance of something else—'James,' as you suggest. But the name is 'Junius.' What does all this mean?" turning suddenly. "What has this to do with my brother or myself?"

"Mr. Delafield, did you know my father, Silas Huntingdon?" not heeding his questions.

"No. But I believe I understand now." Delafield was a trifle embarrassed. "You are thinking, I believe, of my unfortunate brother's connection with your father's affairs."

Miss Huntingdon shook her head sadly, saying, "Then I have done you a great wrong." She bowed her head and hid her face in her hands. Delafield looked at her perplexedly. "Mr. Delafield," she continued, lifting her head, but not meeting his eyes, "the name on that paper was written by my father a few moments before his death, when, his voice failing him, he took that means to let me know the name of the one who had figured so cruelly in his story of disgrace. Through all these years I have believed that you were the man who—your brother. It was through my influence that you were so nearly ruined in the street today. That was to have been my vengeance. That the scheme failed does not matter," she concluded wearily. "The intention was mine."

He took the paper from her hand and moved nearer the light.

"Miss Huntingdon," said Delafield, looking reproachfully at the woman before him, "you struck a serious blow, which came near doing its work."

"I thought you deserved it," she said, bowing her head.

"I was saved by kindly assistance at the critical moment."

"You were saved by the petty spite of the man who saved you."

"How so?" asked Delafield, startled.

It was no easy matter for Miss Huntingdon to give the story of the plot, her altered intentions, the banker's proposition of marriage, the manner of her permitting him to think that Delafield's escape from ruin would be a disappointment to her. Little by little he drew it from her. And when she had revealed all she dropped her head on her bosom. It was then she first realized her transgression. Presently she looked up at him through tears to see how bitterly he condemned her.

Then, with a sudden and full appreciation of the situation, and recognizing himself the master of it, Mr. James Delafield made a decided bear movement, the second that had been made in New York that day.

After a few very blissful moments Miss Huntingdon asked, with an odd little expression of doubt, "Are you sure I stand as high in your esteem as before my—my"——

"My dear Helen," interrupted he, "you are away above par!"

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. We invite all sufferers from whatever cause to call at our office, No. 105 Halsey street, Newark, where Dr. Starkweather is in attendance daily to give examination and advice entirely free of charge. It matters not what the disease, or how many years you have suffered, in spite of means adopted in your behalf, a visit to this office and the privileges of the same will cost you nothing, and may be the means of saving your life. We prepare all our medicines and prescribe the remedies indicated. This plan enables the patient to receive directly from us such remedies as will produce the results promised.

Our office is open daily from 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Sundays 4 to 6 p. m.

ASK THEM Why?

Ask the men who are making imitations of COTTOLENE, the new vegetable shortening, why they give up lard and try to trade on the merits of COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess why.

ASK HIM Why?

Ask the grocer who attempts substitution, why he tries to sell an imitation when people call for that pure, palatable and popular vegetable shortening, COTTOLENE? Perhaps you can guess.

ASK YOURSELF Why?

Why should not YOU use COTTOLENE, instead of lard or any other compound, for all cooking purposes? It has the highest possible endorsement; from Physicians as to healthfulness; from Cooking Experts as to superiority; from housekeepers as to economy. Use COTTOLENE and stick to it.

LEADER OF A BAD LOT

Minister Thurston's Opinion of Davies.

A Professional Mischief Maker and Schemer Against the Hawaiian Provisional Government—Davies and His Fellow-Royalists Liable to Be Run Over by the Car of Progress.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Mr. Thurston, the Hawaiin minister, was asked if he had anything to say regarding the published remarks of Theophilus H. Davies, in which occurred declarations to the effect that the provisional government are "adventurers," that they are maintaining "a reign of terror" in Honolulu, that the community is at the mercy of a lot of spies and broken-down Germans and Portuguese, and in which he describes its "utter weakness" and denies that it is about to establish a permanent republic. Mr. Thurston replied:

"I don't know that there is much that needs to be said. After the report by Mr. Willis to the president, that the members of the provisional government are without exception men of integrity and public spirit, and that the royalists, of whom Mr. Davies is a leader, are a bad lot, it does not seem necessary to make a reply to every man who can get himself interviewed. This person is what may be called a 'professional mischief maker.' He has for years been the head and front of an unreasoning anti-American, British faction in Honolulu, and, although he has become a rich man through the bounty of the United States by means of the reciprocity treaty, he is always ready to go out of his way to oppose and injure the advancement of American interests in Hawaii. Only a couple of months prior to the revolution in Honolulu he wrote a series of letters to the papers opposing the establishment of a United States naval station at Pearl Harbor under any conditions, the reason, among others, that it would become a nest of 'criminals,' 'burglars,' 'defaulters' and 'smugglers,' who would sally out and prey upon the surrounding country. He was so proud of this correspondence that he had it printed in pamphlet form and sent it around broadcast.

"He has been spending three or four months in Hawaii, making the most frantic efforts to stir up strife and overthrow the provisional government. He has utterly failed and is now renewing his efforts here. The law providing for the deportation of dangerous persons and suspicious characters who are attempting to overthrow the government, was provided for just such men as Davies.

"As to the reign of terror, it exists only among the royalists of the Davies stripe, who are gradually realizing the terrible fact that the monarchy and its perquisites have gone forever.

"Davies prophecies that no republican government will be formed. The provisional government has a most exasperating habit, however, of failing to fulfill royalist prophecies. Amid all this talk the government had gone quietly about its business, paid its debts, accumulated a larger treasury surplus than there has been for years, kept the peace, and is now proceeding with deliberation and dignity to establish a republic by calling a constitutional convention, in the selection of which all voters, foreign and native, are to be allowed equal voice, the one condition being the renunciation of allegiance to the monarchy and an oath of support to the republic.

"Davies and those who think we should again put our necks under the heel of Lilioukalani claim that the choice as between a republic and the monarchy should be put to vote. We do not propose to do anything of the kind, however. That question has been settled by arms, and we do not propose to reopen it for discussion any more than the United States opened the question of state's rights and slavery after the war had settled those questions. The monarchy is a thing of the past. The people of the islands are looking forward to a living republic, and not backward to a dead monarchy, and they will overcome all obstacles and achieve their object. Mr. Davies and his fellow-royalists have planted themselves in the road in front of the car of progress. If they do not get out of the way the car will run over them, that is all."

No Woman Lawyers for Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., March 28.—Belva A. Lockwood, the Washington female attorney, applied to qualify to practice law in the circuit court of Henrico county. Judge Wellford denied the application, holding that it was against all precedents for a woman to practice in the courts of the commonwealth. He subsequently agreed to take the matter under consideration. Two sessions of the Virginia legislature have refused to pass a bill allowing women to practice in the state courts.

NEW YORK TOWN ELECTIONS

Result at Saratoga, Little Falls and at Other Places.

SARATOGA, N. Y., March 28.—The charter election here resulted in the re-election of a democratic president. The board of trustees which was unanimously democratic last year will now have one republican member.

WILLIAMS BRIDGE, March 28.—The election in the town of Westchester resulted in a victory for the democratic ticket.

CATSKILL, March 28.—At the Catskill charter election the democrats elected their candidate for village trustee for the first time in nine years. The balance of the ticket was divided, and, for the most part, very close.

LITTLE FALLS, March 28.—The annual charter election here resulted in a complete victory for the republicans. Giving them control of the village government. The total vote was the largest ever polled here.

YONKERS, March 28.—John G. Peene, republican, was elected mayor of this city. He received 2,941 votes against 2,734 cast for J. K. Bangs, the democratic candidate.

TREASURY GOLD DECLINING.

Uncle Sam's Reserve Getting Down Near the $100,000,000 Mark.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—United States Treasurer Morgan has begun the preparation of the interest checks—aggregating $5,500,000—to be sent out on March 31 in payment of the quarterly interest on government bonds. All checks in payment of interests are payable in gold, and as seven-eighths of these checks pass through banks, treasury officials expect, with the April interest payment, to lose considerable gold.

Some of the Boston banks that subscribed to the recent issue of bonds have been gradually recouping themselves by presenting legal tenders for gold.

Heavy payments on account of war vessels in the course of construction on the Pacific coast have also had the effect of reducing the gold holdings in the treasury, as all payments on the Pacific coast are made in gold. The net gold now aggregates $106,040,000, a loss of $1,500,000 since the bond issue, not taking into account the gold received from customs in the ordinary course of business.

The Flag Case Dismissed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 28.—Judge William K. Townsend, in the United States district court, has handed down a decision in the long contested American flag case of Henry A. Boman, of New York city, against Walter de Grauw and others, of New York, to permanently enjoin defendants from using a patent method of stitching stars on the field of the American flag, two stars being sewed each on opposite sides at the same time. Judge Townsend finds that the principle involved in the patent is old and therefore ordered the bill dismissed.

Peck Murder Mystery.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 28.—Two deputy sheriffs are still working on the murder case of Robert S. Peck, who was shot in West Hartford on the night of March 10, but all apparent clues have been exhausted. The mystery surrounding the murder corresponds to that connected with another murder in West Hartford twenty years ago. A farmer named Thompson was called from his house one night and clubbed to death in his door yard. The murderers were never discovered.

Their Request Refused.

ALBANY, March 28.—Governor Flower has denied the request of a committee from Staten Island to authorize the attorney general to conduct the prosecution of election violations in Richmond county. He told them that the district attorney is the man designated by law for that duty, but if he was not fit for the work or they believed they had charges against him that would warrant his removal he was willing to hear them.

Money for Pensions.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The secretary of the interior has made a requisition on the secretary of the treasury for $10,225,000 for the quarterly payment of pensions on April 4, to be paid out, among others, at the following agencies: Pittsburg, Pa., $1,450,000; Concord, N. H., $600,000; Buffalo, N. Y., $1,500,000; Boston, Mass., $225,000.

Big Rolling Mill Starts Up.

CLEVELAND, March 28.—The Cleveland Rolling Mill company's booth mill at Newburg, which has been idle since last December on account of a lack of orders, has just started up with a full force of 100 men on orders which it will take six months to turn out.

"Next."

PITTSBURG, March 28.—The annual convention of the National Barbers' association is in session in Association hall. The objects of the association are the creation of a union beneficial to employer and employe alike. Strikes are disapproved and arbitration strongly favored.

Elizabeth Halliday Murder Case.

ALBANY, March 28.—Justice Edwards has granted an order that the sheriff of Sullivan county subpoena witnesses and allow counsel to look into the minutes of the grand jury which indicted Elizabeth Halliday for the murder of her husband and others.

McKane's Accounts.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., March 28.—According to the report submitted to the board of audit for the town of Gravesend by John Y. McKane's blind son the town is indebted to his father in the sum of $7,680.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The new modus vivendi covering the sealing season in Behring sea is still hanging fire.

TOO TAME FOR SOME

No New Sensations in the Pollard Suit.

When the Colonel Takes the Stand, However, Which He Will To-day or To-morrow, Then the Proceedings May Suit the Taste of the Most Morbid Cravings—Expert Evidence.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Developments in the now famous Pollard-Breckinridge case this week have not been up to the tastes of the sensation lovers, but the silver-haired defendant is yet to be heard and then the most morbid of cravings may be satiated. He will probably take the stand to-day or to-morrow.

Expert testimony to prove that Madeline Pollard made the advances which resulted in the long liason between Col. Breckinridge and herself was the feature of the suit all day yesterday. A letter dated at Wesleyan college, July 20, 1884, addressed to Col. Breckinridge and signed Madeline V. Pollard, was produced by the defense, and experts who had compared it with letters acknowledged to have been written by Miss Pollard, testified that the handwriting in the first letter was that of the person who wrote the others.

When the July letter was shown Miss Pollard on the stand she pronounced it a forgery. She said she had written Col. Breckinridge in July, 1884, seeking his advice about the threat made by James C. Rodes, but that she had not asked him to call on her.

The defense claims that the letter dated July 20 was written by Miss Pollard when Col. Breckinridge had not answered the letter she acknowledges writing. The disputed letter was not put in evidence, but it is known that it contains an invitation to Col. Breckinridge to call on the alleged writer at Wesleyan college, and compliments him on his "nice face."

The only other witness was Major W. G. Moore, the chief of Washington's police force, who denied statements Miss Pollard said had been made by Col. Breckinridge and herself in his office on two occasions in May, 1893, when Col. Breckinridge promised to marry the plaintiff.

WILL HE EVER HANG?

Indications That Prendergast Will Not Die on April 6.

CHICAGO, March 28.—It is altogether unlikely that Prendergast, the murderer of Mayor Carter Harrison, will hang on his birthday, April 6th, the date to which the execution was postponed by Judge Chetlain, when he was granted leave for lunacy proceedings at the now celebrated midnight session of Thursday last.

In court a postponement until 2 o'clock on Thursday, April 5th, was granted on application of the state attorney, and, as it is admitted by both sides that the proceedings will occupy anywhere from one to two weeks, it will be necessary at that time for the court to set still another day for the execution, contingent, of course, on the probability of the jury finding that the prisoner is in his right mind.

The grounds advanced by the state in favor of the delay were that A. S. Trude, who assisted as private counsel in the original trial of the assassin, is in Florida, and that one of the principal expert witnesses for the state is compelled to leave town to perform an operation and will be unable to return for a week or more.

Counsel for the defense opposed the delay and intimated that the employment of private counsel would lay good grounds for reversible error.

Prendergast himself interrupted the proceedings two or three times, claiming that the state attorney was acting in bad faith in seeking delay.

The state was desirous that an adjournment should be had until 1 o'clock of the day now set for the execution, but the court decided upon 2 o'clock of the day before.

WILL NOT SURRENDER THEM.

Portugal Refuses Brazil's Demand for Da Gama and Others.

RIO JANEIRO, March 28.—The government of Portugal has replied to the demand of President Peixoto for the surrender of the insurgent refugees who sought an asylum on their vessels after the surrender in Rio harbor.

Portugal refuses to surrender them. It maintains that to comply with the demand of the Brazilian government would be contrary to the principles of humanity and opposed to all precedents of international law established in similar cases.

A private meeting of deputies elected to congress was held and a proposition to enact a tariff law against Portugal, in which the duties would be so onerous as to practically amount to a reprisal, was discussed and met with favor.

THE HOUSE DEAD-LOCK.

O'Neill-Joy Election Case Still Delaying Work.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Somewhat to the surprise of republicans themselves the question of considering the resolutions of the O'Neill-Joy contested election case was antagonized by the minority of the house when they were called up after the morning hour by Mr. Patterson (dem., Tenn.) in charge of the case for the majority of the committee. So the entire day was spent in futile efforts to secure a quorum of democratic votes—the fourth day that has been spent in that way. At 4:10 Mr. Patterson, satisfied that no quorum could be obtained, moved an adjournment, which was agreed to, he stating that the case would be called up and pressed to the exclusion of other business until disposed of.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

A mission is opened to the Plainfield Fire Underwriters Association. The Press told yesterday of the increase of rates proposed on Plainfield insurance, and the association of home agents, knowing how much better is Plainfield's fire protection than the protection in other cities with whose rates Plainfield is classed, should use every effort to secure a reduction for Plainfield to the former figure. The taxpayers of Plainfield annually save the insurance companies heavy losses by the superior equipment and work of the fire department, and this fact should receive the consideration it merits.

Frank A. Munsey is a literary revolutionizer. He reduced the price of his high-grade popular pictorial, Munsey's Magazine, to 10 cents, and made it the wonder and admiration of lovers of good literature. It is the most sumptuous and the cheapest magazine in the world. But hat is only a beginning. Now he has transformed his famous weekly story-paper, The Argosy, into a monthly, and issues it in improved and augmented magazine form, at 10 cents a copy. This is double the value for half the money. The greatest show on earth outside of Barnum's is this literary twin—Munsey's and The Argosy. The name of Munsey's is destined to be perpetuated in American households just as widely as that of Barnum, and its fame will be more enduring because of the higher plane of its achievements.

Sorely Yours, John T. Dunn.

[From The Elizabeth Herald.]

The storm that has been raised by the recommendation of John L. Hetfield for Postmaster of Plainfield, is not disturbing the serenity of Congressman Dunn. He says he has no doubt that the Department will appoint Hetfield, but if it does not, he will make no other recommendation for that office. He says he believes Hetfield is a proper man for the place and thinks his appointment will strengthen the Democratic party in Plainfield by its freedom from faction influences.

STEVENS ACQUITTED.

And King Is Held for the Grand Jury on a Diminished Charge.

George Stevens and Thomas King, charged with atrocious assault upon Harry Witters with intent to kill, were tried by Justice Mosher last night. Stevens was discharged and King was released on bail to appear before the Grand Jury for assault and battery. Jackson & Angleman represented the plaintiff and W. B. Codington the defendants.

Testimony for the State was given by Harry Witters, Charles Johnson, Samuel Kriney, Charles Randolph, John Wenzel, Fried Saums, Minard Britton and Herbert Pound.

According to their testimony Witters was called from Brittin's billiard parlors, Evona, the afternoon of March 20. He was immediately set upon by King who threatened to kill him. Witters tried to run back into the parlors but was prevented by Stevens who evidently wished the boy to receive further punishment. King struck the boy severely with a club and was again assisted by Stevens, who dragged Witters out of Brittin's. Chief Grant testified to the boy's black eye and bruised head and said that Charles Johnson had given him the club shown in court as the one King had used.

In defence Stevens was examined. He admitted that King had threatened to kill but had no intention of carrying out his threat. King had simply tried to force Witters to take back damaging statements made concerning King's sisters. Witters's injuries were slight. The witness had kept Witters from seeking refuge in the hotel because he desired no disturbance within, and had himself taken the club from King. He had accompanied King because it had been reported that Witters carried a revolver.

Walter Manning supported Stevens's statements.

Lawyer Codington in summing up said that Stevens had acted as a peacemaker and the absurd charge against him should be dismissed. No evidence had been presented that King had intended to kill Witters if an apology was refused. Murder was not usually committed with a rotten chestnut fence rail weighing a pound and a quarter. He asked that King be held on a charge of assault and battery.

Lawyer Angleman said the evidence had proved that King had threatened to kill the boy and that Stevens had been an active accomplice. The charge of atrocious assault with intent to kill had been sustained by the evidence.

Justice Mosher dismissed Stevens and held King for the Grand Jury in $200 bail for assault and battery.

Methodist Mission Work.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. Church held an annual meeting in Vincent Chapel yesterday afternoon. Mrs. I. W. Hyde presided. Very satisfactory reports of the work accomplished during the year were read by Mrs. N. W. Pike, Recording Secretary; Mr. J. W. Jackson, Treasurer; and Mrs. C. E. Horne, Corresponding Secretary. The treasurer's report showed that $485.82, including the value of supplies, had been raised during the year.

Bought Things "Sight Unseen".

Grace M. E. Church was well filled with young people last evening, and the clipping sociable of the Ladies Aid Society was a pleasant and profitable success.

Mrs. John H. Carney, who was in charge of the affair, and Mrs. H. F. Randolph, Mrs. W. H. Griffen, Mrs. E. J. Winckler, Mrs. Annie Most and Mrs. L. A. Hummer stood by long lines of suspended packages and clipped one off as each ten-cent piece was presented.

The contents of the parcels were generally of a most unexpected nature, but the amusement which invariably followed purchases made matters satisfactory. A sufficient number of boxes of lunch had been mingled with other articles, and the friendly division of the eatables was an enjoyable feature.

Distasteful to the Conservatives.

An old parishioner of Grace P. E Church writes to the New York Evening Post as follows:

"The result of the Easter elections in Grace Church caused much surprise. Many of the older members of the congregation criticise the election methods resorted to by the younger men in the interest of ritualistic practices, which they assert are distasteful to the conservative element that has been and is the main support of the church."

England Won.

The debate under the auspices of the Boys Branch of the Y. M. C. A. last evening was decided by Rev. W. E Honeyman. The question — "Resolved, that England is a better place of residence than France"—was settled in the affirmative.

—The contest over the will of Catharine Craig has been been begun in Elizabeth, and the subscribing witnesses examined. Craig A. Marsh is for the will, and R. V. Lindabury against it.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O.

His Plainfield patrons are delighted with his work, and cordially commend him as a capable artist and honorable business man. Communications for Mr. King may be left at Randolph's drug store.

Minnie Lester All Next Week.

"Nothing so success-ful as success." This old saying seems to hold particularly good in the case of Minnie Lester, who begins an engagement of six nights and a matinee, in Music Hall next Monday evening, in the very funny comedy-drama "A Little Busy Body". Miss Lester has met with unbounded success ever since her initial performance. She has danced herself into the hearts of the people and has become a fixed favorite. The reason is not hard to find. A good show at reasonable prices. Something that the people can go and see three or four times a week and not feel that they are robbing themselves. This is what the people want and will liberally support when it is furnished them. Miss Lester with her new music, funny comedians, famous orchestra, beautiful scenery and company of artists will undoubtedly do a big week's business all next week.

The New York Sun says: "Minnie Lester's acting is so modest and unassuming that she is one of the most pleasing of American actresses. Her dancing is unique and has never before been surpassed for grace and beauty in this city, while the extremely modest arrangement of her dresses makes her fascinating efforts absolutely devoid of all suggestiveness save the innocent frolic of a child".

Plucky Press Carrier.

John James, a Press carrier of Evona, had two fingers and part of a third accidentally cut off by a hatchet in the hands of his brother William. He ran to Dr. Simpson, who dressed the injured hand. The boy's first thoughts on waking this morning were not of his own condition. He asked his mother if his pet crow had been fed.

—Sundogs and a zenith rainbow excited the curious at 4 this afternoon.

To build up both solid flesh and strength after grip, pneumonia, fevers and other prostrating diseases, there is nothing to equal Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

PROSTRATION FOLLOWING GRIP.

MRS. GARRETT.

Mrs. REUBEN GARRETT, King George C. H., Va., writes: "I was taken with grip which finally resulted in pneumonia. Was prostrated for three months. Had a terrible cough and was emaciated and very weak. Was fast drifting into "quick consumption." The doctor gave me medicines all the time. I grew weaker. He advised cod liver oil emulsion. I took two bottles of it without any relief. I had pain in my left shoulder and back. I wrote you, and you prescribed your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took only one bottle before I felt better. After two bottles I could sit up, and felt I had been saved from the grave. I increased rapidly in flesh and strength."

The members of Winfield Scott Post accepted an invitation to be present at No. 2's fair, and when the meeting adjourned they attended in a body.

To Elect Later.

A meeting of the officers and teachers of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school at the home of J. W. Murray last night was attended by 40. Various Sunday-school matters were discussed but the evening was spent in a social rather than a business way. The time of the Sunday-school session will remain as at present. An election of officers will be held at the call of the President.

If you have bad breath, sluggish bowels, pain in the small of your back, nervousness or giddiness, your vital organs are sadly out of condition. A mere 'dose of physic" will not help you. Your only wise course is to take Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., and cleanse your system of the impurities. It regulates the liver and kidneys. It's the physicians' spring medicine.

GRAY HAIR has a beauty of its own, but a BALD PATE——that is different! Now it may not be possible in every case to prevent baldness, but a test of fifteen years goes to show that PETROLEUM HAIR TONIC is almost an absolute specific for baldness, falling hair and dandruff. Originated, made and sold only at REYNOLDS'S PHARMACY, Park and North avenues.

Recruits from Ohio.

HAMILTON, O., March 28.—About 50 recruits to the Coxey commonweal army are camped at the gravel pit south of this city. Lew Evans, their leader, claims residence at Evansville, Ind., and says that they will endeavor to meet Commander Coxey at Economy, Pa. The crowd appear above the ordinary "hoboes" in dress and are all rampant advocates of Coxey's schemes. They have some provisions with them and say that they have supplies coming. A detachment from Lockland, O., will join Evans and his crowd near Middletown.

The Texas Mob Enjoined.

El Paso, Tex., March 28.—The army of unemployed under Gen. Fry, got away from here, after breaking a switch lock in order to sidetrack a train to secure passage. The train was stopped at Findlay, 71 miles out, and an injunction granted by District Judge Buckler to restrain the army from interfering with the railroad was served. This order was executed by Capt. Hughes, of the rangers, and the army moved on to Sierra Blanc, where it is now.

A Coxey Enthusiast Stabs His Wife.

VAN WERT, O., March 28.—Nelson Harbauer, of this town, fatally stabbed his wife as the result of a domestic quarrel, which began last Wednesday because Mrs. Harbauer had refused to give her consent to her husband's proposition to join the commonweal army. Mrs. Harbauer was stabbed in the left breast and cannot possibly recover. Harbauer was arrested.

Sweeter, Never Heard.

Concerning the talent to appear for the Y. M. C. A. in the Casino Friday night, the Harrisburg Telegraph says:

"The concert of the Schumann Lady Quartette, in the First Baptist Church, was one of the finest musical entertainments ever given in Harrisburg. The singing of the quartette was simply marvelous. Sweeter, stronger, more musical voices were never heard in this city, and the audience was charmed and delighted. From the opening number, 'Loin du Bae' given with remarkable precision and sweetness, to the closing 'Slumber Song' the quartettee sang eechantingly. Those who were not there missed a rare musical treat."

The funeral services of the late Mrs. F A. Kinch, who died at her residence on Broad street last Friday afternoon, were held yesterday afternoon at 2. Rev. N. W. Cadwell officiated. The interment was in Fairview Cemetery.

At the meeting held in Cranford to discuss the sewage matter it was decided by Cranford and Rahway committees to defer further action until after the joint meeting of Westfield, Cranford and Linden, which will be held in April.

The Westfield Club held one of their semi-monthly sociables in the club-house Monday evening. The club-house was filled to its utmost capacity with people. The hall was handsomely decorated with lilies and palms, and the women were arrayed in their prettiest. Dancing was the feature of the evening, and was indulged in until a late hour.

Dunellen and New Market.

Officer Corsa was in town yesterday with another batch of warrants, for coal pickers.

John Peters, Jr., returned home last evening after a two-days visit in New York city.

Mrs. Michael Gallagher presented her husband with a bouncing baby boy yesterday morning. Michael says it's another Democratic voter.

The coming borough election is the all-absorbing topic of conversation among those interested, and the discussions become very warm in some quarters.

A citizen of the borough, who attended the school meeting, told some of those present that if Mr. Wilcox was elected trustee he would give them a spread. The promise was kept and last evening a pleasant time was passed at Maier's Hotel, although the decision of the County Superintendent changed the result.

A man by the name of Hyser, a painter and paperhanger by trade, was hired by one of our business men to do some work at the home of Rev. Frank Fletcher, New Market, yesterday. The man, it is claimed, went to work under the influence of liquor and became so noisy and troublesome that Mr. Fletcher was forced to send him away from his house.

County Superintendent Willis, of New Brunswick, before whom the decision in regard to the election of the trustee, at the recent school meeting, was submitted, has decided that Frank Wyncoop was elected instead of Fred Wilcox. Mr. Wyncoop says that he will not accept. If that is the case, the Superintendent will be obliged to appoint someone to fill the vacancy.

There are, on an average, between 30 and 40 tramps, who make a practice of loafing around the tank house, on the Jersey Central, and sometimes these fellows become very troublesome. Yesterday afternoon when the usual crowd was present, one of the employes at the tanks secured a handful of cayenne pepper, and dropped it in the stove. The scene was an exciting one, for the fellows did not stay long. The joke will probably have a good effect.

The Schubert Musical Club, of Dunellen, gave their third dance of the season in Friendship Hall, New Market, last evening. It was a delightful affair and the ladies deserve much credit for the charming way in which they entertained their guests. Mrs. J. H. Buckley of of Plainfield is the efficient leader of the club and the members are: Miss Nelson, Miss Smith, Mrs. J. H. Buckley, first violins; Miss Davis, second violin; Miss Irene Day, cornetist; Miss Fisher, flute; Mrs. VanEps, trombone; Miss Ella Boice, accompanist; Miss Phillips, triangle; Miss M. Benton, 'cello. An elaborate supper was served during the evening, and it was nearly 4 this morning when the last number on the programme was finished.

Scotch Plains.

Miss Minnie P. Buckley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Buckley, of North avenue, met with a serious accident while visiting relatives in Scotch Plains. A few friends called at the house, and Miss Buckley gave a very pretty dance. Becoming exhausted, she fell to the floor, and fractured her right leg. Everything that can, is being done for her comfort and speedy recovery.

HYMENEAL.

Windham—Herold.

Miss Josie Herold, of Brooklyn, was married to Henry Windham, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, yesterday afternoon.

The wedding took place in St. Joseph's Church rectory, Rev. Father Miller officiating. The bride was given away by her father, Gottfried Herold, once in business in Plainfield and a foreman of Warren Engine Company. The best men were Gottfried Herold, Jr., and Griston Weston, of Brooklyn; and the bridesmaids Miss Louisa Windham, a sister of the groom, and Miss Clara Herold, a sister of the bride, both of Brooklyn. The bride was dressed in white with wreath and veil. Miss Windham wore white silk and Miss Herold light blue cloth. The three carried bouquets. A little niece of the groom strewed flowers before the party.

The reception in the Arlington in the evening was attended by over three hundred. Twenty-eight Foresters marched into the dining-room in a body and presented a huge bouquet of roses to the bride. After supper had been served at 9 dancing to the music of N. J. Guttman's orchestra began, lasting until 2 this morning. Several selections were rendered by a quintette composed of J. C. Martin, R. W. Schlereth, H. L. Spencer, E. C. Searing and Elias Southard.

Among the many wedding gifts were furniture for a dining room from Augustus Windham of New York, and a hand-carved bed room suit from Jos. Blatz.

The out of town guests included Dr. Phelan and wife and Joseph Phelan, Gottfried Herold, Jr., and the Misses Sutton of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. Windham, August Weston, Miss Annie Wolff, A. Dilanger and Nettie Herman of New York; Mrs. C. Stiegold, of Trenton; and Joe Herold of Rahway.

Feminine Finery.

Strangers in Plainfield remark the native beauty and stylish costuming of the women. The good looks are natural, but for the excellence in dress the good taste and experience of Mrs. Adams are largely responsible. Mrs. Adams is now supplying her patrons with the latest in dress patterns and millinery, and is winning high praise as ever for her artistic triumphs in the line of feminine finery.

What Will Do It.

Medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

COXEY'S ARMY GROWS

A Number of Recruits Accepted at Alliance.

Supplies Also Received—First Long Tramp of the Band of Weary Walkers—Weather Still Cold and Cutting—Coxey Leaves for Chicago—Movements of the Coming Recruits.

Alliance, O., March 29.—This point was reached by the commonweal army after a march of 14 miles over very rough and muddy roads. The third day out from Massillon was as unpleasant as any of its predecessors. Cold, cutting winds and an occasional snow flurry prevailed till dark. Camp Peffer at Louisville, O., was deserted at 9 o'clock by the army of peace. With three cheers for the mayor the column swung off on its first long tramp. Curious people gaped at the freaky procession as it passed through the country. At Maximo a short stop was made and mile further on the column halted for lunch.

When the college settlement at Mount Union, on the outskirts of Alliance was reached, the gaping crowds began to thicken.

From that point to the location of Camp Bunker Hill, at the Alliance fair grounds, people flocked out to see the odd cavalcade pass by. Tents were raised and the shivering, thinly clad citizens of the communes gathered wood for fires. By the time supper rations were distributed things were comfortable.

Alliance is the most enthusiastic town yet reached. Many sympathizers with the movement live here. Supplies to the amount of half a car load came in. A load of hay for the stock was included. The street railways ran excursion cars to the scene every 15 minutes.

As evening came on recruits began to come in and Adjutant Smith soon had 75 new men on the rolls. This makes the column 184 strong. The new men are somewhat better appearing than their predecessors.

At 4 o'clock a public meeting was held in the opera house of the town. Commander Coxey spoke to an immense house and was followed by Chief Marshal Carl Browne. Another meeting was held later in the evening.

The Independent church, a body of free thinkers, offered their building as sleeping quarters, but it was declined by Marshal Browne.

A very hostile disposition is noticeable in the camp. It is aimed at the correspondents accompanying the expedition. The men claim that they have been mercilessly abused and want revenge.

It has been learned from a prominent state militia man that the feeling at the state capitol has entirely changed and some insecurity is now felt. The fear of the state officials is that the army may be set upon by disorderly elements in some of the towns to be passed through. For that reason a letter has been written to the captains of all companies along the route. No order to keep arms is given, but the letter advises the officers to have the men ready for muster.

At 5 o'clock last night Commander Coxey left for Massilon, his home, thence to go by a later train to Chicago to attend a stock sale at the Union stock yards. He denies that the trip has anything to do with his financial difficulties. He says he will rejoin the command at Columbiana Thursday.

"IT'S FOOLISH—CHILDISH."

Senator Peffer's Opinion of the Coxey Crusade.

Washington, March 28.—"Oh, it's foolish—childish," remarked Senator Peffer, when asked about Coxey's army. "I have advised against it from the first," he continued, "and have written letters and in speeches pointed out that no object could be attained by any such haphazard movement as this. It is no spontaneous uprising and organization like the Farmer's alliance. Coxey is a horse trader, horse racer and a gambler to start with, and it is not presumed that he could bring about him the men who would be necessary to give weight to such a movement.

"I believe in organization, but there is nothing in this movement that commends itself to the judgment of those who desire to stand up and fight for men and women. This is, of course, one of peace, and I do not anticipate that it will cause any trouble, but the authorities cannot but prepare to see that no breaches of the peace are committed.

"I do not think I have had such a hearty laugh for months as I did when I read in the dispatches that the army had rested one night at 'Camp Peffer.' I could not believe that I was to be so honored, as I have discouraged the movement from the first."

STUDENT TAYLOR'S CASE.

He Must Stay in Jail Until He Purges Himself of Contempt.

Watkins, N. Y., March 28.—Judge Smith has rendered his decision in the habeas corpus case of F. L. Taylor, the Cornell student, who was sent to jail by Judge Forbes for contempt. The prisoner is remanded to the sheriff of Tompkins county under the commitment upon which he is now committed.

The decision is an exhaustive one, and closes by saying that the contempt for which Taylor is now imprisoned is for not answering the questions put to him, or rather for making his only answer: "I throw myself upon my privilege." If he shall appear before the grand jury at its next meeting and there make answer to the questions which have been asked him, or make oath that the answer to such questions will tend to criminate him, he may then claim his privilege and will have purged himself of the contempt for which he now stands committed.

Defaming a Reform Mayor.

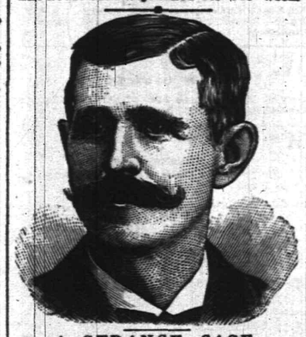
Point Pleasant City, N. J., March 28.—Since the recent election Mayor Lawrence D. Vannote has been greatly annoyed over the distribution of certain abusive circulars throughout the city. He was elected upon the reform ticket, and made a clean sweep of all the offices. On Sunday morning circulars headed "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" were found pinned on every door, and since then hundreds of them have been received by citizens. The circular declares that the people who voted for Vannote, a rum-seller, are no better than he is. Mr. Vannote says the circular was written by a woman, a relative of whom he discharged. The mayor will ask the grand jury to indict her.

Is She a Double Murderess?

Racine, Wis., March 28.—Mrs. Margaret Mayer, who is in jail here waiting to be tried for the murder of her husband, Herman Groanke, last August, probably poisoned her eight-year-old adopted child, who died suddenly previous to the death of her husband. The child's body has been exhumed and sufficient arsenic was found in the stomach to justify the belief that the child had been poisoned also. Mrs. Mayer was arrested in Brooklyn, N. Y., three weeks ago, having gone there after her marriage last January. Her trial will take place next month.

New Jersey Legislature.

Trenton, N. J., The house passed the new Essex and Hudson freeholder bill despite many objections made by the democrats and also the bill abolishing the Newark and Jersey City boards of street and water commissioners. Mr. Salinger, of Hudson, introduced a bill legislating out of office all city district court judges in the state and another bill was put in taking the appointment of such judges out of the hands of the governor and vesting it in the joint meeting of legislature. The house then adjourned for the week.



A STRANGE CASE.

How an Enemy was Foiled.

The following graphic statement will be read with intense interest: "I cannot describe the numb, creepy sensation that existed in my arms, hands and legs. I had to rub and beat those parts until they were sore, to overcome in a measure the dead feeling that had taken possession of them. In addition, I had a strange weakness in my back and around my waist, together with an indescribable 'gone' feeling in my stomach. Physicians said it was creeping paralysis, from which, according to their universal conclusion, there is no relief. Once it fastens upon a person, they say, it continues its insidious progress until it reaches a vital point and the sufferer dies. Such was my prospect. I had been doctoring a year and a half steadily, but with no particular benefit, when I saw an advertisement of Dr Miles' Restorative Nervine, procured a bottle and began using it. Marvelous as it may seem, but a few days had passed before every bit of that creepy feeling had left me, and there has not been even the slightest indication of its return. I now feel as well as I ever did, and have gained ten pounds in weight, though I had run down from 170 to 157. Four others have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine on my recommendation, and it has been as satisfactory in their cases as in mine."—James Kane, La Rue, O.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles for $5, express prepaid. It is free from opiates or dangerous drugs.

A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.

THEY ALL SAY THE SAME.

Don't Hesitate, but Call and Be Convinced That Every Statement We Make Is True.

To those who do not already know that there is established in Newark, at 105 Halsey street, a physician who stands in the foremost rank of his profession, who is indorsed by the leading colleges of the country and who can prove by witnesses right here in Newark (not by one, but by hundreds) that he has succeeded in curing cases that have been utterly given up by other physicians, and good ones, too. To those who do not these facts we state that any person, rich or poor, old or young, is welcome here and receive examination and advice free of charge.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. No matter how difficult the case, no matter how much of the physician's time it may consume, the diagnosis will not only be thorough, it will be absolutely free. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

DR. STARKWEATHER.

There is not a penny to pay for the fullest medical advice. Dr. Starkweather is a graduate of the Berkshire Medical College, Massachusetts, and of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia; endorsed also by the College of Physicians and Surgeons and Bellevue Medical College of New York. MISS POLLARD'S LIFE

Painted Very Black By Breckinridge Witnesses.

If the Evidence of Two Men is True She Began a Wayward Career Before She Met the Defendant—Filthy and Disgusting Testimony—Breckinridge to Take the Stand To-day.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Col. Breckinridge will take the stand to-day to testify in his own behalf against the accusations of Madeline Pollard. Yesterday several witnesses for the defense were examined and nearly all the remaining depositions were read leaving only a few of the latter to be disposed of. When the reading of the depositions is concluded, Col. Breckinridge, his attorneys said this morning, will take the stand and they are confident that he will make a good impression.

The testimony introduced by the defense yesterday was sensational. Part of it was very vulgar, even indecent in the language used by deponents. Two men, whose depositions were read, deposed that they had met Madeline Pollard at a house of questionable character in Lexington a year before Col. Breckinridge became acquainted with her, and that she was known as "Jim Rodes' girl." Both said that the alleged Miss Pollard conducted herself like any woman of the town, although they did not use that term to express themselves. One of these men is a butcher, the other a janitor.

Rankin Rossell, the young man to whom Miss Pollard was engaged while at Wesleyan college during the period of her illicit relations with Col. Breckinridge and while the contract to marry or pay back old man Rodes' money was in existence, was placed on the witness stand and testified that he had held Miss Pollard on his lap for hours at a time in the parlor and the library of the college after they became engaged, and that she asked him to take her to Chicago with him and she actually packed her trunk for that purpose.

At the close of Mr. Rosselle's testimony, which was the last verbal testimony given, the reading of depositions was begun, that of Hiram Kaufman being read first. Miss Pollard got up and left the court room at this point, and it was well she did, for the testimony that followed was probably the most indelicate ever heard in a court room.

Kaufman is a butcher, 30 years old, and lives in Lexington. He said that Miss Pollard had made advances towards him twelve years ago, but he rejected them on account of his friendship toward Rodes with whom he was associated at the insane asylum near Lexington.

On cross-examination Kaufman said he had seen Rodes give Madeline Pollard $25. Rodes had presented him to Miss Pollard saying: "Let me introduce you to my girl, Miss Pollard." He had also seen another girl at the questionable house where he met Miss Pollard. She was called "Little Lena," and he had been there with Rodes, Bryant, a man named Shindlebauer, "a fellow from Texas," and others.

The witness said he had not gone back to the house because he had a quarrel with "the Pollard woman," as he called her and he went on to tell in all its disgusting details a conversation between them that out-Billingsgated Billingsgate and in which Miss Pollard is represented as using language that is hard to credit when compared to her refined manner and appearance. Kaufman said he had seen the Pollard woman frequently at the house referred to.

John A. Brant deposed that he met Madeline Pollard at the house of Jim Rodes where Lena Singleton acted as his housekeeper. The house was a bad resort. He went to the house with Rodes and Miss Pollard dodged him, said the deponent, meaning that she would not meet him. She appeared then, in 1883, to be a full grown woman. Lena Singleton, said Brant, was Jim Rode's girl. Brant testified that he had taken Miss Pollard riding three or four times. He was a married man at the time. Brant said the woman he knew at Lena Singleton's as Madeline Pollard was about five feet high or less. Miss Pollard is much taller than this. Brant was asked if he had had illicit relations with the young woman but he said he thought he shouldn't be compelled to answer that question and he was not forced to answer it.

The car crashed into the heavy fenders and Miss McCrea was thrown violently against a mirror receiving an ugly gash in the face. She soon recovered under a physicians care.

KOSSUTH'S FUNERAL

Final Tribute to the Great Hungarian Patriot.

TURIN, March 29.—The body of Louis Kossuth was removed to the Evangelical church, where the funeral took place at 9 o'clock a. m. Accompanying the body to the church were a civic guard of honor and a squadron of the municipal guards of Turin. The church was insufficient to hold a fiftieth part of those desiring admission, and only the chief representatives of the Hungarian delegations and the leading representatives of foreign nations were able to gain admittance, and in every case there was cheerful acquiescence in the decision of the committee of arrangements as to who should be admitted and who excluded. When the services began, promptly at 9 o'clock, the church was filled to the limit of its capacity. Surrounding the coffin was a body of Hungarian students in the costume of their country, and in the seats immediately behind the bier were the sons, sister and nephews of the dead hero. Next in order of precedence were the prefect and the mayor of Turin, a number of Italian officials, and civilians from various parts of the country. The funeral oration was delivered by the pastor of the church, M. Peyrot, the Evangelical preacher who was present at the bedside of Kossuth when he died. The pastor pronounced a touching eulogy of the dead patriot's life, character and services, speaking in the Italian language, after which the choir sang a choral hymn and an anthem, the former written by Luther and the latter by Palestrina.

ELMIRA REFORMATORY.

The Managers Have a Secret Conference With Gov. Flower.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 29.—Governor Flower held a lengthy secret conference at the executive chamber with four of the five managers of the state reformatory at Elmira. The manager absent was J. B. Bathbone, who is in the south. The managers present were President Dr. W. C. Wey, M. H. Arnot, L. Swartwood and W. H. Peters. Supt. Brockway, his counsel, John B. Stanchfield, R. A. Farrelly, Mr. Eggleston and Isaac White, representing a New York paper, awaited the result of the conference in an anteroom. Mr. Brockway stated to a newspaper reporter that the report credited to Commissioner Litchfield of the investigating committee was an infernal outrage, the conclusions reached not being warranted by the facts. He thought the memorial presented to the legislature by the reformatory managers was a complete refutation of the charges. At the conclusion of the conference neither the managers nor the governor would submit to interviews, and had nothing to say.

Chancellor Russell.

BALTIMORE, March 29.—It is rumored in Catholic circles that Cardinal Gibbons has selected Rev. W. T. Russell of Hyattsville, Md., as chancellor of this archdiocese to succeed Rev. C. F. Thomas. Father Thomas is to be rector of the cathedral parish in place of Rev. P. J. Donahue, who will be consecrated bishop of Wheeling on April 8. The new chancellor is said to be eminently qualified for the important post to which he is to be appointed. He is a polished orator, and a deep student. He delivered the panegyric on Ireland's patron saint at St. Patrick's church, Baltimore, on the 17th of March. The appointment of Father Russell will be likely to meet with general approval in lay and clerical circles.

New Netherland Hotel Troubles.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The struggle for the possession of the New Netherland hotel is not yet finished. Although Gen. Earle gave up the hotel he still asserts that he will begin suit against the millionaire proprietor. "Mr. Astor's actions are inexplicable," said Gen. Earle. "I don't intend to stand any such treatment. My contract with Mr. Astor has been broken by him in several instances. His representative, Mr. Peabody, misled me in regard to the time of some of the payments. I shall sue as soon as possible. I don't despair of regaining possession of the hotel."

Baseball Contracts.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The trouble between Rusie and Farrell and the New York baseball club has been partially settled, and there is every indication that the matter will be entirely adjusted before another week. Rusie was induced to sign a contract in Indianapolis by John T. Brush, who telegraphed to Treasurer Talcott stating that he found Rusie in harmony and full sympathy with the management. He is expected to report the latter part of the week. Treasurer Talcott says that he expects that he will receive Farrell's signed contract before next Saturday.

The Behring Sea Matter.

LONDON, March 29.—It is stated upon good authority that the earl of Kimberley's explanation of the situation given to United States Ambassador Bayard at their interview concerning the carrying out of the findings of the Behring sea court of arbitration was entirely satisfactory. AN ENORMOUS CROWD

Greets Gov. McKinley at Minneapolis.

Narrow Escape From a Disastrous Panic at the Great Exposition Hall Where the Governor Spoke—People Wedged in an Entrance While Others Walked on Their Heads.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., March 29.—The visit of Gov. McKinley to Minneapolis nearly revived the scenes when the national republican convention was held here. The hotels were thronged throughout the day with visitors, and local enthusiasm had been thoroughly excited so that tickets of admission to the Exposition hall last evening commanded prices that would have been astonishing if Patti were to sing.

The occasion of Gov. McKinley's presence was his agreement to address the annual meeting of the state league of republican clubs.

Exposition hall was packed almost to suffocation long before the distinguished Ohioian made his appearance and there was a narrow escape from a disastrous panic at the meeting. About 3,000 people attempted to wedge themselves into a single entrance at the same time and the crush was frightful. Cries of "help" and "police" were heard and a squad of mounted police charged on the crowd. They were powerless, however, and many women fainted before order was restored.

Some people were so frightened that they walked at least fifty feet on the heads and shoulders of the crowd. For a time it looked as though the republican day of rejoicing would be turned into terrible disaster. Finally order was restored and it was then discovered that at least twenty persons were bruised, a number of women had fainted, but no one had been seriously injured.

CHINESE TREATY REPORTED.

No Opposition in Committee, But the Fight Expected in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—It was the unexpected that happened in executive session of the senate yesterday afternoon. The general impression was when the meeting of the committee on foreign relations adjourned shortly after noon, that no action had been agreed upon in relation to the Chinese treaty. Nevertheless, when the senate subsequently met in executive session the treaty was favorably reported to the senate without amendment and went to the executive calendar.

Mr. Dolph, of Oregon, was the only member of the committee opposed to the terms of the treaty, but considerable antagonism will be found among senators not on the committee. Final action will not be speedy as numerous amendments will be offered, the Pacific coast senators being determined to secure, if possible, the expunging of the debtor clause in regard to merchants.

Mr. Call called up the nomination made in connection with Florida appointments, upon which he proposes to wage war, but a call of the senate showing that no quorum was present, Mr. Call permitted the nominations to go over until Friday.

Coxey Enlists a Doctor.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Gen. Coxey gained a new recruit while here. Dr. J. A. McLeay of Waterford, Ont., who bought Coxey's horses, declared he had been converted by the "General," and that he would join the army of the commonweal. Coxey made him surgeon-general on the spot, and Dr. McLeay will attend to the physical needs of the army during the march to Washington. Louis Smith, the unknown, who has had command of the troops during Coxey's absence, is said to be C. A. Karl, who made himself prominent a year ago by advocating the rights of workingmen. Whether Karl is the man or not Coxey does not care, but as he is an enemy of interest-bearing bonds he is acceptable to the leader of the commonweal army.

To Encourage Home Building.

BOSTON, March 29.—Each year for several years John M. Berry has petitioned the legislature for a state loan of $3,000,000 to encourage home building associations among the poor. The labor committee, with one dissenting member, have decided to report a bill authorizing the state to issue a loan for the amount of $500,000 for this purpose. The same committee, with two dissenting members, reported a bill making nine hours a legal day's work in all corporations except railroad and express companies.

AGAINST VACCINATION.

Interesting Remarks By Dr. John Pickering in Boston.

BOSTON, March 29.—At a hearing on the anti-vaccination bill before the legislative committee on the subject, Dr. John Pickering, F. R. G. S., F. S. S., F. S. A., of London, took the floor against the practice of vaccination. In the course of a long speech he said: "Smallpox has been continued among us for 200 years by the practice of inoculation and vaccination. The tendency of epidemic is to die out, and the smallpox would have died out long ago, like the plague 'Black Death,' if it had not been for vaccination. The only protection from disease is to create a people and surround them with high sanitary conditions, and not use specifics for the cure of disease.

"All remedies should be general and not particular in their character. General cleanliness is the only preventive of zymotic influences. If such a condition prevails, nothing will be left upon which fever can feed. The fever groud of diseases should be sanitary in character. In this way the poisonous matter in the system, which causes disease, is killed, drained off through the skin and rendered harmless."

Dr. Pickering offered to cure any case of smallpox in a few hours by killing the fever.

TOO RITUALISTIC.

Rector Wattson's Congregation Object to Roman Church Ceremonials.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 29.—Because of the inclination of Rector Lewis T. Wattson to be too ritualistic and his free use of high church ceremonials, C. D. Bruyn, president of the Ulster county bank; E. D. Mulford, a retired merchant, and John S. Heiser refused re-election as vestrymen of St. John's Episcopal church at the Easter elections. This church is the most fashionable in the city. Rector Wattson preached during lent a course of sermons on such subjects as "Why I am an American Catholic," "Why I teach and practice confession." This caused considerable comment. He uses the confession box and on Easter Sunday the altar was lighted with many candles. A number of the congregation have since quietly expressed their disapproval of his action.

It is thought the conservative element will withdraw from St. John's unless Rector Wattson ceases to pattern after many of the ceremonials of the Roman Catholic church.

NARROWLY ESCAPED LYNCHING

Chicago Police Saved the Life of Letter Carrier Clifford's Assassin.

CHICAGO, March 29.—The terrible tragedy enacted yesterday at Clark and Madison streets, in which William L. Clifford, a letter carrier was mortally shot by a sub-letter carrier, named Guy T. Olmstead, proves to be a parallel case to the celebrated Freda Ward-Alice Mitchell murder at Memphis. Clifford passed Olmstead at the corner mentioned and the latter immediately turned around, drew a revolver from his hip pocket and fired. Clifford fell to the sidewalk with a bullet wound in his head. Olmstead then, standing over his unconscious victim fired two more shots into his body. A crowd quickly gathered and preparations were being made to lynch the assassin when the patrol wagon arrived and quickly conducted Olmstead to the station house.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., March 29.—Judge McClean has discharged from prison, under a writ of habeas corpus, Amos Carbaugh and Philip Wagaman, who were charged with having killed Jacob W. Wagaman in the South mountains last June. They were arrested on the testimony of Alfred Wagaman, who is now in jail as an accessory. Monday Alfred swore to the court that his original story, that Carbaugh had choked Wagaman to death while Philip looked on, was true. Later he went on the stand and confessed that he had perjured himself and that he had been induced to do it by some of his neighbors.

GEN. COXEY'S CRUSADE

Progress of His Band of Wandering Willies.

Recruits Steadily Coming In—The Army Camps Last Night at East Salem—New Regulation Regarding Food Distribution—"The Unknown" and That Mysterious Woman.

SALEM, O., March 29.—Camp Anna L. Diggs, the fourth night bivouac of the Coxey bridge, was established on the Hampson circus lot, East Salem, last night. The entrance of the shivering clans of Coxey was a marked event in the history of Salem. When the army decamped from Alliance in the morning curious crowds assembled along the Patterson road to the town's edge to see the novel cavalcade. At Beloit and Damascus, villages along the route, the country people had congregated to see it.

The halt for a dinner of bread and cold boiled eggs occurred after leaving Beloit.

The roads were very rough and muddy, and the tramping troops had a weary look. When nearing Salem about thirty citizens of the commonweal, who had gone ahead by freight train, joined the column. Eager people lined Main and Broadway streets to the camping place. Just after the army had formed the customary circle a penetrating wind carrying snow began to blow.

Marshal Browne announced that the troops would be quartered in two halls secured by local sympatizers. Therefore only the headquarters tent was raised. Mayor Northrup, populist, was on hand. He announced that 20 police would be on duty and that a watch would be placed over sleeping quarters to guard the men. Supper was served at dusk, being eaten by the men around blazing campfires in the open air.

At 7 o'clock the command was marshaled and proceeded to sleeping quarters.

A few new recruits were enlisted at this point, Acting Adjutant Kirkland stating the records showed 20. Enough rations to do for one day were donated by sympathetic citizens.

Chief of the Commissary Pfrimmer announced a new order for distribution of rations. Tickets will be given each group marshal for himself and men. These must be presented to the distributing commissary officer to secure the issue of rations.

At 7:30 a public meeting was held in Howe's hall. It was crowed by 1,200 people, who applauded Marshal Browne frequently.

General order No. 6, issued before the meeting, announces that Camp Trenton will be established at Columbia to-day. The route will be via Leetonia, leaving Salem at 9:30 and stopping at Leetonia for a hot lunch served by friends. A rousing reception is expected at Columbiana as it is a strongly favorable community. Commander Coxey will rejoin there.

Frank R. Mills, representative of the United Trades council, of Beaver Falls, Pa., is making arrangements for an enthusiastic reception. A local paper of East Liverpool, O., a pottery town, announces that 600 men will leave there Saturday morning to join the commonweal at Beaver Falls. The men are striking potters.

Considerable curiosity is still felt among correspondents over the identity of Marshal Louis Smith, adjutant of the command, who has been called "The Unknown." All efforts to ascertain it have been fruitless. Additional mystery is caused by the visit to each town along the route of his wife. She registers at hotels as Mrs. W. H. Brown, but is never seen outside her room except heavily veiled.

The army numbers approximately 175 to-day, and is gradually increasing. No complaints of depredations other than begging have been made along the route.

Dr. Paxton's Explanation.

NEW YORK, March 29.—The board of health yesterday decided that the explanation made by Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton regarding his failure to record within the required time the secret marriage of Col. Breckinridge and Mrs. Wing was unsatisfactory. The attorney of the department was instructed to bring suit against Dr. Paxton. The health commissioners recommend a bill which will be introduced in the legislature by Senator Wolf, making it a misdemeanor, punishable by fine and imprisonment, to fail to report a marriage within the required time.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

The City of Plainfield owes it to the Y. M. C. A. to extend Watchung avenue as far as the brook, and redeem the extension from its existing squalid tenement condition, regardless of what the Township of North Plainfield does concerning the continuation of the thoroughfare beyond the brook.

Every good citizen has an important duty before him, and that is too boost the bill to secure sewers for Plainfield. The High School mansion project will keep, but the festering cesspool nuisance is a menace to Plainfield's growth that too long has been trifled with. The future good health and growth of the city depend on the quick coming of a sanitary sewerage system.

AGAINST SLOT MACHINES.

Mayor Gilbert Determined to Abolish Local Gambling Devices.

His attention having been drawn to the matter by the police reports, Mayor Gilbert has issued the following:

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE.
Plainfield, N. J., March 27, 1894.

To Whom It May Concern:

It having come to my kkowledge that certain parties, in violation of the laws of the State, and the Ordinances of the City, are keeping and operating in their stores or places of business to which the public resort, a certain device, or devices, by which unlawful games of chance and hazard are played, I hereby warn such parties of my intention to cause the strict enforcement of the law against all who shall after the receipt of this notice, continue the use and operation of said device or devices.

Any machine, or device, in or on account of which money is deposited, or otherwise paid, or advanced, with the object of winning or securing prizes of money, candy, cigars, or other articles is in its essence a gambling or lottery device and is prohibited by law.

Besides the penalty of a fine or imprisonment, at the discretion of the Court, the State law authorizes the confiscation of the furniture and implements unlawfully employed as aforesaid. A. GILBERT,
Mayor.

This action of the Mayor is to be commended by all law-abiding citizens, and offenders will save trouble by removing the devices from their shops without further notice.

Plenty of Pleasing Specialties.

Among the many strong features of the Minnie Lester company, which begins a week's engagement in Music Hall next Monday, none is more prominent than the specialties introduced by Miss Lester and the members of her company. Banjo playing, graceful dancing, quartette singing, solos, etc., added to Miss Lester's own singing and dancing, go to make up a strong programme of specialties in addition to the production of a high class comedy drama. "A Little Busy Body" is pronounced a realistic reproduction of Southern life, having all the truthfulness of Mrs. Stowe's brilliant and immortal work without the serious side so fully displayed. Special scenery, showing the Mississippi river by moonlight, is carried by the company, and is a scene never to be forgotten.

The Baltimore Sun says: "'A Little Busybody' is of the light order of those comprising the repertoire of Lotta and Maggie Mitchell, but serves well as a vehicle to display the peculiar style of acting of this bewitching little lady. She is an artist in every sense of the word, and her charming personality draws all hearts to her from the moment she puts her foot on the stage. She has an expressive, childlike face, slender, girlish figure, and an unaffected simplicity of manner that eminently fits her to appear to the best advantage as the little dancing girl of the play."

The Schumann Lady Quartette will be assisted tomorrow evening by Miss Shoemaker of Chicago, who excels as a singing reader and Delsartean.

The Pittsburg Despatch says: "The Schumann Lady Quartette of Chicago was the attraction at Carnegie's Music Hall. They appeared before a large assemblage and enraptured the audience completely. Their beautiful blending tones, their clear articulation, combined with delicate shading seemed to leave nothing to be desired except to hear them again and again. The voices of the four ladies are unusually harmonious and they sing together with perfect expression."

CURES OTHERS

MRS. J. H. LANSING, of South Glen's Falls, Saratoga County, N. Y., writes: "After my third child was born, I barely gained strength enough in two year's time, so as to be able to crawl about to accomplish the little house work that I had to do, and that only by lying down to rest many times each day; had sick headache very often, many pains and aches all the time. After I had taken one bottle of your 'Favorite Prescription' I could see a great change in my strength and less sick headaches. Continued taking the medicine until I had taken seven bottles of the 'Favorite' and one of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I am now able to do housework for myself and husband and two children aged nine and five. I also take dressmaking, and enjoy walking a mile at a time, when I can have the time to do so. And I am sure it is all due to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as I know I was failing fast before I commenced to take it."

JOHN T. DUNN GROWS ANGRY.

And Candidate Hetfield and His Lawyer Go to Washington to Hurry up the Appointment.

WASHINGTON, March 28—John M. Hetfield, who has been recommended by Representative Dunn for postmaster of Plainfield, is in the city today accompanied by his backer, Judge Coddington. The trio went to the Postoffice Department today to see why the Postmaster-General had not acted on Mr. Dunn's recommendation, and they learned that the opposition to Mr. Hetfield's appointment had been so great as to compel the Postmaster-General to hold up the case.

Mr. Dunn is exceedingly indignant at the action of the Postmaster-General, who, he says, ought to execute the wishes of Congressmen, who know a great deal more about post-office cases than the head of a department in Washington. Past experience, however, shows that Mr. Bissell is absolutely impervious to Congressional criticism.

North Plainfielders Who Are Satisfied with the Decision Against Watchung Avenue.

At a meeting of the North Plainfield Township Committee last evening Chairman Fountain presided and both Committeeman Allen and Smith were present. Clerk Horace J. Martin read the minutes of the meeting of the week before and they were approved.

The bond of Samuel G. Taynor for the office of constable, with himself, John P. Emmons and N. B. Smalley as sureties, was approved. Mr. Taynor and Surveyor of Highways J. P. Humble were sworn in by the clerk. Clerk Martin stated that Michael Powers had, in expectation of absence in the evening, been sworn in by him in the afternoon. This completed the installing of all the officers-elect with the exception of Harrison Coddington, who had been chosen a commissioner of appeal, and had not qualified.

In a communication Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed told of the decision of the Supreme Court against the Township in the suits of Jacob Miles and William E. Brock who objected to the extension of Peace street. He said that no fault had been found with the acts of the Township, but that the ruling was based upon a decision against the special State law which had been rendered since the appointment of the Commissioners. He thought it possible that something might still be done in the matter on a writ of error in the Court of Appeals. By an agreement with the opposing counsel in the Miles case the cost of action to the Township had been but $27.15.

Chairman Fountain said he thought the people were satisfied to let the matter remain as it was and that it would not be advisable to appeal.

Committeeman Smith thought a public meeting should be held to guide the authorities in the case. The old committee on which he had served did not blame the counsel. Mr. Reed had told the parties who petitioned for the extension of the street of the fact that a lawsuit might be expected if owners of assessed property objected. The petitioners promised to buy out the discontented people. When Mr. Hughes tried to make trouble his claim was promptly purchased. Ex-Sheriff Coddington's complaint was withdrawn at once.

When the Commissioners finally met the only one who objected to the assessing was Mr. Guion. A recess was taken and the ground examined. Mr. Guion's property was given a higher valuation than that of Charles Hand adjoining, but it was shown that Mr. Guion had much the greater railroad privileges. Mr. Guion then acquiesced and the Commissioners could no nothing but approve the report of the first body. Mr. Smith believed that those who at first wanted the work done most were the ones who found the greatest fault afterward.

On motion of Committeeman Smith the communication from Mr. Reed was received and filed.

The Chairman and Clerk were authorized to sign a lease of lots on Johnston's drive to John H. French.

Election expenses were ordered paid after the correction of the bills, township poor matters were informally discussed, and the Committee adjourned.

Three Diamond Rings Awarded.

The general friendliness toward the firemen was practically demonstrated last night. The fair of Engine Company No. 2, which is being held in Central Hall this week was so crowded that the floor managers could scarcely find room enough for the throngs of dances.

A new donation was a handsome bird cage presented by Theodore Smith. The fatigue cap given by Hatter Smith, of Grand street, New York, will be raffled for by the firemen.

The girls' contest for the diamond ring closed at 9. The contestants and the amounts each brought to the company in votes were:

Mabel, daughter of Jacob Benner		$48.50
Lottie, " "	Wm. Chamberlain	40.65
Mabel, " "	Chas. W. Smith	11.65
Total		$100.80

Each of the three girls will be given a ring for the earnest endeavors to help the cause for which their fathers labor.

For "Old one-horn" Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., had 54 votes, and Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., 50.

The drivers' contest for the regulation suit will close tonight at 9.

We are all subject to pain occasionally and it is well to have a good liniment in the house, such as Salvation Oil. 25c.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sources and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia, radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75c. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, druggist, Plainfield. 12 9 8m

MERRY MASQUERADE.

Sons and Daughters of Pocohontas Dance the Night Away in Costume.

Red Men's Hall was filled with merry, masquerading dancers last evening. Iona Council, No. 14, Degree of Pocohontas, was in charge, and its first annual masquerade ball was more than successful.

The grand march began at 10:30 and from then to 12 Sam Frazee and his men were kept busy, rendering their famous, fascinating music to satisfy the costumed guests.

The unmasking at midnight was followed by the usual amused surprise. After everyone had become accustomed to the new order of things the dancing went on, halting only when the supper was announced.

Mrs. Fred Westphal had prettily decorated the hall with bunting and lanterns as a surprise to the rest of the committee of Iona Council, Mrs. Weigman and Mrs. Stephany. The general director was J. W. Klein; and the floor manager, David C. Allen.

Among the striking costumes were:

EACH BOARD WANTS MONEY.

The Council Would Build Sewers and the Education Board a School-House.

(From The World.)

A local fight is likely to be precipitated in Plainfield through the rivalry of the Common Council and the Board of Education. The Council wants to put down sewers this year which will cost about $80,000. The Board of Education wants to build a high school building to cost about $75,000.

Neither body wants to forego the plans made. As a result, a bill has been introduced in the Legislature by Senator Voorhees designed to prevent the Board of Education from getting money for a new building unless the Council consents. The bill is likely to become a law, though the friends of the Board of Education will fight it. Another bill is introduced to permit the construction of sewers on petition of the owners of one-half the property valuation, which percentage of signatures has already been secured.

Seventh-Day Baptists Give a Supper.

The women of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church gave a supper last evening from 6 to 9. About two hundred members of the congregation and others ate their evening meal in the class rooms and contributed over $70 toward the piano fund, the same cause for which was held the first sociable in the new church.

Six tables, decorated with flowers, were used. Odd souvenirs of the affair were neat bills of fare on blue print paper furnished by F. A. Dunham.

The committee in charge consisted of the chairman, Mrs. VanSickle, and Mrs. H. G. Stillman, Mrs. J. G. Miller and Mrs. L. M. Dunham. The guests were served by the following young women: Misses Mabel Potter, Bessie Titsworth, Mabel Maxson, Lizzie Allis, Lulu Clawson, Ernestine Smith and Lulu Lewis.

Disputing a Funeral Claim.

Justice Mosher reserved decision yesterday after hearing four witnesses in the case of Undertaker Henry DeMott against Simon Springas.

When his cousin, Mrs. Cromwell, died, the first of the year, Springas ordered a $68 funeral and superintended things generally. DeMott thinks he should pay the bill, but Springas contested the claim and confidently expects a favorable decision.

The American Catarrh Cure

Is the result of twenty-six years' study and treatment of the disease. One bottle convinces the most skeptical. It is always ready for use, needing neither douche nor atomizer. It restores the hearing, cures the hawking cough and expectorating, removes the headache and nose bleeding, increases the appetite, produces sound sleep, invigorates the whole system and increases the vitality. Prepared only by W. B. Jones, M. D., No. 1396 South Eighth street, Philadelphia. For sale by I. W. Randolph, 21 West Front street. Price $2.

DESERVED HIS CHASTISEMENT.

That's the Way Mr. Stevens Feels About the Witters Case.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—For the benefit of my friends and the public, will you kindly give me space in your paper in which to make a few remarks concerning the King-Witters assault case, about which there has been so much publicity.

The whole matter may be likened unto a snowball which has been started a little thing, and rolled on and on, accumulating as it goes, until it has become a huge mass.

In your article last evening an error occurred which does me great injustice, and which you will kindly allow me to correct. In this article it was made to appear that when Witters retreated into Brittin's, I followed him and "dragged" him out in order that he should "receive further punishment." No such evidence was introduced. All the testimony went to show that it was King whom I pulled out of Brittin's rooms when he had followed Witters inside; and that it was I who took the "club" away from King and threw it in the road.

The facts of the case are that Witters, who had been employed in King's family, was discharged for insolence and neglect of duty and revenged himself by circulating damaging reports about members of the King family. When King met him, he demanded that he take back what he had said and the boy insolently replied—"What will you do if I don't?" Whereupon King proceeded to demonstrate in a most convincing way what he would do.

In justice to my friend, Tom King, let me say that he was under great provocato do as he did, and were the facts but known, I feel sure that the public would coincide with the few who do know in saying that the boy richly deserved the punishment he received.

GEO. O. STEVENS.

DON'T LIKE JUDGE MOSHER.

This Trio Thinks Him a Sycophant of the Aristocracy and an Oppressor of the Poor.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—As some of the many interested persons present at the hearing before Justice Mosher on Tuesday night of Thomas King and George Stevens charged by Harry Witters with an attrocious assault and battery with intent to kill, we should like to ask the learned (?) Justice what constitutes in his opinion an atrocious assault and battery with intent to kill; must the person be killed and then be resurrected in order to make the complaint? We heard a half dozen witnesses, including Stevens himself, testify that King said to Witters when he was pounding him that he would kill him. King was present but did not deny saying this, and yet the considerate and wise (?) Justice expressed sorrow at the fact that he would have to hold King, not as charged in the complaint, but for simple assault and battery. It may be simple assault and battery for the Justice, sitting in the peaceful seclusion of the back office of a cigar store, but it certainly was not simple assault and battery for a poor orphan boy to be called out and pounded so that he could hardly see anything and so that the sense of feeling had almost entirely left his arms and legs. Does not the law of New Jersey apply equally to the rich as to the poor?

DANIEL S. POUND,
ISAAC F. APGAR,
R. V. SAUMS.

A WILFUL SLANDER.

That's the Characterization Indulged in by One Parishioner Against Another.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I cannot believe that any parishioner of Grace Church, whether old or new, having the interests of the parish at heart, would seek to use the public press to express his dissent from any action that may be taken by the parish. I read with astonishment in The Press last evening the remarkable communication which "an old parishioner" saw fit to send to the New York Evening Post for publication.

As a voter in the parish who had the privilege of attending the annual meeting last Monday, I feel it my duty to deny, in the public way in which the charge is made, that any unfair methods were resorted to by the "younger men" at the election, or that the election was conducted in any manner that was not perfectly proper and correct. I deny further that anything was done "in the interest of ritualistic practices", or from questionable motive. The writer of the communication to The Evening Post has wilfully slandered the voters in the parish, for which there is no justification.

VERITY.

—George S. Vail moved today to the homestead near Greenbrook.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

DESERTERS CAUGHT IN PLAINFIELD.

West Pointers Taken by the Police to Governor's Island.

Two deserters from the detachment of the regular army stationed at West Point, who sought Plainfield as a place of refuge, were returned to the United States authorities by the local police today.

The men were William Allen and Charles Durenmatt. Durenmatt came from the borough, having deserted his wife, who is a daughter of Mrs. Thomas H. Parkinson, to enter the army January 23, 1893. Mrs. Durenmatt heard that her husband was dead and went into mourning.

Durenmatt who enlisted as a resident of Wilmington, Del., was in a battalion of engineers at West Point and deserted with Allen, a cavalryman, March 2, 1894. They came to Plainfield, Allen securing a a position as nurse in Dr. Cooley's sanitarium.

Circular letters describing the men were received by Chief Grant and search in the borough resulted in the arrest of Durenmatt by Chief Marshal Pangborn late Tuesday night. Allen was found in the retreat by the officers, yesterday afternoon.

The Chief and the Marshal took the men, securely handcuffed, to Governor's Island this morning.

THE WORKING GIRL.

Miss Sallie Palmer Gives Some Suggestions to Girls About Backache, Faintness, and Dizziness.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Did you ever notice working girls on their way home from stores or factories?

Did you notice how many of them had pale cheeks, dull eyes, and heavy steps? and did you wonder why they were not ruddy and bright?

The story which is told by Miss Sallie Palmer, of Nicetown, Pa., gives the reason for this sad condition of many working girls.

Sometimes their back and sides will ache terribly. They are faint and dizzy with pain and weight in the lower part of their stomach. They watch the clock, and wish that the day would end, as they feel so ill and tired.

Standing all day, week in and week out, they have slowly drifted into woman's great enemy, displacement of the womb. That, or some other derangement of the organ, causes irregularity or suspension of the "monthly periods," bloating, flooding, or nervous prostration.

"Take warning in time," she says; "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the surest and safest remedy in the world for you."

A Cemetery Outrage.

It is a sin and a shame the way dogs and chicken are permitted to roam in the Presbyterian Church in North Plainfield. Graves and plots are scratched up by chickens, and in some instances the graves are entirely torn apart by dogs, and choice plants and running vines are entirely torn out. The trouble all comes from the chickens and dogs owned by colored families on Manning avenue. The cemetery trustees should erect a solid high board fence, and if that does not remedy the evil a special effort should be made to locate the ownership of the animals that commit the depredations and then prosecute.

The Press has heard of lot owners threatening to abandon the cemetery and go to Hillside on account of the nuisance complained of, while others are burying their loved ones in Hillside for the same reason.

HILDA HATHAWAY'S HEROISM.

By WILLIAM PENDLETON CHIPMAN.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

CHAPTER I.

There is a long, low, narrow, sandy point running out and nearly cutting in two one of the smaller bays on our southern seaboard. Follow the shore to the west and south from this point, and it soon rises into rocky bluffs or elevated headlands. Follow it to the west and north, and it curves irregularly for a few miles and then becomes the left bank of a considerable river.

From the extreme end of the sandy point one has an uninterrupted view up or down the bay, and a signal light displayed there would be, even on a dark night, readily discerned by any one watching for it, either at the head of the bay or from a vessel in the offing.

Back from the point above high water mark and firmly imbedded in the sand there is a small granite block or post. One might at first think it had been placed there to mark some boundary line did not a closer inspection reveal on its smooth cut surface a small Roman cross, followed by the letters "H. H." and then underneath them the figures "1863."

This circumstance suggests that the stone may have been placed there in commemoration of some special act or event, and inquiry has disclosed that such is indeed its purpose. It marks the place where a brave young heart displayed a heroism and poured forth its love and life in a sacrifice seldom paralleled. From one who well remembered all the details of the tragedy I have received the following story:

A mile or so to the southwest of the sandy point and directly back from the rocky bluffs already referred to stands a large old fashioned mansion house. Broad fields surround it, with the shaded lawns and walks in front, and the cluster of outdwellings behind to be found on every large and well ordered plantation.

With the stars for witnesses they had pledged their troths.

This estate, embracing many acres and numerous slaves, belonged, just before the civil war, to Judge Waldo Hathaway—a man already well advanced in years, but holding still an unrivaled influence in that region, and at that time representing his district in the state legislature.

Judge Hathaway was, moreover, a man exceptionally well versed in political affairs, not only of his native state, but of the nation. Educated at the north and having traveled extensively there, he had learned to love and to believe in his country—to use a phrase often on his own lips—"as a whole and not in part," and consequently he held views respecting the great political agitation of his time as broad as they were unpopular with his legislative associates.

Already had he cast in his lot with the minority of the house and was strenuously opposing the calling of a convention to consider the "ordinance of secession," so loudly clamored for by the political leaders of the state. This act had brought him under grave suspicion, and only his years of well known and unselfish devotion to the interests of his commonwealth saved him from the open charge of disloyalty.

The immediate household of Oak Bluffs—the name of the plantation—consisted of the judge, his wife, a lady many years younger than himself, and one daughter, Hilda, the pride and pet of the whole plantation, and just budding into a bright and lovely womanhood.

There was another member of the family, Ralph Gasque, a nephew of the judge, but he held a lieutenant's commission in the navy and for some months had been stationed in foreign waters. To the fair Hilda, however, he was more than cousin, for just before he had sailed on his last voyage he had wooed and won her for his promised bride. Under the spreading live oaks, in which the mistletoe grew and flourished, and with the stars for witnesses, they had pledged their troths, each to the other, "till death us do part."

Late one Saturday evening the judge arrived home from the capitol, and as he stepped from his carriage all noticed that he moved with a feebleness quite unusual to himself. Hilda sprang forward to assist him up the steps, saying playfully:

"There, Papa Hathaway, the work and worry of the legislature have so wearied you that you are already quite sick. We can't let you go there any more."

"I shall go there no more, my daughter," responded the judge wearily. Then he remarked to his wife, "Have supper served at once, my dear."

He seemed so feeble and exhausted all the evening that Mrs. Hathaway refrained from questioning him about the doings of the legislature, as was her usual custom on his return. The next morning, however, he seemed more like himself, but immediately after breakfast retired to his library and remained alone for some hours.

After dinner he joined the family on the broad veranda and sat for some time looking off toward the bay, whose dancing waters were plainly visible here and there through the trees, apparently lost in thought. Finally he called Hilda to his side, and stroking her waving hair with his hand, as he had a habit of doing when she was beside him, he said with an intense tremulousness in his tones:

"Wife and Hilda, my pet child, I have much to say to you, but my heart has been too full to speak. Three days ago our joint legislature by an overwhelming majority voted to call the convention, and there is no doubt that the 'ordinance of secession' will be passed. Before another spring some of the other states will have followed this example, and I can see that the inevitable result will be a long and disastrous civil war."

He paused for a moment, overcome by his excessive agitation, and his wife hastened to say soothingly:

"I wouldn't worry about it, judge. There will be some way of compromise arranged to prevent bloodshed."

"Would to God that I could so believe," exclaimed the judge fervently, "but knowing the temper of both the north and the south as I do, I can see that the secession of the southern states from the Union will precipitate a civil strife upon us which will only cease with the emancipation of the slaves and the complete exhaustion of the southern resources.

"I am old and shall not live to see the end of the conflict; possibly I shall not live to see it begun, for I have a strange feeling that my days are speedily to be numbered. I wish therefore to tell you now that it is my desire to have you refrain from assisting the struggle so far as that may be practicable; I also desire you to liberate the slaves at the first moment consistent with their welfare, and tell Ralph, when he shall come home, to remain with the Union. I have already written him to this effect, but he may possibly be ordered home before my letter reaches him. I have labored as best I could to avert this contest, but have failed, and now the responsibility for it rests in other hands."

For some time longer Judge Hathaway continued to speak of the consequences likely to follow from a civil strife; then he returned to his library. Some hours later on seeking the reason for his prolonged absence from the family circle they found him dead in his chair. A smile rested upon the silent lips, and apparently without a struggle he had passed from the scenes of anxiety and trial to those of eternal peace and rest. [This conversation and death are not imaginary, but are related here substantially as they occurred.]

The prophecy of Judge Hathaway, improbable as it may then have seemed, is now a matter of history. With the spring of 1861, hostilities were begun, to be continued for four long years.

Fortunately for the lonely and bereaved women, Oak Bluffs was situated for a time a considerable distance from the scene of actual conflict, and had their anxious suspense concerning the whereabouts of Lieutenant Gasque only been relieved their position would not have been altogether unbearable. Once indeed they had heard from him since the death of Judge Hathaway; he was about to sail for home. From that time, however, no message from him reached them, and they could only conjecture that every attempt on his part to communicate with them had failed.

The summer and autumn slowly passed away. A few of the household servants still remained with the family, and though they necessarily suffered many deprivations they were far from actual want. No warfare had as yet occurred in their immediate neighborhood, and the worst they could complain of in their situation was a complete ostracism on the part of their former friends.

With the new year, however, came a change. A fortification was thrown up at the mouth of the river, which emptied into the bay a few miles to the north; a detachment of soldiers was sent down to garrison it, and a regular patrol was established along the shores of the inlet.

The reason for this change was at once apparent. For some months the Confederates had been using the river and bay on account of their secluded position as a shipping station. Cotton was floated down the river on flatboats and over the bar to the mouth of the inlet. Here, under the cover of the night, it was transferred to steamers in waiting and carried to foreign ports.

Suspicions of this traffic had reached the Federal government, and an armed cutter was dispatched to place the bay under blockade. The arrival of the cutter caused the military operations and activity on the part of the enemy.

One of the servants at Oak Bluffs, Tobe, or, as he was commonly called, Uncle Toby, had discovered the vessel almost as soon as she appeared off the harbor and reported her arrival to the ladies at the mansion house. Hoping to learn at least where her nephew, Lieutenant Gasque, was stationed, Mrs. Hathaway directed Uncle Toby to watch for an opportunity to visit the cutter.

After considerable search Tobe found a place below the bluffs where the pickets were not on guard. Possibly a picket had been stationed there, but left to his own devices he had preferred the higher ground a short distance above, and consequently had changed his quarters.

Thousands praise the day they came to us for treatment. There is no guess work, no experimenting, no painful operation. There is no taint of quackery or deception; no claim or statement is made that is not borne out by facts and living witnesses.

Mrs. Abby A. Ray, late of 86 Grove street, East Orange, who now lives at 400 Ellmore street, Escanaba, Mich., writes, under date of January 12: "The medicine arrived this morning and I am so glad it came. I am almost out, and it has helped me so much and I am so much pleased with its wonderful effort on my broken down system that I would like to testify to your great success in my case. I am feeling as well now, in fact better, than I had ever hoped to again."

This is one of many letters that we receive daily. We have the originals at our office and if you wish you may see them. Another thing: We never publish or reveal a patient's name unless they so desire.

HE MADE NO EXCUSE

Breckinridge Tells Plainly the Story of His Own Guilt.

But Makes Miss Pollard an Equally Willing Partner to the Sin—Her Actions on His Visit to the College. Did Not Select a Closed Carriage Purposely But By Chance—She Who Suggested That the Proposed Visit to the Concert Be Abandoned—Their Relations Began on That Night, He Declared—Miss Pollard Greatly Excited in the Court Room.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The court room where the Pollard-Breckinridge case is being heard was densely packed this morning long before proceedings were begun and Col. Breckinridge resumed the witness chair. Among those present were a number of congressmen, a prominent physician and many others whose faces are conspicuous in Washington public life.

Col. Breckinridge does not appear as bright and fresh as he did yesterday and it is evident that the ordeal through which he is passing is having its effect.

On the stand he spoke easily, softly, earnestly, with just a touch of that musical ring in his voice which has helped give him the reputation of a spell-binder. He told his story without attempt at dramatic finish. When he entered the box he was cool and calm, but his demeanor changed to nervousness when he was asked to tell of certain transactions. He made no excuses for himself in telling the story of how he and Madeline Pollard began their guilty relations. "I was a man easily moved; she was a woman easily moved," was all he said that could be construed as extenuation.

Col. Breckinridge did not sit in the witness chair, but remained standing as he answered the preliminary questions.

Replying to Major Butterworth he said he was born in Baltimore 56 years ago, moved to Kentucky and obtained a diploma from the Danville (Ky.) university. He was married on St. Patrick's day, March 17, 1859, and his first wife died in April, 1860, just after the birth of her child. He said he entered the Confederate service under a provisional order by Gen. John H. Morgan authorizing him to raise a company in Georgetwon, Ky., and he passed through the various grades until he became a colonel of the 9th cavalry. He was married a second time, to Miss Desha, in Lexington, on Sept. 10, 1885. He had four living children, two of whom were in America.

Col. Breckinridge had just begun to tell about when his law career commenced, when Miss Pollard, who had been sent for, entered the court room.

Continuing, he said he had taken a law course in Paris and elsewhere, and at one time was a member of Gen. B. F. Butler's law firm.

"Do you know the plaintiff?" asked Major Butterworth.

"I do."

"When and where did you first see her."

"I can't recall the month, but I should say in the latter part of April, 1884. I met her on the train going to Lexington from Covington."

"State about that meeting."

"Whenever it was, it was a cool morning, and I had my overcoat. I went to get it and saw this plaintiff sitting near the door. She bowed in a perfectly proper manner and I stopped. I said: 'Young people grow up so rapidly nowadays that I cannot remember you.'

"She said: 'But I know you. I am Madeline Breckinridge Pollard.'

"She said: 'My father was such an admirer of John C. Breckinridge that he put Breckinridge in my name. If I had been a boy he would have called me John.'

"I asked her where she was going, and she said to Frankfort to see her sister, who was ill. We chatted a few minutes, and I said I loped her sister would be better and then passed out of the car."

"How did you come to meet her again?"

"She sent me a letter telling me to come to see her about a legal matter. I wrote to her, and I have a very distinct recollection that I told her that if she would write me the nature of the business or would call upon me if she were in Kentucky, I would be glad to help her."

"Did you receive any other letter from her?"

"Yes."

Col. Breckinridge said the next time he saw Miss Pollard was at the Wesleyan university, in Cincinnati. He had gone to Covington on law business and remembered this letter, so he went across the river to see the writer.

Col. Breckinridge said he was shown into a room at the college on the left side of the hall and sent up his card. When Miss Pollard came down she said almost immediately:

"I suppose you were surprised to receive such a letter from a school girl?"

"I said laughingly that I supposed she had somewhat exaggerated things when she thought the matter was worse than a divorce case."

(This is a quotation from the alleged forged letter.)

At this point Major Butterworth made an appeal for the admission of the letter which the defendant alleges he received from Miss Pollard and which she declares is a forgery, and a lengthy wrangle among the counsel followed, ending in the judge deciding to admit the letter to evidence.

Col. Breckinridge again resumed the stand and told again of his meeting with Miss Pollard at Wesleyan college. He said she told him of her marriage contract with Rodes, and asked him if he could compel her to marry him. He says he told her he knew no law under which he could do so and then he asked her why she did not go to her mother or some other relative about it. To this she said she could not.

"She spoke with such a grave face," continued the witness, "that I suspected something more serious was the cause of her refusal to marry him. She drew out her handkerchief and acted in a very nervous way and walked over to the window, and after she was standing there a minute I made a motion as if to go. Then she said: 'Oh, I have nobody to tell; I don't know anybody except you.'

"I paused, and then she said with an effort 'I don't want to marry him; I don't want to have a whole house full of children like mama and Aunt Lou, and I refused to marry him.' Then with a great effort she said: 'There is another reason why I should marry Mr. Rodes; I have given him a higher proof that I intended to keep my contract.' I looked at her and then, after a pause, told her that she should marry Rodes, but she still declared that she could not, and finally said: 'Oh, well, he will always want to marry me, so there is no hurry.'

"The conversation then drifted to other things. Mention was made of some concert where some cornetist was to play that night and she said she would like to go. It was at a place on Vine street hill and as I had never been up there and wanted to see the inclined railway, I said I would take her. That evening after dinner I left the hotel and going to a hack stand picked out a carriage without any care whatever and went to the college. It was a closed carriage but I did not get it purposely. When I got to the college there was quite a little group on the porch."

Replying to a direct question, the witness said that nothing was said by him at that time about a throat affection as his reason for bringing a closed carriage.

Did you make any protestations of affection, or make any love to the plaintiff on that ride?" asked Major Butterworth.

"None whatever."

"Did you go to hear the concert that night?"

"No, we did not. When we had driven a little way we came to two roads that diverged and the driver took the left hand road at her order."

"What did the appearance of the plaintiff suggest to your mind?"

"Nothing especial. She appeared to be a young woman. She might have been 20, 21, 22, perhaps 19 years old."

"Was anything improper suggested by her appearance or conversation?"

"Nothing at all except what she told me."

"How did you come to take that left hand road?"

"The night was pretty warm. I had a headache and when we came to the diverging roads she said perhaps I would like to drive out in the cool instead of going into the hot gas-lit concert room. I said I did not know much about music and I did not care; so when we came to the diverging roads she told the driver to turn to the left."

"State, colonel, just what took place in that carriage ride."

"I cannot repeat exactly what was said. After we had turned to the left and had ridden some distance, I should say 15 or 20 minutes, may be a little longer, she was talking about her desire to become an authoress, and said something about 'George Elliott.' During the conversation she took off her hat and leaned forward to put it on the front seat, and I put my arm around her. There was no protestations of love on my part, so far as I can recollect. There was no offer of love, no artifice, no nothing—except I put my arm around her and drew her to me. What occurred was I was a man easily moved, she was a woman easily moved, and I took liberties with her. This was without any protestation of love on my part, without any resistance or protestation on her part, and without any betrayal on the part of either to the other. It was the human affection of a man, and such it was, with willing complaisance on her part."

Madeline Pollard heard this story with a curl of scorn on her lips. Once she half rose in her chair and was drawn back by her attorney, Mr. Carlisle.

"What conversation did you have on your return?"

"We turned around, and there was hardly a word spoken until we got close to the city. Then I took from my pocket a blank envelope. She was on my left hand side in the carriage and I put my hand in my pocket, put something into the envelope and put it in her hand. She refused to accept it, and I said: 'There are a great many little things that you need, things that you will have to have.' She declined to accept it. We got nearer to the town, and as we got out of the carriage I put it into her hand and shut it, and then opened the carriage door. She got out. I bade her good night. She went up the steps, I got into the carriage and the carriage drove on.

"What was in the envelope?"

"A bill."

"How much?"

"My recollection of it is that it was a $10 bill."

Miss Pollard's excitement had been nearing the hysterical while Col. Breckinridge was telling this part of the story. When he said he had given her money, she made an effort as though to rise. Mr. Carlisle said something to her and she sat down, leaning forward, however, as if about to spring. It was plain that Miss Pollard was losing control of herself and it took many pats on the back and many whispered words from Mr. Carlisle to restore her to composure.

Witness said that the next evening he met Miss Pollard on the train for Lexington. He said he did not know she was on the train, nor did he know that she knew he intended taking that train.

At this point court adjourned for the day.

LITTLE SATISFACTION.

Action Taken in the Brutal Agna Jan Murder.

NEW YORK, March 30.—The Rev. Dr. Benjamin Larabee, secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church, has just received a letter from Orcomiah, Persia, announcing the final settlement of the case of Agna Jan, the Armenian Christian, who was brutally murdered in that city last summer for his religion. The killing of Agna Jan was accomplished by a mob of Mohammedans in the streets of the town. He was a shopkeeper, and was one day dragged from his place of business to the mosque, where he was slowly tortured to death because of his firm refusal to give up his faith. Nails were driven into his body, and every form of torture that could be invented by his persecutors was resorted to. His lifeless corpse was then thrown into a ditch for the dogs to devour.

Little was done at first to avenge Agna Jan's death. The Christians in the city laid the matter before the shah, but to no apparent purpose, for the government was afraid to act, as the Moslems repeatedly threatened to shed the blood of a thousand Christians in case anything was done. The excitement prevailed for months, and it was thought at one time that the Mohammedans had carried out a conspiracy to poison every Christian minister in the vicinity, of whatever denomination.

Finally, however, it appears that the shah decided that something must be done, and he has ordered that the widow of the dead man be paid an indemnity equivalent to $250, and that a life annuity of $25 be paid to his son. Dr. Larabee said that while the indemnity was wholly inadequate, from the standpoint of decency, still his correspondent thought that it was sufficient to prevent a similar occurrence for some time to come.

No Escape for Thieves.

FORT SMITH, Ark., March 30.—After many months of long and hard chasing about the United States Charles Ketchum, alias Charles Hardin, wanted by the Wells-Fargo express company, was captured at Alma, a small town twelve miles from here. In September, 1892, while acting as messenger for the express company, running between Cincinnati and Louisville, two packages containing $35,000 were placed in his charge, and when the packages arrived at their destination at Galveston, Texas, they were found to contain nothing but brown paper. Ketchum, or Hardin, as he was known, was suspected, but enough evidence was not at hand, to hold him. He then entered suit for $50,000 damages, but disappeared when the case was called. For the last six months the detectives have been almost upon him, but with characteristic shrewdness and cunning he evaded capture. When captured $19,000 was found upon his person.

A Nobleman's Ignoble End.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 30.—An Austrian nobleman has just been buried in the potter's field. Descended from an illustrious family and with the secret of a strange crime locked in his breast, Hugo, Baron von Laudon, died without the commonest necessaries of life in this city. General Laudon, the renowned Austrian warrior who fought against Frederick the Great, was one of the ancestors of the unfortunate man, and a number of other famous Austrians belong to the same geneological tree. Hugo von Laudon had been in America a little more than two years. According to the story of the deceased he fled from Russia to escape the consequences of a murder he was supposed to have committed there. He owned vast estates in that country but was afraid to return and claim them.

Cattlemen Left Penniless Abroad.

LIVERPOOL, March 30.—In addressing the society for the relief of foreigners, the mayor complained of the expense caused the city by cattlemen from the United States. Almost constantly, he said, these men were being left penniless and friendless in the dock districts, and were saved from starvation and returned to America by the municipality. William J. Sullis, United States vice-consul, explained that the cattlemen in question had been deceived usually by their American employers. The consulate was overrun by men who had been deceived thus. Mr. Sullis added that he hoped steps would be taken in the near future to remedy the abuse.

Jersey Offices Abolished.

TRENTON N. J., March 30.—The senate by a party vote has passed the house bill abolishing the offices of superintendent of fire and police department of Jersey City and Newark. Senator Bradley at first refused to cast the deciding vote but finally voted aye. The offices abolished are filled by democrats.

Six Months for Morris.

NEW YORK, March 30.—Charles E. Morris, tax-collector of Gravesend, pleaded guilty to the indictment of conspiracy found against him in the court of oyer and terminer, Brooklyn, and was sentenced by Justice Brown to six months in the penitentiary. Race Around the Horn.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 30.—The ship Iroquois of the Sutton line, Captain Nicols, arrived in this port after a voyage of 137 days from New York. An hour or two later the Arabia, Captain MacLean, was also towed into port. These vessels left New York on the same day.

BEDLAM IN THE HOUSE

Scenes Unequalled Since the Session Began.

The Turbulance Brought About By the O'Neill-Joy Election Case—Speaker and Ex-Speaker Pitted Against Each Other—Famous McGarrahan Bill Passed By the Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—A scene of turbulence and confusion unequalled since the opening days of the fifty-first congress marked the close of an exciting session of the house last evening. The O'Feill-Joy contested election case was unfinished business, and failing to get a quorum to support the majority of the elections committee Mr. Patterson introduced a resolution directing the arrest of members absent without leave and revoking all leaves of absence. On this resolution Messrs. Crisp and Reed were pitted against each other in speeches that manifested some degree of bitterness.

Later in the day the speaker reversed a ruling he had made upon a motion by Mr. Lacey, of Iowa, from which ensued an exciting and sensational scene. Members were refused recognition, and when Mr. Reed charged the chair with violation of the rules, the speaker emphatically declared that he assumed all the consequences.

The proceedings were almost a continuous bedlam. At one time the speaker directed the sergeant-at-arms to request the gentleman from Maine (Mr. Reed) to take his seat. Mr. Reed at once sank down in the nearest vacant chair, which happened to be on the democratic side.

As he did so Mr. Boutelle (rep., Me.) cried: "Oh, I would not call upon the sergeant-at-arms every few minutes."

To this the speaker simply replied: "And the sergeant-at-arms will force the other gentleman from Maine to take his seat."

After a time the storm was allayed, and without having made any material progress the house adjourned until noon to-day.

Senate.

The senate bill referring the famous McGarrahan claim to the Pausche Grande tract of land in California to the court of private land claims, occupied the attention of the senate for over three hours, and was then passed without a division.

The house joint resolution appropriating $10,000 to carry out the provisions of the Chinese exclusion act was passed, and the senate adjourned till Monday.

MORE RECRUITS FOR COXEY.

The Commonweal Army Given a Great Reception at Columbiana, O.

COLUMBIANA, O., March 30.—Ten miles of the worst journey yet made by the Coxey good roads army were covered yesterday. It was a triumphant march, the day's incidents being numerous. After a hot breakfast at Camp Diggs, Salem, tents were struck and the nondescript organization set out in the teeth of a driving snow storm for this town to establish camp Trenton. The roads were muddy and covered with snow. By hard marching Leetonia was reached shortly after noon.

Short stops for review and rest were made at the mining hamlets of Millville and Washingtonville.

Just outside of Leetonia an escort of twenty-seven horsemen met the column and conducted it to the place where lunch was served. The entire town was out to see the motley congregation of radical reformers.

The command was drawn up and Carl Browne addressed the citizens of Leetonia. His speech was very sharp and abounded in hot utterances. The most significant remark was a tirade against the reporters of the "capitalistic" press that were following and "writing up" the army.

An escorting delegation of 17 horsemen from the populist club of Columbiana met the army and headed the column towards that town.

Just outside of the town word was received by messenger that Commander Coxey was returning on foot to rejoin the column. A hearty cheer was given him as he resumed his accustomed place. Columbiana was filled with people from the entire country.

The line of march was direct to the site of Camp Trenton, east of the town. An old foundry building was secured for sleeping quarters and stabling for the horses.

The populist club had secured an immense amount of supplies for the command. Oats, corn, hay, straw, a thousand loves of bread, butter, milk, hams, etc., were stacked up.

General order No. 7 names to-night's camp at East Palestine Camp Gompers. Mr. Coxey as commander was greatly pleased at the showing made by the army. It now numbers about 200 men and the class is improving. A packed house greeted Coxey and Browne at the evening meeting and gave vigorous applause to populistic hits. About 30 recruits are expected from this neighborhood.

Andrews of South Norwalk, Conn., who died on February 8th from injuries received while trying to get on a Broadway cable car, the coroner's jury has found a verdict of negligence on the part of the conductor of the car. Age, Wealth and Youth.

CRISP FOR SENATOR

Appointed to Succeed the Late Mr. Colquitt.

Urged By Governor Northen to Accept at Once and Join in the Tariff Work in the Senate—The Speaker Will Consult His Colleagues in the House Before He Makes a Decision.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 30.—Gov. Northen has appointed Speaker Charles F. Crisp to succeed the late Senator Alfred H. Colquitt.

Not a word has passed between the governor and the speaker, and the latter's name had not even been presented formally to the governor.

Governor Northen in his despatch to Speaker Crisp notifying him of his appointment requested that Mr. Crisp forward at once his resignation so that his commission as senator might be hastened along. The governor told Mr. Crisp that he had selected him because of his distinguished services in the house and that he was anxious that the speaker take his place in the senate before the tariff question is settled.

To this Mr. Crisp wired the following: "I am profoundly grateful for this mark of your confidence and esteem. Am completely surprised. I had no idea such a thing was in contemplation. My obligation to the democrats of the house are such that I cannot without consultation with them determine what I ought to do in the premises. Will wire you. Accept my heartfelt thanks."

PITCHER OUT OF PRISON.

How His Greed for Stolen Money Cost Him Dearly.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 30.—The release of Charles J. Pitcher from the Montreal penitentiary, where he had been serving a seven-year sentence for carrying stolen money into Canada, he having robbed the Union bank of this city, has now opened the doors and let out some very interesting information which is disclosed by Detective Parker, who hunted down Pitcher and then went to Europe and brought home the spoils, which Pitcher had shipped to the address of J. Roberts, care of a London banking house. Pitcher's stealings were about three-quarters of a million.

Two maiden ladies of advanced years had on deposit in the bank every dollar of their possessions and in the form of negotiable securities worth $150,000. Prominent business men were threatened with serious disaster, and the bank officials were requested to make overtures to Pitcher looking to a compromise, which should give him a handsome bonus and secure him immunity from prosecution, either by the bank, the local police, the Dominion authorities, or the company which had guaranteed his bonds to the bank.

The bank people agreed to this. Detective Parker went to Montreal armed with the authority to offer Pitcher those terms and to pledge him a bonus to the extent of $50,000. Mr. Parker at once went to the jail and saw Pitcher. He began first by an offer of $10,000. Pitcher put his hands into his trousers pockets and, laughing, turned his back, walked away and whistled. A second call was made and the offer of $30,000 was made, when Pitcher said that he would disclose the whereabouts of the securities for $150,000.

The bank people now realized the desperate situation and having utterly failed to trace the package, had made up their minds to give the recreant teller the sum he had demanded, for there was seemingly no other course opened to them. It would have been done but for a happy idea.

Pitcher, when arrested, was in the act of boarding an English-bound steamer, and had taken passage under the name of J. A. Roberts. If he had sent the securities out of the country he would have been likely to have shipped them to an address similar to the one he assumed in Canada. This thought led to the sending of cablegrams and the lucky find of the missing package of securities in the office of the London banking house addressed to J. A. Roberts. The lucky thought and the chance find saved, and by a few hours only, the full surrender of the bank officers to Pitcher's demand.

The bank got back every dollar's worth of its stolen securities, and Mr. Parker personally brought back from London more than $600,000. The bank's actual loss was the money Pitcher paid for his trip to Canada and his hotel bills, the amount he had laid out for his passage to England, and Mr. Parker's expenses in America and abroad, the whole being a drop in a bucket compared with the loss that would have been sustained had the bank paid even the bonus Pitcher demanded.

A Delightful Recital.

The parish building of Holy Cross Church should have been crowded to its doors last evening to listen to a piano recital of rare merit by F. H. Cheeswright. It was a delightfully versatile programme, and every number was rendered with such finish and polish, that criticism of any one number is difficult. Mr. Cheeswright's interpretations are marked with that refined sentimentality which is positively irresistible, while his reading is full of vigor. His gradation and formation of tones are a study in themselves. In his rendition of Liszt's Nocturne in A flat and the many numbers of Chopin these characteristics were particularly noticeable, and all were charmed with his delicate touch and expression, which are wonderful.

Mr. Cheeswright proved to every one who heard him last evening that he was master of the piano as well as of the organ.

The recital was for a time marred by the conversation of some of the audience, which was so annoying not only to true lovers of music but also to Mr. Cheeswright that he was compelled to administer a severe but deserved rebuke.

Driver Townley Won the Suit.

The fair of Engine Company No. 2 was well attended last evening. William Townley, Alert's driver, won a regulation suit by a contribution of $55.35 from his friends. T. J. A donation of a fancy foot-rest was received from J. W. Klein.

The end of the contest for the silver watch given by Dreier Brothers was postponed until tomorrow evening at 8.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY, & CO., Toledo, O.

POSTMASTER HETFIELD.

THE FIGHT SETTLED AT LAST.

Postmaster-General Bissell Officially Endorses His Application, and Senators McPherson and Smith Pledge Its Confirmation.

The appointment of Mr. Hetfield has been an assured fact since the visit of himself and his friend to Washington last Wednesday. A telegram was received Tuesday night from Congressman Dunn, urging the personal attendance of Mr. Hetfield, and he and Judge Wm. A. Coddington, who has been so zealous a friend of the successful aspirant all through the contest, immediately made ready for a flying trip to the Capitol City.

JOHN M. HETFIELD.

They arrived in Washington at 8:30, and two hours later met Congressman Dunn by appointment. He escorted them to the private room of Postmaster-General Bissell, and though thirty or forty others were in waiting that functionary gave them immediate audience.

He suggested, however, that he might have more leisure one hour later, and they withdrew. When they returned, another large crowd was gathered, and it was nearly 1 o'clock, Mr. Bissell's lunch hour. The Plainfield visitors sought to excuse themselves till afternoon, but Mr. Bissell would not listen to the proposition for further delay.

"I can eat at any time"—he said.—"You gentlemen have come a distance to see me, and I am desirous of getting your business concluded. I am at your service now."

There was a batch of letters on Mr. Bissell's desk which he said were protests against the appointment of Mr. Hetfield. The main charge reported against him, was that of incompetency. Mr. Bissell laughed that aside as soon as he met Mr. Hetfield.

"Why,"—said he, shaking him warmly by the hand—"I can tell from your looks and manners that you are a man of intelligence, ability and culture."

As a matter of form, however, he had Mr. Hetfield retire to another room and write out a letter of application to the President. This, Mr. Hetfield prepared in a moment, and, returning, handed it to the Postmaster-General.

"Excellent! Excellent!"—ejaculated Mr. Bissell.—"It's a hard thing for a man to write such a letter under sudden pressure. I remember that in a similar experience of my own I had to get the help of a skilful lawyer. But you have written here a most admirable document. It fully and concisely states your case, and you have addressed the President correctly, which few men know how to do."

Turning over the letter of application, Mr. Bissell wrote across the back a short sentence or two, signed his name, and said:

"Mr. Hetfield, you're appointed."

What he had written was:

"I hereby appoint, subject to the approval of the President and the Senate of the United States, John M. Hetfield postmaster of the post-office in Plainfield, N. J."

This endorsement, said Mr. Bissell, would be sent to the President immediately, and would speedily reach the Senate.

It was 2:30 when Mr. Bissell and his visitors parted, the Plainfielders carrying with them the pleasant memory of a most cordial and courteous reception.

They then paid a visit to Senator McPherson, who greeted them warmly. He spoke with dignified emphasis of the worth and character of Congressman Dunn, and said he did not feel like opposing anyone whom Mr. Dunn saw fit to recommend, as he was sure Mr. Dunn would appoint no one not fit and competent. He unqualifiedly endorsed Mr. Hetfield, and said he would use his efforts to secure his confirmation in the Senate as soon as the name was sent in. He felt that the petition of so many Plainfield leading business and professional men, and Mr. Hetfield's own business success, were sufficient proof of his competency, and since he had met Mr. Hetfield he was fully satisfied that he was a competent and desirable candidate.

Senator Smith also pledged his support.

The reception accorded by Senator McPherson was of the same delightful courtesy which characterizes that statesman's every action. Judge Coddington and Mr. Hetfield were most pleasantly treated, and they remarked the popularity of Congressman Dunn among public men on every hand. Mr. Dunn showed himself to be a favorite, and testimonials were heard from various quarters that Mr. Dunn's speeches ranked among the very best of the session. He has friends everywhere in Washington, and his record is such as surely to win him more friends than ever at home.

Mr. Hetfield, Plainfield's next postmaster, is a progressive and capable man, in the full vigor of 35 years of life. He was born in the house still occupied by his father, Levi Hetfield, 322 Madison avenue, and his own home, 410 Central avenue, is graced by a charming life-companion and a sturdy and handsome five-year-old son, Clarence.

By the right of birth and breeding and by earnest, quiet, gentlemanly efforts, Mr. Hetfield has won an honored success against heavy odds. He freely gives credit to Judge Coddington for his share in the battle and the victory, and he feels that the full and gratifying endorsement of the rulers of the nation is ample repudiation of attacks against him. It is pleasant to note that not even his bitterest opponents could find anything in his personal reputation to assail.

A GOOD MAN AT REST.

Funeral of J. K. VanArsdale from the Church in Which He Was a Pillar.

Funeral services were held over the remains of John K. VanArsdale yesterday afternoon. At the residence, 120 Grove street, Rev. Wm. R. Richards read from the Scriptures and prayed. In a few brief remarks he told of the personal expressions of loss which had been made at the church prayer-meeting Wednesday evening. Two solos were sung by Elmer E. Kunyon.

In the Crescent Avenue Church over 400 people were present. Rev. J. O. McKelvey read the 90th Psalm and prayed. Pastor Richards told of the value of Mr. VanArsdale's services to the church. He had been an elder fourteen years and for eleven years the Clerk of the Session. The importance of his work could be estimated from the fact that one-half of the 500 pages of session records were in his handwriting. The elders were much perplexed by the problem as to who would continue his work and prepare the papers for the annual meeting next month. In the church Mr. VanArsdale had not occupied a prominent position, but had remained near the door, greeting members and welcoming strangers.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman said that his friend, like Enoch, truly walked with God. The secret of his close communion with his Maker was his early dedication to God by his father. He had testified that he knew of no time in his life when he had not loved God. His conversion was not at any fixed time, as explained by Mr. Honeyman, who told of incidents which showed his faith in God in early years. Mr. VanArsdale had received a college education but his disposition was so retiring and modest that his own pastor did not know that he had for years read the Greek Testament. He was an honest, true and faithful Christian, but his crowning characteristic was his spirituality. We had no reason to mourn for him, but had better mourn because we had not been as good as he, and so live that we would finally join him. Dr. Richards followed with prayer and then the people were permitted to view the remains.

The choir sang "Abide With Me", "Lead, Kindly Light" and "The Home Life". The pall-bearers were the elders of the church, William McDowell Corlell, L. N. Lovell, Henry C. Squires, John Leal and Frederick H. Andrews. There were present from the Chatham National Bank, New York, where Mr. VanArsdale had been senior bookkeeper, Cashier Doremus and Bookkeepers Hart, Carpenter and VanFleet. Their floral offering was of pink roses. Among others were a cross and crown from the Misses Elliott; palm leaves and roses from the elders of the church; wreath of heliotrope and roses from Miss Lincoln; and from Warren Chapel, roses from the Junior Christian Endeavor Society and from the teachers of the Primary Department; sago palm and roses from the teachers, and calla lilies from the Christian Endeavor Society.

The body was placed in a vault in Hillside Cemetery.

Notes of the Church.

[From Grace Parish Record.]

The Easter decorations were exceedingly beautiful and artistic. The work was done by the Altar Guild. The floral bell was donated by Mrs. Cruikshank.

There can be little or no doubt that a majority of the pew holders in the church are ready and willing to unite in making the pews free for the evening service.

L. A. Rheaume of Watchung avenue donated the material, and very kindly allowed the Association the use of the machinery in his mill to construct the ladder used at the children's service on Easter Day. After removing the decorations, the ladder will be found to be a useful and permanent article added to the church property.

All Next Week.

Theatre-goers are glad to learn of the engagement for six night and Saturday afternoon matinee, of Minnie Lester and her own company, band and orchestra. The first performance will be given Monday night, when Miss Lester will produce the funny comedy drama, "A Little Busy Body". This play demands a competent company to interpret the pretty story so charmingly told. This and much more Miss Lester has surrounded herself with this season. Besides her own company, Miss Lester carries the scenery and calcium effects to properly produce all her plays of which there is a change nightly. The prices are 10, 20 and 30 cents.

The unprecedented sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup provokes competition; but the people cling to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

VIGOROUS AT 93.

A Clergyman from Plainfield Writes Home of His Veteran Parishioners.

A private letter from Rev. W. J. Leonard, formerly of Plainfield, who is settled temporarily in Bolton, near Boston, Mass., over the First Congregational (Unitarian) Church, organized in 1740, contains the following of interest to all his friends:

"Just as I was about seating myself to write I had a call from one of my people, a quaint old gentleman, well along in his 89th year, who I am always glad to help while away the hours that are hanging heavy in his old age. He is well preserved mentally and physically, but has no resources within on which to draw. What a contrast in this respect to that other parishioner of mine, Rev. Dr. Stone, who will be 93 this month! He is never lonely. He is always studying, and for the most part his attention is given to the Greek and Latin classics, which he reads without using a lexicon. His memory is quick and never seems to fail him. He finds him a very helpful friend, especially in talking with him on English literature of this century, the principal writers of which were his contemporaries and whose works he seems to be as familiar with as if he were fresh from the college class room. He is a remarkable man and although less known than Dr. Furness, is probably much the better scholar. Please remember that this oldest minister in the Unitarian denomination is a member of my parish! He is one year older than the delightful Dr. Furness of Philadelphia and his ordination antedates the latter's by one year. * * * *

"We send greeting to the good people of All Souls, and hope the time is coming when the little church may win more souls if not all souls to its way of thinking."

A Fountain Fairy's March Visit.

The entertainment given by the young people in the parish-house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Evons, last evening, was well attended.

The programme was interesting, and reflected much credit on the participants. NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Dunellen.

Rev. Mr. Martine was in Plainfield today on business.

Walter L. Hetfield says that the fine of Michael Gallagher will be paid.

There will be many changes in real estate holdings in the borough, the first of April.

The park around the railroad station is being improved, and presents an attractive appearance.

Frank Wyncoop will accept the position of trustee to which he was elected at the school meeting, and his supporters are happy.

The dance held in Friendship Hall last night was a delightful event, and much praise is due to the committee for their efforts to make the evening one of much pleasure.

Rev. Mr. Kinsey will attend the conference of the Methodist Church in Newark next week Wednesday and Thursday, and will deliver an address before the Epworth League in the Centenary M. E. Church Thursday evening.

The entertainment given by the Epworth League of the Methodist Church last evening was an enjoyable affair, and many attended. A programme of music and recitations was given, and the evening was passed most pleasantly.

Scotch Plains.

August Scheelen of Fanwood and Miss Fannie Hood of New York city are to be married May 15. The ceremony will take place in Mr. Scheelen's home, Jerusalem Hill, between Scotch Plains and Westfield.

The Charity Benefit.

Plainfield's charitable people sustained the efforts of Madame Iza Lezam to benefit the charity fund by attending the entertainment in Music Hall last night in such a crowd that Madame Lezem is out of pocket nearly $35. There were 80 people in the hall.

The dialect work of John F. Dillon and the negro sketches of Billy Williams were clever, although their reception was not so cheerful as a larger audience might have made it. Miss Lola Iberry, dancer of the Eden Musee, did not appear because of her unfortunate illness. Miss Minnie Renwood's dances were on the programme as a closing number, but the small attendance necessarily shortened the entertainment, and Miss Renwood drove up just as the people were leaving the house.

The Pas Oriental by four boys was very amusing, and the scarf dance unique and beautiful. Little Frida's recitation and skirt dance were very pleasing. She is a most charming little maiden. The reveille de fleurs by twelve girls was the most elaborate feature. All of the participants did credit to their instructress. Madame Lezem, in spite of the outcome of the affair, heartily thanks all who assisted her.

Progressive Euchre Prizes.

A charming progressive euchre party was given by Mr. and Mrs. George Evans, last evening, at their home on Rockview avenue. After the excellent playing was finished, the prizes were awarded as follows:

First ladies' prize, gold bonbon spoon, Mrs. George Evans; booby, Dresden comb and brush tray, Mrs. Wm. Stillman; first men's prize, gold pencil, George Evans; booby, silver key-ring, Mr. Brooks.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Church, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George Evans, Mr. St. J. McCutchen, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Howell, Mr. and Mrs. William Stillman, Mr. and Mrs. George Hallock, Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Douglass, Mr. and Mrs. Northrup, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. George T. Rogers, the Misses Florence I. and Minnie Marsh.

Casino Concert Tonight.

Miss Shoemaker, who will appear with the Schumann Lady Quartette under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in the Casino this evening, is spoken of by the Cedar Rapids Gazette as follows:

"Miss Shoemaker introduced a novelty in a series of graceful and beautiful gestures, poses and attitudes, accompanied by music. The audience was taken by storm, if the expression can be used for a capture which was made in perfect silence except for the rippling accompaniment."

Great Victory for Crack-Shot Smith.

Charles Smith of this city did some wonderful shooting and won a famous victory on the Marion grounds yesterday. The match was against 19 other skilled marksmen, including Elliott, champion wing shot, and Rollo Heikes, champion blue-rock shooter of the world. Each man paid $15 entrance fee, and shot at 15 birds. Mr. Smith killed all, and won first money, $90.

A VETERAN'S VERDICT.

The War is Over. A Well-known Soldier, Correspondent and Journalist Makes a Disclosure.

Indiana contributed her thousands of brave soldiers to the war, and no state bears a better record in that respect than it does. In literature it is rapidly acquiring an enviable place. In war and literature Solomon Yewell, well known as a writer as "Sol," has won an honorable position. During the late war he was a member of Co. M, 2d. N. Y. Cavalry and of the 13th Indiana Infantry Volunteers. Regarding an important circumstance he writes as follows:

"Several of us old veterans here are using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills, all of them giving splendid satisfaction. In fact, we have never used remedies that compare with them. Of the Pills we must say they are the best combination of the qualities required in a preparation of their nature we have ever known. We have none but words of praise for them. They are the outgrowth of a new principle in medicine, and tone up the system wonderfully. We say to all, try these remedies."—Solomon Yewell, Marion, Ind., Dec. 5, 1892.

These remedies are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or sent direct by the Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, six bottles $5, express prepaid. They positively contain neither opiates nor dangerous drugs.

BLAND WILL NOT GIVE UP.

Will Try to Override the Veto, and if Neccessary Frame Another Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—Senators and representatives were free in expressing their views on the veto of the Bland silver bill. Mr. Lafe Pence, of Colorado, characterized the situation as a fight to the extent of $55,000,000 between payments from our assets and from borrowed money. "The money power," he continued, "wants government bonds, and the president is going to give them to them and wants the law authorizing their issuance made clearer."

Mr. Charles Tracey, of New York, said: "The message amounts to a recommendation that no more silver be issued, and shows that the president is firm in his opposition to any legislation that will send gold to a premium."

Mr. Raynor, of Maryland, one of the democratic members of the coinage committee, considers the message a clear and correct statement of the condition of our finances. "The veto may hurt us in certain sections of the country," he said, "but that cannot be helped."

Mr. Bryan (dem., Neb.), commenting on the situation, said: "The south and west will get together and rid themselves of eastern domination and restore the gold and silver coinage of the constitution, for which several democratic platforms have declared."

Mr. Bland (dem., Mo.), the author of the seigniorage bill, discussed the president's action philosophically. "The president," said he, "raises the old bond question again. The message makes it very clear that a gold standard means a perpetual issue of bonds. Consequently no currency legislation can be had without consulting the people who buy the bonds. The purpose of the bill was to utilize the silver in the treasury to pay the public expenditures, and thus make unnecessary an issue of bonds. The president insists that this cannot be done without an issue of bonds to get gold to redeem the seigniorage with, after it is coined. In other words, there can be no further coinage of silver unless we first sell bonds to get gold to redeem the silver with."

Mr. Bland further said that he would attempt at once to pass the bill over the veto.

"What will be the effect of the veto?"

"The effect will be to make silver the predominant feature in the coming election, and the people will elect a president in sympathy with them—someone not so tender of the interests of the bulls and bears of Wall street. Not only a seigniorage bill, but a free coinage bill will ultimately become the law of the land."

"Shall you try to pass a free coinage bill through the house?" he was asked.

"I shall, and, moreover," continued Mr. Bland, "I shall not submit it to college professors and grammarians, but will draw it so that if it becomes a law it will accomplish all of its purposes."

Mr. Oates (dem., Ala.) said: "The effect of the veto will be bad in the south."

Mr. Frye (rep., Me.)—The sentiments expressed in the veto are sound and meet with my approval.

Mr. Brice (dem., Ohio)—With the general subject in the veto I agree, but I believe he should not have said anything about bonds. That would have come better in a separate message.

Mr. Hawley (rep., Conn.)—Cleveland has adopted the arguments of the great business world and these are the arguments of the republican party.

Mr. Lodge (rep., Mass.)—The veto is right and the document sound.

HILDA HATHAWAY'S HEROISM.

By WILLIAM PENDLETON CHIPMAN.

(Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.)

There being nothing to prevent, Uncle Toby smuggled an old dugout around to this place, and went down the bay in the darkness to the steamer. He returned the following night with the surprising intelligence that his young master, Lieutenant Gasque, was in command of the vessel, and in confirmation of his tidings produced a package of letters from him for the loved ones at Oak Bluffs.

From this time there was weekly communication between the cutter and the mansion, and Tobe did good service, furthermore, in reporting the movements of the enemy on the shore. Many an attempt to run the blockade was frustrated because of the faithful negro's timely word.

Several weeks passed in this way, and finally, Lieutenant Gasque, yielding to a fervent longing to see his aunt and Hilda, ventured to return with Uncle Toby, and by his knowledge of the grounds successfully avoided the pickets and gained the house.

Before he returned to his cutter he made known to his aunt and Hilda that he was daily expecting the arrival of another steamer, and then a secret attempt was to be made to capture the fort at the mouth of the river and to gain possession of the cotton known to be held in store there.

If the other cutter arrived in time, just a week from that night, under the cover of the darkness, 200 men were to be landed on the sandy point; the pickets were to be surprised, and then a push was to be made for the fortification of the enemy.

Lieutenant Gasque, on account of his familiarity with the locality, was going to lead this expedition in person, and the hope was to reach the fort before any alarm could be given and attack it in the rear. Meantime both cutters were to move up the bay, over the bar and attack the fortification from the water side. Before this combined effort, it was expected the enemy would be defeated and the loaded barges known to be lying at anchor there secured.

In case of any discovery of the movement on the part of the enemy or any other occurrence likely to render the attempt unsafe, Uncle Toby was, at an early hour on the appointed night, to display a signal light three times in rapid succession from the extreme end of the sandy point and repeat it until answered from the cutters in the offing. Otherwise the men would be landed at midnight. The expedition, if successful, was designed not only to give the enemy a crushing defeat, but to enable Lieutenant Gasque to remove the inmates of the mansion house to a safer retreat.

The long and anxious week drew to a close. Late in the evening of the sixth day Uncle Toby returned from a reconnoitering trip up in the region of the Confederate fort, and with consternation depicted upon his sable face sought an interview with his mistress.

"Missus Em'ly," he said, "dere's a pow'ful lot of new sojers come down to de fort, an dey be doublin de pickets long de shoar, an I dunno webber it bab jes happ'n so or dey be 'spectin dis byar expedishun ob Massa Ralph."

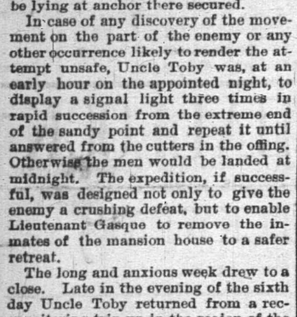
This information filled Mrs. Hathaway with alarm, and with every confidence in Tobe she hastened to consult with him as to the course of action which, under the existing circumstances, seemed wisest.

"I 'spects," said he ruefully, "dat we better hab Yaller Jake to gib de signal tomorrer night from de p'int in case it be onsafe fer Massa Ralph to lan, while I go off to de cutt'r tonight an 'quaint massa wib de sarcumstances."

It seemed to be the only course left open to them, so Mrs. Hathaway, after consulting with Hilda, called in Yellow Jake, another household servant, and thoroughly instructed him in the part he was to perform. Then Tobe, with no thought of the miscarrying of his plan, left the mansion for his self imposed trip to the cutter.

Early the next afternoon Jake, with a small lantern snugly hid under his coarse jacket, left the house and entered the woods to the west of the plantation, intending to work his way slowly around to the vicinity of the fort, and the moment he discovered any suspicious movement on the part of the enemy hasten back to the sandy point, in readiness to give, at the proper hour, the warning signal to the vessels down the harbor.

As hour after hour of the afternoon wore away, the ladies at Oak Bluffs grew more hopeful. There had been no new developments on the part of the Confederates; heavy clouds were fast covering the sky, and evidently the night would be dark and favorable to the success of the expedition. Mrs. Hathaway and Hilda noted these circumstances, and their alarm of the evening before subsided.



"I 'spects dat we better hab Yaller Jake to gib de signal tomorrer night."

With bright faces they gathered around the table for an early supper; future plans, to follow necessarily if the expedition was a success, were eagerly discussed, and no one thought of the dark cloud already overshadowing them, for suddenly, and interrupting their conversation, the dining room door burst open, and a small black urchin came dashing in, exclaiming:

"Golly, missus, wha's dat a-comin up de road?"

For answer a squad of cavalry wheeled rapidly up the grass grown road that led to the house and dismounted. Driving all the servants from their quarters into the mansion, the officer in charge said to the last retreating negro:

"Here, give our respects to your mistress and say that we beg permission to tarry a few hours beneath her roof. No member of the household shall be disturbed, but all must remain indoors."

By this time a company of soldiers had appeared, and pickets were at once placed about the grounds and house, while the officers lounged upon the verandas and conversed in knots of two or three. Two of the soldiers found their way to the kitchen to set things in motion for a supper for the officers. The colored cook was highly indignant that her domains should be thus invaded, and her indignation was increased when she was told to prepare a meal for those whom she styled "low 'Federate ossifers."

There was no help for it, however, and preparations were immediately begun, amid many scolding remarks from Aunt Hannah.

When the ladies of the mansion saw that the enemy had taken possession of their home, a sudden terror seized them. Their coming at this particular time showed plainly that the plans of Lieutenant Gasque had in some way been discovered. But even if that were so, they now reasoned, Jake would surely know of it, and before the men could land would give the prearranged signal. This reasoning gave them even a feeling of relief, for if their friends did not land the life of Lieutenant Gasque would not be risked.

About an hour after the arrival of the troops supper was served in the dining room, and in a few minutes the table was surrounded by a laughing, hungry company.

Aunt Hannah, the cook, in spite of her ebony face, was unusually keen and intelligent, and she knew that any information she could gather of the enemy's plans might prove serviceable to her mistress. As her duties called her into the dining room, therefore, she listened intently to the conversation of the officers, and when she could no longer linger about the table she thought of the huge pantry, separated from the dining room only by a board partition, and in this she secreted herself.

It was not long before she overheard one of the officers telling another how, on the arrival of the second cutter in the offing, the Confederates had at once suspected that an attack was about to be made upon the fort by the Federals. This led them to put the Hathaway mansion under strict surveillance and to strengthen the forces at the garrison.

The night before the pickets had surprised and captured Uncle Toby as he was attempting to communicate with the cutters, but nothing could be learned from him, even under the severest threats, respecting the plans of the enemy. When Jake was secured a few hours before, however, he made a complete revelation of Lieutenant Gasque's intentions and the part he was expected to play in giving the warning signal. On this disclosure the squad of men had been sent down to the mansion to prevent any communication with the steamers, and an ambuscade was to be arranged on the sandy point, by which it was hoped to capture Lieutenant Gasque and all his men.

Aunt Hannah waited to hear no more, but as noiselessly as her 200 pounds of avoirdupois would allow left the closet and hastened up stairs in search of her young mistress. She met Hilda in the upper hall, and with suppressed excitement began her story.

CHAPTER II.

"Oh, Missus Hilda, de orfulest things be 'bout to happ'n to Massa Ralph; he's to be cotched dis bery nite an killed dead wib all his men, 'deed he is!"

In her excitement Aunt Hannah had drawn a little on her imagination and thus announced the most direful of calamities as about to fall upon her young master and his comrades.

Hilda caught hold of the woman's arm convulsively.

"What is it, Hannah? Do not keep me waiting!"

"Well, ye see, Missus Hilda," went on Hannah, "I wus in de pantry back ob de dinin room, an I heerd de ossifer tellin how dey had fix'd t'ings to cotch Massa Ralph an his men when dey lan on de san bar; dey's goin to kill dem all."

"But, Hannah," said Hilda, drawing a deep sigh, "Ralph will not land, for Jake will give the signal."

"No, he won't gib no sign, needer, chile," stoutly interposed the woman, "'cause both Tobe an Jake be cotched, too, an though Uncle Toby neber tole a t'ing dat good fer nuthin Yaller Jake hab dun sole hisself to de en'my, an dat's how dey know all 'bout Massa Ralph's expedishun."

Hilda's heart grew heavy as she listened, and all the horror of the coming struggle rose before her. But not once did that courageous heart waver. That signal should be given.

But who should give it? A picket of the enemy was at that moment standing before each door. None of the servants, even if they could be trusted with so grave a charge, could pass out of the entrances.

"Oh, Ralph," cried Hilda to herself, while a great sob shook her frame, "you must not come up the bay tonight. That signal must be given!"

Breckinridge's Answers to Pollard's Charges.

Never at Any Time Promised to Marry Her—His Visit to Mrs. Blackburn's Made After a Threat—Placed Himself at the Plaintiff's Mercy—She Followed Him to New York and Tried to Shoot Him.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Col. Breckinridge has, so far, occupied the witness chair in the Pollard suit about ten hours and it is not probable that he will finish answering questions about his relations with Miss Pollard before Wednesday evening next. The direct examination will probably close at noon Monday, and it is believed that the attorneys for the plaintiff are preparing for a more rigid cross-examination of the old defendant than Miss Pollard was forced to submit to.

Col. Breckinridge's testimony yesterday was a general denial of many events alleged by the plaintiff and explanation of others. He denied positively that he had ever, at any time, promised to marry her.

At one point in the proceedings Miss Pollard created a scene. The witness said he told the plaintiff frequently that she certainly was bound in gratitude and by a nearer tie to marry Mr. Rodes and that she ought to marry him. As this sentence was finished Miss Pollard rose in her chair and tried to shake off Mr. Carlisle when he attempted to pull her down. Her eyes were full of tears and in a broken voice she said, not very loud, but loud enough to be heard throughout the court room, "I say he never did—" "He's not telling the truth about anything."

"S-h-h," said Mr. Carlisle.

"Keep quiet, Miss Pollard," said Judge Bradley, "or I'll have to send you out."

Col. Breckinridge watched the little scene coolly and calmly and when Miss Pollard had settled down he repeated what he had just testified.

He said he first heard of the existence of an engagement between plaintiff and himself through a notice in a Washington paper inserted by the plaintiff. He also received several letters from her at the time threatening exposure if he did not marry her.

Miss Pollard and himself, he said, had made an agreement that he should pretend to Mrs. Luke C. Blackburn, the widow of the Kentucky governor, that he and she were engaged to be married in order to divert the suspicions which Mrs. Blackburn entertained, but this agreement, he said, was conditioned on the plaintiff going away out of the lives of both of them. This arrangement was made, he said, after she had several times threatened to kill him and herself. He was afraid she would make a scene on the street by attempting to do so. The agreement by which he was to call on Mrs. Blackburn was made at his boarding house where the plaintiff called one morning.

"I told her," he said, "if she would break up the relations I would trust her, and to that extent put myself into her power, and would go to Mrs. Blackburn's with her and would pretend that there was an engagement between us. I said to her: 'You have put me in the attitude where there is no alternative left for me to do anything in order to avoid a terrible public scandal but to trust to you, and if I don't do this I suppose there will be a public attempt by you in the streets to take my life,' and I put myself in her power and went with her to Mrs. Blackburn's."

Miss Pollard, he said, did not go away as she had agreed, but said that if he did not leave Washington she would tell Mrs. Blackburn of their relations. The witness then said he went to Mrs. Blackburn with a plausible story, and she agreed to urge the plaintiff to go away.

Finally the defendant reached that point in his narrative where Miss Pollard met him at the Hoffman house in New York, two days following his private marriage to Mrs. Wing. He arrived in New York, he said, on April 29, the day of his marriage, and on going to the Hoffman house two days later, May 1, to get his clothes which he had left there, he found the door between the adjoining room and his room ajar. In the next room he saw Miss Pollard, only half dressed, and looking apparently as if she had just awakened.

"She demanded of me, somewhat imperiously," he said, "where I had been for two days. I replied somewhat more rudely than I should, perhaps, that it was not her concern where I had been. She said she intended to know. Meantime I had walked back towards my room, and as I turned she had a pistol levelled at me, about the distance of the room and she was rushing towards me. I pulled the door to and turned the catch, so that it would be impossible for her to get at me with her pistol.

The witness then described at considerable length how he had finally succeeded in getting the pistol from her by repeated threats to send for the police, and by his really ringing for a porter after she had threatened to shoot through the door. After that they had a talk, which resulted in her agreeing to go to a house in 31st street and he left the hotel.

"I married my kinswoman, the daughter of Mr. Robert Scott, of Kentucky, and the widow of Mr. Cumsey Wing, a young Kentucky gentleman who died abroad," said Col. Breckinridge in acknowledging his secret marriage, "on April 29, in New York."

Describing what happened after his return to Washington, Col. Breckinridge told of Miss Pollard's call on him at the house of Mrs. Wing as follows:

"One night she came to a house in Jefferson place, where I was with my wife. We were sitting in the dining room, and she rushed in with very great excitement and said: 'Excuse me, Mrs. Wing, but I want to see Mr. Breckinridge on a matter of great importance, and turned to me and said: 'I want to see you.' I then turned to my wife and said: 'I think I had better go with her.' We got out on the street; there was not much conversation. She said: 'I intend to end this matter, and am going to kill you.' I said, 'all-right; this is your last day.' Her statement that I said a word disrespectful of my wife and that I maligned her in any degree, is absolutely a fabrication, without a shadow of truth to justify it. She said she intended to end this thing by killing me and as we walked on she said that it was a good thing to end it by killing me in that sort of scandal in which Laura Fair had killed Parker Crittendon. She did not intend to kill me alone; she intended to have no trial about it, but would also kill herself. She wanted to be that kind of heroine. All this time she had been very much excited. There had been no effort on my part, however, to calm her fears; no protestations of love; nothing about her being a poor, nervous, hysterical child."

They went to the office of Mayor Moore, the witness said, and he told the chief of police that Miss Pollard had threatened to kill him and that he must put her or himself in the chief's custody. He told the chief that he wanted to relate all the circumstances that had brought "this woman and me to this. I want to tell you what has happened between us so that you can decide which one to arrest."

Breckinridge said at this Miss Pollard broke out into a flood of tears and begged him not to tell. He attempted several times, he said, to tell the chief the story, but each time was stopped by the plaintiff's hysterical actions. He finally decided to say nothing more and left the office, the chief expressing the hope that they could settle the affair between themselves. Once on the street she again asked him to marry her, he said, and he told her there could be nothing of that sort between them. He said she could not get another dollar from him and must henceforth look to some one else for support, that he was ready, if necessary, to stand exposure. She then said that he should be more patient with her, that she was on the road to become a mother, and in that condition could not control herself. He said that he told her that he did not believe her, and on her naming Dr. Lincoln as the physician waiting upon her, he accompanied her to his office and there her story was verified by the doctor. He then told Dr. Lincoln that he placed her under his charge.

After they left the doctor's office, he said, he told her that if it was his child, and that he would know it after it was born, he would see that it was well cared for and that she was provided for until that was over. They went to the house of Mrs. Thomas, he said, and entering she went up stairs and he to the library. In a moment she returned with a pistol in her hand. He struggled with her, got possession of the revolver and left the house at once.

LAIDLAW AWARDED $25,000.

Speedy Verdict in His Suit for Damages Against Russell Sage.

NEW YORK, March 31.—The jury in the suit of William R. Laidlaw against Russell Sage, the multi-millionaire, for $50,000 damages for injuries received in Sage's office at the time Norcross exploded a dynamite bomb, Laidlaw claiming that Sage held him in front of him, thereby using Laidlaw as a shield, after being out one hour returned a verdict for the plaintiff in $25,000 damages.

A murmer of satisfaction ran around the court room when it was announced.

Lawyer Taggert moved for a new trial on the usual grounds, but Judge Patterson denied the motion. He granted a stay of execution for 40 days. The lawyers got $1,000 for their services.

It transpired after that the jury took only one ballot, which stood ten to two. They then discussed the matter and the other two came over. The discussion was about the amount of damages some of the jurors wanting to give Laidlaw $50,000. An appeal will be taken by Mr. Sage's lawyers.

BISMARCK'S BIRTHDAY

A Three Days' Celebration at Friedrichsruhe.

Presented With a Casket With an Address Containing 100,000 Signatures Gathered in the Rhine District and Some Choice Old Wine By a Delegation of Women.

HAMBURG, March 31.—The celebration of Prince Bismarck's 78th birthday, which will fall on to-morrow, began at Friedrichsruhe yesterday. Fifteen women from Hesse-Nassau and Baden left the city in the morning for Bismarck's home with a case of Palatinate wine, vintage of 1811, on the train with them. They went in carriages from Friedrichsruhe station to the castle, where they were received by the prince and princess and Count William Bismarck.

The old chancellor had been warned of the deputation's coming and he appeared on the castle steps in the familiar uniform of the Magdeburg Cuirassiers, "Von Seydlitz." After he and the princess had shaken hands with all the members of the deputation, Fraulein Bocking, daughter of a high government official, presented to him a casket containing an address with 100,000 signatures. All the signatures had been gathered in the Rhine country, where preparations for the present demonstration had been making under the supervision of a committee of women since mid winter.

Prince Bismarck thanked Fraulein Bocking cordially for her words of praise. He spoke a few words and then stepped back to let Baroness Heylworms present the wine, which had been bought with money collected by women in Rhineland. At the close of her speech the baroness gave the prince a glass of Liebfraumilch wine nearly a hundred years old.

Frau Koeller, of Karlsruhe, presented an address for the women of Baden. In thanking her and Baroness Heylworms Bismarck said that such testimonials of esteem afforded him great and lasting pleasure. For the ladies who had not shunned the fatigue of a long journey to show their regard for him, he could have only feelings of admiration. They had shown true German pluck. The presents which they had brought with them were so many proofs that the spirit of unity was as vigorous as ever in the German empire.

At luncheon Bismarck proposed a toast to Fraulein Elenkoben, who initiated the plan to present the wine and the addresses. Frau Keiser, of Freiburg, spoke eulogistically of the prince's public career, his devotion to the empire, and the debt which all Germany would owe him forever. She wished him a long life and robust health.

After lunch Bismarck asked permission to smoke, it was granted by the women in chorus and the prince then filled his great pipe and lighted it. As he smoked he talked with each member of the deputation and handed her his photograph with his autograph on the back.

Throughout the reception the prince was in high spirits. He made many humerous remarks and had much to say about the products and history of the Rhine valley. His health, apparently, is as good as ever and Dr. Schweninger, who was with the family during the reception, said he was as well as before his illness at Kissingen.

A deputation from Duesseldorf also went to Friedrichsruhe and presented a life boat called the Norderney to the prince. The usual preparations are making for the further celebration of the birthday.

Special messengers will be employed to deliver cards, letters and telegrams of congratulation from the postoffice to the castle. As the prince is feeling exceptionally well, Dr. Schweninger will allow him to receive personally all the deputations.

LYING IN STATE.

An Enormous Crowd Quietly Receives Kossuth's Remains at Budapest.

BUDAPEST, March 31.—The municipal authorities, the deputies of the reichstag and deputations from scores of civil societies met at the railroad station shortly before the arrival of the Kossuth funeral train. Thousands of men and women filled the space back of the station. The crowd was absolutely silent while the body was being removed from the train. All stood uncovered.

The procession moved slowly from the station to the National museum, with an enormous crowd following closely on the heels of the official bodies. Hardly a loud word was spoken on the way and the spectators who filled the roofs and windows along the route could hear only the sound of tramping feet.

The body will lie in the museum until noon to-morrow.

Crisp Says He Would Cherish a Senatorship.

A Sense of Duty, However, Compels Him to Decline the Appointment to the Late Mr. Colquitt's Place Must Put Aside His Ambition for the Present—His Colleagues Pleased.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Speaker Crisp received many callers this morning, who expressed to him their feeling of relief that he had declined the appointment as United States senator to succeed the late Alfred Holt Colquitt. It was the general impression all along that he would decline, in accordance with the pressure brought to bear upon him by his colleagues in the house.

The speaker received a delegation of newspaper men who had congregated in the hotel lobby to get a copy of his message to the governor. He accorded a hearty reception to the members of the press and engaged in a joking conversation upon the present events in the house while his clerk prepared the telegram. The speaker had nothing to say in regard to his declination, but produced the message. It is as follows:

Hon. W. J. NORTHEN, Governor, Atlanta, Ga.:

I have an ambition to represent Georgia in the senate of the United States and appreciate most highly the appointment you have given me, but for the present, at least, I must put aside my ambition.

I was, as you know, unanimously nominated speaker. In accepting this office, I have incurred obligations to our party throughout the country. A very large majority of the democratic members have united in a request that for the remainder of this congress I continue in the position to which they have elected me. They base this request upon grounds which I cannot in modesty repeat but which I cannot in duty ignore.

As speaker I feel to some extent responsible for the action of the house. I feel a pride in its organization, and have a settled purpose, so far as my influence extends, to have brought before it and acted upon, bills which, if enacted into laws, will redeem to the fullest extent our party pledges. This, I think, will serve the interests of the people of Georgia.

I am grateful to you for the hon r you have done me. I am grateful to the numerous friends throughout the state who have seemed pleased with and who have urged my acceptance of this appointment and beg that you and they will believe what I, in the utmost sincerity say—that in declining it I am sacrificing a cherished ambition to what I regard as a sense of duty.

CHARLES F. CRISP.

PRIZE FIGHT IN A CHURCH.

A Genuine Mill Near Reading, Pa., Raided By the Sheriff.

READING, Pa., March 31.—Sheriff Fahrenbach and Police Sergeant Quackenbos, of this city, stopped a prize fight in the Methodist church at Wernersville yesterday.

They found the ring pitched in the centre of the church, and the benches and pews occupied by a motley crowd, who were prepared to see the fight in comfort, a good supply of liquid refreshments being on hand.

The principals were Mike Butler, of Wilmington, known as "Boston Mike" and Henry Kramer, of this city, known as "Fatty Kramer."

They entered the ring at 12:25 a. m., and the fight had progressed for five minutes when the officers arrived. In the first round Kramer scored a knock down. They had clinched in the second round, and while they were wrestling on the floor the fight was stopped. No arrests were made.

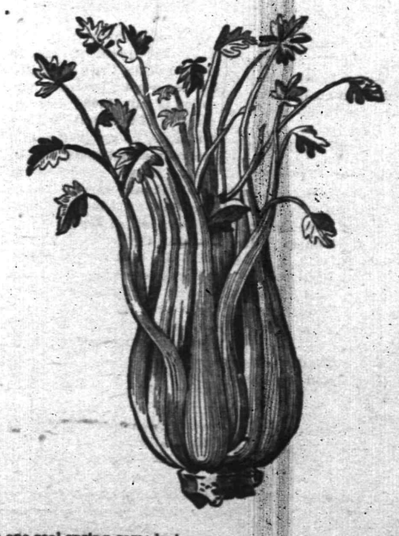
PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Best Spring Remedy in the World---It Makes People Well!



There is one real spring remedy!

There is one true specific for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system, and that is Paine's celery compound, so generally prescribed by physicians. It is probably the most remarkably remedy that the scientific research of this country has produced. Prof. Edward E Phelps, M. D., LL. D., of Dartmouth college, first prescribed what is now known the world over as Paine's celery compound, a positive cure for dyspepsia, biliousness, liver complaint, neuralgia, rheumatism, all nervous diseases and kidney troubles. For the latter, Paine's celery compound has succeeded again and again where everything else has failed.

The medical journals of this country and Europe have given more space in the last few years to the many remarkable cases where the use of Paine's celery compound has made people well, than to any other one subject.

CIRCULATION EXCEEDS THAT OF ALL OTHER PLAINFIELD DAILIES COMBINED.

The local political sensation of the day is the news exclusively published by The Daily Press yesterday of John M. Hetfield's official appointment by the Postmaster-General as postmaster of Plainfield.

It makes a difference whose ox is gored. When The Press agitated the rent question, landlords protested that they had a right to set their own prices and establish their rate of profit. Now that the insurance companies and lumber dealers are combining to establish a rate of profit proportionate to the rate enjoyed by local real-estate holders the landlords set up a howl and want The Press to plead their cause. The Press has already urged the local underwriters association to work for a reduction of insurance rates, and it trusts that the lumber dealers in their new combination will not make the cost of building so excessive as to drive builders elsewhere. By all means, keep down insurance and cost of building, but keep down rents also. Extravagant charges on any of these three items check the growth of a town just as much as do excessive taxes.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. PASSING POSTMASTER.

E. R. POPE AND HIS SHARE IN PLAINFIELD'S PUBLIC INTERESTS.

Notable Career of a Man Who Has Made His Fortune and Achieved His Successes Right at Home on His Native Soil.

In the midst of the speculation on who is to be postmaster of Plainfield, the public, accustomed to the prevailing excellence of its postal service, has been sighting the fact that with the coming of the new incumbent there will retire from the office a man who during two terms administered with signal ability. John M. Hetfield will be a most excellent official, eminently worthy of succeeding so competent a postmaster as Elias R. Pope.

For the ambitious young man the career of Elias R. Pope contains many lessons. He has by his own perseverance, by "keeping everlastingly at it", achieved a most notable series of successes, and made himself one of the most important men of the city, county and State.

Mr. Pope comes from a family long residents of and well known in the vicinity of Plainfield. His grandfather was a Washington Valley farmer, Samuel Pope. He served in the Revolutionary War and married a Miss Moore, who was pensioned at his death. Their children were Samuel, Joseph, Squire, James, Henry, John, Sarah and Rhoda. The latter married Augustus Moore of Smalleytown. Samuel became a prominent citizen of Jerseyville, Ill. All are dead.

John Pope was born in 1807. He learned the shoemaker's trade and did business in Dunellen until his death in 1874. He also tilled a few acres of land in Dunellen. He was for a long time a trustee of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church in New Market.

He married Sarah R., daughter of Barzilla Dunham, a resident of New Durham, who was five years younger than himself. To them were born Elias R., the subject of this sketch; Sarah E., Charles S., Howard A., Simon B., Asa D. and James C. Sarah Pope, deceased, married Edward Runyon and lived in Dunellen. David is now a bookkeeper in Plainfield. Charles made his home in Dunellen and died in 1884. Howard is now retiring from the dry-goods business. Simon lived in Dunellen and died in 1887. Asa is now engaged in the painting business in Plainfield. James is in the real estate and insurance business here with his brother Elias.

Elias R. Pope was born March 8, 1836. He obtained his education in the schools of his native place, Dunellen, and began to support himself when not yet 14 years old. In 1849 he came to Plainfield and secured a position as clerk with Isaac S. Dunham, who sold general merchandise and manufactured clothing. Mr. Pope was employed in this store for the next 17 years. He then left to start in business with two other young men.

Mr. Pope, Carman Parse and Alpheus L. Mundy, forming the firm of Pope, Parse & Mundy, in 1867 bought the business of Webster & Marsh, proprietors of a general store on the northeast corner of Front and Somerset streets. For six years the partnership continued. Then Mr. Mundy withdrew, to engage in business in Somerville and afterward in New Brunswick. Messrs. Pope & Parse were partners for three years, when Mr. Parse left. At the same time David and Howard Pope entered the firm, changing the name to Pope Brothers. David Pope withdrew in 1881.

The attention of Elias Pope was turned largely toward real estate in 1872, although he retained his interest in the store. He has since engaged in many real estate transactions and is now a large property owner, his interests not being confined to any particular part of the city or to one kind class of buildings and lots. His public-spirited nature, besides his personal interest in the growth of the city, has led him to advocate at every opportunity and to use his influence in securing many of the improvements which have made Plainfield what it is.

An extensive real estate and fire insurance business is now done by J. C. Pope & Co., a firm in which Elias Pope has been associated with his brother James for 11 years. Besides managing the branch office of the German American Insurance Company, the firm represents the Fire Association of Philadelphia, the Guardian of London, the Home of New York, the Williamsburg City and the Pennsylvania and the American of Philadelphia.

In financial matters Mr. Pope has been especially prominent in Plainfield. A founder of the Dime Savings Institution, he has been a treasurer since its organization in July, 1868. After having been a director of the First National Bank for ten years, he resigned in 1875 to join with others in establishing the City National Bank. He was chosen president of the new bank and served for four years. Since 1879 he has been vice-president. He has a large interest in the Plainfield Gaslight Company, of which he is president. He is also a large shareholder in and president of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Lighting Company. He was treasurer of the old Washington Fire Insurance Company of this city which transferred its business to the German-American.

When the Water Company of Plainfield was organized in 1890, Mr. Pope was one of the incorporators and was chosen treasurer, an office which he still holds.

He has had much to do with the settling up of estates during the last ten years. The Chancellor appointed him the administrator and receiver of the Job Male estate, valued at half a million, in January, 1890. At present he is settling up the Dr. Burlingham estate. Another financial work in which he is engaged is the arranging of the affairs of the insolvent firm, C. Schepflin & Co., of which he is assignee.

Of the Seventh-Day Baptist Memorial Fund by which the denominational university in Alfred Centre, N. Y., and the college in Milton, Wis., are supported, Mr. Pope has been a member and the treasurer of the board of trustees for 21 years.

During a term of fifteen years as president of the fire department of Plainfield his ability as a financier and practical business man was of great value to the city.

Although he has had his attention occupied by so many business matters, Mr. Pope had always taken an interest in politics, advocating the principles of the Republican party. He served a term as collector and treasurer of Union county in 1874-75, and the next fall was elected to the State Assembly. He spent an active term in the Legislature.

President Arthur appointed Mr. Pope postmaster of Plainfield Feb. 13, 1882. After serving a term he was succeeded by W. L. Force. In 1890 he returned to the post office under a commission signed by President Harrison.

For 28 years Mr. Pope has resided on the northwest corner of Fifth street and Park avenue. The handsome brick dwelling of 15 rooms in which he now lives was erected in 1885 and was one of the pioneers of this style of building in Plainfield. The architect was Oscar S. Teale.

Mr. Pope was married in 1858 to Miss Hannah Allen, daughter of Joseph P. and Clarissa Allen, of Shiloh, Cumberland county. They have two children, Frank A. and Edward G.

THE SCHOOL BOY

—is often a sufferer from headache. The seat of sick headache is not in the brain, for if you regulate the stomach and bowels you'll cure it. Too much brain-work and brain-tire brings on a rush of blood to the head with headache, dizziness or "nose bleed."

Miss BERTHA WOLFE, of Dayton, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "I suffered from loss of appetite, constipation, neuralgia, and great weakness, and had terrible attacks of sick headache very frequently; also nose bleed. My health was so poor that I was not able to go to school for two years. I took Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and in a short time I was strong and well. Many friends are taking your medicines, seeing what they have done for me."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR ANNIVERSARY

Interesting Celebration by the Washingtonville Society.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Washingtonville held its third anniversary last night in the beautiful little Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel. The chapel was well filled by the members and their friends from other societies, delegates being present from the sister societies of Plainfield and Dunellen, besides delegates from the Epworth League of Plainfield and Mt. Horeb. The rostrum was a bank of lilies and other flowering plants so that the reading desk was almost hidden from view, the Union County banner bearing the badges of the societies of the county was accorded a conspicuous place, as the members prize their charge very highly.

The meeting opened by the members singing "Coronation", in which all joined heartily. Then "Onward Christian Soldiers", followed by "Blessed Assurance" and "What a Wonderful Saviour." The Scripture was then read by Miss Beeching from I Samuel xvii:32 to 50; followed by prayer by the Rev. J. W. Richardson. In a few well chosen words Miss Beeching welcomed all present to the third anniversary of the society, followed by the singing of "Pass Along the Invitation." The report of the society was then read by John G. Bicknell, in which the growth of the society was shown to be blessed in its work, many new members coming in and joining the different church societies of Plainfield. The report was then read of the Juniors. This being their first birthday we append their report:

It does not seem possible that one whole year has passed since our Junior society was started. The year has been short, but pleasant and interesting, and leaves many pleasant memories. We have 22 of those who started with us, a few names having been dropped by removal; but our active members number 25 and our associate 8. The boys and girls have shown a great interest in all the many branches of work. Consecration meeting is never forgotten and excuses are with few exceptions sent in by absent members. The Lookout Committee have remembered the sick members, sending them fruit, flowers, picture books and reading matter, according to the age of the member. Last Spring the Society spent a pleasant Saturday afternoon, picking the hepaticas which grow so plentifully in our woods, and arranging them in dainty bouquets, sent them to Muhlenberg Hospital with their compliments.

We take up a collection at every consecration meeting to defray our expenses, during the year we have purchased the Junior Christian Endeavor song book, and we also give 10 cents a week toward missions. The week Mr. Crane was with us several of our Juniors professed conversion and four united with our Senior Society as active members.

Realizing that this, our first years efforts means but the foundation on which to build future work, and we have tried to be earnest and prayerful, and with God's help we trust our Junior Endeavor Society may become a living power for Christ and the church.

A duet by John Simpson and Edward Spear was followed by a recitation by Willie Diemler, a little temperance boy just four years old.

A Bible the gift of Andrew Wilson to those of the Junior Christian Endeavor who had not missed a meeting, was presented to Florence Acker.

The Juniors then sang and a recitation by Eddie Spear followed.

Mr. Richardson then gave an address, which was listened to with the closest attention by the Davids and Goliahs of these times. Those who heard him were carried away by the force of his argument and the exposition of his theme.

Horace Martin then sang a solo entitled "For You we are Praying at Home." "Let Us Go Forth" followed by the audience, after which refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed by all.

A Return Date Would Insure a Full House.

The Y. M. C. A. are to be congratulated on their selection of the Schumann Lady Quartette, together with Miss Jennie Shoemaker, impersonator, who was a delightful acquisition, for last evening's entertainment in the Casino. Perhaps no better criticism can be made of the quartette than that they proved themselves worthy of the award of merit given them at the World's Fair, and that the cultured audience present at the concert last evening demanded an encore of every number on the programme.

As a quartette their union of articulation and perfect harmony were all that the most severe critic could desire, while each solo number was equally as pleasing. Miss Sprague's voice was admirably brought out in her singing of "Rocked in the cradle of the deep", the very slow notes being reached without the slightest effort.

Miss Shoemaker as an impersonator was very enjoyable, and captivated everyone with her graceful manners. Her ability as an elocutionist is unquestioned after hearing her recite "The Tiger Lily", and all were charmed with the exhibition of Delsarte effects which she gave.

The arrangement of "Hear dem Bells" by Havens, was beautiful, the tolling of the bells being perfectly imitated by the quartette, deserving the hearty applause which it received.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia, radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 50c. Sold by H. P. Reynolds, druggist, Plainfield. 12 6 6m

ELIZABETH POLITICS.

Democrats Will Nominate a Mayor and Candidates for Other Offices.

The Democratic City Convention for the nomination of a Mayor, four Freeholders and Alderman-at-Large will be held this afternoon in the City Assembly Rooms.

The indications last night were that the Mayoralty nominee would either ex-County Clerk Henry B. Cannon or ex-Alderman Peter Egenolf, with the chances favoring the latter, as it was rumored Dr. Cannon would not accept.

The Alderman-at-Large will be P. J. Ryan, who will be renominated. The Freeholder ticket will probably be Samuel D. Price, Thomas Drum, John S. Sauer and John J. Donohue. Freeholder Trahon is also a candidate, but the knowing ones say he won't be renominated.

Fine Millinery.

The success of the millinery department of White's store is something wonderful, and great credit is due Miss Daly, who has entire charge of the buying, trimming and management of the department. Their second spring opening, which has just taken place, has a splendid success. The styles and trimmings of the hats were so different from all others, and many of the visitors remarked that few New York millinery houses displayed as many different styles as this house. They put on exhibition in their show-window today three of the latest designs in spring hats, one a littlle black and gold bonnet with pale-blue forget-me-nots for a brim and side trimming of egrets, with black velvet ties. Another is a brown and green mixed straw, with crepe facing of brown, brown velvet ribbon, and egrets for front trimming, with green and brown daisies drooping in the back, making it a very pretty, stylish hat that everyone will admire, and another is a new Russian turban of light green straw, black velvet brim, jet feather egrets and green shaded flowers with back trimming of velvet bows.

Took Possession in His Absence.

When Howard Woolston returned from town to his home on Duer street last evening, about 8:30, he found a large number of his friends gathered to give him a surprise.

The party met at the home of Miss May McLaughlin, and while Mr. Woolston was up town they took possession of his home. The merry young people passed an evening of much pleasure, in dancing, and all regretted when the time arrived for their departure.

Those who joined in the festivities were the Misses Buckle, Chandler, Ada Woolston, Lena Smalley, May McLaughlin, Jessie Coddington, Margaret Miles, Edith Miles, Carrie Linbarger, Jennie Simpson, Mamie Steiner, Addie Lewis, and Messrs. Harry Coddington, Herbert Schutt, Lewis Schutt, William Morrison, Warren Rice, Frank Dodge, Bert Steiner, John Steiner, George Chandler, William Woodland, William Kitchen, Thomas Smith, Carl Pfender, Robert Douglass.

Music was furnished by O'Reilly.

Nominations in Rahway.

The Republican City Convention convened in the Rahway House and nominated F. W. Lanstroh, of the Third ward, for Water Commissioner; B. Frank Thorne, of the Fourth ward, for School Commissioner-at-Large; J. Martin, of the Fourth ward, for Assessor. First District, and G. Otto Graves, of the Third ward, for Assessor in Second District. The City Executive Committee consists of: First ward, Dr. Howard; Third ward, H. B. Rollinson and William Chamberlain; Fourth ward, Henry M. Bedford.

The Rahway Democratic primaries were held last night, and resulted in the nomination for Council in the First ward, James C. Syms; Second ward, Anton Lohmiller; Third ward, Henry Johnson; Fourth ward, James Mead. The Democratic City Convention will be held to-night.

A Brilliant Aurora.

The most magnificent auroral display remembered in this locality in the last forty years was witnessed last night. It extended from the zenith to the horizon all around the sky, and lighted up the night with the brightest of moonlight. The flashes had all the brilliancy of sheet-lightning.

Spring Customs.

In the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, but the housewife aims to "put to rights", all other things above, and taking down the mantel-clock that long no tick has shared, she takes the same to Collier's where 'tis skillfully repaired. 103 Park avenue. NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Dunellen and New Market.

The streets of the borough are kept in good condition by the continual addition of crushed stone.

Mrs. Dunham, of West Fourth street, Plainfield, was the guest of Dunellen friends yesterday.

Mr. Bachelor is able to be out again after an illness of four weeks. He is fast regaining his strength.

The election next Tuesday promises to be a quiet one as it is not probable that a second ticket will be placed in the field.

Friendship Cornet Band of New Market will give a concert in the hotel at Cranford soon, an invitation from the proprietor having been accepted.

Dr. Brakeley has been president of the borough ever since its existence, about five years, and has proved to be a most efficient official. He has the interests of all at heart, and labors earnestly for improvements throughout the town.

The lecture on "The Cause and Cure of Hard Times" given by a New York lawyer in Lincoln School Hall, last evening, was fairly attended. The subject was treated in a masterly manner from an optimistic point of view.

Mrs. Ellis, nee Miss Addie Sutphen, of Newark, died at her home in that city yesterday morning. Miss Sutphen was well known and highly esteemed in Dunellen, having lived her for many years. The remains will be brought today to the home of her parents, where the funeral services will be held.

The Fair Extended to Monday.

The crowd in Central Hall was large last night and the managers of the first fair of Engine Company No. 2 were happy. The visitors included the Board of Engineers, T. O. Doane, James Martin and J. W. Murray, Jr., Councilmen Erickson and Fisk, and the Independent Fife and Drum Corps. There were 650 people in the hall at one time. N. J. Guttman's full brass band of 18 pieces furnished music.

In the contest for "old one-horn" Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., had 77 votes and Major Anderson Post, No. 109, 71. This contest and those for the watch and the rubber suit will close tonight, when a large parlor lamp, several tons of coal, a barrel of flour and a vase will be given to lucky visitors.

The goods remaining unsold at the close of this evening will be sold at auction Monday evening. Admission will be free and dancing will begin after the sale and continue till 3 Tuesday morning. The committee are confident of making an unusually large profit from the fair.

Exciting Runaway in the Borough.

Much excitement was caused on Somerset street yesterday afternoon at 4 by a horse belonging to a resident of Rockview avenue.

The owner was riding with his wife in a light carriage, and as he turned from Somerset street to he noticed that something was wrong with the bridle. He stepped out to fix the harness and, like the careful man he is, told his wife to get out also. The horse was tied to a hitching post and while the man took the bit from the horse's mouth his wife stood near.

No sooner had the bit been removed than the horse started away, breaking off the post and knocking the woman down. The wagon struck an iron trolley wire support in front of Peter Wooden's house and another near the corner of Race street. At the last point the rig was captured by several men who unfastened the harness.

The horse then ran away again and was finally caught on Mountain avenue. The carriage was badly wrecked.

TO THE WORLD OF WOMEN.

For Mothers' and Daughters' Health.

Weak, nervous, delicate, overworked women are the ones that need a strength builder, a tonic for their nerves, and a cure for that awful internal trouble that is wearing out their lives. Thousands of women have found such in Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Mrs. Christiana Beal, of Jonesport, Me., writes that her daughter had been a great sufferer from female trouble, and after repeated trials of doctors' prescriptions and other so-called cures, all of which gave no relief, she used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and it permanently cured her.

If you have headache, irregularities, sickness incidental to change of life, or any of the attending evils that are present in female complaints, use Favorite Remedy; it builds up quickly the run down constitution and bring refreshing sleep. It will dispel those tired looks and leelings, restore the nervous system and permanently cure you. Our daughters grow up weak and delicate; mothers can avoid such conditions by giving them Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

What Will Do It.

MEDICAL writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is proof positive that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. Our druggists keep it.

(Special to The Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 31.—The startling news was received here this morning that Gov. The report is not generally believed.

SOUTH CAROLINIANS RIOTING.

Two of the State Constables and Two Citizens Killed at Darlington.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 31.—News has been received here from Darlington of a fight between the citizens and state constabulary at the depot, as the constables were about leaving. Constables Pepper and McLendon and citizens Norman and L. S. Redmond were killed.

The constables scattered to the woods.

Chief of Police Dargan was shot in the side. Several citizens were wounded. One hundred and fifty mounted men are scouring the woods for the constables, who are armed with Winchesters and will fight for their lives. Darlington guards are under arms, endeavoring to preserve the peace, but the trouble has outgrown their control. Sheriff Scarborough is powerless, and, under threats of being killed by the citizens if he interferes, has subsided.

To-day, in Columbia, the excitement was at fever heat and threats were made against the governor and of burning the dispensaries.

At 6 a. m., the constables were said to be surrounded in the swamp and a slaughter is expected.

Gov. Tillman has ordered out the Columbia and Manning militia, and the troops are now getting under arms to repair to the scene of the trouble.

At 2 o'clock this morning a mob entered the state dispensary at Florence and destroyed the entire stock of liquor.

We are all subject to pain occasionally and it is well to have a good liniment in the house, such as Salvation Oil. 25c.

ROW OVER FREEMASONRY.

Rev. Mr. Frost Calls Rev. Mr. Stoddard a Liar.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., March 31.—The Rev. K. P. Stoddard of Boston, secretary of the national association opposed to secret societies, made an impassioned denunciation of free masonry at the Christian Alliance convention in Shiloh chapel.

In the course of his remarks he said that the candidate for the first degree is sworn to secrecy under penalty of having his throat cut from ear to ear and his tongue pulled out by the roots, and is required to renounce his religion whether pagan or Christian before crossing the threshold of the lodge room.

"There is in masonry," the speaker said, "absolutely no recognition of Jesus Christ as the redeemer of men, except in the knight templar degree, in which, after drinking four libations of mixed wine and water, the candidate takes a fifth from a human skull, and invokes double damnation upon himself if he discloses the secrets of a sir knight. Masonry is a religious institution from which Christ is excluded."

At this juncture, Rev. Mr. Frost of Palmer, who was in the audience, exclaimed: "It's a lie."

Mr. Stoddard declined to discuss the matter at that time and place.

Queer Bill for Massachusetts.

BOSTON, March 31.—The bill giving women the right of suffrage in municipal elections passed the house yesterday. The bill as it now stands after being passed to be engrossed, by a vote of 90 to 79, is nothing short of legislative absurdity. It provides in its first section for giving all women qualified to vote for school officers the right to vote in town and municipal elections; and in its second section for submitting the question, "Shall municipal suffrage be granted to women?" to the people at the next state election, in order to obtain a popular expression of opinion on the subject. If the bill should become a law, therefore, as it stands, the women would be granted suffrage, anyway, and the people would have the unusual privilege of registering their approval or disapproval without its having any bearing whatever upon the status of the act.

WOMAN'S TRIALS.

SOME LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT.

So Many Suffer Without Knowing Why. Much Can Be Avoided.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

So many feel the very life crushed out of them, wake up cheerful and happy, determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet:

Before the morning is very old, the fearful backache or bearing-down feeling attacks them, the bravespiritsinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them, and they sink into a chair, crying, "Oh! why should I suffer so?

What can I do?"

The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will stop your torture and restore your courage. All your pains come from a deranged uterus or womb.

It is the greatest of all rewards to receive such letters as the following from Miss Louise Müller, who lives at 44 Michigan Ave., in Evanston, Ill. She says:

"As I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and have thereby become entirely well,

I am recommending all my lady friends to use it. I am sure it will help them in all cases of womb trouble, leucorrhœa, irregular or painful "monthly periods." I am sure it is our best friend. I am so thankful to Mrs. Pinkham for the good she has done me, that I wish every sick woman in America would write to her at Lynn, Mass., and get her advice."

HILDA HATHAWAY'S HEROISM.

By WILLIAM PENDLETON CHIPMAN.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

(CONCLUDED.)

She dare not go to her mother; she dare not lose any time; she would go then herself. Her plan had already formed in her quick mind.

Dismissing Aunt Hannah with the stern command to tell her story to no one else, she ran quickly to her own room. With eager hands she wrapped up in the folds of a huge cloak a lantern, and tying a stout cord around the bundle succeeded in lowering it unnoticed from the window to the ground.

Then the short, stout dress she wore was changed for a most delicate silk; her shoes were laid aside for the daintiest of slippers, and a few minutes later, clad in faultless evening dress, she passed down the broad stairway to the lower hall.

The sentry was pacing up and down before the door in the track of light that shone from the lamp in the hall, and Hilda, throwing a light covering over her head, advanced toward him. He was a young man of prepossessing appearance, and at the vision of loveliness before him he paused and gave a respectful salute.

"My evening dress in honor of your coming, good sir, is not complete," she said, with charming frankness, "without some of those dainty roses at the end of the veranda. Will you pluck a handful for me, or may I pass out and pick them for myself?" and with breathless anxiety she awaited his answer.

The sentry hesitated. He could not leave his post, and he had orders to let no one pass in or out, but this young lady in evening dress, a tiny slipper just peeping out from under the silken skirt and suggesting a hose of snowy

"Will you pluck a handful for me, or may I pass out and pick them for myself?"

whiteness—surely there could be no harm in allowing her to pass down the veranda to the next corner, where the trailing roses were tossing in the evening breeze.

He looked into that winsome face, so innocently scanning his own. How lovely those roses would look twining among those tossing curls or clasped at that throbbing breast! The thought was irresistible. With another gallant salute, he stepped one side, saying:

"Certainly, miss; but for the favor I crave one rose from your own fair hand."

"You shall have it when I return," she promised and tripped slowly and gracefully down the veranda, pausing at the first corner to pluck here and there a rose and watching furtively the sentry as he turned to retrace his beat. The next instant she had gathered her skirts about her and disappeared in the darkness.

But the officers had now finished their feasting, and the guards were relieved that they might go into supper. In the change and confusion that followed no one noticed that Hilda—even if any besides the youthful sentry knew that she had passed out—did not return.

Indeed it was not until a half hour later, when the sentry came from the dining room, that he thought of the fair young girl and the rose she had promised him. Passing down to the corner of the veranda, he found her gone. Questioning the sentinel who had relieved him, he learned to his dismay that no fairylike creature, or any other, for that matter, had passed into the house since he surrendered his beat.

Hurrying to his captain, he, in a shamefaced way, stammered forth his story. Before he had half done the officer sprang to his feet, and rushing out into the broad hall gave the sharp, decisive command:

"To your horses, men, to your horses!"

Then there was much hurrying to and fro, and presently the squad of cavalry moved rapidly away toward the bay. But Hilda had safely passed the outer pickets and was already half way to the point before they left the house.

The night was dark, and the way was rough. Wrapped in her huge cloak and pressing the lantern convulsively beneath its folds, the brave little figure struggled on. Twice did she have to pause and then make a wide detour to avoid the guards.

As she reached the bluffs and passed down to the sandy beach, she heard, off at the north, the low tramp of the soldiers, marching down from the fort, to form the ambuscade at the point. The sound nerved her to greater speed; she must reach the sand bar and give the signal before they arrived. Gathering the folds of her cloak more firmly in hand, and heedless of the fact that she had lost one of her slippers in the soft yielding sand, she ran with the swiftness of the hunted deer down the shore.

At last the point was reached, and she paused a moment for breath, listening intently. Faintly there was borne to her on the night air the sound of horses' feet. Here, then, was a new danger. Her flight had been discovered, and already were they on their way to thwart her purpose. Foes were approaching from both sides, and she must hasten her work.

"O God, help me," she prayed, "to give the signal before they can reach here!"

It was but a moment's work to light her lantern, and then, once, twice, thrice, in rapid succession, she flashed it forth from under the folds of her dark cloak.

"O God, make Ralph see the light!" she cried.

Again and again the warning rays flashed far out into the night, but no returning light from the cutters showed that they had been seen.

But there were other eyes nevertheless that did see that light upon that point. Up at the fort that signal was observed, and a great yell of baffled rage arose from the watchers as they saw the gleam that thwarted their purpose.

Those cavalrymen, too, dashing now down upon the beach, beheld the lantern rays and spurred their horses forward to reach and arrest the fair maid that waved it. Back some rods, crouching now in their ambuscade, was also a body of men who beheld that flashing light. They can discern, moreover, the dark form that so persistently repeats the signal which baffles all their hopes, and a score of men are instantly detailed to advance and arrest the bold intruder.

The keen ears of Hilda detected their approaching tread, and she recognized her danger.

"O God," she prays again, "make Ralph see the light ere they can reach me!"

Then she swings the lantern frantically above her head, and away down the bay there gleams a light in answer. The signal is seen! Ralph and his men are saved!

But what is that? The click of muskets is heard, and the voice of the officer of the detailed corps rings out in anger, "Take aim, fire!"

The lantern drops from the maiden's nerveless hand. She draws her cloak around her and silently bows her head to her fate.

The next instant a score of rifles blaze forth their deadly contents, and she falls a dark and lifeless mass upon the sand.

To the honor of the Confederate soldiers it should be said that they did not suspect at whom they aimed their deadly fire. They thought only of the foe that had thwarted their plans. When they bent over fair Hilda's lifeless form, and by the light of her own lantern saw whom it was they had slain, there was not an eye in all that company that could withhold the tear; not a man but would have cheerfully given his life to save her.

The squad of cavalry had now arrived, and with brief and regretful explanations they gently raised her up and bore her sadly back to the home she had so recently left, to the widowed and now childless mother.

As they laid her down upon her own couch at the stricken mother's bidding, it was the youthful soldier who had allowed her to leave the mansion that took with reverent hand from her bosom, where they were still lying, one of the roses, which she had promised to give him on her return. As he held it up to the light he saw on its snowy petals a few drops of her lifeblood. From that hour he sacredly preserved the rose as a memorial of the sad tragedy his indiscretion had caused.

Three days later Lieutenant Gasque, under a flag of truce, was permitted to stand beside the widowed mother as she buried her dead. Just as the sun was setting they followed the lifeless form of Hilda out to the family burying place and laid her to rest beneath the live oaks she loved so well, and under which she had pledged her troth to the man who with a broken heart looked down into her grave.

Three years after, when peace had come to all the land, loving and mourning hearts caused the granite pillar, with its simple cross and brief inscription, to be placed upon the sand point at the spot where Hilda had so heroically given up her life to save the man she loved.

At the same time there rose in the family burying ground a polished shaft on which was inscribed:

Here lies

Then underneath this was the simple but all expressive line, "The Logic of Love—Life For Life."
